KNOX CONFLAGRATION AROUSES STUDENTS

Prowler Believed to Have Set Fire to Pile of Boards in Basement

The residents of Knox College were given a scare last night at 11:30 p.m. when the fire alarm was given. The fire was discovered in the basement in a pile of boards and crates, and was extinguished before the arrival of the fire department, who were on the scene soon after the alarm.

The cause of the blaze is unknown, but the absence of the electric light bulb in that part of the basement led many to believe that some prowler had removed the light after deliberately setting fire to the pile of boards. This was the third conflagration within two days in the Knox basement.

fence and his rushes were spectacular. Smillie is a fast skater with a wicked shot.

Bennet secured Varsity's first counter after 11 minutes of play when he took a pass from Hetherington. A few minutes later Levinsky went down the right side of the rink and passed over to Brant, who batted the puck in.

Both teams possessed strong defences and most of the shooting was done from outside. For Victorias, Stewart and Teasdale stood out, while the forwards checked back consistently.

The other members of the cabinet could not be found at their homes, and the "closed" sign at the "Pig and Whistle" destroyed all the hopes of your correspondent in extracting any statements from them, for this edition.

Uncle Ned Suggests Hammer For Noctem Cuckoo Night

By G. G. Brooks

Dear Uncle:

I am going to Noctem Cuckoo on Friday night and I haven't got a woman. There seem to be lots around the place, but I haven't been able to get acquainted with any of them. Can you put me in touch with anyone? Charlie.

Dear Charlie:

If you are going to Noctem Cuckoo you don't need a woman. What you want is a hammer. Any good hardware store will sell you one.

Dear Uncle Ned:

Are women like cats?

Izzie Itchie.

Dear Izzie:

From the scar on the side of my nose I would say they were more like alligators. One of them bit me last week. But really, that is a rather dangerous question.

Uncle Ned.

Dear Uncle Ned:

Please send me the names and addresses of some really good looking co-eds. I am starting a new motion picture company and I want to see some stars.

A. Pretzel.

Dear Mr. Pretzel:

If that is what you want you will have to go elsewhere. They don't grow in these parts. But if you want to see stars—why, meet the wife!

Uncle Ned.

Dear Uncle Ned:

What is college spirit?

Freshman.

Dear Freshman:

What a question! Why, my dear boy, college spirit consists in getting so hot up about the Queen's game that you are ready to poke anybody's nose who wears the Tricolour. College spirit is that mysterious unknown quantity that goes to make up College Days Movies. College spirit is that urge that makes you feel that your university has failed to live up to itself unless it wins the playoff by a touch in the last minute. College spirit is—Aw, what's the use?

Uncle Ned.

"May I say that insofar as I am aware, there was no unseemly conduct on the train. It is true that the glass in an emergency kit in one of the coaches was cracked, but that is liable to happen at any time," states H. C. Bourlier, General Passenger Agent for the C.N.R., in a letter to A. G. Burns of the S.A.C., which referred to "the Undergraduate Train, operated to Kingston and return, Nov. 16th, under charter by the Students' Administrative Council."

But T. C. Hudson, also of the C.N.R., when interviewed yesterday, intimated that he knew something of the later affair. "It cannot be made public at the present time what charges, if any, will be laid," he said. Asked if student excursion trains would be discontinued as a result, he answered that it was not likely.

are all brethren. It is not just an ideal it is the real truth. This world should be a society without divisions. The seeds of all our great troubles are caused by the different class distinctions. Modern man likes aristocratic divisions, and therefore does not like Christ. Our religion is colour blind. "All the nations should come together in a brotherhood and each race contribute something. Patriotism is an aggressive idea and is the evil root of all our wars. The Kingdom of God is a world-wide society. Canada is allowing one of the worst abuses to appear, that being the discrimination of races.

"Organized Labour has made the worker a machine, selling himself to make somebody a profit. The industrial unrest shown to-day is the manifestation of God. Instead everyone should work together for the common benefit of society.

"Life has no charge except to bring the Kingdom of God nearer. There are terrifically strong elements in this world which are going to resist the coming of the Kingdom of God. Christ needs Kingdom builders in every department of life. A man depending on God can really do things which are otherwise impossible. God does not intervene into the society of this world. The Creator works through His instruments the men and the women."

Dr. Gray concluded with a prayer.

LITTLE LIKELIHOOD OF SPECIAL RATES TO THEATRE PLAYS

Edgar Stone Points Out Suggested Plan Was Previously Tried

PERSONALLY CANVASSED

Amateur Actors Must Forget Selves in Their Roles, Advises Director

There is little likelihood of special rates being given on Monday and Tuesday evenings at Hart House Theatre, according to Edgar Stone its new director.

When questioned yesterday by "The Varsity" about this plan Sir Barry Jackson mentioned yesterday as being successful in England, Mr. Stone replied:

"We have tried that plan. Some years ago I personally canvassed down town firms where English-born people were numerous and made arrangements to allow them a fifty-cent reduction on Monday evenings.

"The following Monday the theatre was filled to overflowing. So successful was the plan that it was continued at intervals throughout the season. There are, however, only certain types of plays which appeal to downtown people. It requires a great personal effort to get them to the theatre. Monday nights have been given over once again to rehearsals."

Mr. Stone explained that many people not in the university misunderstood the functions of the Hart House Theatre. "Is there such a thing as a sure-fire hit?" "The Varsity" asked.

"No," replied Mr. Stone. "When the curtain rises for a first night, one can never be sure how a play is going to be received. It may draw a crowd for one night, one week, or one year. The public is fickle and their reaction cannot be foretold. There are certain criteria by which a play's probable success may be judged, but they are not infallible.

"Guild plays which have played continuously to packed houses in New York have come to Toronto and shown before small audiences. No play can be called a success until the public has appraised its worth."

PROGRESS UNKNOWN TO ANCIENT RACES

Don Declares Greeks and Romans Unaware of Its Essentials

STARTED IN 1700'S

"The ingredients of progress as it affects the great mass of western men is its naturalness and inevitability, its limitlessness, its guarantee of a desire for great indefinable qualities such as democracy and equality, its use as education as a means of social improvement and the fact that it involves the world as a whole," stated Professor W. S. Milner in the paper read at the U.C. Classical Association last night.

Using this definition, Professor Milner declared progress was unknown to the Greeks and Romans. He traced the growth of the different essentials of progress we know through the centuries, and concluded that progress only came into existence at the end of the eighteenth century.

Professor and Mrs. Louis MacKay assisted in the entertainment later in the evening.

GOODWILL FOUND IN TORONTO CITY

Social Worker Says Queen City's Housing Conditions Are Bad

"WORK WITH PEOPLE"

"I have never been anywhere when there was as much individual and group goodwill as in Toronto, or when there was so little common expression of goodwill," declared Miss Berta Hamilton of the Department of Social Science yesterday noon at the Women's Union, where she was speaking on "Toronto the Good!" To this fact, which has given Toronto the reputation of being cold and unfriendly; and to the tendency to "leave it to George," evidenced by the minority vote of the city, Miss Hamilton attributed much of the present great social difficulty of our City of Homes. Examples of these social troubles are the housing conditions, which "for the youth and prosperity of Toronto are as bad as possible," and the serious employment situation.

Students in college can do little except study the matter, get to know the victims of the situation, and discuss it with those capable of helping out. "We leave too much to paid officials," thought Miss Hamilton. "Work with people, not for them, and you can help even without money."

Literatae Have Chance to Show Skill By Special "Varsity" Literary Section

"The Varsity" announces that it will run a special Literary Section every other Wednesday, beginning with the issue of November 27. This has been made possible by arrangement with the Literary and Debates Committee and the Joint Executive of the Students' Councils, who have granted a considerable sum of money to be used as awards for the best material submitted for the section. Fifteen dollars will be awarded for material turned in for the issue of Wednesday, November 27 and will be divided as follows: Poetry, first award, $5.00; second award, $2.50. Prose Contribution, first award, $5.00; second award, $2.50.

The judges of material submitted will be P. E. Usher, B.A., Feature Editor of "The Varsity"; and Nathaniel A. Benson, M.A., well-known critic of progress we know through the centuries, and concluded that progress only came into existence at the end of the eighteenth century.

Professor and Mrs. Louis MacKay assisted in the entertainment later in the evening.

UNPUBLISHED PLAY OF BERNARD SHAW READ BY SIR BARRY

G. B. S. Portrays Union of Great Britain and States in 1962

KING A RUBBER STAMP

Play Discusses Question of Monarchism as Opposed to Democracy

"A tyranny of popular ignorance and poverty of which only the king is above," read Sir Barry Jackson at the U.C. Guild meeting yesterday from George Bernard Shaw's play, "The Applecart," quoting a speech of King Magus, in reference to democracy. The king tells his Socialist prime minister "Between you and that tyranny stands the King." The cabinet proposes, in an ultimatum to the king that he become merely an "India Rubber Stamp." The King, who is King of England, 1962, makes a brilliant speech in favor of the monarchy in which the foregoing speeches occur. The speech is only understood by the lady members of the cabinet who proceed to bulldoze the business of the cabinet. One of the lady members describes the conduct of "Breakerage Limited," which mends broken articles and therefore frustrates all attempts to invent such things as breakless glass.

The play resolves itself around the question of the monarchism of the king versus the democratic ideas of the cabinet.

The king is given a few days to consider the ultimatum. In the meantime Mr. Manhattan, Ambassador of the United States of America, arrives to announce that the U.S. has decided to merge with the British Empire. The king, who is taken unawares, is dubious of the possibility of countries like France and Germany allowing such a union.

"As long as Paris is full of Americans, and the Americans are full of money, all is quiet in the West," reports the Yankee. King Magus calls the American president, "a statesman whose mouth was the most efficient part of his head."

ENGINEERS IGNORE ARCHITECTS' CLAIM

"Economic Possibilities of Fireproof Materials are Over-Emphasized"

INSULATION IMPORTANT

"As a rule engineers don't listen to architects," claimed Mr. Govan at a meeting delivered yesterday at a meeting of the Engineering Society in the Mining Building. "We've over-emphasized the economic possibilities of so-called fireproof materials because they do not satisfy living conditions in Canada."

"If frame buildings could be made more fire resisting it would satisfy three great problems that now confront us: the great waste of land; the great fire loss, and the great amount of heat being wasted."

Speaking of the rise in importance of insulation in engineering, Mr. Govan illustrated by the use of slides the great value of a good insulator. Previous to Mr. Govan's address Major Thompson delivered a lecture on the advantages of calcium sulphate as an insulator. He traced its history from the time of the Egyptians until the present day, and told of the phenomenal increase in its manufacture, which, he claimed, was not due to any erratic conditions, but because of the increase in available power. In concluding, he stated that the fact that calcium sulphate was a non-conductor of heat and that it did not lose its moisture till the temperature of 220°F had been reached were the crux of the industry.

Inference of Insanity Sharply Denied

"3T2 LETHARGIC"

Scarlet and Gold Yell Adopted

Opening with brief discussion of routine business, including the formal adoption of the Scarlet and Gold as the official college yell, the question of major importance was introduced, namely the matter of D. W. Buchanan, editor of the "Acta Victoriana," printing an article in the October issue which contained the statement "We think that the sophomore year should take yeast cakes for pep." A case was laid before the house on the part of the Second Year charging the editor with printing material that was "libelous, slanderous and of a nature to reflect upon members of the Second Year."

J. R. Bright, counsel for the claimant, declared that the circulation of the magazine would certainly fall off and thus endanger the investments of the subscribers. To this was replied that the circulation had increased fifty per cent. since the appearance of the article.

Serious as was the matter on hand, insistent outbreaks of hilarity interrupted the proceedings. The insanity of the editor was sharply denied by his counsel. Applause and counter-applause of sophomores and non-sophomores constantly threw the House into an uproar.

The unwarranted intimation that second year students were not as active as might be expected was refuted by reference to proven progress in various lines of endeavour and other demonstrations of spirit by 3T2, such as the highly successful class party recently held.

Several witnesses were sworn in on a tattered freshman Bible and cross-questioned in a manner that gave the case the aspect of a comic mock trial.

D. W. Buchanan, on being questioned, said that he considered the article to be "constructive criticism in the best interests of the college," although he added that the idea of it stimulating the second year itself hardly occurred to him. Misses Lois Girvan and Helen D. Price, he stated, were the writers of the article, but he himself took all responsibility for its publication.

Miss Girvan, from the witness chair, said that from all her contacts with the second year, she assuredly received the impression which sustained any statements printed. In reply to a question as to what opinion of Amuseley Hall girls held in regard to second year men, she replied that people were (Continued on page 3)

Antics Afield

The Utah Chronicle triumphantly scoops the world with an announcement that the athletic intelligentsia of the University of Utah are sponsoring a cultural marathon. A headline in the Chronicle reads, "Indian Lecturer To Open World Thinking Series."

The foreign correspondent of the Queen's Journal reports an unusual passion for bathing among students at the University of Oregon. One faddist, enticed by the attractive appearance of a tank of diesel oil, ignored the conventions and poured himself into it. After swimming about for some time he clambered out and wended his way home. The Journal states that he spent the next three days combing oil out of his hair.

VICTORIA DESIROUS OF WRITTEN PLANS TO LIMIT NUMBER

W. U. A. Offers Two Awards for Best Essay on Subject

IDEAS CONFLICT

Many Believe Registration of First Year Should be Limited

The W.U.A. of Victoria College is offering a $10 prize to both men and women, and an additional $5 prize for the best essays on "Limitation of first year students at Victoria College."

The object of the essay is publicity in the interest of limitation and also an opportunity for students to participate. Signs, with gowned professors making witty remarks on the subject, are being posted day by day in Victoria. It is felt by many that the first year class at Victoria is unwieldy and no benefit is derived by either the student or the professor as the matter now stands.

"The residences are overcrowded," stated Miss Addison, Dean of Women of Victoria, when interviewed by "The Varsity." "Class parties are too large for proper accommodation, and in academic work, instead of individual attention, there is mass education."

Many are unfavourable to limitation however, and opinions are vague until there are more specific plans.

GREATNESS OF POETRY LIES IN CONCISE DESCRIPTIONS

"In prose, words have meaning, in poetry significance," stated Rev. Father McCorkell at the opening meeting of St. Joseph's College Literary Society. He went on to show the greatness of poetry in its power to bring before our minds whole scenes in a few concise words, quoting especially Hardy's "At the Time of Breaking of Nations."

"This significance," he continued, brings us to read and re-read a poem until it is rich in memories."

The Literary Society of St. Joseph's besides the regular college meetings at which there will be speakers of note, includes also smaller discussion groups for the reading and talking over of current literature. Working together, these should make the club a great success.

TEACHING OF JESUS OPPOSES NEW IDEA

Speaker Says Self-Denial Means More Than Beer Abstinence

SIN AND COWARDICE

"The whole of Christian ethics is an elaboration of what it means to love your neighbour," said Dr. A. Herbert Gray, speaking at a meeting of the Student Christian Association in Hart House Music Room yesterday afternoon.

"Jesus in His teaching assumes that human life is worth while. You might have expected something else from an oriental teacher, for the whole tendency of eastern thought is to regard human life as unimportant. This fact that he did believe in the complete human life has been the means by which he has won recognition as a moral teacher in the western world."

A MATTER OF COURSE

First in the series of new courses which we shall urge upon the guardian class in this university is a Chair in Cultivation of Manners. We feel that there is a need for this; much more so than for the Department of Barber Shop Management which we hear a certain section of campus opinion is anxious to start.

A brief look around will convince one of the crying need for more and better manners. And now let it be understood that we desire no Emily Bates Post orthodoxy; the ability to interpret the cutlery as laid for a ten course dinner, reading from left to right, and the discernment of situations requiring pearl shirt studs, can be attributes of the rudest man on earth, and the most inconsiderate.

Accordingly, we propose that attendance upon lectures given by members of the Department of the Cultivation of Manners be made obligatory in all faculties. And after three or four years we believe that a person attending these lectures might learn to so conduct himself that his presence would become a blessing, but unmarked, to his neighbours; he would learn that a consideration of others' comfort and feelings is the prime attribute. In fact, after many months, outspoken people in the Great Hall might learn to avoid the phrase, "Hey, hug-eyes, the blood!" when catsup is desired, and they might also graduate from the present tendency to infer the possible origin of the raisins in the bread.

Couples who forcibly collided with others at big university frolics would apologize, at least by inference, for their poor steering, instead of firing hard looks about. People coming in late for lectures, if they could not forbear entering, would at least step lightly and look as if they were properly abashed at creating a disturbance and a distraction. And co-eds might, after severe drilling, learn not to park chicle under desks where gentlemen's knees are likely to become begummed. Speaking of co-eds, a post-graduate in our course would know that a professor is usually far from flattered when one begins to kalsomine the old nose in the midst of an exposition of 18th century thought.

We are confident that if everyone in the country had a diploma from the Department of Cultivation of Manners, it would be a better place to live, bearing structural resemblance to the Island Valley of Avilion. And as to the instructors, they would doubtless have to be persons of exemplary disposition, and what is more, practising gentlemen.

We fear, perhaps unreasonably, that this department will never be established.

Editor,

"The Varsity",

Dear Sir:

In "The Varsity" of November 20th, I noted an item under "Anties Afield" in which reference was made to a "revolutionary reign of horror at Drake University, Des Moines, Iowa, for a second time in a year." Either your "eminently veracious contemporary, the University Daily Kansan" cannot be trusted, or else the editor of "Anties Afield" has greatly exaggerated.

Granting that Dean Davies' home was "rotten egged" and that he was hanged in effigy, it was certainly not a "revolutionary reign of horror," as very few students participated. Great regret has been expressed by the general student body that such an incident should have occurred.

Also, the connection of this incident at Drake with the insurrection at Des Moines University (an entirely different institution in the same city), last spring, is both negligent and unfortunate. Drake University (a highly accredited university, and one with a fine reputation in both academics and sports), has never been the scene of a student attack upon the trustees, administration, or Administration Building. Furthermore, Des Moines University, because of the insurrection and of the situation that developed subsequent to it, is not now existent.

Your negligence in not verifying such a report before publishing it as sound is hardly commendable. We shall expect the person responsible to be more careful when making statements of fact in the future.

Please see to it that the false impression created by the article in "Anties Afield" is properly rectified.

Sincerely,

Lowell M. Doon.
N.B.—(Prior to coming to Toronto for study, I lived in Des Moines, and attended and graduated from Drake University. Since that time, I have kept in pretty close touch with the things that are going on in Des Moines.)

The women students of O.C.E. experimented with a Gym Party Tuesday and found it highly successful. All joined in the folk-dancing and, along with Miss Glendenny at the piano, and Miss Helen Stone contributed exhibition dancing.

Art, Music and Drama

Sketch Room

It requires great courage to face and conquer the weight of inertia and of dead and dying traditions. Lauren Harris, whose latest canvases are now on view in the Sketch Room shows his abhorrence of the tendency around him to pay homage to the past which classified Art according as it was a true reproduction of nature.

By making representation subordinate to other things of more importance he is able to emphasize "the thing in itself" or form which is significant to mood, composition, design and rhythm; and it is in the design and rhythm of his compositions that the essential difference between the classical and the modern school of art lies. His repression of detail in order to greater emphasis of form is a characteristic of his individuality as well as of the modern trend. The element of structure is conspicuous, and a satisfying sense of unity, design and form within form is prominent in almost every canvas.

Simplicity is the prevailing note in all his work. A group of wooden shacks in the midst of green grass dotted with pink and white flowers warmed by the rays of a midsummer sun is characteristic of Mr. Harris's optimism.

The solitude of the north with its snow-capped mountains, swiftly moving grey clouds, bleached violet grey tree trunks against a blue grey sky is creative and the spaciousness seems to elicit the souls' expansion. A solemn and austere note enters into his northern landscapes. Light as a spiritual quality is introduced and an air of mysticism is mingled with that of grandeur. Form emerges completely here and color, though confined to primaries, does not lack boldness.

The grouping of large masses of pigment is done with an eye to rhythm and the effect is extraordinary. We are overwhelmed by the majesty of long sweeping and positive lines.

Naked remnants of historic trees, blankets of blue-white snow gleaming in the rays of a northern sun, a sky that is a design of blue-grey clouds, purple-grey hills and mountains casting sombre shadows over a dark green or silvery blue lake supply the material for the expression of soul striving for freedom.

The Table Round

The New Yorker, one of this continent's few really civilized periodicals, points with pride to the fact that "hissing is on the up." Gotham of late has had a series of reminders that the theatre is holy ground. Stokowski, visiting maestro from staid Philadelphia, went to some pains to inform a Carnegie Hall audience that he considered their conduct in hissing a certain modernistic composition as naughty in the extreme. Audiences, it would seem, are divinely appointed to be seen and not heard. Jane Cowl has been saying a good deal about "the sanctity of art." Not so, says The New Yorker. "Art deserves an even break and that's all. We don't think it ought to be babied too much—the wistful intellectuals would get too strong a grip on it."

The fine old art of hissing, then, is not dead after all. Time was when the prerogative of the pit was to howl its comments at the performers in no uncertain terms. Between those grand old days and the present lies the long period of the ascendancy of the aemic audience. If we are pulling ourselves out of the slump, so much the better. The barrier between player and auditor, so much decried by the Gordon Craig ilk, will be removed in a manner far more efficacious than any they have ever conceived.

"The proper place for hissing," contends The New Yorker, "... is in everyday life. It should be used against the man who talks shop, and the subway guard who attempts to slice passengers in two with an automatic door; against riveters, newboys, many bridge players, most policemen, and all cab-drivers. Politically the hiss is an important weapon, and we favor organized clagues, with weekly parades and a sort of eisteddfod around election time."

If mayors who visit university debates and say funny things go away claiming to have been insulted, it is because they fail to recognize the trend of the times. We are well on our way to bigger and better hissing. It is a healthy symptom. Players and politicians should kneel devoutly every night and give thanks that there are

KNOX RETAIN ARTS FACULTY CUP BY DEFEATING S.P.S. 4-2

OUTCLASS SCHOOL IN SOCCER FINAL

Knox Not Spectacular But They Make Attacks Count

EACH PERIOD SAME SCORE

Knox defeated School 4-2 in the interfaculty soccer final yesterday. Both periods produced the same scores, 2-1 for Knox. The winners had the best of the play in the first part of the game. Davidson, at centre, scored both goals, while Riddell put one in for School.

The second session was featured by a strong S.P.S. attack which resulted in only a single score by Downing. Knox while not quite so impressive, made their attack count and notched two more. These were scored by Johnson and Beaton. Downing, at centre for School, was the outstanding player on the field, though his team was outclassed in general effectiveness by Knox. Line-ups:

Knox—Irvin, I. Davidson, West, Milroy, Roland, Jack, Macdonald, Beaton, D. Davidson, Johnson, Goforth. School—Helper, Greig, McCracken, Graham, McKay, Franklin, Ward, MacDonald, Downing, Walberg, Riddell.

WALTERS WINS RACE AGAINST BIG FIELD

Moore Makes Second Best Time in Historic Trinity Steeplechase

TROPHIES PRESENTED

Although J. A. Walters, 3T0, won the Trinity College Steeplechase held on Tuesday afternoon, thereby scoring 25 points for his year for the Trinity inter-year cup, the freshman year captured the cup, 16 of the 25 making the best time out of the large field being members of 3T3.

N. W. Moore, first year, came second in the event, and close to his time were Walsh, Seaborn and J. T. Wilson. Burpee, first year, who had been given three minutes, was the first to cover the six mile course.

The trophies of the race, and awards for other athletic events won during the year, were presented Tuesday evening at the annual Athletic Association Banquet held in Trinity House.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By virtue of their win on Tuesday the juniors are now in the second round of the S.P.A. playoffs. Frank Sullivan's kids looked mighty sweet in their encounter with Victorias, and displayed a brand of hockey that should bring home the bacon.

* * *

Varsity has a first class defense man who can bodycheck with the best of them in the person of Alex Levinsky, who brings to our mind the day of Pete MacIntyre. A star with last year's Iron Dukes, Levinsky was the most effective man on the ice, and in the last two periods the Victoria forward line were slowed up by his sturdy checking. Don Smillie on left defense, displayed a nice turn of speed and was equally effective defensively. With Hummsett in goal Varsity should have very few counters scored on this strong defense.

* * *

Knox retain possession of the Arts Faculty Cup by defeating S.P.S. in the final of the interfaculty soccer. Both teams met in the finals last year when School bowed to the Purple and White.

* * *

A solution to end the disinterestedness of U.C. in athletics was suggested to us by a Trinity "athlete". Every male student proceeding to an Arts degree would be required to run in a steeplechase each year, much like the Trinity Steeplechase. Those turning out for interfaculty teams and showing regularly as rooters would be exempted.

* * *

Pharmacy and Vie fight it out this afternoon at the Stadium for the Mulock Cup. Both teams have shown themselves capable of good football and we look for a good game.

VICTORIANA EDITOR ACQUITTED

not so freely discussed at Annesley as at Burwash Hall. At this she was demanded to take the proper oath on the Bible which she had neglected to do.

Miss Helen D. Price stated from the witness box that she wrote the particularly offending phrase and enlarged greatly upon it to the evident discomfort of the second year. Sophomores at Victoria, she claimed, sadly lacked the proper spirit in social and literary pursuits.

Mr. Birge, another witness, remarked that he thought the statement was libel in that it consisted of a gross misrepresentation of the invigorating properties of yeast. He also expressed the opinion that the Acta Victoriana was to be commended upon saying what they thought in the matter.

It was disclosed by D. W. Buchanan that up to the present time only one contribution had been sent in by a second year student. It was also found that in the past year, no member of 3T2 had been recorded on the parliamentary books in any capacity whatsoever.

Summarizing the evidence brought forth, E. Jolliffe, counsel for the defence, advised the sophs to drop their maidenly reserve—"to shed no longer their sweetness on the desert air," and congratulated them on their apparent awakening from a 17-month lethargy.

The decision of the case was put to vote of the members and the editor of the Victoriana was found not guilty by an overwhelming majority.

Would dub me a culprit And so I must do it incog."

W.S.E.

TEAMS OPTIMISTIC IN CUP GAME TO-DAY

Victoria and Pharmacy Play for Sir William Mulock Trophy

BALANCED SQUADS

To-morrow's contest between Victoria and Pharmacy will decide the possession of the Mulock Cup for the year and promises to be a well played fixture. Pharmacy will have to work hard if they are to hold Victoria's line which has been to a great extent responsible for their victories this season.

Victoria are strong in all departments of the game with the exception possibly of their defence. However, they are justly confident and expect to continue their winning ways. They have played five games this season and have won each fixture. They are a smoothly balanced team with no individual stars.

Although this is their first year in the Mulock Cup series, Pharmacy have made a good showing in this group.

TEACHING OF JESUS OPPOSES NEW IDEA

Gray said, "Jesus means something more complete and drastic than going without beer or tobacco. He means that you must reach a state where you are not the essential object of your own living. This is in contrast with the modern instinct of self-development."

In regard to morality the speaker said, "Christ taught that thoughts and purposes are the important things, not conduct. The sins from which you are kept only by cowardice are not sins that you have escaped, because you have the heart of that kind of sinner. Among the virtues he mentions you will not find honesty, honour or hard work. That is because he was speaking to a nation that did not need such teaching. This shows the necessity for an Old Testament foundation for a New Testament superstructure."

PROPOSED LEAGUE MAY MATERIALIZE

American Universities' Present Schedules Precludes Entrance

GOOD VARSITY MATERIAL

The mooted international college hockey league will not be realized this year. During the past year negotiations have been carried on by T. A. Reed and Major Forbes of McGill to form such an association, and although not much success has been met with as yet, it is believed that the idea may become an actuality in the near future.

The American colleges interested in the formation of the league have not yet fallen in line because of the fact that they are members of conferences whose schedules preclude participation in any other association. However, in the arranging of games next year the universities to the south may consider the proposed league and the Canadian plans may materialize.

Dartmouth, Yale, Princeton and Harvard, to mention some of the prospective members, have in the past few years been represented by some mighty fine hockey teams. Last year the Blue and White in their Christmas tour were tied in a strenuous overtime game by Dartmouth, defeated Harvard and were forced to take the short end of the score with Yale. The class of hockey displayed has been constantly improving and Varsity and McGill no longer face a soft snap in their American invasion.

The blue sextet will play three schedules again this year. Varsity is entered in the Senior O.H.A., which in itself calls for a pretty strenuous season. In the Intercollegiate the Blue play home-and-home games with McGill for the title which they have held in the past twelve years. In the American tour this year Varsity plays Harvard, Dartmouth and Yale, engaging the Crimson twice.

Coach "Red" Porter has almost the same team this year that annexed both the D.H.A. and intercollegiate honors. With plenty of good new material Red should weld a machine that appears headed for the Allan Cup.

In a private interview after the demonstration, the face of the opposition leader was seen to be beaming, and so certain was he of victory in the House, that he revealed his shadow cabinet to consist as follows:

Minister of Maternal Affairs—Alastair Watt, D.D.F.

Minister of Prosperity and Destitution—A. M. Klein, F.D.B.

Minister of Public Houses—A. H. J. Zaitlin, C.D.D.

Minister of Finances—John McNaughton, R.D.T.

Minister of Talksies and Speakasies—Lionel Rubin, F.D.X.

Prime Minister and Minister of International Co-operation—Hon. David Lewis, P.A.

In addition to the above mentioned ministers, the opposition is considering the re-establishment of the old office of Procuror-General, for the benefit of the Student Body of the country.

When asked about amateur players, Mr. Stone stated that "until Mr. Jones forgot that he was Mr. Jones and became totally engrossed in his role, he was a loss in the theatre. One is either born an actor or one is not. One can learn gestures and all the tricks of the stage and still not be an actor. It is not personality to put a part over, it is art."

Asked as to the present state of Hart House Theatre, Mr. Stone said that preparations were complete for a banner season. There is great co-operation between all members and the best season yet is anticipated.

UNPUBLISHED PLAY READ BY SIR BARRY

When the cabinet comes for the king's answer he points out that if he has to become a rubber stamp he would abdicate in favour of his son, Robert, and then run for member of the House of Commons, so that he could tell the cabinet what he thought of them. But when he suggests that he might even be called upon to form a cabinet, the ultimatum is immediately withdrawn.

The play has not yet been published, and Sir Barry read it from a manuscript. Mr. Shaw wrote "The Applecart" especially for the Birmingham Repertory Theatre, of which Sir Barry Jackson is the head. Sir Barry presented the parts of the play to the Guild in the form of a dramatic reading.

The Birds Cackle as the Skipper of the "Otnorot" is Thrown Overboard

By W. F. Payton

Many moons ago in the days of piracy there sailed upon the main the good ship "Otnorot". Now the captain of this barge was a burly Irishman with two gnarled fists and a thin squeaky voice. And it so happened that this particular captain thought himself to be the admitted superior and admiral of all the ships that sailed the main in search of booty, so as a consequence the veins on his forehead stood out dark, blue and foreboding. Now it came to pass at length that the skipper grew disturbed at the way a flock of Birds dispersed themselves in the Crow's Nest.

"These Birds," quoth he, "are threatening the life of the ship, they must be deprived of their liberty!" So as a sign of good will the gracious Birds invited him to come to the Crow's Nest and talk things over. They did not, mark you, suspect his intentions, but were annoyed at the way he was muzzling some parrots so that they were unable to talk.

Now as the captain began to speak the Birds saw his veins standing out dark, blue and foreboding on his forehead. At this they began to laugh from their superior plane. None knew better than they the vaingloriousness of his ego. At the noise of the cackling of the Birds the skipper grew indignant, and climbing out of the Crow's Nest, he went back to his cronies chinking with rage, and wiping his face with his Orange bandanna.

After much dark scheming he at length issued an edict that the Birds of the Crow's Nest would henceforth be governed by his own pet canaries, so that they would not peck at him, rigging and in other ways annoy him. By this time other ships had heard of his deeds and they all joined in laughing at him—Heh! Heh! This likewise got his goat! They were actually making fun of him!

"Now by my Lucky Star," he cried, "you shall all pay dearly for this!" But he had reckoned without the Margelet. The Margelet were a gang asleep between pink sheets and had hated the captain ever since he took command, but they were in the minority. However, shortly after the talk with the Birds they hatched a plot to do away with him on New Year's Day at the customary celebrations. The skipper knew nothing of this, nor that his Lucky Star had deserted him. That fact alone might have been his undoing for the majority loved him because the Lucky Star told them to!

At length came New Year's Day! The captain rose all unsuspecting and went above board. An old Spanish custom demanded that he fight a couple of men on General Principle to show his superiority to the common herd. The Birds looked on and laughed!

The fight was short, and swiftly his fate o'ertook him. The details were gruesome. 'Tis too sad to relate! He was thrown overboard at Dawn the next day and the good ship "Otnorot" proceeded on her way.

ANNUAL REGATTA IS TO BE STAGED AT LACHINE CANAL

Increased Enthusiasm Has Warranted More Complicated Arrangements

INTERCOLLEGIATE EVENT

Varsity Team Has Won For Past Three Years at Henley

As a result of the increased interest taken in the rowing teams at Varsity and McGill for the past few years, it was decided at a meeting of the Rowing Club on Wednesday that this intercollegiate sport should have greater prominence in the future, and to that end the annual event will be held at the Lachine Canal, where perfect conditions exist for the two-mile stretch required.

In past years this event has taken place at the Canadian Henley and Varsity has been fortunate enough to win for the last three years. In taking the step of organizing it on this new basis it was thought that as a result an intercollegiate regatta would be developed such as the Oxford-Cambridge race in England.

In order to satisfactorily provide accommodation for supporters of both teams, trains equipped with bleacher stands on flat cars will be run alongside the boats, and plenty of provision will be made at the finishing point.

Oarsmen who take part in this race will have the same opportunity of winning their first colours as in any other sport, since it will be a recognized intercollegiate regatta. In addition to the regular race there will be an additional one for the one hundred and fifty pound class.

An interesting programme has been arranged for Varsity oarsmen next summer. Crews will compete at the Eastern Oarsmen Association meet at Ottawa, the Dominion Day races and the Royal Canadian Henley at St. Catharines.

Australian and English crews are expected to be present at the British Empire Games at Hamilton and it is thought they will furnish the Varsity crew with lots of opposition.

On January the fifteenth next the Rowing Club will hold their annual banquet at Hart House, and on this occasion it is the wish of the executive that all those interested in rowing should intimate their wish to attend.

RECIPE FOR WRITING GIVEN AT CONFERENCE

Mr. and Mrs. A. Campbell
Speak at Vocational Literary Night

"The best recipe I know for writing is wearing out the seat of one's trousers in front of a typewriter. Writing requires the 'energy, get-up and go' spirit," said Mrs. Austin Campbell last night at the Literary Conference in Wymilwood, where Mr. and Mrs. Campbell, both successful Toronto writers, were the speakers of the evening.

On the subject of short-story writing Mr. Campbell told of a man who spent so much time on the technique of it that he never wrote a story.

At the conclusion of the meeting, the members were divided into two groups, where they spent a profitable half-hour asking questions and receiving individual advice.

Reminder

Readers of "The Varsity" are again reminded of the literary section which is to be published next Wednesday.

Prizes will be awarded as announced in yesterday's "Varsity".

The judges, acting on the advice of the Literary and Debates Committee, announce that all those who pay S.A.C. fees will be eligible for the awards.

JOURNEY TO LONDON IN TIME FOR DINNER BY AIR IS PROSPECT

Editor Dafeo at Empire Club Tells of Opening of North by Air Routes

HUONSON BAY DEVELOPMENT

New Railway Effects Saving
by Eliminating Great Lakes

"In the short space of a few years it will be possible to have breakfast in Winnipeg and dine in London town the second evening," was the statement made by John W. Dafeo, managing director and editor of the Manitoba Free Press in his speech before the Empire Club yesterday.

Mr. Dafeo, speaking of the development of the Canadian north, and particularly of the Hudson's Bay route, stated that air traffic was the solution of the problem of partly yearly traffic, which is made necessary on account of climatic conditions.

"The air routes and the new Hudson Bay railway will place Western Canada in the front of the world theatre of trade," Mr. Dafeo said.

"Canada's northland, when developed, will make Canada more than a mere strip along the United States border, she will be a country comparable to the United States both in length and in depth."

"Fort Churchill, the terminus of the railway is nearer to Liverpool than Montreal and nearer to Winnipeg than Fort William," the speaker said, "and thus there will be effected a saving in transportation of the whole distance down the inland lakes."

AUCASSIN AND NICOLETTE PRESERVED BY CHANCE

Professor Allen Lectures on Beauty of Medieval Love
Lyric

"Had it not been for the chance preservation of this one manuscript, we might never have learned the story of Aucassin and Nicolette," said Professor L. Allen, referring to that unique thirteenth century document, ten pages of which are devoted to the idyllic love story. Proof of the universal appeal of the theme lies in the fact that there are five dramatizations of it in German and numerous versions in other languages. Spanish being the only one not to have a translation.

The origin of the tale may be traced to Moorish sources and the seven-syllable line has its parallel in the Arabian fourteen-syllable line with Caesura. Nothing is known of the author—he was probably a "vagrant student," a sort of thirteenth century Villon. Professor Allen read his own translation of the tale, interspersing it with fragments of the original old French. He concluded with the appropriate and rhythmic "Ballad of Nicolette," by Andrew Lang.

CARPING CRITICS HOLD FORTH ON MODERN MANNERS

Professor Objects to Synthetic Complexions in the Making

LATE COMERS DISCUSSED

Forward Maidens Cause Much Caustic Comment From Males

"I think that the manners of the youth of to-day are extremely good," stated Professor H. Rothwell of the Department of History when interviewed in regard to yesterday's editorial in "The Varsity." "It is hard to say whether or not they are better than those of past years because each period judges by its own standards."

When asked if he objected to coeds powdering their noses during lectures, the professor said, "I do not see anything wrong with synthetic complexions, but I do not like to see them in the making. Late-comers to lectures do not bother me particularly if they come in quietly."

"Present day manners are, on the whole, quite good," said Gordon Stewart, B. and M. '32. "Most of the students who come to university have had a decent up-bringing and act accordingly. Any cuttings-up that does occur is in the Pass course where students are less serious than those in Honour courses who have a definite goal and are striving to reach it."

"The forwardness of modern girls is seriously undermining the manners of the males," stated J. Fenelon, I. Philosophy. "Present day manners have reached a conflict with reason. You give your seat in the street car to a girl who is your equal in all respects. Why bow and smirk to equals? It's foolish."

Antics Afield

A Boston contemporary, the M.I.T. Tech, describes at length the annual soph-fresh field day at that hotbed of culture, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The feature of the day was a guerilla battle in which the ammunition consisted of rotten eggs, buns of plaster of Paris, decayed bananas and apples, degenerate tomatoes, pumpkins, grapefruit, squash, second-hand fish heads and "bombs" manufactured from paper bags and transmission grease.

The sophomores cornered the bad egg market at a flat price of a dollar a crate, and the fresh had to rely on cold storage products at 47c a dozen. The rotten hen fruit had the advantage in point of odor, but the petrified ones were harder. Instead of smashing at the first concussion they bounced from one sophomore head to another. The freshman egg barrage drove the band into the stands, where the sophomores dealt with them adequately, finally allowing them to leave with ruined uniforms.

One group established themselves on the roof of the stands and bombarded everything below with impatience and eggs. Automatic fire extinguishers guarded every entrance to the roof and were set so that once started, they couldn't be stopped.

A merry time was enjoyed by all. One luckless freshman raiding the sophomore camp to recover a '33 banner was apprehended and returned to his loving comrades "an untal." At one time a rumor was circulated that an army had been mobilized to put an end to the festivities.

EDITORIALS PERUSED BY EMINENT PEOPLE PROVED BY LETTERS

Mr. J. Clarke, Editorial Writer, Discusses Journalism With Press Club

EDITORS IMMORTAL

Best Opportunities Open for Special Writers and College Men

"The editorial page is not the first one looked at, but the idea we have is that a large percentage of our readers eventually come to the editorial page after they have read perhaps the financial page, the sports page, or their favorite comic. One thing we know is that the editorial page is read by all publishers and by leading men, we have many letters as returns to prove it," said Mr. J. Clarke, leading editorial writer of the "Toronto Daily Star" in his informal discourse on journalism with the University of Toronto Press Club at the club's dinner in Hart House last night.

"But when a man gets to be an editor he never dies. I have been writing editorials for forty years. The best openings to-day are for special writers. There's a career for a man without aiming at the editorial chair and a better one," Mr. Clarke continued. "Never ask an editor if he would like you to write a special article for him. Write the article, produce the goods, put the article in his hands, and if it is good he can't help but use it. The most important openings to-day are for special correspondents covering perhaps a national convention or the British elections. The movement to-day is toward smaller syndicates paying a special writer, as for example the Manitoba Free Press might wire us to share the costs of sending a man up North on a special mission and we would share perhaps with a Vancouver paper; and the half dozen articles of perhaps a column and a half each would then appear in each of our papers."

"Ontario news writers have come from the printing trade and journalists trained in England, Ireland and Scotland. Now nearly all the writing men, that come in, are university men, nearly all of whom start in holidays or as part time work."

"At the age you are now every fellow is a rebel," explained Mr. Clarke in speaking of the days when, as assistant editor of the "Toronto Saturday Night" he had vigorously supported James A. Tucker, rebellious "Varsity" editor, in the freedom of the press fight of 1895.

MOUEL ASSEMBLY LEAGUE PLANNED AT UNION

Eastern Students Invited to Provide Cosmopolitan Atmosphere

A Model Assembly of the League of Nations will be held by the University of Toronto as a result of a meeting last night at the Women's Union.

Invitations to participate will be sent to the Universities of Eastern Canada. The suggested co-operation of French-Canadian students will give an international touch to the Assembly. It is hoped that as many of our foreign students as possible will represent their countries.

Miss Betty Lang was in the chair. A description of the Model Assembly held at Ottawa in June, 1928, was given by Mr. Lester H. Clayton, third year, Osgoode.

School Banquet For Next Year Is Abolished by Order of Caput

Undecided

Authorities yesterday told the "Varsity" that no definite decision had as yet been reached in regard to the mooted abolition of the first year of the Pass Arts course. The unfortunate first year is at present on trial before the professors, and its merits and faults are being carefully weighed.

"It has been discussed by the Arts Council," said Dean Delury, "and the arguments, or rather, the reasons, for we never argue, for it and against it have been referred to the appropriate committee, which will in turn discuss it."

"No definite announcement can be given out at present," stated Principal Wallace, "and I do not think that popular discussion of our findings is desirable."

LACK OF INTEREST CURTAILS DEBATES

National Federation of Canadian Universities to be Entertained

LIMITED PLANS THIS YEAR

"Since the intercollegiate debates last year did not prove successful we have drawn up a limited programme for this year's intercollegiate debating," stated Mr. C. W. Leslie, chairman of the Literary and Debates Committee. "For the last few years there seems to have been a general lack of interest in the debates, and until sufficient interest is stimulated, there seems little use in arranging debates."

In connection with the Hart House committee the Literary and Debates Committee has arranged to bring two debaters from McGill for the next Hart House debate on November 27. This is a regular Hart House debate, however, and the two speakers, J. A. Edmison and B. M. Alexander from McGill will speak on opposite sides of the question. In reciprocity to these speakers a university team will go to Montreal some time in February.

The only regular debate of the year in Toronto will be held in January, when a team from the National Federation of Canadian Universities will be entertained.

No outside university has been invited to debate this year for the reason that the attendance at the three intercollegiate debates averaged around sixty last year, and there is no reason to go to such expense when so little interest is shown.

Professor G. S. Brett gave a most interesting lecture, "The beginning of Western Science", on Wednesday evening, in the Assembly Hall of the Ontario College of Education. This lecture was given under the auspices of the Library School, who had as their guests the members of the Toronto Public Library Association, and the students and faculty of the College of Education.

The annual party given by the freshmen of No. 4 Queen's Hall, to the senior years, was held on Wednesday night in the common room, the entertainment taking the form of bridge. While supper was served by candle light the prizes were presented, Miss Mildred Thompson receiving the high score award. Dancing occupied the remainder of the evening, followed by university yells, and cheers for the hospitable first year.

Official Statement is Issued to That Effect From Office of President

CAREFULLY CONSIDERED

Subsequent Banquets Will be Held at the Discretion of Engineering Society

The following statement has been issued from the President's office with regard to the recent Soph-Fresh banquet held by S.P.S.:

The Caput having had under consideration the misbehaviour of certain students of the Faculty of Applied Science on the evening of Thursday, 14th November, on Yonge Street and in a theatre on that street, after a dinner of first and second years in the King Edward Hotel at which several members of the staff of the Faculty, including the Dean, were present, wishes to lay the following statement before the students of the University:

The Dean reported that the dinner was well conducted and showed a marked improvement on similar dinners in previous years, and the unfortunate occurrences took place as the result of a parade unauthorized by the Engineering Society or the Students' Administrative Council, but that the active measures of the officers of the Engineering Society prevented any serious results from the parade, and no complaint has been lodged against students either by the police authorities or by the theatre for damage done.

At the request of the Students' Administrative Council the affair was investigated by the Engineering Society which forwarded the following resolution to the Faculty of Applied Science:

"The Engineering Society Executive recommend to the incoming President that the 'Soph-Fresh' banquet, as heretofore held, should be abolished for 1930; that subsequent banquets should be held at the discretion of the Engineering Society only."

"Further, for immediate action it was resolved that 'The Dean of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering address a joint meeting of the first and second years, and reprimand them for their recent conduct'."

The Council of the Faculty of Applied Science after careful consideration, approved of this resolution and forwarded it to the Caput for action.

The Dean of the Faculty of Applied Science informed the Caput that he had met the first and second years and reviewed the history of proceedings both this year and last, pointing out to them the seriousness of their action and the injury that results from public criticism of such misbehaviour, and thereafter duly reprimanded them.

The Caput approved the action of the Dean and in accordance with the recommendation of the Engineering Society and of the Faculty of Applied Science, orders that the "Soph-Fresh" banquet as heretofore held shall be abolished for 1930, and that subsequent banquets shall be held only at the discretion of the Engineering Society after consultation with the Faculty of Applied Science.

Robt. A. Falconer,
Chairman of Caput.

Attention! Night Editors!

A special meeting of night editors and assistants will be held in the news office at 4.30 p.m. on Monday next. It is essential that all be present at this meeting as both the editor and the managing editor have matters of importance to discuss.

A CAUSE

The annual campaign of the Student Christian Movement for funds was launched last Thursday, and the student body, as a whole, have been requested to "come through". The Movement has, in past years, received the enthusiastic support of both faculties and students, and those in charge are hoping that this year the total receipts will be even bigger than they have been in former years.

Because this association is world-wide in its organization and because it has introduced the element of international contacts into the atmosphere of the provincialized collegian, it has gained a prestige and esteem in the minds of all connected with student affairs. The local movements have aimed particularly at establishing groups among both men and women to fill in a few of the noticeable gaps in the regular curriculum of lectures and labs. Their campaign is a worthy one, and the methods of personal solicitation which they are using should bring their total up to the figure which has been set. We feel that further recommendation would be superfluous.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

We print elsewhere a letter from Mr. A. H. Ferry, President of the Students' Administrative Councils. We have no comment, beyond this: we print the statement only because Mr. Ferry occupies a position that merits respect, and hence, deserves to be heard.

But as far as "The Varsity" is concerned, the matter was closed by the story which appeared Wednesday, November 20. In it the S.A.C. authorities and the C.N.R. officials were completely cleared of any possible charges by their own statements.

To pursue the matter further would not, we feel, clear the atmosphere, but only give further publicity to the affair which Mr. Ferry is so anxious to deplore.

Correspondence

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

Supports School

Editor-in-Chief,
"The Varsity",
Dear Sir,—

Apologies of your account of the so-called "clash" with the police, by the "School" men on Thursday evening at Loew's theatre, I very much feel that "School" has been maligned again in the papers.

I was in the theatre in the front of the balcony, when the School men arrived, and outside of a very faint engineering yell and "Toke Oike", which emanated from the men on the street outside, there was no disturbance, beyond the usual bustle when a number of people take their seats. The students came up the stairs, and took their seats at the rear of the balcony in a most orderly manner—and remained for a few minutes only—departing in the same manner.

To my knowledge there was NO fracas worthy to merit the headlines in "Varsity" or in the city papers. The show was in no wise disturbed. I clearly heard every word of the singer who was performing at the time, which, if there had been any disturbance, would have been possible.

Thanking you, I am,
Yours very truly,
E. S. S. Armilidge-Stanley,
S.P.S. 273.

Our Good Name

Editor-in-Chief,
"The Varsity",
Dear Sir,—

Some member of your Reporting Staff called me on the telephone on Tuesday afternoon and inquired whether I had any comments to offer with regard to an article appearing in your issue of that date wherein it was reported that there had been certain serious misconduct on the special train bringing students of this university from Kingston. At that time I had not yet investigated the matter and I was, therefore, in no position to comment. I have now had an opportunity of going very thoroughly into the report and would comment as follows:

There was absolutely no misconduct by students on the special train chartered by the Students' Administrative Council. This fact has been fully borne out by officials who were present, students who travelled and the railway authorities. There may have been some hilarious conduct on the ordinary C.N.R. train that left after the students' special, but there is no evidence that even this was by students of this university beyond the statements of a member of your Reporting staff, who was himself guilty, according to his own admission, of a breach of the peace.

Will you permit me, Mr. Editor, to state that in my opinion loyalty to fellow students of our university should be the guiding factor in all articles featured in the front pages of the students' newspaper. It seems that in this case not only was this loyalty lacking, but statements were so printed as to leave it possible for them to be misunderstood.

Having regard to the fact that since this report has appeared in "The Varsity", it has also been copied by the downtown press, to the detriment of the good name of our university, I hope you will see your way to print this letter.

Yours sincerely,
Allan H. Ferry,
President.

Examinations at Nebraska Wesleyan University will be set and conducted by instructors from other institutions, in order to cause the professors to be more careful in covering their courses fully.

CHAMPUS CAT

Enraged by vicious attacks on his "editorial" policies, our Office Boy "editor" of Antics Afield, has gone off in a huff to Des Moines, Iowa, accompanied by the celebrated Dr. M. D. Quack, and the official advisor, Mr. Lower Down. Lower Down is the w.k. ugly duckling of Drake University. The O.B. will send in a play-by-play report of his activities to "The Varsity". His first dispatch follows:

"Our party was given a great send-off from Toronto. Everybody seemed glad to see us go. Chief Dripper was there with a cordon of police to see that nothing delayed our departure, but he could not avert several difficulties. The first hitch occurred when Lower tried to make a "ouch" with Joey Slickerboth, the Warden of Heartbreak House. He seemed quite annoyed when told that that sort of thing "just wasn't done, old fellow."

"I don't see why not," he complained. "When I was in Des Moines I made touches with everybody of importance, and I've been doing it ever since." Next we discovered that Dr. Quack was missing; he was finally discovered straddling a rod underneath the baggage car. "Thought that was the only way you could travel on a train," he said.

"Finally we thought everything was O.K., when we discovered that the S.A.C., with characteristic generosity, had procured four railway passes for us. We were very much puzzled to know what to do, till Slickerboth solved our problem by offering to come along if we would take Amy Barnes as chaperone. A. Burnen Korn (P.A., Oxo.), immediately began to turn yellow with jealousy, and demanded to be taken too, but we decided to leave him behind because of his predilection for smashing light bulbs and windows. The last we saw of him as the train speeded away, he was standing in the middle of the track with maudlin tears in his eyes, waving Amy a fond farewell with a suit of red flannel P.D.Q.'s.

"When our journey was well under way we found out that we were on a special train, full of honeymoon couples going to Niagara Falls. Amy was so shocked at the amount of necking and liping going on that she insisted on turning off all the lights, so she wouldn't have to look at the disgraceful doings. We were in complete darkness for the next few hours, so I can't say exactly what happened. I know that Lower Down and Dr. Quack quarreled continuously about whose "turn" it was next, and I heard Amy drowsily muttering at intervals, an "Ency Meeney Mimy Mo, I'll slap your face if you don't let go." When we reached Hamilton the porter turned on the lights and I found that Amy was talking in her sleep, while Down and Quack were taking turns at swinging.

The Table Round

Under the direction of L. M. Gelber, and with C. R. Tracy as editor, the U.C. Magazine makes its first appearance this year with certain innovations in style and contents. As for contents, the innovation is much for the better. The articles are vigorous and carry opinion and conviction.

In one article Mr. Gelber pleads for an improvement in the "Campus Grub Street", claiming that local publications are bound in a rut of mediocrity. Personally, we don't think that the outlook is as bad as Mr. Gelber makes out. His own magazine is a partial answer to his plea; last year Aeta Victoriana sat up and became vigorous, and shows no signs of a relapse; and even the Trinity Review can be expected to bestir itself. And more than one Baldwin House professor finds his way to Aldine House and the Canadian Forum—a magazine that is better than a campus journal for mature expression, in that it has experience and resource behind it.

Lou Golden also writes for this first issue; his contribution deals in a satiric fashion with the present tendency of universities towards freak courses. P. E. Ussher contributes a concise and original bit of literary criticism and B. D. Beamish puts in an original poem.

As for typography, the present writer fails to see why glazed paper should be used. It is more expensive, and surely not more attractive. The

PHARMACY-VICTORIA MULOCK CUP FINAL AT STADIUM TO-DAY

VARSITY RUGGERITES ELECT OFFICIALS

J. A. McLean, formerly of the University of British Columbia, and member of the McKeehaie Cup team when it made a good showing against the world-victorious Maori team from New Zealand, was elected captain last night of the Varsity British Rugby (Rugger) team.

Other officers elected by the club are: Hon. Pres., Dr. A. J. Mackenzie; Hon. Vice-Pres., A. C. Burton; Pres., E. C. Knowles; Vice-Pres., C. B. Brown; Sec., F. D. R. Garner; Vice-Captain, E. T. W. Nash; Manager, H. Archbold; Asst. Mgr., D. Telford.

The club feels optimistic that Varsity will win its next two games, and thereby qualify to play the Toronto Welsh team in the Ontario League finals. The Welsh aggregation is expected to win its next two games. Varsity's game on Saturday of this week on the back campus is with the Toronto Scottish; and on Nov. 30 will play the Toronto Irish.

PUCK PUSHERS DON SKATES FOR FRAY

Practice Turnouts Include Much Promising Material

GAME IN TWO WEEKS

Coach "Red" Porter's senior hockey team appears to be headed for another O.H.A. title and should also annex the intercollegiate honours. Practically all of last year's men have donned skates and are turning out to practice. Jimmy McMullen, flashy right-winger, is going great guns in the workouts, as are "Red" Whitehead and Bill Stewart. Bruce Paul and Mel Harley have not quite struck their stride yet but it is only a matter of time till they round into their old-time form. Murray and Marshall look to be much improved. The defence has been considerably strengthened by the addition of "Skin" Dewar, who starred for U.C.C. last year. The versatile Billy Bell is also a candidate for the team. Although somewhat lacking in weight Bell is a clever stick-handler and played great hockey for the juniors last year. The addition of these two men gives the team more reserve strength than last season.

The gap left by the departure of Murray Snyder, star net guardian, will be a hard one to fill. It looks like a toss-up between Herb Little of the 1928-29 intermediates and Ames, the ex-Newmarket star. However, Lebarre of Peterborough and Herb Moran are also in line for a trial.

The team is entered in the S.P.A. senior series and will play their first game in two weeks time. The dates for the annual U.S. invasion are not definite as yet, but will probably be as follows:

Harvard—in New York on Dec. 28
 Dartmouth—in Boston on Dec. 30
 Harvard—in Boston on Jan. 2
 Yale—in New York on Jan. 4
 The intermediate squad is pretty well un-organized as yet. Among the score of candidates trying out, Bill Leake of last season's team, Earl Averett, Kehoe, ex-St. Mike's junior star, and Malcolm, late of the Paris intermediates, appear to be the pick of the lot.

VARSITY POLO SQUAD WINS

The Varsity polo squad showed the results of Coach Lorenzon's intensive training when they defeated Broadview by 14-2 in Tuesday's city league fixture in the Hart House Pool. Superiority in ball-handling and combination proved too much for the opposing players who, although faster individually, repeatedly failed to complete their plans.

Varsity—Ayres, Sinclair, Graham, Spence, Armstrong, Alexander, Glass, Broadview—Devlin, Dunlop, Mullins, Baker, Waters, Angus, Lansitie, Cleur.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Victoria College and Pharmacy contest the Mulock Cup final at the Stadium to-day. This game should produce some real football with two husky teams striving for the honours. Advance dope favours the Scarlet and Gold to repeat their championship of two seasons ago. Vic are undefeated this season, winning their group handily and disposing of Sr. School, a good outfit, in the next round. Pharmacy ended the regular group schedule in a triple tie with Forestry and St. Mike's and survived the playoff. Sr. Meds were their next victims and for the first time a Pharmacy team has reached the finals. Pharmacy has improved greatly since their early group games, and a victory to-day is being looked forward to by their supporters.

To-morrow afternoon in the Richardson Stadium at Kingston Queen's and Hamilton Tigers will endeavour to settle the Eastern Canada Senior Football championship. The Tricolour have no mean task on their hands to stop the triumphant march of the Yellow and Black machine. Queen's great display last Saturday against Varsity has boosted their stock considerably. The Tricolour line which formerly appeared to be the weak spot of Harry Batstone's outfit, turned in a great effort against the Blue. If they can hold the Tigers in the scrummages the title may return to its old resting-place after an absence of five years.

Regina Rongriders, Western Canada champions, will appear in the Canadian finals a week from to-morrow. The main interest in the westerners is the use or misuse they may make of the forward pass. This much-headed play has been in use all season in the West and will be permitted in the Canadian final game. If Regina can score a win through this mode of offensive it will be a tremendous boost for this play. It is unlikely, however, that the Rough Riders will be able to cope with the eastern winners in the other branches of the game, and an effective defense against the pass will doubtless be developed by the eastern team.

The second game of the Interfaculty soccer finals will be played this afternoon. Knox have a two-goal lead over S.P.S. from the first game which was played Wednesday. This promises to be a close, hard-fought game.

PHARMACY PUNTERS TO CLASH WITH VIC

Mulock Cup Finals to be Played at Varsity Stadium To-day

KEEN CONTEST EXPECTED

Mud and water will fly this afternoon when the Demon Druggists from Pharmacy meet their last obstacle in the long march to a possible Mulock Cup championship. Emerging victorious in the untangling of a three-cornered tie with Forestry and St. Michael's in their group, the Pill Mixers eliminated Junior Meds in a sudden death semi-final, and are now ready to battle the Scarlet and Gold of Victoria. Despite the drainage system of Varsity stadium it is probable that the game will be played on a greasy, heavy field.

Nevertheless the game is expected to provide all kinds of excitement. Victoria have swept through the season without a loss, and up to their 3-1 victory over S.P.S., had won all their games by comfortable margins. Pharmacy had a tougher time in their group schedule, but have displayed a smashing line that will go far to offset Victoria's excellent kicking and fighting spirit.

Certain it is that the game will attract a crowd far beyond the usual interfaculty handful. Wherever Scarlet and Gold playing sweaters Vic rooters will not be far away. Pharmacy too, have trotted out a husky-lunged squad for every game their team has played this season, and the newly-federated college will not lack for vocal support.

BASEBALL TRIUMPH FOR VICTORIA GIRLS

Vic showed their superiority over St. Michael's last night when they defeated the Double Blue 25-1. However, St. Mike's have the beginnings of a good little team, and they always try hard. Daisy Quance twirled fair ball for Vic and was given really good support. Alice Tilley as catcher for the Red and Gold, played her usual steady game; indeed the whole Vic team looked good. For St. Mike's Gertrude O'Malley played excellent ball and scored their only run. The others were a bit too anxious, but will certainly improve. The game was played in the arctic temperature of Little Vic gym, which is certainly not conducive to good baseball.

BASKETBALL TEAMS ROUND INTO SHAPE

Trick Plays and Many New Stars Augur for Bright Season

EXHIBITION TOUR

It won't be long now. The various basketball teams are all fast rounding into form and a great deal is expected from each team. The senior aggregation under the supervision of Mr. McCutcheon have had some real snappy practices. They have been working out some new trick plays in the last few practices that should make the ardent fans blink, and the opposing team too, for that matter. "Buff" Horton is a real star. His shooting is very accurate and spectacular, and he is very fast on his feet. He is a freshman, playing with the Riverdale Grads last year. Delane, hailing from Rochester, is also a real find, and should fare well with Horton. O'Leary, last year's mainstay, put in an appearance in yesterday's practice and seems to be better than ever. Wood, also of last year, has hurt his leg playing rugby, but it is expected that he will soon be in condition for basketball.

The team will go on a tour during December. On the 13th, 14th and 16th, they will play exhibition games with the Universities of Buffalo, Rochester and Colgate, respectively. On February 1st they play their first game that counts on the schedule, at McGill. On February 7th they play their first

Rummy Ruminations Proceed Apace From Energetic Cleansing of Teeth

By A. E. F. Allan

Squeeze it out on the brush. What does it look like? A worm? Why are you always thinking of worms? Is that a nice thing to think about? Is it necessary always to think about nice things? There are dirty things in the world, aren't there? Why not think about them sometimes? Do nice people always think about nice things? Don't they ever think about dirty things? Do you know any nice people who think about dirty things? How does a nice person look when engaged in thinking about a dirty thing? Nice? Well? . . . How old is that brush, anyway? Five years? Ten? Why don't you retire it on a pension? It can't be doing your mouth any good as it is, can it? Well, you may as well start scrubbing, anyway. . . . Do you suppose four out of every five have it? Have what? Well—whatever it is, do you suppose they do? Or is it an exaggeration? Who started the idea? Is it just a trick to make you buy somebody-or-other's tooth paste? Why are you scrubbing away like that, anyway? Is that another idea you got out of an ad? How many of your ideas do you get out of ads? What's it all about? Is somebody trying to make a sucker out of you? Name ten people who are trying to make a sucker out of you. Well, are you a sucker? . . . What's that heavy taste in your mouth? What does it remind you of? Linoleum and Varnish? Where'd you pick it up? At the party? What did you go to that party for? Why didn't you stay in your room and get some work done? What did you come down here for, anyway? To run around with women? Aren't there any frails in your own neck of the woods? Why don't you exercise a little will-power once in a while? What does a woman make you think of? Eh? Linoleum and varnish? Heh! heh! Thass a good one! Remember to pull that sometime. . . . "Yuh know what women remind me of? Huh? Linoleum and varnish! Heh! heh! heh!" . . . Will that be funny in the morning? Are they ever funny in the morning? Especially the next morning? . . . Rinse out your mouth. Do you suppose you'll have any teeth left when you're eighty? Who wants to be eighty? How will your face look when you're eighty? Well, does it look so hot now? Look in the mirror. Who ever told you that was a face? But it is a face, isn't it? Do you suppose it could be improved? Improved! Do you suppose it could be helped? Is this just your modesty shining through? Who said anything about modesty? . . . Aw! go to bed!

home game with McGill.
The Wilson Cup has been in the possession of the University of Toronto for the past two years, and Coach McCutcheon is very confident that the seniors will bring home the bacon again this year.

Some very promising material has also turned out for the intermediates. Newman, the coach, has been making great efforts to improve the shooting of the team as well as the passing.

Brady, Foxe and Pasternak, who made such a fine showing last year are again out for the intermediates and are better than ever according to their playing the last few practices. The names of those who are making this team will be divulged next week. The intermediates won the intercollegiate championship last year, and according to all the inside dope are expected to duplicate the feat. The schedule is not made up yet, but the first game will be played about January 15th.

Mr. Silverman has been appointed manager of the juniors. Silverman played with McGill last year and has quite a reputation in basketball circles down there. He is ineligible for the juniors this year, but knowing as much about basketball as he does, he should turn out a smart junior squad for Varsity this year. Carr and Holderson are back again from last year's team, which won the Junior City League championship.

It is not yet definitely known whether a second team will be organized for the juniors, although it is highly probable. A great many fine basketballers have tried out for this team and the second team should, in many respects, be equal to the first team in playing strength.

Victoria Has Big Edge in Kicking and on Scrimmage Line

BECKETT MAKES BIG RUN

Slippery Footing and Bad Weather Features Game

Victoria College won the Mulock Cup Friday by defeating Pharmacy 10-5 at the Varsity Stadium. The game was played under most unfavourable conditions on a frozen gridiron covered with snow.

The slippery footing prevented both teams from showing at their best, particularly Pharmacy, whose plunging was expected to make big gains. Neither team could make much headway through the line, and a kicking game was resorted to. Victoria had a big edge in the kicking exchanges. De-mille and Willis consistently out-booted Brown, the Pharmacy punter.

Victoria's half line represented the margin between the two teams. The running of Vaughan and Buchanan, (Continued on page 3)

DR. S. MERCER GIVES LECTURE ON EGYPT

Egyptians Great Lovers of Nature and Excelled in Gardens

DANCING GIRLS

"It is in speaking of the great contribution of Egypt to the civilization of the world, that one can legitimately become enthusiastic," stated Professor S. A. B. Mercer on Saturday afternoon, speaking on "The Beginnings of Civilization in Egypt", to an audience that taxed the capacity of Trinity College library. Starting with the earliest evidences of civilization in Egypt, the speaker briefly outlined its history through the first and second Pre-Dynastic Periods down to the Rise of the Dynasties in 3400 B.C.

Dr. Mercer pointed out that there is no reason for the popular idea that the Egyptians were a gloomy people. The pictures on the walls of their burial chambers, which are our great source of information about them, represent them as enjoying life to the full. They were great lovers of nature. #### Sketch Room Books Open To All Members

The attention of members is called to the fact that the books in the bookcase in the Sketch Room are for the use of all members of Hart House, it being kept locked to prevent use by unauthorized persons. They may be procured at the Warden's office. It should also be noted that this bookcase will be open from 1.30 to 2 p.m. daily when the Keeper of the Prints is in the Sketch Room.

FORESTRY HOLDS ANNUAL STUNTS

Members of Faculty Make Merry in Woodland Car

COLOURED SHIRTS WORN

Members of the Faculty of Forestry held their annual stunt night Friday, in the Forestry Building on St. George Street.

A brief entertainment was opened with a skit by members of the first year and which was followed by an address delivered by Dean C. D. Howe, on "Paul Bunyan", the famous logger.

After the skit and address, the "Woodsmen" and their partners retired to a room on the first floor where the sweet strains of jazz greeted them. Decorations of the room were of buckskin shirts, skis, snowshoes and fire-arms. The Foresters themselves were clad in flannel shirts of every conceivable colour and pattern.

This bit of atmosphere in dress was found to be not only the custom, but the rule, by one luckless person in dinner clothes who made a valiant but vain attempt to gain entrance.

The one bit of inconsistency introduced into this woodland revel, was the refreshments. No serious objection was made, however, to the fact that beans, bacon and prunes were lacking from a very tasty menu.

Antics Afield

Emulating the McGill Daily, the far-famed Ohio State Lantern eruditely discusses fashions for men at Shurtleff College, Illinois, where the natty overall is all the rage. Men at Shurtleff were accused by carping co-eds of lack of neatness and good taste in dress; they promptly came back with the slogan, "We pay for shows—that's why we wear these clothes." When the co-eds refused to retract their charges, the campus next day saw all the male students garbed in overalls.

FEES REASONABLE FOR SOCIAL CLUBS

Undergraduates Think One Should be Interested in Outside Affairs

ONE SOCIETY ENOUGH

"You seem to be paying out money constantly," said A. E. Honeywell, I.U.C., in answer to "The Varsity's" question, "Are we being asked too much for contributions to clubs, charities, societies, etc.?" "But," he continued, "the societies are really accomplishing something and I haven't the least doubt that I will get my money's worth out of those that I have joined." "There is more to coming to college than lectures," said F. F. Musgrave, of the School of Graduate Studies. "Particular men may spend too much money, but the average man doesn't spend enough."

Don Wade, IV U.C., thought that you paid for what you got and that it was entirely voluntary on the part of the student. "Clubs can't operate without a fee," he said, "and you get out of them as much as you put in."

"Society fees are not too high. If a student is interested in a society he will join it and let the others alone," was the opinion of C. W. Cook, II. (Continued on page 4)

DEBATERS CHOSEN FOR NORTHWESTERN

Menorah Final Series of Debate Eliminations is Held Sunday

MANY PARTICIPATED

Messrs. S. Hermant, H. Green and L. Tarsis have been chosen to represent the U. of T. Menorah Society in the annual intercollegiate debate against the Northwestern University Society. S. Goldhar and J. Gold were chosen to debate against the McGill University chapter of the society.

The judges came to these decisions as a result of a series of elimination debates which took place during the past two weeks, and in which the following participated in addition to those selected: Messrs. R. Abramowitz, L. Littner and Messrs. Leipovitz, L. Samuels, S. Bochner, M. Marks, M. Brown, R. Tepper, L. Herman, H. Seigal.

Dental Students Celebrate With Skits by Each Year and Dancing

FOURTH YEAR WINS CUP

Fifth Year Defeats Third in Exciting Basketball Game

The dental students celebrated their eighth annual Noctem Cuckoo at Hart House on Friday evening. An unusual number of graduates turn out to combine with the undergraduates to make the frolic a big success.

The first part of the evening was occupied with the presentation of skits by each year. The freshmen's entertainment showed a scene from a radio broadcasting studio, with an announcer and a chorus of contented saxophones doing duty.

A Communist meeting presented by the fifth year in the east common room was rudely interrupted by the untimely arrival of Chief Dripper and his smiling policemen, who obligingly gave their numbers to all maltreated members of the audience. The good natured constables dragged the bearded bolsheviks from the platform and set up Mayor McSlide, who lost no time in boosting the city in an inspiring address, while the merry minions of the law manhandled and brutally belaboured Professor Mild, whom they caught in the park. In a glorious free-for-all the meeting ended with the mayor singing the riot act to the tune of the "Red Flag".

In the reading room the third year presented a movie and the second year the "Evolution of Love", in which stone age men batter one another for possession of a brawny cavewoman. Classic Greeks barter slaves with prospective fathers-in-law, medieval knights woo fair ladies with suicide, and flaming modern youth sets the fastest pace for all, to the great amusement of the guests.

The fourth year presented the winning skit with "The Humanophone", the super radio machine which manufactures its own entertainment. The artistic designing of the set and the machine in this performance was very well done and doubtless had much to do with the judges' decision.

Dr. Cole, Dr. Mason, Dr. Holmes, and Mr. Bickersteth acted as judges, and Mr. Bickersteth presented the Gaston Brule cup to Mr. Campbell, the fourth year representative.

ST. MICHAEL'S REVIVES STUDENT PARLIAMENT

Institution of Periodical One of Many Planks in Platform

The Student Parliament has been revived at St. Michael's. Friday night a monster political rally was held in the college club room at which the two parties presented their platforms. The speakers of the evening were R. J. Quinn for the Fusiliers, and G. Gallagher and P. Bergeron for the Arcadians.

Among the different planks advanced by the parties were free telephones, better library and the establishment of a periodical publication. A lively discussion followed on different topics.

The elections will be held next Tuesday in the college library between the hours of nine a.m. and twelve noon, and one p.m. and two p.m.

SCHOOL MAN SIGNS NAME IN ARGYLL HOUSE BOOK

It is rumoured around the campus that a prominent young School man and athlete, and incidentally president of first year, after leaving his name and phone number in the Argyll House leave-book, has been deluged with phone calls.

When questioned on the subject, Mr. Elson said that he didn't know what to say since he was quite shy, but still a bear when he got started. Queen's Hall and Hutton House please copy?

So Says Mr. J. B. Bickersteth in Address to Newman Club

ARCHITECTURE INSPIRES

"Fraternities at this university serve a very good purpose," stated J. Burgen Bickersteth in an address to members of Newman Club at the weekly tea yesterday afternoon. "In many of the educational institutions of the United States they are a perfect curse, but here many of them make a point of recruiting their members from every faculty and college, thus giving each one an opportunity of getting his fellow-students' acquaintance." #### Suitable Prose and Poetry Wanted For The "Literary Section" Contest

Can you write a sonnet? Can you write a short piece of descriptive or dramatic prose?

Can you compose a lyric?

Do you know that the best poem submitted for publication in the Literary Section of "The Varsity" to be run on Wednesday will be awarded five dollars? That the same applies to the best piece of prose? And that second prizes will also be awarded?

This Literary Section is being run in "The Varsity" by arrangement with the Literary and Debates Committee, who feel that by this means literary effort in the university will be encouraged.

If the first attempt does not come up to a reasonable standard the awards will be withdrawn from future sections.

McMASTER ENTERS SERIES

Opportunity Will be Given for Speeches From the House

The annual Women's Intercollegiate Debate takes place to-night at eight o'clock in the Women's Union.

The topic is "Resolved that the undergraduate derives greater educational values from extra curricular than from curricular activities in university life."

The debaters from Queen's are Margaret Bell and Ilsa Schoeder, those from Varsity, Anna Bicknell, Victoria, and Mary Winspear, St. Hilda's.

The judges of the debate are Miss Dykes from Haverhill, Professor Haddon, McMaster, and Mr. McNaughton, a prominent lawyer.

J. W. Daeoe Gives Address on Physical Growth of West

TRANSPORTATION A LINK

Looking forward to a future in which Canada will rapidly climb to a position of first rank among the nations of the world, and pointing out the great part the West will play in that transformation, J. W. Daeoe, of the Manitoba Free Press, addressing a body of students in the Physics Building last Friday, outlined certain physical changes going on in the western provinces which are making of this section of Canada a veritable empire in itself.

The speaker mentioned certain developments and transformations going on in the West which are in effect changing the relationship of that part of the country with the rest of Canada and the outside world. "There was a time," he recalled, "when the western provinces were the hinterland of Canada. We were 1,500 miles from the sea to the east and 800 miles from the sea to the west." ## A MATTER OF ETHICS

Among the standards which are best described as being those of a gentleman, there is one tradition which has to do with victory and defeat. It is universal, we believe, among modern peoples, and it is this; that both the victor and the vanquished, in a fair fight, do nothing to imply that the feelings of the other, following the affair, are not those of a gentleman. . . . Perhaps the matter is too delicate to allow definition; at the same time we are confident that the readers of "The Varsity" will agree that the following excerpts from an article in a recent Queen's Journal are in decidedly bad taste. The article is headed "Saturday's Sanguine Struggle as Seen by Toronto Scribe" . . . . .

Great is Varsity. Even in defeat last Saturday, they showed unexpected strength and if they had a few more chances, would likely defeat Queen's and then be Intercollegiate champs. Hurrah! for Varsity.

Queen's were very lucky to win, as they got all the breaks. When Carter kicked, the wind was behind him like a hurricane, but when Sinclair booted, the wind blew in his face like a tornado—even so he kicked the porker's epidermis some seventy yards. Great is Sinclair.

On the whole the tackling of Queen's was only fair. They really just happened to slip and fall in front of the Varsity players. The tackling of Varsity, however, was deadly, but Queen's were not there when they did tackle . . . . .

In the second and third quarters, Varsity clearly outplayed Queen's, but adhering to a well thought out plan, did not attempt to score, until Queen's had stopped scoring. Great is Varsity.

In the fourth quarter, however, Dickey in full view of Varsity players, policemen and myself, was scratching his chin, when a Varsity player, blind with mud, handed him the ball and showed him which way to run and that is how he got his touchdown.

Varsity then rose to wonderful heights. They absolutely stopped Queen's from scoring any more points and then pulled the greatest bit of strategy ever seen on a rugby field. A magnificent kick by Sinclair was supposed to travel to Gilmore while his hands were greasy, then when he dropped the ball, a Varsity player would get five points. This play was wonderfully executed by the Blue and White and easily shows their championship calibre. The game ended with Varsity in the middle of a huge scoring streak and so Queen's just nosed them out.

Queen's did not play so badly considering. They only defeated Varsity 15 to 5 and won the Intercollegiate Championship.

WESTERN PROVINCES UNDERGO CHANGES

the sea to the west. We were developing a civilization there, producing products which we had to transport over these areas to the east and west and we were more or less at their mercy.

"But," he added, "these old conditions are changing. At the present time the western country in place of being the hinterland of Canada is being moved much closer to the markets of the world and within a few years will come to occupy a preferred position with respect to the ports of the world. This is being brought about by new developments in transportation.

"The first of these developments is the Hudson's Bay Railway. This year after 25 years of controversy the rails have at last reached Fort Churchill. What does this mean to Western Canada? Fort Churchill is in the same relation to Liverpool as Montreal with the result that grain which can reach Fort Churchill in two days, will go that way.

"Not only wheat but other produce will go over the new route. Northern Manitoba is now the site of one of the greatest mining developments in the world. Some of these are within 400 miles of Fort Churchill which will not only increase their profits, but allow other mines less advantageously situated to make a profit."

Turning to another development which in his mind will be a great factor in changing the economic condition of the west, Mr. Dafoe referred to transportation by air. "The great objection to all these northern sea routes is that they only operate part of the year, but what about air? It doesn't freeze."

He went on to point out the geographical fact that the farther north one goes the lesser is the distance round the world. In view of this fact he explained that with the development of transportation by air, Fort Churchill and cities in western Canada would find themselves on the principal trade routes of the world.

Mr. Dafoe dwelt upon the great economic possibilities of the west country. "In the Peace River country there is an empire with an actual acreage of fertile soil twice as great as the cultivated part of western Canada at the present.

"The result of all these developments in transportation will be to bring the west into closer contact with the outside world. There cannot help but be development of this country clear to the Arctic Circle. Now we have a vision of a country comparable to the United States and I cannot help but think that this development will create a Canada almost immediately in which there will be most ample openings for our young people of talent and courage.

Dr. Herbert Gray and Mrs. Gray were dinner guests of Miss Kilpatrick at the Women's Union Tuesday night. Dr. Gray was charmingly introduced by Miss Kilpatrick, and his brief talk to the students was very much appreciated.

Hart House String Quartet

On Saturday evening the Hart House String Quartet presented to its Toronto audience the program which earned for it such flattering criticism in London, Eng. They received a hearty welcome and their following filled the theatre.

More than ever one feels that this group may well claim the first rank among the world's exponents of chamber music. Colour, dynamic power, remarkable precision—even rubato—all were beautifully woven into their art. The program was essentially modern. The Debussy is a gorgeous work in which haunting bits of melody, mystic cadences, tempestuous outbursts and vigorous rhythms all conspire to produce a delightful number and to show the Quartet at its best. The Bartok nearly relegates Debussy to the Romantics. Bewildering, bewitching—which? With amazing, even disconcerting harmonics, glaring dissonances, cross rhythms, timid bits of dialogue, and ill-humoured grumblings from the 'cello, the number rushes from love to hate, from serenity to madness.

Fortunately the last number was a classic—Beethoven's F. Major Quartet. One's heart resumed its accustomed beat, or at least throbbed evenly. The contrast was vivid, but not as vivid as if the number had received more kindly treatment. The players had not yet thrown off the spell of Bartok. Violence was still in their bows.

Nevertheless the evening closed with sheer music and the Quartet completed just another success.

THE RHYME OF THE MORNING DEW

Instalment VII

Love makes jackasses of us all:
Of old, when courtiers used to fall
It made them free with swords and lances,
Sonnets, and lingering, languorous glances.

They dressed in east-iron suits with flaps

And poked each other off their nags.
And e'en to-day the thing's a curse,
Some lovers take to modern verse,
Some in despair turn to the fagon,
And, worst of all, some seek the wagon.

But rarely does that anguish sweet
Inspire a noble soul to eat!
Still, here they sat in silence proud,
Chief Cats' Meow, Foghorn McLeod,
Deciding who could eat the most.
For stakes—the prize squaw of the host

Against McLeod's pet ease of rye (For which stuff, infants, they say, cry)

Ah, noble is the soul in strife,
A man in quest of drink or wife!
And hour by hour, each pleading Fate,
They ate and ate and ate and ate.
Down went fish after whole-boiled fish,
Down hunk of deer, down savoury dish,

As, with abandon frank and free,
Each showed his elasticity.
Now, though McLeod was built out wide,

He had not the acquired inside
Of many a year of Indian life;
He slowly gave before the strife.
His face behind his beard grew red,
And Cats' Meow got six bowls ahead.
Stout was his heart, great was his love,

He looked up to the form above
Of the fair gracious Minnetta,
But still he could not stand the gat.
He stole his heart, he firmed his mind,

But still, he slowly fell behind.
The victor of a thousand fights,
Who long had known the fierce delights,

Of drinking deep and eating long,
He prayed to make his tummy strong,
He prayed to keep him in the fight.
I'll write some more next Sunday night.

HAMILTON TIGERS OVERWHELM QUEEN'S IN EASTERN FINAL 14-3

QUEEN'S DEFEATED BY TIGER TEAM FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

Hamilton Representatives Earn Right to Enter Eastern Finals

TIGERS SUPERIOR IN LINE

"Pep" Leadley, Former Star of Kingston College Leads Offense

Hamilton Tigers won the right to enter the Canadian finals for the second consecutive year when they defeated Queen's at Kingston Saturday 14-3. The Tigers left no doubt as to their superiority over the Tricolour, tearing the easterners' line to shreds with terrific line-plunging. "Pep" Leadley, one-time Queen's star, was the shining light in the Hamilton victory.

With the wind at their backs Tigers were able to score only one point in the first period, when Welch's long punt went for a single. Queen's made a good job of holding the Hamilton plungers. When the Queen's got the wind Tigers put on pressure and after securing possession near the Tricolour line Leadley put over a drop. Leadley repeated his effort and ran twenty-five yards for a touch to give Hamilton a twelve point lead at the end of the third quarter.

In the last quarter, aided by the wind, Queen's got three singles, but Tigers also hoofed two over the Queen's line for points.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Victoria College, the 1929 Mulock Cup winners, have shown themselves to be worthy title-holders. The Scarlet and Gold went through the season without a defeat. Their victory over Pharmacy on Friday was clean-cut and left no doubt as to their superiority over the Druggists. The latter put up a good battle, but Vic, with a much more effective aerial attack had a means of offense with which Pharmacy were unable to cope.

Hamilton Tigers' win over Queen's was in accordance with the "dope". Queen's put up a great fight but the Tiger plunging was too good for the Tricolour. Queen's made yards three times while Tigers moved the sticks on about twenty occasions.

"Pep" Leadley, former Queen's backfield star, had a pleasant sojourn in his former haunts. Leadley aided the Hamilton cause by kicking two goals from the field and scoring a touchdown to account for eleven of Tigers' fourteen points.

The Canadian final between Tigers and Regina Roughriders will be played at Hamilton next Saturday unless the C.R.U. should arrange a shift. If the game is staged at Hamilton it is not likely to attract a large crowd. The same teams played the final there last year and the turnout was nothing to be enthused over. There is not much probability that the Tigers nad Regina will pack the H.A.A.A. stadium this season. Toronto would be a suitable site for this game. About twice as big a crowd would witness the game here. The Canadian finals were last played in Toronto in 1923 when Queen's defeated Regina 54-0.

Knox College have won the interfaculty soccer championship for the second successive year. The Presbyterians appear to be out to establish a record somewhat resembling that of the Queen's football teams of '22-'25.

This coming Saturday will witness the inauguration of the International Water Polo League. Varsity are entertaining the Penn. A.C., of Philadelphia. Water Polo is fast growing in favour hereabouts and a record crowd will greet the flashy American outfit.

Varsity Juniors and Marlboros on Thursday evening will provide one of the feature games of the Junior S.P.A. series. The Blue and White youngsters have the best aggregation that has represented Varsity in this series in some years.

RUGGER GAME POSTPONED

The British Rugger game scheduled for Saturday between Toronto Scottish and the U. of T. fifteen, was postponed indefinitely due to adverse weather conditions. The field was in no condition to be played on, the yard lines not even being plainly marked. The date of the game will be announced in a future issue of "The Varsity".

ANNUAL MEETING HELD BY ST. HILDA'S COLLEGE

Toasts and Singing Order of Dinner Held for Alumni by Co-eds

On Saturday afternoon St. Hilda's held its annual convocation tea. Representatives of the classes of 1899 to 1929 gathered to hear and see for themselves the progress of their Alma Mater. The first part of the afternoon was devoted to an Alumni meeting at which the Head of College, Mary Dickinson, presented her report. The real reminder of college days came after tea, when grads and undergrads gathered in the dining room for the proposing of the toasts and to sing the college songs. The toast mistress, Miss Johnston, 2T9, said she hardly felt fitted for the honor since her graduation was so recent that she still considered herself an undergrad. The maiden speech of the afternoon was made by Mary Pellatt, 3T3, who responded to the toast to the freshies. She worked quite a bit of humour and wit into her preconceived ideas of each of the years before she became a Varsity student. At the conclusion year yells were given, increasing in volume up to the year 3T3.

ARTS FACULTY CUP RETAINED BY KNOX IN SOCCER FINAL

Beat School 6 to 3 in Series to Keep Interfaculty Championship

OUTPLAY SCHOOL LINE

Downing Prominent for School but Was Held Scoreless Throughout

Knox College retained the Arts Faculty Cup when they defeated School of Practical Science 6 to 3 in the round in the interfaculty soccer series. They won the second game of the finals 2 to 1 last Friday on the front campus.

The S.P.S. forward line didn't hit their stride and the Knox booters had a decided edge in this department. Downing, who has been the scoring threat on the engineer's squad throughout the recent campaign, was held scoreless. Riddell and Graham proved to be the losers' best, the former notching School's lone counter after three minutes of play had elapsed in the second frame.

Doug Davidson was again the outstanding performer on the Presbyterian outfit, securing both of Knox's points. He was ably supported by Milroy, while Irving, the Knox goalie, made some sensational saves.

Knox—Goal, Irving; backs, H. Davidson, Rowland; halfbacks, West, Milroy, Jack; forwards, McDonald, Beaton, D. Davidson, Johnston, Go-forth.

S.P.S.—Goal, Helper; backs, McKay, Gregg; halfbacks, Walberg, Franklin, Graham; forwards, Bailey, Ward, Downing, Riddell, MacDonald. Referee—E. Worrall.

And then there was the kid who wouldn't brush his teeth for fear of removing the film of protection.—Pitt Panther.

coupled with Demille and Willis's great booting, turned the tide for the Scarlet and Gold.

Brown, of Pharmacy, was the outstanding player on his team, but was called upon too much. Brown played middle, did more than his share of the plunging, did the kicking and tackled well. Bessett on the Pharmacy half-line, made the feature play of the game with a seventy-five yard run.

Pharmacy forced the play at the opening of the first period and following a Vic fumble, Brown hoisted over the Victoria line to Vaughan for a rouse. Vic soon put the Druggists on the defensive and Willis kicked a rouse to tie the score.

Victoria got a single on a Pharmacy blocked punt, and Willis kicked another point. Beckett then ran from near his own goal line for seventy-five yards, Buchanan tackling him on Vic's twenty yard line. An attempted Pharmacy aside went for a point.

In the third quarter, Demille's forty yard run put Vic in position to add another point. Pharmacy fumbled on their twenty yard line, and Vic secured. Vaughan went around the end for a touch.

Pharmacy staged a strong offensive in the last quarter and after throwing Vic back to their own goal line an aside kick went for a rouse. Pharmacy then blocked a Vic punt and got an aside to reduce Vic's margin to four points. Pharmacy pressed hard, but lost possession when Vic blocked a kick. Shortly before the end of the game Demille kicked another point. Final score: Victoria 10, Pharmacy 5.

Banff—Greater interest is being taken in the Banff Annual Winter Sports Carnival this year than has ever before been evidenced. The Moose Jaw Swimming Club has already definitely entered their representatives in the aquatic events and the Edmonton East End and West End Clubs, the British Columbia Clubs and the Calgary Club are corresponding regarding their entries.

Due to the rapidly increasing interest in winter sports that is being shown all over Canada and also the widespread interest that has been aroused by the establishment of the Mount Norquay Ski Camp there will be six week-ends of special winter sport events in Banff this season in addition to the usual Carnival Week which this year commences on February 1st.

A new road has been graded to the ski-camp with the result that the climb is now easier and better time can be made. Last week, for the first time in history, automobiles stood in the cleft between Mount Norquay and Stony Squaw Mountain, having travelled over the new Ski Camp road. Owing to its narrowness, however, automobile traffic will not be allowed on the new road this winter.

Two toboggan slides will be operated for the full six weeks; one will be on the old site in the centre of town and the other at the Mount Norquay Ski Camp.

ture and excelled in their beautiful gardens. At their banquets they thoroughly enjoyed themselves. The men sat on one side of the table and the women on the other, and a great deal of beer was consumed by both sexes. They were entertained by vocal and instrumental music and by dancing-girls "clad mainly in jewellery".
Dr. Mercer pointed out the wonderful contributions that early Egypt made to civilization in her literature, her art, and her architecture, and stated that her greatest contributions were her idea of immortality and her high conception of the moral ideal. In conclusion, he stressed the fact that this great development in Egypt was only the beginning of its civilization; that is, it had occurred before the Rise of the Dynasties in 3400 B.C.

Vic. A person should join some clubs, he thought, as they provide a relief from studies and also give a person a broader view of life.

Other undergraduates whom "The Varsity" questioned were of the opinion that the fees of the various clubs and societies were not too high. "Whether he joins a club or not depends on how much money the student has and on his tastes," said one fourth-year man. "The fees are O.K.," he concluded.

A man shouldn't join too many clubs, but he should take part in one or two extra-academic activities, no matter what the fee is, was the opinion of another student.

"On the whole the fees of the student societies are reasonable. I know one club in which the fee is nominal. The candidate is admitted on his qualifications only," said the last victim questioned by "The Varsity".

from the usual procedure of other Officers' Training Corps, some of which require the payment of a fee to belong to the Corps. At any rate it is not usual for them to pay the government grant or any part of it to the members; but rather is it the practice if not the rule to apply the grant to the maintenance of the corps itself.

"The amount which we pay over to each member of the corps is five dollars and which, for those men required to take drills or P.T. amounts to a refund of their P.T. fee paid at the beginning of the year. For those men in the corps of more than two years standing at university, the five dollars is clear money gained."

"Heretofore the members of the band have received the same amount as any other member of the Corps. This year, due to dissatisfaction in the ranks of the band, the Military Committee has seen fit to go the limit and pay to each member of the band of the third or higher year's standing at university the full sum granted by the government. The exact amount I cannot give you as there has been a change from last year, but I believe that this year's grant will be about fifty dollars."

Capt. John Slater, Bandmaster of the C.O.T.C. band, when interviewed by "The Varsity", said, "There are still a few positions open to good musicians. Any men of musical ability desirous of becoming members of the band are asked to see me on Mondays or Thursdays at 5 o'clock in Room 5 of the Engineering Building. We are beginning to work for our annual spring concert and if possible will make a tour at Easter time."

Nut Nullifies Nutt Not Nut Nothing New Needed Nor Named

By Helen Price

One of the most intriguing little pastimes invented for the edification of the younger members of the upper middle classes, is the charming sport of nut cracking.

Reports circulated in the daily journals (the ones the commoner folk read) are grossly mis-exaggerated (give us credit for a new word) (after all it is rather good) and there is a general consensus of feeling within our bosom that the unvarnished truth (why is truth unvarnished?) about these frascas (fracas?) should be made public. (Wow, what a sentence).

First we will outline the procedure of issuing invitations to these nut cracking functions. (It is all very formal, for new devotees must even conform to the rigid convention of wearing yellow, red, checkered and green cravats.) A circular letter, somewhat as follows, is one of the most approved methods of attracting the Nuttiti, as they are called.

"Dear (or madam as the case be),

We have been apprised of your interest in the ancient and accepted practice of nut cracking. Will you please fill in the following form re qualifications, herewith enclosed:

1—Have you ever done any nut cracking?

2—How much?

3—Where?

4—What type?

5—How many kernels did you collect?

6—Can you produce them on demand?

7—What kind of nuts would you have us crack for you?

In the following sentence cross out the statements that you do not agree with:

We attend nut cracking bees to (a) Collect shells; (b) Cultivate flows of oratory; (c) Issue intelligentia magazines; (d) Master the intricacies of the latest waltz, fox trot, or what have you; (e) Contribute back page features to The Nut Crackers' Journal; (f) Appear at contests of strength, speed and skill; (g) Learn tating; (h) Drink forty (40) beers—We are, we are, we are—where were we; (i) Deal blows to civic pride (j) Absorb erudition; (k) Learn to distinguish between a backbone and a banana stalk. (L-m-n-o-p—and so on—fill in your own.)

Sincerely yours,

Colonel Nuttite,

Cracker-in-Chief.

P.S. Bring your ukelele.

The proper costume for nut cracking gatherings, are as follows; Hosts will appear in black flowing robes, with the hair slightly ruffled to denote feverish concentration. Chronic guests will wear quiet costumes to avoid attracting attention. First year guests, or "newies" as they are termed, invariably show up in loud ensembles.

At the end of four season, or stretchies, as they are known, each guest will receive a little souvenir, (if fortunate) in the form of a sheepskin bag, ornamented with peculiar characters. All the shells and kernels he has gathered during his stay are deposited in this receptacle, hidden from view.

He then goes into the outer world again. The clever nut cracker will place his bag in the dark depths of an old trunk.

A sure way to be ostracised from other social stratas that are not particularly interested in nut cracking, is to haul forth your little bag and go into a post mortem. (This kind is estimated as being 102 per cent worse than the bridge post mortem.) The irate hosts are licensed to commit several acts of violence and the accepted formula for the disinterested party is to toss the offender out onto the pavement with this remark: "Aw, what of it."

In the past people have expressed the opinion that "The Varsity" should be a literary journal. Well, here's your chance to get your creations into print.

WORKING GARB FINDS FAVOUR WITH MOST MALES

Snootier Dates for Co-eds if Fifty-cent Cleaning Established

GIRLS HARO ON CREASES

General Opinion Is That the Toronto Men Dress Well

"I think the wearing of overalls would be a great idea," said G. C. Garden, Commerce and Finance, '31, when interviewed by "The Varsity" on the subject. He had been told that certain male undergraduates at Shurtleff College had adopted this mode of dress, which had given rise to the question whether male students neglect their personal appearance in favour of their social activities. If they did not have to keep up with the other fellow they would have more money to spend on a good time.

Mr. Garden thought that the average male undergraduate had to weigh the subject to see if he would have his clothes pressed in a particular week or whether he would take a girl to a show.

"I suggest that the co-eds start a fifty-cent cleaning and pressing service for the men who are financially embarrassed. If this suggestion is adopted, the man will be able to offer bigger and better dates with a higher standard of sartorial display."

HAROY, TOLSTOY DISCUSSED

Scoring the present trend in literature and pointing out the modern writer's distrust in the past and revolt from all principles and ideals of his fathers, Principal M. W. Wallace of University College read a paper on the novel before the open meeting of the Wycliffe literary society in Wycliffe College on Friday night.

Principal Wallace called the attention of the audience to the great number of novels written and sold and then he described the "sugary, vapid" type of novel that the general public gobble up in such great numbers to satisfy their apparently insatiable literary appetite. The speaker admitted that there was something restful in these novels in which "love and worldly success crown the efforts of the good." "Yet," he asked, "why do such stories appeal to so many to-day when they are so patently untrue?"

Mysterious Disappearance Baffles Private Detectives and Police

REWARD IS OFFERED

Had Gone to Meet Brother Priest on His Way From Europe

No clues have been found as to the whereabouts of Rev. Francis Forster, missing priest who was last seen in the waiting room of the Windsor Station, Montreal, on November 11 last.

Father Forster was the Superior General of the Basilian Order of America, which is in charge of St. Michael's College. He had gone to Montreal to meet Rev. Father Player, who was returning from England. On the night of November 11, he checked out of the Windsor Hotel, purchased two tickets to Toronto, checked his bag and—no one knows.

The last person to see him was the check room attendant in the station. What he did after he left there is shrouded in mystery, as yet unfathomable. Not a clue as to his possible whereabouts has been unearthed although there have been many conjectures. It is presumed that on leaving the station he set out on foot for the Cunard docks about a mile and a quarter distant, through the dark menacing waterfront district contiguous with the harbour. Even this is not conclusively known. There is a possibility that he may have taken a taxi, but it is not likely as he had plenty of time was fond of walking. He was not missed until Fr. Player had returned to Toronto alone. When he did not appear within a few days Fr. Vincent Murphy, Treasurer of the Basilian Order, left for Montreal and instituted inquiries which proved fruitless. It was not until Saturday last that the case was put in the hands of the Montreal police.

When interviewed yesterday a member of St. Michael's College staff stated that the case was kept from the police as long as possible to avoid publicity, this being the last thing Father Forster would have desired. However, now that the case has become so desperate, it is felt that publicity may bring

ENGINEERING FROSH GREATLY DISTURBED BY LOSS OF BANQUET

DISORDER DENIED BY DEAN

Claim Banquet Should be Held in Student - Proof Hall

"The Engineering Society itself prohibited the annual S.P.S. soph-frosh banquet for next year, and the faculty had nothing to do with the regulation," stated Dean C. H. Mitchell in reference to the suspension of the banquet for future banquets. "I could not see any signs of disorder and you can emphasize the fact that during the banquet every student maintained perfect decorum. Since the banquet was prohibited by the students themselves I cannot very well state whether this prohibition will work a hardship on this year's freshman class."

However, some students who were at the banquet seemed to see some misbehaviour which the Dean missed, and numerous cases of imbibing have been reported by eye witnesses. "It was a very orderly banquet as compared with former School banquets," stated Mr. W. E. Algie, third year Science. "Instead of salt cellars and large pieces of ice being thrown only small pieces were thrown this year, and all conducted themselves in a most gentlemanly manner."

But the freshmen at the School seem

AFFIRMATIVE QUOTES SHAKESPEARE AND NEWMAN

Negative Leader Declares Subject Not Considered With Enough Care in Past and Her Colleague Asserts Charming Butterflies Not Wanted in Business World

"The perfect education is one in which both extra and intra-curricular activities are well blended," Miss Mary Winspear, leader of the affirmative, told the House last night. She went on to point out the advantage derived from language, clubs, societies and residences, and quoted from last year's graduates who had graduated from honour courses and who were prominent in dramatics, science clubs, athletics and newspaper work. Newman was her authority for the benefits derived from residences and the intimate associations made therein.

Miss Margaret Bell, leader of the opposition, declared that popular opinion was in favour of extra-curricular activities because the subject had not been given careful consideration. Miss Bell said that the people taking extension courses had their degree on the same basis as the full-time students. Here Miss Winspear rose to a point of question and asked the name of one university that did. Her answer was "Queen's".

That education was to fit one for two spheres of life—leisure and work—was the opinion of Miss Anna Bicknell, second Varsity speaker. The qualities that made for a success in a class-room are not those that make success in life. Hamlet had no extra-curricular activities and he was unable to make a decision and was unfit for the hurly-burly of life. The world is over-specialized and women with only intra-curricular activities are rabid and lose their ability for social contact.

Miss Ilse Schroeder, the last speaker, said that the universities in the middle ages stressed the intellectual side. Charming has no place in business and unskilled labour is a "drug on the market"—business men do not want "social butterflies", but college graduates who are able to concentrate.

Miss Winspear replied and advised any one looking for a liberal education to solicit advertisements for a college magazine.

Among the speakers from the floor were Miss Dale, Miss Evelyn Crain, Miss Connors and Mr. C. W. Leslie. The judges of the evening were Miss Dykes, A. C. McNaughton, Esq., and Professor Hadow. The popular vote resulted in a count of 75 for the affirmative and 28 for the negative. Miss C. Shay was the clerk and Miss Marie Crean was in the chair.

FOLLIES PROGRAM IN PREPARATION

Some Sterling Presentations Anticipated by Lucky Ticket-holders

PULCHRITUDE RUMoured

Without a doubt the 1929 model of the University College Follies will result in many of the cast being offered promising positions in Hollywood. The big act of the program is a collection of various freaks of nature or otherwise, which will be presented with the official permission of the cast.

We wish to call your attention to a few of the higher salaried events which are being presented to provoke laughter and incidentally take the minds of the students off the impending exams. The South African seer will answer

Antics Afield

A notice in the M.I.T., Tech. official undergraduate publication of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, states that as an error has been made in the address of one C. G. Dana in the directory, it is requested that all bills be addressed to the petulant address given, and all cheques, invitations and the like be sent to his correct abode.

Correction

In Monday's "Varsity" the date of the Commerce Club banquet was given incorrectly. "The Varsity" regrets this error and wishes to announce that the banquet will be held Thurs., Nov. 28.

LES SALES YANQUIS

We find, from time to time, a vigorous expression of local opinion to the effect that this university has certain characteristics which mark it as superior to those south of the Kummel and Seidel line. The superiority is largely based on the assumption that we have British qualities which are not to be mentioned in the same breath as any American qualities. It is likewise opined that if we have vices, they are imported from the States; that our virtues are cherished British ideals.

Space does not permit us to elaborate; but we maintain that Toronto is on the way to become like Columbia or Michigan or Penn State or any other American college; furthermore, that a stock-taking at present would result in the conclusion that physically, we are now American, and that mentally, we lack only the grace to admit it.

GREATNESS

A university is as great as the works of its members. While the University of Toronto has distinguished itself in many fields there are some people who think that it has not in its corporate consciousness, that flair for fine literature which it might have. If this be so, then it is not only the privilege but the duty of all those who can write to take advantage of the new literary feature of "The Varsity", to make it so fine a thing that by sheer merit it will gain place. Whatever fame the university has gained has been only by the hard work and perseverance of certain people with ideals. Might we suggest that there is hardly a nobler object than that of giving the university a name for a sustained high standard of undergraduate literary effort, for a literary consciousness permeating its whole mass and affecting every succeeding generation of undergraduates.

A WRONG IMPRESSION

We understand that, regarding our recent editorials on the subject of "Torontonsensis" finances, a misapprehension has arisen to the effect that we intended to reflect on the editors of that publication. Nothing could be further from our purpose: we hold these gentlemen and their work in high esteem. We were discussing the policy of the Finance Committee of the Joint Executive, which makes the grant to the editors of "Torontonsensis" and decides whether it shall cost nineteen cents or any greater or lesser sum per student per year. As the official organ of undergraduate opinion, we could not but discuss those policies of your government which intimately concern you. It is our sole regret that no one else venture to express an opinion in these matters.

Correspondence

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

Pleestameetcha!

The Editor:
"The Varsity",

Dear Sir:

To follow the style of his own letter, we are indeed fortunate in having at Varsity such puerile beings as "Hopeful". Recently this gentleman published a letter in your most estimable columns. He eulogized the library staff, and regretted that "so far no means have been provided for admiring undergraduates to be introduced to the various assistant librarians". Then, as though he had not already sufficiently left himself open to ridicule, he hoped that the Librarian would take steps to remedy matters.

Sad days indeed for old Varsity when an undergraduate needs someone to "introduce" him into the assistant Librarians. In my undergraduate days such things were unknown, that is, the "introducing". The assistant librarians were a most delightful part of one's educational experience. Are the men becoming more diffident, or those most excellent young women more reserved and awe-inspiring? Truly it seems that the "good old days" have gone forever.

But let "Hopeful" be happy. He does not know what he has missed—how many hours of study he might have wasted in staring over the top of a book at the object of his heart's desire. (Perhaps it is a bit strong to use the word wasted). Then, too, there were the surreptitious meetings beside the Dictionary of National Biography, a most desirable set of scholarly books. "Hopeful", we fear that your outlook is not one which is conducive to effective results. Be brave.

In closing let us offer a few suggestions, which may (or may not) work satisfactorily, and thus leave our optimistic friend content with the world. Call them by their first names. If you do not know these, substitute some of the stock phrases, e.g., "Kid", "Bim", or what have you. Then see how many steps you hit on the way out. Remember that you are a hopeless minor, and the assistant librarians (if I am not mistaken) believe that "us girls should stick together".

Loyalties

Mr. Edgar Stone's first production in Hart House is unreservedly excellent. Perhaps the goodness of the play itself carried us away, conceivably the characters are so deftly drawn that actors cannot but fall into them; even so we cannot but say that the play was extremely well acted and directed. There was perhaps a little diffidence at first, but, by the end of the first act, both playwright and actors had the audience firmly by the hand; we have rarely seen a better amateur production.

"Loyalties" is too well known to require much comment. Galsworthy has drawn in a masterly way what even we feel to be the dominant characteristic of the English gentleman; unswerving loyalty to his own kith and kind, alike through fortune and disgrace, a loyalty superseded only by the higher loyalty to professional and national ethics. This characteristic is more unforgettably shown in "Loyalties" than in any essay of Keyserling, for Galsworthy has never departed from the tenets of good theatre: there is constant action, constant interest, easy humour mixed with the tragedy at the right junctures, a smooth and logical passage from scene to scene without creaking explanations, a straight, sure road from crime to tragedy. The play may date a generation hence, but now it is well nigh unsalable.

It is hard to distinguish among the actors. Almost everyone had a character part, and the acting after the first few minutes was all so good that it melted into the play and became unobtrusive as a well-fitting suit. This rarely occurs on the first night of an amateur production. Mr. Finch as De Levis, did not get into his stride till nearly the end of the first act, but then he played magnificently. The part required almost melodramatic force, and he gave it. Mr. Hitchman as Gilman showed the fine points of a very delightful characterization, with genuine skill. The fact that we mention no others is no reflection upon them. The whole cast rose as one to the play. We could not, in fairness, specify further.

The production was all done on one set, with changing properties. This grew a little tiresome towards the end, but economy must be served, and it was a good set. In conclusion, may we say that the new director and the several new actors have earned a very generous welcome.

B.D.B.

EVENING

O happy hour of eventide
When work is bade adieu,
And gastric yearnings down inside
Bring thoughts of steaming stew.

And when the toiler's hands have pried
The mud from his moustache,
He heaves his heavy head aside
And hastens home to hash.

Then banker, bum, and artisan,
Go sup when labours cease,
And many a tired business man
Goes home to have his peace.

While golden gravy drops cascade
O'er cutlets carefully carved,
The solemn soup songs serenade
The stomachs of the starved.

Then one by each at close of day
The garden hoses squirt
Their silvery chlorinated spray
Upon the grass stained dirt.

Aromas from the abattoirs
Are borne upon the zephyrs,
Suggesting slaughtered sows and scores
Of disemboweled heifers.

Joy comes to all at close of day
When hungry howls are hushed,
And all are smiling, happy, gay,
And e'en the streets are flushed.

Gaspard McGuffey.

All other methods failing, pass a note (preferably typed) instead of a Reading Room Slip, to one of them, asking for her full name, family tree, and the size of shoes she wears. After that, all should be easy. Man is made to mourn anyway. We speak from experience, with the tongues of men about angels(?). Still we have few regrets, if any. We have no more to say. We said far too much in the past as it was; but it was great fun.

Yours sincerely,
Gratified Grad.

With the Theatres

UPTOWN

Gloria Swanson acts superbly through ninety rather sordid minutes in "The Trespasser". She portrays a Chicago typist who contracts a mesalliance with the son of a multimillionaire, and there proceeds to eke out a rather dreary existence through six or seven reels. It all ends with a happy re-union which ends a series of separations and highly-emotional scenes.

Gloria Swanson records quite well and her singing compares favourably with the best that movie artists have done on the screen. She is given able support by the rest of the cast. The nurse is entitled to mention for providing the few lighter moments of the picture.

A very routine program completes the bill.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The Canadian final game between Hamilton Tigers and Regina Roughriders to be played at Hamilton Saturday will bring the senior football season to a close. Unless the biggest upset in football history occurs the championship will remain in the east for another year. Tigers have one of the strongest teams that ever trod a Canadian gridiron and right now they are at the top of their form. The Yellow and Black clearly established their supremacy over all other eastern teams by defeating Sarnia, the O.R.F.U. winners by 14-2, and last Saturday's decisive victory over Queen's, the Intercollegiate title-holders. Regina is said to be the best team that has represented the west in the Canadian final, but that still leaves a lot to the imagination. Tigers should defeat Regina by a bigger score than 30-0. If the Yellow and Black put on full steam they have a good chance of approaching the Queen's-Regina game of 1923 when the Tricolour won 54-0.

The Senior O.H.A. series will likely have a good season. Varsity, Queen's, Hamilton and local entries will battle it out. The Blue and White will be facing stiffer opposition than last year, but appear to have the class necessary to win another title. Varsity look much better now than they did a year ago and the addition of some new relief men of senior calibre has bolstered up the weak spots.

The Blue and White water polo team lead the City League with two wins and no losses. Varsity defeated Central Y and Broadview quite handily in the games played, downing the latter aggregation 14-2. The team is in great shape for the season's campaign. In the Penn A.C. of Philadelphia, who play here Saturday night, the Blue are meeting one of the strongest squads on the continent.

PROF. WALLACE SPEAKS

"The truth is," he went on, "people don't want a story of their own experience in the world, so they choose a book that will help them to forget. Such stories are liked because modern civilization has not made life interesting for most people. People are bored and uninterested; otherwise they would not read such literature."

"The old novels of ideal love, self sacrifice and goodness have become antiquated. Novelists are much more concerned with the sweat and dirt of life than the noble side of it. No institution is so generally assailed as marriage." The speaker discussed this new literary atmosphere in which once again the cry of "Back to Nature" is heard on every hand. To the artists of the new age the slightest vestige of Victorian repression or convention is revolting. "Repression of impulse is the price we must pay if we are to escape from anarchy and destruction. This new idea is a disease affecting people, which is a disease as long as this world is constructed as it is."

"Form is indispensable if a novel is to become really great. Hardy excels in this respect. And finally a novel to be truly great must communicate to us some real experience of life—significant, intense, compelling. To read a novel of Hardy or Tolstoy is to be in touch with a spirit more alive and powerful than ourselves. We give such men a place of honour because we feel it an honour to taste life as they have tasted it. If a man's experience in life has been fuller than mine, be he realist or romanticist, I shall read him."

SCHOOL POLOISTS ARE VICTORIOUS

Victoria Are Beaten 1-0 in Well Played and Strenuous Game

McLEAN OF S.P.S. STARS

S.P.S. defeated Victoria in the best played water polo game of this season yesterday afternoon by the close score of 1-0. The game was a standout from the combination standpoint, the team play being almost faultless. The goal keepers for both sides were never given a chance to rest because of the consistent bombardment kept up by the forwards of each side. Fisher scored the lone goal in the first period and after that the fans saw S.P.S. check Victoria almost to a standstill, but owing to the stellar playing of McLean in goal, S.P.S. were unable to score again.

Victoria—McLean, Cowie, Gould, Perkin, Barrett, Glass, Edmison, Smith, O'Neill.
S.P.S.—Powers, Towers, Hayhoe, Fisher, Bryce, Withrow, Sutton, Crocker, Craig.

"In the light of this consideration," asked the speaker, "what about the novels of to-day? At no other time have there been more interesting books written. At no time have the morality and institutions of the past been more in question."

WATER POLO CLASSIC SLATED ON SATURDAY

Swimming Champ From Penn A.C. Will Make Appearance With Team

CLOSE BATTLE PREDICTED

Next Saturday night will see the opening of the new International Water Polo League when the Penn A.C. clashes with Varsity in Hart House pool. This will be the first time any Varsity team has ever competed in a league fixture with an American team.

The visiting squad includes a number of well known swimming stars, notably Walter Spence, holder of a string of National and State championships and records. Penn are considered to be one of the best polo outfits across the line and the locals will have their work cut out to chalk up a win.

However, the Varsity poloists know a thing or two about the game also. Coach "Fran" Lorenzen's outfit includes most of last year's intercollegiate and city champions and so far this year they have mowed down all the opposition. In Capt. George Spence, they have an experienced leader who can be depended on to turn in a first-class game. Bob Armstrong, who scored 8 goals against Broadview 'Y' last week, will also be a hard man to keep off the score sheet. The defensive work is fairly strong and Bill Ayres in the nets will give the Penn sharpshooters plenty of trouble. The team has been practicing hard and are concentrating on a passing game to offset the superior swimming ability of the American "sharks".

This game will give the fans a chance to see some real sport, water polo at its best, also the international aspect makes it a big attraction which should not be missed.

MEDICAL MERMEN OUTPLAY ARTSMEN

Allen and Culliner Both Are Prominent for Junior Doctors

Jr. Meds took a close water polo game from Jr. U.C. yesterday. Meds got both of their goals in the first half when they had a big margin on the play. Allen and Culliner scored the winners' two counters and both looked impressive throughout. U.C. went scoreless in the first half and then came to life in the second, but could only notch one goal. Seecombe put this one in and played a good game throughout.

Meds—Bennett, Allen, Culliner, Rogers, Sutherland, Davy, Fee, Limbert, Magdan.

U.C.—Parker, Learie, Ross, Smith, Seecombe, Chisholm, Clute, Cowan.

GIRL CAGERS HOLD FAST DOUBLE-HEADER

St. Michael's Take First Game From U.C. Freshies 38-15

ST. HILDA'S WIN SECOND

At U.T.S. gym last night the girls staged a double header when St. Michael's entertained the U.C. Freshies, and Household Science played St. Hilda's.

In the first game St. Michael's won 38-15. The freshies were somewhat better than they seemed, for they missed many shots at the basket when they had the defence clearly beaten. St. Michael's did not play as well as they have been playing. Their passing seemed unsteady and their shots inaccurate at times. The defence however, has improved greatly.

In the second game, Household Science provided a surprise when they held the strong Saints to a 27-19 score. St. Hilda's seemed slightly unsteady also, and Household Science defence tightened up in the second half considerably and their forward line played well, especially Jean Hall and Alice Grant. St. Hilda's play a beautiful fast game and many of their shots were made as the result of spectacular passing right down the floor.

all questions free of charge. These questions may pertain to any subject (women preferred).

The educated elephant is another feature. Notwithstanding the fact that he is the recipient of an Honorary Title, B.S., he is still intelligent enough to answer, "I have nothing for publication."

The ladies will be entertained by Big Jim, the Jungle Man. He is an able exponent of the so-called Cave-man style and uses for his experiment members of the audience (Ed. Note: If I find you there, Ethel, I'll . . .) We are trying to bring the half man woman here, but are waiting for definite advice from the censor. However, we are confident of his appearance.

Jo Jo, the dog-faced man, who will be remembered by all those who attended the recent Toronto Exposition, will be back again. His acts which are done in the dark will amuse all.

Snake Charmers are also present. Marie will show how it is done in Snakeville, Omaha. What she does with that snake is copyright.

The magician from Malta the 77th son of the 1st daughter is due to appear next. His hot water act is one that will amaze you.

These are only a few of the big acts. After the entertainment all those in physical condition to dance will be allowed to do so. It is thought that one orchestra will easily accommodate them. So it's U.C. Follies for me!

S.M.C. FALL BEFORE VIC IN HEAVY HITTING GAME

Victoria defeated St. Michael's College girls at baseball last night by a score of 24-10. St. Michael's seem to be improving, a little, and were aided by their home floor. Daisy Quance pitched excellent ball for Vic, and Alice Tilley, as catcher, gave her good support. The whole Vic team hit well and showed strength on defense. Nora Rousseau for the Double Blue pitched a real good game, although handicapped by a sprained wrist. Rita McDonald, shortstop, also stood out. Mary Thomson led in hitting, getting six in six trips to the plate.

Seattle, Wash. — The traditional sophomore beard contest at the University of Washington is slated to commence November 2, and will last for a month. All the class officers have announced their intention of entering the fungus culture contest except the president, who says that her past performances at the game have not been so good.

"Last year's beard contest attracted nationwide publicity," says the University Daily, "when motion pictures were taken of the tremendous sophomore 'crop,' and were distributed throughout the country."

See Evangeline Land

No less than 15,787 tourists visited Grand Pre Memorial Park, Nova Scotia, during the 1929 summer season. The park is the property of the Dominion Atlantic Railway which acquired it before the war years and made of it a beautiful memorial to Evangeline, the heroine of Longfellow's epic of the Acadians. Evangeline's Well, in its original state, forms one of the chief attractions of the Park and the National Acedian Society erected a memorial church on the property. A beautiful statue of Evangeline, executed by the well known Canadian sculptor, Hebert, was placed in the Park by the Dominion Atlantic Railway and the grounds were changed from a complete wilderness into one of the most idyllic spots in all Nova Scotia during the last ten years. The general opinion seemed to be that the fee that they paid entitled them to two banquets, and it was only fair considering the mystic rites of punishment they had to go through before the banquet that they should be able to administer the same treatment to next year's freshman class. The banquet should not be cancelled, but should be held where the students are not likely to cause a commotion afterwards," was the opinion of E. ## Freshman Continues Crocheting Mindful of Parental Precepts

ByRONORA LAPLANTE

Next year I'll be a sophomore. They tell me I won't, but they can't fool me. Don't I know sophomore comes after freshman? I am twenty and good-looking—blue eyes—nice mouth—curly hair. My mother (m'sheresinpeace) once said to me, "Edwin P., remember your station and your dignity and don't forget that lace and architecture are the greatest things on earth." She taught me Manchurian hand-drawn lace-work with hands that shook with emotion, and gave me a photograph of the Leaning Tower, to put in my locket. Well—I never forgot those things.

Here at college the fellows like me. They never suspect me of having higher thoughts. We go to the stadium to a rugby game; they stand up and yell, "C'mon Varsity—get going—c'mon ydamfool—yee Varsity!"—and I stand up and shout too, and they grin at me and say, "Good egg!" But I'm shouting "Purl one, plain one, double crocheting, twiddle-your-thumb"—which is the standard lace pattern of the stannest. I find rugby games extremely good practice. The other day at the Queen's game I was practicing eight different patterns while Gheekin, my roommate, hollered for Varsity. He looked at me, but I had just got that hard Butternegg (used for cushion tops) into full swing, so I kept right on "Double loop, triple crocheting". He left first and when I got to my room after the game, the door was locked, my things in the hall. A nasty note said something about harbouring a moron. (Did I tell you I was good-looking—curly hair—nice eyes). Anyway I was pretty mad.

Yesterday Gheekin was talking to Madame X (incognito in campo)—"Yes, that (pointing to the Library) is Arabesque, and those to your right are Burlesque, Romanesque and Picturesque. The one that looks like a decadent plum pudding? Oh, that's—" Secretly amazed at his erudition I followed them as they strolled towards Knox.

"Dose ting?" she waved a hand at the physogs plastered along that edifice. He flourished. "Why, yes, of course they, well—those are 'Gargles', I hissed. Madame X smiled at me. "Do-o tell me about dem." Gheekin fled. . . . .

They found me this morning on the campus. Did I tell you I was good-looking—black eyes, curly nose—no teeth— Who is this Madame X anyway??

the less they are respected." The Minister of Unmarried Mothers' Civil Re-establishment, who seconded the motion, maintained that undoubtedly the woman cannot bring forth in any enterprise the qualities which the man produced.

The Hon. David Lewis, replying to the resolution, claimed that from what he gathered of the conception of the Government, an ideal woman was one who could bear the kitchen in her arms, and nothing in her head. Such, he stated, was not the view of his party. Woman had the undoubted right to go into the world because she was "a human being, laden with possibilities. She can produce anything a man can, and more," averred the speaker.

"After listening to the silver-tongued orators of the Opposition, I am indeed convinced that silence is golden," remarked Mr. Klein, as he commenced a heavy barrage on the policies of the Government. After asking whose home the Government meant in the Bill, he explained that he could readily believe, knowing the character of the Cabinet, that they meant any home—except her husband's.

He was convinced that no amount of legislation could keep the woman in the home, since "the hand that rocks the cradle fools the world."

Representing the constituency of Papiernouville, Mr. Phil Matthews defied the Minister of Matrimonial Affairs for his reflections on the co-eds of the university, whom he said were not doing their duty. The speaker considered the statement entirely out of order, since the students always had before them the Latin sentence, "Grandesunt Aucta Labores."

The member for Papiernouville, Mr. Zaitlin, pictured the happy circumstances under which the men would live if there were no women in the home to bother them. No angry wife would remonstrate with the tired husresults. The Montreal police are using radio broadcasts in an attempt to clear up his fate.

A reward of $5,000 is offered for information which will lead to the clearing up of the mystery. There is no evidence to show that Father Forster is not being held for such a contingency. A strong, robust man of 55, it is unlikely that he suffered loss of memory or sudden illness. The only alternative is that of foul play. The waterfront of Montreal is notorious as an underworld district. A lone figure on those narrow streets might easily be attacked and robbed and the body disposed of without any one being the wiser. It is still felt that there is a possibility for his discovery but with every hour the chances are lessened.

A man who resembled the missing priest was seen in the Windsor station on Sunday night. He was questioned by the police and after identification was proven to be the wrong man. As yet this is the only lead, true or false which has been uncovered. Detective Passmore of the Montreal police has been assigned to the case and expects developments shortly.

SEEK VARSITY BAND FOR FOOTBALL GAMES DURING NEXT SEASON

S.A.C. Representatives Praise Efforts of Band at Kingston

OBJECTIONS DISCUSSED

Alumni Guest Proposes Students Become Subscribers to U. of T. Monthly

The appointment of a committee to investigate the student band situation, and to ensure a Varsity band at the football games next fall, was among the steps taken by the Men's S.A.C. at their meeting yesterday afternoon in Hart House. General satisfaction was expressed by representatives concerning the showing of the band at Kingston on November 16, and the General Secretary-Treasurer, A. Gordon Burns, was asked why the band did not play at the home game. The answer was that the leader had trouble in getting men to play instruments needed to balance the band. It was also explained that lack of interest was a factor to be considered, when there was no prospect of a trip.

A. J. Stringer, representative from U.C., then moved that a committee be appointed, including among the members the president of the Rotifers Club, to go into the matter fully, and to report back to the Council. The Secretary-Treasurer in the course of discussion, pointed out that in addition to spending money on cleaning the uniforms before the Queen's game, he had had to buy two extra pairs of pants.

The Secretary-Treasurer of the Alumni Federation, K. B. Conn, was a guest at the meeting in order that he might outline a scheme to the Council concerning the "University of (Continued from page 3)

SCHOLAR REAPS PAPER ON GREEK EDUCATION

Points Out Athenian Superiority Over Spartan Education

Three definite stages of educational development were outlined by the Rev. Canon W. Rollo in a paper on "Ancient Greek Education". The paper was delivered before a well attended meeting of the Trinity College Science Club.

The Battle of Marathon was the first stage in Greek education. The second lasted till the Roman Conquest and the third was concluded in the time of Constantine.

The Athenian and Spartan methods particularly were traced out and their contrasting merits and defects explained.

"The rigid and brutal system of the Spartans was eventually their own undoing," said Canon Rollo. "The Athenians by placing the instruction of the youth in the hands of the parents and private teachers, instead of the state, produced a fuller civilization which has perhaps never been equalled."

Women received no higher education in Sparta and only rarely in Athens. The daughter of Theoclydes, however, was well enough informed to continue her father's historical work.

The contribution of Athens to every side of culture is well known. Sparta produced few philosophers, sutors or poets of note. "Selfish individualism and corruption gradually undermined the older system," said Canon Rollo. After some discussion the meeting was closed, a vote of thanks was passed to the speaker and the hosts who supplied the evening's refreshments.

The first lecture will be given in Room 43 of the Physics Building, on Wednesday, November 27 at 5 o'clock.

SEARCH FOR PRIEST IS STILL GOING ON

No Word From Father Forster Since Leaving Montreal Station

POSSIBILITY OF FOUL PLAY

Officials of St. Michael's College were unable to give any fresh information regarding the disappearance of the Very Rev. Francis Forster, Superior General of the Basilian Order of America, which has charge of St. Michael's College when interviewed yesterday afternoon.

Father Forster, who was last seen at seven o'clock on the morning of November 11th, when he checked his bag at the Windsor station in Montreal, had spent some time at the sanitarium that the order maintains in Gabriel, N.Y. Father Lynch, who is in charge of the sanitarium cannot believe that his superior general from Toronto was murdered.

"I can give no explanation or clue," said Father Lynch. "Father Forster appeared to be in the best of health while he was here. He talked with me of many problems in his work and of his wishes regarding them. Always an enthusiastic walker, he insisted on walking to the station from the Sanitarium. It is just possible that after he had checked his bags at the station he started to walk to the docks to meet Father Player at the Cunard sheds, and on the way was struck down from behind. It is almost inconceivable to me that anyone would knowingly murder a priest."

"It is possible that he had a breakdown, but he certainly showed no signs of its approach when he was with me here. I am at a loss to give an explanation."

CANINE INVADES LECTURE OF POLITICAL SCIENTISTS

Education Becoming Popular With Member of Animal Kingdom

Education is getting more and more popular. Even animals have taken it up. And they don't go in for such simple stuff as reading and spelling either. One member of the canine kingdom, a beautiful furry colie, was the other day initiated into Economics. As Prof. Jackson was discoursing on nomads and their effect on civilization, this inquisitive creature calmly skipped down the long steps of the Lecture Room in the Biology building. A student was hastily summoned to eject the intruder, which resulted in a merry chase up and down steps, along aisles and under seats. The dog, however, soon succumbed to man's superior intelligence, and such harsh commands as "Shoo, shoo, go on, beat it!" being directed against him, he hurriedly left the chamber of learning. His further wanderings were not traced.

W.A.A. THEATRE NIGHT RECEIVES GOOD SUPPORT

"Tickets for the Women's Athletic Association Theatre Night didn't go very quickly," said Miss Phyllis Ferguson, the president, last night. "We don't know how much we have made yet, because all the ticket-sellers have not turned in their money."

In former years the Association has simply held a drive for funds, but this year the committee decided that a "Theatre Night" would be more pleasing for all concerned. The money thus raised has to meet a great number of needs—the expenses of teams travelling to other cities, uniforms for players, to provide a "binge" for visiting teams, and possibly an orange for the refreshment of enthusiastic athletes.

A goodly number of people turned out to support the girls, and to enjoy the presentation of Barrie's "A Kiss for Cinderella". It remains to be seen how much money over the $650 necessary expense will go to swell the coffers of the W.A.A.

Lawrence, Kansas—Harry F. Sinclair, notorious oil magnate, was released from the District of Columbia jail, in which he was confined as a result of a corruption scandal, in order to attend an alumni reunion at the University of Kansas, according to the University Daily Kansan.

COLLEGE PROFESSORS PLACE STUDIES FIRST

Primary Purpose of University is Intellectual, Says Prof. Wallace

LIT SOCIETIES WORTHWHILE

"Extra-curricular activities are valuable but they are secondary to the regular university course," Prof. L. A. Mackay of the Department of Classics told "The Varsity" yesterday. "As Principal Wallace said in his address to the first year, the primary purpose of the university is intellectual training," he continued. "If extra-curricular activities help to obtain that, then they do some good. Distinct advantages are gained by outside study, such as students of French making a study of modern literature, and students in classics making a study of French."

Insofar as residences serve a purpose in teaching tolerance to those who need tolerance, they are justified in being classed among beneficial extra-curricular activities, was the opinion of Prof. Mackay. However, a good club outside of the university, such as the Argos club, aside from its athletic advantages (Continued on page 4)

Students Deny Desire to Meet Fair Librarians, But Admit Interest

Undergraduates were reluctant to commit themselves on the question of whether or not there was any difficulty to be encountered on the part of the aspiring undergraduate who would make the acquaintance of any of the fair assistant librarians who might be the object of his heart's desire.

Opinions have already been expressed on the question—if there is any—in the form of two letters which have appeared recently in the correspondence columns of this paper. One, to which the signature "Hopeful" was affixed, expressed some regret that no means has ever been provided to bridge the gulf of formality existing between the bashful undergraduate and the young ladies behind the delivery desk. The other letter which appeared in yesterday's "Varsity", was written by a graduate who, deploring that the "good old days" have departed, chastized "Hopeful" for his backwardness and reserve.

The fact that the opinions of those consulted vary as much as they do would seem to indicate that the question is largely a matter for the individual to settle himself. One man in 4th year Modern History admitted that he had often thought he would like to meet certain of the assistant librarians, but when asked if he had ever experienced any difficulty in doing so, replied: "I have never tried." He added further: "They are all graduates and probably have friends of their own and may not want to meet us."

Another undergraduate said: "I never saw them," and a man in third year U.C. asked: "Who wants to meet them?" A student in third year Commerce and Finance stated that he had never experienced the least desire to meet any of the assistant librarians, thus cutting short all discussion whatsoever as to the difficulty or ease with which the thing could be done.

L. R. Bell, 4th year English and History was much more considerate of the young ladies in question, saying: "A closer acquaintance might prove valuable in melting their icy hearts when overnight books are brought in at 11 a.m. In any case an introduction would be certain to prove thrilling, but who would dare attempt the task of introducing the entire male section of the faculty of arts to half a dozen young ladies?"

"The Varsity" hoped to interview the librarians themselves on the question, but at no time yesterday afternoon, did any of them appear to be enjoying a sufficiently lengthy respite from duties to warrant the approach of a questioning reporter.

AWARDS

The judges of the literary section announce that the First Award of Five Dollars, for Poetry, is given to Miss Phyllis Argall, for her selection, "VOICES"; the Second, of Two Dollars and a Half, to Miss Maureen Macoun, for her "TO LEUCONOE". The First Award for Prose, of Five Dollars, is given to Miss Mary Ainslie, for her selection, "OUT-LOOK"; the Second, to Miss Elsie Wilson, for her NOVEL.

Cheques will be mailed before the end of the week to the winners.

The next awards will be made in connection with our special Christmas issue. Prizes totalling $25 will be awarded on this occasion.

POET-LECTURER TO GIVE POEM RECITAL AT LORETTO

A writer in the London "Daily Herald", has spoken of Theodore Maynard as a "jolly mystic", and this seems to embody his whole character. As a writer of poems and a contributor to "The Nation", the "London Mercury", "The Literary Digest", and "The Common Weal", we find this thread of mysticism running through his work. In addition to his writing ability, he is a very successful lecturer in the English department of Georgetown University, Washington, D.C.

Mr. Maynard will give a recital from his own poetry on Thurs., Nov. 28 at Loretto, after the annual prize giving event has been concluded.

WELL KNOWN EDITOR DISCUSSES POLITICS

Editor of Toronto Weekly Addresses Political Club in Hart House

DISCUSSES MACDONALD

"The expansion of Canada was not achieved without opposition from middle-headed politicians," stated Mr. Hector Charlesworth, editor of "The Saturday Night", before the Macdonald-Cartier Club last night. Mr. Charlesworth sketched the political careers of the various members of Sir John A. Macdonald's cabinet. He outlined the conditions of the time and the parts played by the members of the cabinet in the moulding of the early history of Canada. "If Macpherson had paid more attention to what was told him, the Northwest Rebellion could have been averted at any time," stated the speaker, referring to the part played by Macpherson in the politics of the time. "The Northwest Rebellion raised a race and creed cry as the French-Canadians were up in arms over the hanging of Louis Riel." Mr. Charlesworth characterized Riel (Continued on page 3)

Library Innovations

Two new pieces have recently been added to the stationery equipment of the university library. The one just finished, a shelf set in the recess opposite the "Sign for Night-Books Here" stand is, according to Mr. Wallace, the librarian, simply to relieve the desk beside it of the inconvenient supply of night slips scattered there after 3 o'clock. The other is a book shelf built in front of the delivery desk in the lower reading room. The original plan was to display these books not in general demand for students to sample and enjoy. However, the thirst for knowledge and application to industry already rampant in the student body have made it impossible to increase the attractions of the already crowded room, so the book stand remains empty.

SECOND H.H. DEBATE TAKES PLACE TONIGHT MCGILL MEN TAKE PART

Well Known Student Debaters to Discuss Question of Liberal Education

FACULTY REPRESENTED

Warden Bickersteth Promises Interesting Meeting for Students

"That this House views with alarm the spread of liberal education in North America", will be the subject of the second Hart House debate being held in the Lecture Room of Hart House this evening.

The motion will be moved by G. O. Murrell-Wright of Trinity College, who will be opposed by Mr. J. Edmison of McGill University. The third speaker will be B. M. Alexander, also of McGill and H. S. Dodgson, of Emmanuel College will speak fourth.

The visiting speakers are well known as debaters Mr. Alexander having been on a team which made a successful tour of the universities of the British Isles last year. Mr. Edmison gained a reputation for speaking at Queen's and later at Osgoode Hall.

Discussing the subject of liberal education in general Prof. N. A. Macenzie of the department of law, when interviewed by "The Varsity" this afternoon said: "It is largely a question of whether or not the things for which an education in the liberal arts stand for are compatible with modern business efficiency, for this latter seems to be very largely the basis of civilization on this continent. To my mind they do not go hand in hand."

"The debate this evening," said Warden J. B. Bickersteth, "will be entirely a student affair; and promises to be one of the most interesting that has been held in Hart House for some time." The Warden mentioned that it had been intended to invite a prominent guest to speak, but it was doubtful if this arrangement could be carried out.

"The subject chosen," said one member of the debates committee, "is provocative in itself, and has been widely discussed in educational circles all over the continent, and prominent writers, H. M. Aikin and Sinclair Lewis, for instance, have written notable articles on the subject. As the matter stands, it is likely that the faculty will be well represented at the debate."

Five hundred and forty-one students at the University of Wisconsin are married.

Antics Afield

Our credulous contemporary, the Utah Chronicle, naively announces that the Methodist Church is planning an appeal to men to put a stop to women smoking.

And in the next column runs an item from Boulder, Colorado, that senior co-eds at the University of Colorado have adopted the custom of carrying canes to emphasize their stand for equal rights with men.

The eminent McGill Daily gives the world at large an insight into the acrobatic possibilities of intellectual pursuits in two headlines on the front page of one issue: "New Club Projected" and "Lecture Given on Telescopes."

BOW NICELY, GENTLEMEN

It is indeed seldom that we, as the organ of this University, are given the opportunity to acknowledge the kindness of anyone who gives us a printed pat on the back.

It has usually been our constant bugbear to have to print lengthy editorial treatises on the misrepresentation of the student by the public, the press, and the movies. Therefore when we discover that Someone of the Press has been speaking well of us, it is with a deep bow and all the esteem we can muster that we thank the gentleman for his thoughts.

Leslie Roberts, in "These be Your Gods", has painted word pictures of the leading lights of this Canada of ours with a frank flattery and a discerning criticism that is quite devoid of the How-I-Became-A-Success style of a well-known monthly, and which lacks the biting and often unfair sarcasm of so many of the writers of characters to-day.

Sir Robert Falconer has his place among the men whom Roberts has chosen to put in his Canadian mirrors of Downing Street. We, as the clay that is at present in the moulding, draw the attention of all the readers of this paper, to the tribute that has been paid to the moulder.

"Toronto is a manly school. It breeds two-fisted youngsters who can face the world four square if they have wit enough to breathe the basic things of life which are in its mellow air. Under the guidance of Sir Robert Falconer the blue-and-white Varsity whence student battalions troop the streets of Toronto on football Saturdays, hurling their Eriptide-Eriptide war cry to the twilight, has grown and waxed healthy, but never corpulent. Neither fat of head nor stodgy of avoirdupois is the attitude to life of the young men who have felt Falconer's influence, and who if they are wise, take his healthy vision with them into the market places when they leave him to the tending of other flocks."

"If you have a business man at the helm of an educational institution, it is only natural that you will produce graduates tarred with the inky pitch of commercialism. If you have an old woman at the helm you can produce nothing-in-particular, and will win no great repute for your college. If your college president is a cheap-jack, countless cheap jacks will carry away their sheepskin on graduation day. If he is a worldling at heart, then the product of your school will be worldly."

"But if your Head is a man gentle of thought, clear of eye, imbued with honest vision which he is unafraid to express, and in whose eyes the fires of the patriotism that is devoid of tub-thumping burns clear and bright, then you will produce a breed of men to pass along into the busy world to attack the problem of living and livelihood with a high code of ethics and a sense of the things which they owe to the place whence they come."

BUSINESS

Another meeting of the Men Students' Administrative Council was held yesterday, and the general impression to be carried away was decidedly optimistic. In the first place, the business was important, and handled with despatch. In the second place, the attendance was the best of any average meeting for many moons.

The officials must realize that matters of tedium are to be avoided. We hold, to a large degree, that the absurd blazer question, which has so perplexed the Council for several years, was responsible for the great lack of interest. If the officers see that the agenda is worthy of attention, and that meetings are run off in a business-like fashion, the future will be much happier.

COURSES

Speaking at Newman Hall last week-end, the Warden of Hart House expressed the belief that this University of Toronto was to be considered on a somewhat higher plane than certain American colleges, in that we have no such freak courses as Hotel Management or Movie Direction.

And yet . . . . We quote from the recent number of the University College Magazine: "The thin edge of the wedge has already found its way into the pure block of education at the University of Toronto. Basket making was instituted as a university course a few years ago. This year sees the opening of a course to train expert massagers . . . ."

Dr. Moore's Recital

Yesterday afternoon Dr. Moore played his second fortnightly organ recital to an appreciative audience which was somewhat larger than usual.

The splendid B minor Prelude and Fugue of Bach, a work of his later years, was well played and its sombre depths revealed by skilful treatment. The Sonata in A by Mendelssohn, and the finale from the Second Suite of Boellmann, are both very fine numbers from the classical school.

The remainder of the programme, while pleasing in itself, received rather disappointing treatment. The Bridal Song by Jensen, Offertory by Lefebure—Wely and Serenade a l'Arlequin by Drigo, are admittedly of a lighter nature. They have pretty melodies, sparkling passages, and bits of romance. The organ of twenty-five years ago was rather unsuited to the performance of this type of number, but with instruments of most modern design one cannot say that its full resources are being used when numbers by Bach and Drigo receive essentially the same registration.

We Do

Editor,
"The Varsity",
Dear Sir,
I was most interested to read in your newspaper of this morning, an account, in many ways excellent, of how women undergraduates of Toronto so bravely defended the honour of their university on the previous evening.
It may indeed be, Sir, that Miss Winspear's felicitous remark, "I happen to attend a college which places religious knowledge above physical training", was trite; but why, Sir, must you add that it evidently came from the heart?

Book Department, Press Building

We agree absolutely with Mr. Bickersteth that funny courses are not suitable companions for the old classics, yet we can find no grounds for rejoicing in their supposed absence from our campus. We are prepared to argue that the University of Toronto and the large American state universities are travelling the same road. The distinction is that Toronto is ten or fifteen years behind its sister institutions on the road. We cannot, conscientiously, turn a failing such as this into grounds for the assumption of an attitude of superiority.

VICTORIA COLLEGE WOMEN'S SWIMMING MEET AT U.T.S. TO-NIGHT

SPEAKING OF SPORT

U.C. Juniors have come out on top of their group, as expected, in the women's interfaculty basketball league. The victors of Group I will be decided on Thursday night when St. Hilda's meets Senior U.C. The final struggles in Group II come in a double-header next Tuesday, when St. Michael's meets Senior Vic and the U.C. Freshies clash with Occupational Therapy.

* * *

A draw will then decide which of the three group winners is to get a bye, and the other teams will play off for the finals.

* * *

Applications for the position of manager of the women's basketball team are to be in by to-day.

* * *

The personnel of the Vic women's swimming team will be decided by the results at the meet to-night. Twelve events are on the programme, including speed, ornamental and style swimming, diving and plunging. The freshies show some good prospects.

* * *

An exhibition polo game by the Vic men's team will be the feature of the evening.

* * *

The women's hockey team may enter the Ladies' Ontario Hockey Association playoff for the first time in several years. This arrangement would give satisfaction to the players, since otherwise the games with Queen's are the only ones scheduled.

* * *

The position of manager of the team is not yet filled.

* * *

The arena has been available for hockey practice owing to the generosity of the men. Their helpfulness and encouragement has materially helped the team.

The senior representative from the College of Pharmacy was welcomed to the Council by the President, A. H. Ferry, in view of the decision at the previous meeting to admit two representatives from that college.

WOMEN BASKETEERS DRAW NEAR TO FINALS

Close Contests Feature Games As Season Nears Close

With the close of the women's interfaculty basketball season almost here it becomes more and more apparent that the playoff games will be real battles. Junior U.C., last year's champions, have won their group, without a loss, and many look for them to repeat again this year. St. Hilda's have one more game to play before they are declared winners in their group. This game is with Senior U.C. and is to be played Thursday night at U.T.S. It should be a wow.

In the third group it looks as though Senior Vic are going to come out on top although St. Michael's have a real chance to beat them, and are confident of doing so.

If the Saints and Senior Vic come through, the same three teams as last year will enter the finals, and no matter who wins out, the struggles are bound to be interesting.

VICTORIA WOMEN HOLD BLUES ASSUME LEAD ANNUAL SWIM MEET IN WATER POLO RACE

Winners Likely to Represent College in Competition Next March

MEN TO STAGE POLO GAME

The Victoria College women are holding their annual swimming meet today at U.T.S.

Although it is not definitely decided as yet, it is very likely that the winners of the meet will be Victoria's representatives in the interfaculty meet which takes place in March.

There will be 12 events, Long plunge, breast stroke, free style, fancy diving, sidestroke, ornamental swimming and a novelty race in which the participants will swim one length with hands and feet tied.

The high light of the evening will be a water polo game put on by the Vic men.

Some of the prominent Vic girls who will be taking part are Anna Bicknell, Marjorie Norwood, Dorothy Bishop and Kay Jordan.

To-night's showing should be a very fair indication of Victoria's strength, and should give some idea of their chances in the interfaculty meet. Last year U.C. won the Cup, with Saint Hilda's a close second. Vic, however, seems to be really in earnest this year as they have shown by such early organization, and they certainly deserve to get results.

MISS HOME LECTURES ON JAPANESE PRINTS

Explains Phase of Eastern Art to Group in Museum Yesterday

Describing the origin of Japanese prints and the process by which they are made, Miss Ruth Home gave an interesting talk at the Museum yesterday afternoon. She explained that the art was a product of the working classes and as such contained many innuendoes which only that class could interpret. "It is fortunate for us that as westerners we do not appreciate the suggestive character of the prints, and see only the good parts."

Actor prints were evidently the most popular ones and were quite as much sought after by the contemporary working class as movie star's photos are today. Nature also supplied subject matter because the Japanese saw the continuity in the universe: to him nature was not merely a background for human endeavour. In addition, women and legend were quite frequently represented.

"Three different craftsmen are necessary for the production of a block print," stated Miss Home. "An artist makes the design, another man makes the wood-block and the third one colours it."

The speaker observed that block prints originated, not in Japan, but in China. However, a Japanese Empress popularized them and at the psychological moment the innate art of the people developed the method to its perfection. It was not art for art's sake, but was meant to appeal to the public.

"Certain phenomena can only be explained by taking electrons as waves, not as particles," stated Dr. Davidson the eminent American scientist, speaking at Convocation Hall on Saturday night.

Dr. Davidson then went on to describe experiments which had been conducted in America and Germany in connection with X-ray beams. "The X-ray was discovered as a wave in 1905, and for 15 years afterward it was uncertain whether they were waves or particles, but were verified as the former in 1911."

Dr. Davidson is one of the outstanding scientists in America to-day and gave a most logical and wonderful account of a highly technical subject. As one of the research workers at the Bell Laboratories in New York, he is connected with electrical research work.

Though Opponents Outswam Them Team Play Proves

Decisive

PLAY AGAIN SATURDAY

Last night in the Hart House pool the Varsity senior water polo team came out victorious over West End 'Y' by a score of 8-3. The game was productive of the best polo seen here this season and there wasn't a dull minute in the game. The win put Varsity on top of the City League, with West End close behind them.

As usual the visitors outswam the Varsity team, but by means of better ball handling and combination play the home team was able to well overcome this handicap. Shortly after the opening whistle, Armstrong bulged the twice after a pass from the defense; he repeated a minute or two later, and was followed by a nice individual effort by Glass. The next goal brought the score 3-1 when Cutler sent the prettiest shot of the game past Ayres. Another pass netted Varsity a goal and Cutler came back for West End. Graham scored a long shot just before half time.

In the second half Varsity again outscored their opponents, but only through the clever work of Ayres in goal. The play was fast and Jensen's foul shot four minutes before Armstrong took another pass for a goal. From the face off Kennett scored on a hard shot. Alexander and Spence combined for the last two goals. Eddie Sinclair was kept busy watching Cutler, who gave a good demonstration of how the game should be played.

This game against a team which is much better than either of the others in the City League has put the Varsity team right in shape for the big game against Penn A.C. when the International League opens here Saturday night. The tickets for this game are now on sale by members of the team or at the athletic office, Hart House. West End-Kennett (Capt.), Britton, Miller, Goble, Brownlee, Cutler, Ide. Varsity-Spence (Capt.), Ayres, Sinclair, Graham, Armstrong, Alexander, Glass. Referee—Leo Latchford.

as being "unscrupulously insane". "The only thing that saved the government against the agitation was that the clergy in the west supported the hanging." "That the Roman Catholics started the Northwest Rebellion" was termed by the speaker as "sheer nonsense". The editor of the "Saturday Night" stated that "the race and creed antipathies were incredible. An echo of such antipathies is the bilingualistic question." "Sir John A. MacDonald," continued the speaker, "opposed the British Government's wish to have the Northwest trouble known as a rebellion. He called it rioting. It is interesting to know how Canada established her autonomy. Conservative MacDonald versus the British Colonial office. John A. MacDonald was not a political glad-hander nor good fellow. His methods were subtle. He was a farseeing character and a man of iron will."

In regard to the Canadian Pacific Railroad scandal in which MacDonald was involved and which led to his defeat, Mr. Charlesworth said, "In spite of all their trouble, they drove through that railroad four years before their contract. Concerning this project, Sir John said, 'This railroad will not have achieved its aim unless we have international steamship lines to connect us with Japan, Asia and Europe.' The eminent journalist thought that this showed tremendous foresight on the part of this statesman, and he claimed that it is those steamships which make the C.P.R. the greatest travel system in the world."

When questioned in regard to MacDonald's position in the Manitoba Boundary Dispute, Mr. Charlesworth answered, "Sir John A. was a strong anti-militarist. When Manitoba threatened to resort to force he washed his Toronto Monthly". Mr. Conn proposed that the students of the university become subscribers to the magazine for the purely nominal sum of one dollar per year, and that this sum be collected with the S.A.C. fee. If this were done, the magazine would then devote a large section to undergraduates, and would have undergraduate editors for it. Under this plan the magazine might run to 72 or 80 pages. This plan, according to Mr. Conn, would give both students and alumni a greater interest in the university, and would do much for university spirit. The undergraduate copies would be mailed, and not left in the halls, as is "The Varsity". The matter was left undecided, to allow members to discuss the proposal with their colleagues.

The Secretary-Treasurer reported that blazers, with the official sanction, would be available after Christmas, and that he had in the S.A.C. office, a sample coat from R. Fredenburg, a member of last year's Council, who was acting as representative in England.

In reference to judicial and senatorial appointments Mr. Charlesworth stated that Mr. MacDonald thought that the Senate should be chosen from leading men (in his day ladies were not considered) irrespective of party.

Mr. Finlayson, president of the MacDonald-Carter Club, told the assemblage that the club would have one more meeting, in which the elections would take place, the speaker to be announced later.

COLLEGE PROFESSORS PLACE STUDIES FIRST

 advantages, would give a student better social training than a university society could. In his opinion, cheap movies and dance halls serve no good in extra-curricular development.

"The university must be first," Mr. Mackay concluded. "You may work in a factory or a bond-house, and meet many interesting people there, but you certainly don't go there to meet people."

Professor G. E. Jackson, of the Department of Economics, when asked to comment on extra-curricular activities said, "There are many kinds of extra-curricular activities, some of them merely a waste of time and some absorbing an amount of energy disproportionate to the results obtained. Generally speaking, executive work for student organizations, especially the college literary societies or clubs like the Commerce Club, is a valuable experience for the student, as well as a duty discharged."

"The best student is, in any case, instinctively aware," he continued, "that he must learn to deal with men as well as with books and that he cannot handle men in after life if he has only handled books in college."

"Upon the relative merits of intra and extra-curricular activities, I am not prepared to comment," said Mr. V. W. Bladen of the Department of Political Economy, "but I will say that Miss M. Winspear, who took the affirmative side of the women's debate Monday night is the best parliamentarian in the university."

CORRESPONDENCE

 I have always understood, and still believe it to be true, that that which comes from the heart is that whereof the heart is made. As one who was present at the debate, I cannot possibly allow that Miss Winspear has a trite heart, even though my previous acquaintance with her was extremely slight. Nor can I imagine anyone else who was present last evening entertaining for a moment such an idea.

Yet for the benefit of those who found that their intra-curricular activities prohibited their attendance, I hope that "The Varsity" will tender Miss Winspear an apology for its insinuation regarding her heart.

Sincerely yours,
 Dorothea Comber,
 S. Hilda's, '29

LITERARY SECTION

Voices

By Phyllis Argall

There's a liting song in the pine-tree

By the silvery sapphire sea,
 On a soft warm day
 When the wind's at play,
 And that's the song for me.

There's a shrieking fiend in the pine-tree

Whose root's undermined by the sea,
 And I hear strange tales
 In the blustering gales,
 And they're the tales for me.

But the music of wind and of pine-tree,

The roar of the gale-lashed sea
 Are far away,
 And for me to-day
 There's only—memory.

NOVEMBER

By Elsie Wilson

Tap—tap—tap—

A branch of an apple tree flaps against the window pane. Its leaves are fallen. A few frost-nipped, brown apples still cling to its slender, brown twigs. Grey dawn, chill and cheerless, sheds its first light over the world. Dark waters of Lake Simcoe, mourning for lost white-capped waves of Summer's blue, beat dolefully against a rocky shore.

A momentary whirlwind sets a cloud of withered leaves in motion, tosses them in wild abandon, whisks them in dizzy circles—then dies, and dry, brown leaves flutter softly back to earth.

Breakfast of omelettes, piping hot, muffins, with golden butter and sticky honey. Steaming coffee in thin orange-coloured cups. Thick clotted cream in a blue pitcher.

Then away to the woods! Dry twigs and leaves crunch underfoot. Dead grasses sway in the wind. Brown milk-weed pods stand stiff and empty. Seedless weeds wait Winter's snowy covering. Red hawthorn berries hang from prickly, leafless branches. Bare, brittle branches rattle overhead, 'neath a sky of grey.

A long-eared rabbit scuttles over cracking leaves and stumps of rotted trees. A shot! Reverberating echoes. The rabbit stops—drops. A blot of blood stains the hard, bare earth. Comes the night.

A yellow moon battles with scurrying, snow-filled clouds. Mournful black waters wash a rocky shore. Thin columns of bluish smoke rise from the chimneys. Cheerful lights flicker from windows.

One bare, brown branch flaps ceaselessly upon the window-pane.

Dead Leaves

By Oscar Abramowitz

The leaves were falling down to-day,
 I saw them on the street
 In ragged heaps; how still they lay
 Beneath my brutal feet.

A wind came up, they rose and sank
 Again to listlessness,
 An empty cup was all they drank
 Of former happiness.

All summer long they sucked in deep,
 The sun and moon and air,
 Now dormant on the ground they sleep
 The sleep that knows no care.

Their colours gay are fading fast,
 From golden-brown to dun,
 They cower 'neath the wintry blast,
 And snow shuts out the sun.

Having published a scathing report on American university athletics, the Carnegie Foundation is now preparing a report on the fraternities, and their relation in college life and conditions.

OUTLOOK

By Mary Ainslie

There have been lonelier places. And perhaps boys have been brought up in them; but there is none so mean, so desolate, as Outlook.

In spring The Boy used to go back to the rocks behind his home, and climbing to the highest peak, he would stare out over the town. All the equator of his life could not harden his heart to beauty. He saw the crest of spring come over the horizon, saw it creep like a wave, and stretch and spread, and splash great, green drops out ahead of it—first the river's edge began to blossom; then the circle of swamp about the pond. The drops crept together and joined, until they too, were a part of that overwhelming wave, swelling on its northward sweep.

Every spring The Boy watched; every spring he imagined the wave to be larger, stronger, a little faster-moving. (Oh, how he prayed that this time, just this one time, the wave would surge over the barriers and unfurl its green into his sordid life.) And after every spring, just at the beginning of summer, hopeful and despairing, he looked down into the town. He saw that the wave had failed him. He saw the dirty streets of Outlook.

To Leucone

By Mourene Macoun

Seek not, I pray, to find the fate
 Forbidden to our eyes,
 Which gods prepare for us who wait
 Impatient while Life flies.

How many winters' suns will set
 To bring the evening pale.
 We try to know, and foolish set
 Our eyes to pierce the veil.

Perhaps this season's stormy skies
 And mighty winds will be
 The last that we, with mortal eyes
 Shall ever live to see.

Be wise, and drink the wine of Youth
 With careful thinness strained,
 Let not fair hope quite blind the truth
 'Twill be poor joy that's gained.

While yet we sing Time flies apace
 Jealous of Life's delay;
 Enjoy this hour and in its space
 Think only of to-day.

Clouds of rose and amethyst,
 A gossamer and silver mist,
 A dewy rose the sunbeams kissed
 And swallows flying high.

Seven tall smokestacks
 Black against the sky.

Seven tall smokestacks
 Against the evening glow.

Saffron hills and purple vales,
 Silver boats with rosy sails,
 Wakening stars in cloudy dales,
 A white moth flying low.

Winter

By Marguerite Shantz

Softly white in the pale moonlight
 Sleep shadowy hills of snow;
 On the silent trail the only sound
 As my horse and I strike lower ground
 Is the crunch of the erusted deeps of snow
 As we plunge too low.

Sudden, sweet, like fine cool sleet
 Spindrift of snow-dust is blown
 For a blinding moment into my eyes
 By a deep-toned wind that quickly dies
 On through the night, through the frosted stillness
 We fare alone.

Twinkles a light on a distant height —Comes a small warm thought of home,

The keen air rushes roaring past
 As we thud along the hills at last,
 And my horse and I, in the frozen peace,
 Turn toward home.

When I Come Again

By H. Lois Reynolds

Give me a day in late October
 When I come again;
 When the wind is blowing in fitful blasts,
 And falling leaves, and rain.

Give me a path by the sombre woodland,
 Cliff and open sea;
 Colour the angry waters black,
 And let me wander free.

And I shall ponder dismal thoughts,
 And yet more dismal grow,
 And think of the happy hours we spent
 Only a year ago.

 The faery moon to whom arose
 Your laugh in tinkling cadence cool,
 To shower star-dust, gold and rose,
 With glory on the lily pool.
 Behind the yew-hedge little gnomes,
 Inspired with dewy wonder, saw Your 'raptured look, and sought their homes,
 A-swoon for very joyous awe.

A word came out upon the night,
 Rebounded from the balustrade,
 And crashed with echoing, noisy fright
 Upon the dream my heart had made—
 My foolish fabric rent, I ask—What time the lightning's jagged streak

Has snapped the moonlight's paltry mask—

Quite plaintively: "Why did you speak?"

Sonnet On Honor

(Written after reading Shakespeare's King Henry IV)

By Bernita Miller

Say what is honour? Is't an empty word,
 A piece of ornament that men may wear
 Upon discretion,—a swash-buckler's sword,—
 A plaything fashioned from elusive air?

Or is this honour, rightly taken, pride
 That grasps at justice for its self alone, What'er the cost? Say, is this name allied
 To hardy warlike zeal whence grace has flown?

Where sense and courage with true worth unite,
 Where love and admiration both consort,

Where fealty directs ambition's might,
 Vice finds no entrance,—crime, no court.

Methinks that honour is nobility,
 Inborn and selfless, wearing dignity.

HART HOUSE DEBATERS PROVIDE FOOD FOR THOUGHT ON MODERN LIFE

Not How to Earn a Living, But to Lead a Life Is Needed
Lesson of To-day

MOTION DEFEATED 63-48

Educational System Needed to Spread Education for Sake of Culture

"An education that teaches people to weave baskets who are not interested in it and that teaches household science to people who do not intend to get married, is bound to pass," declared Mr. G. O. Murrell-Wright, moving the motion "That this House views with alarm the spread of liberal education in North America," which was defeated by a vote of 63-48 at Hart House last night. He claimed that "education is a deliberate development of personality." The speaker thought that the "theories" of liberal education are only "considered" new because no one in the past has been foolish enough to propound them. He said that the proponents of liberal education were "trying to uphold educational theories that got nowhere as they do not take into consideration the over-developed nor under-developed mentalities." "We have been taught to fall. We must learn to rise. We have been taught to glimpse. We must learn to see."

"Not how to earn a living, but to lead a life; to think individually is the essence of a liberal education," stated Mr. J. A. Edmison of McGill, in opposing the motion. "Liberal education is being swamped by utilitarianism. It will soon become as defunct as free speech in Toronto. Teachers are being muzzled and they have

Varsity Staff Enjoys Annual Autumn Dance

Editors and Cubs Unite to Form One Happy Family

Lifting feet and crazy tunes were in riotous profusion at "The Varsity" staff party last night at the Newman Club. Lofty editors fox-trotted and waltzed with cub reporters in gay abandon.

They were all one happy family. Prodigious pitching of small feather-weight balls and screaming horns, toots and harsh sirens, calmed the scene of gaiety. Copy was forgotten for the time, heads receded into limbo, and make-up was obliterated by the cavaliers and their winsome partners. A ferocious lucky-number dance took place. Heavy cuts were taken from past "Varsities" were distributed. B. A. R. Dignan, of the news staff and his partner, Dot Starr, were the fortunate ones. They did a "solo" dance in the Apache style, with the whole staff clapping hands to the click of the winners' heels.

Lunatic favours were distributed. These were immediately employed to the best effect. A symphony in blue arose on the air as everybody wailed weird noises. The conglomeration of noises brought the evening to a close with everybody dancing the last dance in a profusion of colour and youth.

Swimming Club Dance

The University of Toronto Swimming Club wish to make the following announcement regarding the international water polo game on Saturday night:

It had been the intention of the Club to make the evening formal, but it seems that a special ruling of the Directorate decrees that all such functions shall be of an informal nature.

MODERNS NOT EAGER FOR PEARLY GATES

Present Day Society Obliterates Christ's Ideal of Unity

FIRMER GRASP NEEDED

"People to-day are not so eager to get to heaven as they used to be," stated Professor John Line of Victoria College, in speaking on "Christ and the Social Order," before the women of the S.C.M. yesterday. "It is the practical application of Christianity to present day life rather than its relation to a future life, which appeals to this age."

In Professor Line's opinion we need to get a firmer grasp of the general conceptions of Christianity in order to apply them to modern social and economic life. Both at home and abroad, in individual and international relationships, Christian principles must exert their influence.

"In present day society," concluded Professor Line, "social disparities and distinctions have blotted out Christ's ideal of one large human family. It is the Christian job to remake society so as to express the principles and ideals which Christ upheld."

LITERARY MONTHLY DEEMED NECESSARY

Graduate Controlled Literary Would Fill Long Felt Need

DOUBT EXPRESSED

At the meeting of the S.A.C. on Tuesday, K. B. Conn, Secretary-treasurer of the Alumni Federation, made a suggestion that the students of the university become subscribers to the "University of Toronto Monthly" for the sum of one dollar, which would be collected with the S.A.C. fees.

Lionel Gelber of the U.C. Magazine, when approached regarding the question stated, "As I have pointed out in my article on this matter in the recent issue of the U.C. Magazine, I have long been an advocate of a purely literary journal for the graduates. I am as yet undecided whether the scheme suggested by Mr. Conn would fill the bill." Mr. Gelber also said that he has not considered the matter fully, but some literary monthly controlled by the graduates is a long felt need. And also that at present the "Monthly" is little more than a news bulletin dealing with the activities of the alumni. It contains very little literary worth with the exception of the few main articles.

Howard Lindsay of "The Privateer" staff said when interviewed that he considered "it quite unnecessary to bring forth another official publication which would deal with undergraduate activities. He went on to say that the numerous publications such as

Trouble May Lie in Shortage

Head

"The service rendered by the night staff of the library is quite satisfactory, except for the fact that it is sometimes necessary to wait for an unusually long time before the book desired is obtained," said J. Halpern, 3 U.C., yesterday.

Charles O'Brien, 3 St. Mike's, declared, on the other hand, that the service "is perfectly O.K."

"It must be remembered that after six o'clock many of the books in popular demand have already been taken out of the library," said G. Masters, 3 U.C. "As for the efficiency of the night staff, I think that they are equal to their duties. I happen to be acquainted with one of them, and know that he has had considerable experience in library work. The trouble may lie in the fact that there are only three or four men on the staff. Personally, I have never experienced any difficulty in getting a book after six p.m."

Another student told "The Varsity" that he could offer no comment because he never visits the library.

"If more men are needed on the night staff, I shall give the matter my immediate attention," said Professor W. S. Wallace. "This is the first time I have heard any complaint about the system. The men are all familiar with the routine, and I can see no reason for inefficiency unless it be the increased demand for books." Professor Wallace was surprised to hear that certain students found the service unsatisfactory. He explained that compared with conditions at other libraries and in view of the tremendous increase in reading among the students, there was little to criticize in the work of U. of T. librarians.

Miss Addison, Dean of women of Victoria College, entertained the women of the East and West Presbyteries at tea on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons.

Liberal Education is Upheld In Second Hart House Debate

By G. G. B.

The House did not seem to be particularly perturbed by Mayor McBride's claim that he was insulted by the House at the last debate.

The editor of "The Privateer" evidently reads the U.C. Magazine.

Mr. J. A. Edmison of McGill had some fear as to how visitors were treated. He warned the house that if it disagreed with him he would go back to McGill and tell them he had been insulted.

Why did the Debates Committee not provide something for the orators to cut their forensic teeth upon?

Mr. Murrell-Wright roundly condemned the educational system of the day as being regimented and factory-like, and said that the present theories of education are incapable of produc-

Man Couldn't Stop Women
From Doing Whatever

METHDDISTS DISAPPRDVES

More Heavily Populated Districts Show Increase in Smoking Circles

"What an asinine idea," was the general reaction to "The Varsity's" questionnaire as to whether man could possibly make women stop smoking, as the Methodist Church seems to think they can, according to the Utah Chronicle.

The oft debated issue of women's free or otherwise smoking rights has obviously not been relegated to the dusty shelf for back numbers as yet. Far from becoming resigned to the generally accepted custom of women smoking both at home and abroad, these inmates of the wide open spaces have apparently lost the sense of equality and commonsense which allegedly accompanies the "great west" and mountain flung skyline. A treatise on the western life and religion, heavily weighted with statistics, points out the fact that civilization in the last aspects has not reached the phase of development or acceptance in these districts as in the more heavily populated regions. The Methodist church in Utah is evidently still in the full bloom of disapproval of such supposedly wicked pastimes as dancing, card playing, and in particular, smoking.

It was pointed out that its action in appealing to the men, to coerce the freedom of women in regard to smoking was a retrogression in growth and if such a policy were instituted the victories of suffragism would be gradually nullified. "The men would not hesitate to shove the thin edge of the wedge in further with great energy, and we would soon be reduced to pre-war restrictions, if they found they could overrule us in such a small

The annual senior-soph dance at Queen's Hall was held last night. The Dean, Dr. Gertrude Wright, and Miss Grace Macaulay received.

The speakers seemed to disagree as to the definition of the term "liberal education." Mr. Edmison defined it as "learning how to live"; Mr. Murrell-Wright said it was learning to enjoy life; Mr. Alexander thought it should not be defined. "It wasn't."

Mr. Dodgson of Emmanuel preached an excellent sermon for the Noes.

Says C. B. Fisher of S.P.S. "The man who has the least idea of what a liberal education is we have made our mayor."

McGILL PRINCIPAL CALLS DAILY DOWN FOR ITS COMMENTS ON THE GREAT WAR

Thanks!

The members of "The Varsity" staff and of the dance committee in particular, wish to sincerely thank the Chaplain and President of Newman Club for kindly donating the use of the club for the staff's annual fall party, which proved one of the most successful of years.

WOMEN'S DEBATE ROUSES INTEREST

Though Certain Amount of Interest Previously Considerable is Added

TROPHY TO BE FOUGHT FOR

"I guess it ought to. I hear the trophy is quite nice," said Miss Marie Crean, secretary of the Women's Intercollegiate Debating Union, when asked by "The Varsity" whether the results of the recent women's debate would stimulate interest in the future.

The general consensus of opinion on the campus is that interest has been added to a considerable extent, though Miss Nora Doran stated that she did not see that the winning of the trophy would arouse any more interest in women's debates. There has been a certain amount of interest in it already, as shown by the number who turned out for the debate on Monday night. Miss Frances Dale thought that interest would be greater in the future. She added that those who have the trophy would naturally fight harder to keep it.

Quite a number of co-eds, when approached by "The Varsity," appeared rather flabbergasted at the question, and said they had not thought about it at all—exams, looming on the horizon.

Daily Denounced as Sower of Seeds of International Misunderstanding

STATEMENTS UNETHICAL

Sir Arthur Currie Objects to the Opinions Expressed by Council

The eminent McGill Daily takes a crack at Britain's commercial warlords, placing responsibility for the Great War on England's fear of Germany as a dangerous economic rival which had to be crushed, and thereby rouses the ire of Sir Arthur Currie, Principal of the university. Sir Arthur writes the Daily an indignant epistle, denouncing it as a sower of seeds of international dislike. The Daily at once springs to its own defence, claiming that it is an indefatigable proponent of peace, and further stating that the editorial in question was merely a reprint of the Armistice editorial of 1927, which expressed the official opinion of the Student Council.

Sir Arthur Currie's letter follows: To the Editor, McGill Daily.

Dear Sir— May I have the privilege of referring in your columns to an editorial entitled "Never Again," printed in your issue of November 9th last, to which my attention has recently been called.

The editorial begins, laudably and I do not doubt sincerely, by expressing a hope for peace and good will among the nations, and then proceeds to the following paragraph:

"England found that Germany was a dangerous economic rival who, if we can believe documents published a year or two ago, was anxious, although not ready for war even in 1911, having planned an attack through Belgium. With the help of the Allies she vowed to crush Germany, and this she did."

Among those who believe in ethics of journalism, it is, I believe, accepted as a maxim that facts may be stated and opinions expressed, but that opinions must not be expressed as facts. It appears to me that in the paragraph above quoted you state the opinion which your knowledge of certain facts has led you to form as if your opinion were a fact. As to your Columbus, Ohio—Fifteen hundred technical publications in all languages, dealing with scores of fields of chemistry, have been surveyed and abstracted in the interests of scientific progress by the reporting system of the American Chemistry Society, it was announced by Professor E. J. Crane, of Ohio State University, editor of Chemical Abstracts, the society's publication.

In this way, Dr. Crane said, almost 250,000 results of modern study have been catalogued for reference since the work was begun in 1907 by Professor Noyes.

The French table, which has become a weekly institution at the Women's Union, was honoured by the presence of M. Jeanneret yesterday evening. M. Jeanneret in a short speech, congratulated Miss Kilpatrick on the presence of such a table, and expressed the desire that at some future date a house would be established wherein French alone would be spoken.

THE POLITICS

There are two phases of political life, we believe, that can well be observed and practised by university undergraduates. It will be found that the great mass of accomplishment in our governments comes from committees. From this it is to be adduced that the man who has tact and polish in the small bodies will go far in the res publica.

Accordingly, it will be noted that there is a vast amount of committee work at this university in undergraduate affairs. Hart House is run entirely by committee-men; every society has its committees. Out of these will come our Beatties and Kings, Coolidges and Hoovers, of to-morrow.

Unfortunately, administrators have to be elected. To do so requires, in most cases, speech-making. And many good administrators are unhappy orators. As a rule, the better a man speaks in public, the worse administrator he will be found to be; administrative ability runs in inverse ratio to rhetorical ability. A combination of administrative ability and forensic ability will, with other qualities, produce a statesman. We need more of them in Canada. The obvious solution is for the committee-men, of whom we have so many, to acquire the art of rhetoric. The practise field for this art is in debating. There is a tendency for men of affairs to look askance at Hart House Debates. This should not be; the debates should be given the full support of every member of the House.

We have referred to an opinion that recent federal politics were moulded in the U.C. Lit. of 1890-1900. Will the politics of 1950 be a reflection of the Hart House debates or of the executive bodies of various societies?

If politics were to be based solely on experience gained in the Hart House Debates, it might be well to move to the States. But we hope that the future will be ruled by administrators who have gained a certain poise of rhetoric in addition to their tact and polish.

Among the guests at the International Water Polo Game on Saturday evening in Hart House, when the Penn. State A.C. plays the local team, will be Sir Robert Falconer, and Mr. Emil Sauer, American Consul in Toronto.

"Les" Blackwell, who coached the water polo teams at this university for six years in earlier days, will also be present.

PHILOSOPHERS

The following story from the Minnesota Daily would seem to have a bearing on last night's debate:

Bertrand Russell in a recent public debate with Dr. Will Durant cheerfully cast the Western system of education into the "gloomy mediocrity of failure."

"It does not foster, but rather bludgeons, the intellect of the child; it overwhelms the different child with the mechanical pressure of the horde; it blandly forestalls the struggling development of the sentiment of international co-operativeness," says Mr. Russell.

Later the British Philosopher exclaimed, "I feel an abhorrence for any respect shown to the British flag. Of all the fine acts in the history of any country, not one can be attributed to the influence of the flag. Acts to which one is excited by the flag are bad acts, and the good acts are done independently of the flag."

He further indicted military training in the colleges—"the young being taught to slaughter, the young who should be taught international co-operation, being taught the absolute duty to kill at any moment the government tells them."

Dr. Durant cast the blame for unintelligence, unreliability and lack of co-operation on the stupefying round of industry and trade. The liberal movement has won a tremendous victory in everything but politics," he said, "and boys and girls in our colleges have begun to think. It is in the schools and colleges that students get the germs of revolt, and our college magazines, clubs, yes—and even our fraternities and sororities are full of intelligent liberalizing forces."

A.C. Players' Guild

Browning had his day at the Guild yesterday. Miss Patricia Godfrey presented "On a Balcony", which is better poetry than it is drama. It took courage to do it, even in an experimental group, but Miss Godfrey's direction showed a sure touch and succeeded in squeezing the utmost of action out of a very static piece.

Miss Helen Anderson and Mr. Victor Wynburne, as the young lovers, were competent. Miss Anderson appears to have a good deal of poise, but lacks voice range—a defect which it should not be difficult to remedy. A certain artificial quality in her gesture fitted admirably into the atmosphere of the piece. Mr. Wynburne's reading of his lines was excellent. It is to be hoped that he will be seen in a part better suited to his type. As it was, he succeeded in getting more value from his speeches than either of the other characters. Miss Marjorie James, as the Queen, lost a great deal of the effectiveness of her part by rushing through her lines.

The play lost nothing by being done in a "dim religious light", but one could have dispensed with the balcony railings at the front of the stage. They succeeded in doing little but mask gestures.

The production as a whole was a commendable effort and well worth doing.

—A.E.F.A.

Hopeful

Editor.

"The Varsity".

Dear Sir,—

I hope you will allow me to utilize your valuable columns again in order to point out to Gratified Grad that he can hardly expect an admittedly different undergraduate to adopt the methods he so kindly suggested, when even such a self-possessed person as a "Varsity" reporter cannot muster enough courage to interview the assistant librarians and has recourse to the feeble excuse that they were all too busy to express an opinion. Possibly if he had made use of such expressions as "bim" and "kid" the interview might have been more successful. Again thanking you for your space, I am,

Yours sincerely,

"Hopeful".

Elaborate ceremonies are being planned for the opening of the William H. Welch Medical Library and the Wilmer Ophthalmological Institute of the Johns Hopkins Hospital and university. Medical men from nearly every country in the world have been invited to attend. Approximately 80,000 books are housed in the new library.

Two members of the family of the Rev. William A. (Billy) Sunday, have encountered marital difficulties in the past few weeks. Mrs. Harriet Sunday, wife of George Sunday, has brought suit for separate maintenance. Mrs. Mae Sunday has filed suit for divorce from Billy Sunday, Jr.

Vernal, Utah—The skeletons of two monster animals, a diplodocus and a brontosaurus, believed to have lived in this country 80,000,000 years ago in the Jurassic period, have been discovered in this vicinity by Barnum Brown, curator of fossils and reptiles at the American Museum of Natural History at New York.

Brown is planning to return here with an expedition in the near future to dig the valuable bones out of the sandstone rock in which they have been preserved for these ages. It is estimated that the work will require two months.

JUNIORS MEET MARLBOROS IN S.P.A. SEMI-FINALS TO-NIGHT

SPEAKING OF SPORT

To-night in the first game of the double-header at the Arena Gardens, Varsity juniors tackle Marlboros, junior titleholders, in the second round of the S.P.A. series. The Blue and White have gathered together one of the best collections of puck-chasers they have had in years. With a speedy forward line and one of the best defences in junior company, much is expected of the Frank Sullivan-coached sextet. It should be a real struggle with Varsity having the upper hand. Should the Blue pull out a win they will be matched in the third round with the winner of the Kitchener-Niagara Falls tilt, which is the second game on to-night's program.

The inauguration of the International Water Polo League this Saturday promises to be a big event in local nautical circles. The Penn A.C. boast a list of players with reputations as long as giraffes' necks. If these lads can play water polo as well as they can swim the Varsity sea serpents are in for a merry battle. However, the Blue poloists have displayed a lot of form in the City League to date, and local supporters are looking for a win for their team over the Pennsylvanians.

The boxing, wrestling and fencing enthusiasts are now in training for the coming season. Varsity will again be able to present a strong B.W.F. team this year with many of last year's championship team back. However, the Junior Assault is the nearest concern and offers a splendid opportunity for the uncovering of new talent. The various college assaults will be starting in a short time, Meds having already announced theirs for next Tuesday.

Cornell University has applied for a patent for a new and inexpensive process of making milk sugar, a process discovered by Dr. Paul Sharp, professor of dairy chemistry at the university. The process is said to yield a milk sugar not formerly used on the market, which may be substituted for ordinary table sugar.

U.C. BASKETBALLERS DOWN ST. MIKE'S 17-2

St. Michael's Early Loss of Pitcher Disastrous to Team

DECISIVE VICTORY SCORED

U.C. baseball team downed St. Michael's girls in a 17-2 game at the U.T.S. gym last night. St. Mike's lacked a pitcher and their team went to pieces when the catcher hurt her finger and retired to the field. U.C. played a good game, but had some lucky breaks, Wilma Hazlett crossing all three plates on fumbles. Marion Shadle and Edith Blackwell divided the pitching for the Red and White team, Marion putting her usual steady ball across. Frankie Dale gave the team real support at first base.

St. Mike's—W. Luckett, Anne Quinlan, Irene Way, Gertrude O'Malley, Ev Whelan, Rita McDonald, Vic Quinlan, Mercedes French, E. Poupore.

U.C.—Helen McKinley, Wilma Hazlett, Marion Shadle, Frances Dale, Phyl Ferguson, Jean Downings, Edith Blackwell, Anne Hodge, Christine Elmsley.

Hamilton, N.Y.—Colgate's football team is to be well taken care of on its travels this year if Trainer Jack Rourke has anything to say about it.

The team will travel 5,200 miles during the season, going twice into the mid-west to play members of the Big Ten, and on all such trips, the team will take its own drinking water with it, to say nothing of having special training table menus provided on the dining cars.

Included in Colgate's schedule this year are Wisconsin, Indiana, Columbia,

Although the Blue and White Favourites Keen Contest Expected

To-night the Varsity junior sextet meet Marlboros, present S.P.A. and Memorial Cup holders, emblematic of the Canadian hockey championship, in the crucial match of the S.P.A. series at the Arena Gardens. This year the Iron Dukes have practically a new team. Pringle and Jackson are two members of the championship crew who again are going great guns in the games to date. In the first round of the series Marlboros encountered no difficulty in disposing of the St. Mike's youngsters. But at that they will have to produce a better brand of hockey to cope with the Blue and White threat to their title.

Marlboros will find it much harder to get by the powerful Varsity defence. This year U. of T. have probably the strongest defence in junior ranks. Alec Levinsky and Don Smillie are a formidable duo and it is a real spectacle to watch these boys spill the opposing sharpshooters and then break away for spectacular rushes up the ice. Smillie is fast and delivers a terrific shot. Levinsky and Smillie have experience which will count for much when the Iron Dukes are pressing. Williamson is the Varsity sub guard. He is no slouch either and defensively the Blue squad will be little weakened while he is on the ice.

Much depends upon the regular Blue forward line which is composed of Brant at the pivot position and Hetherington and Bennett on the wings. This trio are clever puck-chasers who know what to do when they get in on the opposing net. However, they are a light line and it remains to be seen how they stack up against the heavy body-checking of the champions. The relief forward line of Crerar, Cunningham and Nichol are less experienced than the regulars, but considerably outdo their rivals in effective back-checking. With a fast-breaking crew like the Marlboros it doesn't pay to loaf.

Coach Frank Sullivan has rounded his team into fine condition. In the Victorias the Blue team eliminated a good team with a strong defence. The Blue and White should take the championships to-night, but a great game is promised. The Varsity juniors deserve the support of the students of the university. It was distinctly noticeable that not one Varsity yell was given at the opening game with Victorias.

Postponed Rugger Match To Be Played Saturday

The Varsity senior British rugby team will play their scheduled match with Toronto Irish Club at Oakwood Stadium this Saturday at 2.00 p.m. First team—McKay, Archbold, MacLean, Lee, Goldenberg, Salter, Rogers, Garner, Knowles, Nash, Allin, Brown, Telford, MacFie, Wynburne.

The second rugger fifteen will practice at 5.00 p.m. Friday in preparation for their game with the Earlscourt Club on Saturday. This will be played on the Back Campus at 3.00 p.m.

Second team—Franklin, Thomas, Gary, Ryan, Walters, Wood, Campbell, Lugsdin, Davies, Jamieson, Phillips, Caverhill, James, Wilson, Crawshaw.

Anyone unable to play, communicate at once with Seymour Archbold, LI. 4682; or Jack Franklin, HI. 5509.

SCHOOLMEN DEFEAT TOOTH-PULLERS 2-1

Senior School downed Dents 2 to 1 in yesterday's water polo game at Hart House tank in the interfaculty series. Alexander scored both of School's goals in the first period on long, hard shots. Merrell notched Dents' single tally in the second stanza with a long throw.

Dents—Marsh, Stewart, Coupland, Jamieson, Adams, Moser, Walden, Merrell.

Senior S.P.S.—Alexander, Ward, Broughton, Puddy, Gibbs, Brant, Pierdon.

INTEREST ABUNDANT AT U.C. SWIM MEET

Spectators Give Way to Enthusiasm Though Showered at Times

3TO WINNING YEAR

Plenty of interest was the most notable feature of the Victoria College women's swimming meet held at U.T.S. tank last night. The odd sprays showered upon the spectators certainly had no effect on their pep as the deafening yells at half time showed.

The results were as follows:

Plunge—1, Dot Darling, 51' 1"; 2, Dot Bishop; 3, Marg Rogers. Breast stroke (speed)—1, Marg Rogers, 15 2-5 seconds; 2, Jane Ferguson; 3, Grace Cook.

Novelty race—1, Lois Elliott; 2, Marie Bicknell; 3, Elizabeth Gillespie. Free style (speed)—1, Dot Bishop, 27 4-5 seconds; 2, Grace Cook, Mary Rogers.

Diving—1, A. Bicknell; 2, Rox Vanstone; 3, Jane Ferguson. Side stroke (speed)—1, Rox Vanstone, 14 seconds; 2, Dot Bishop; 3, Grace Cook.

Ornamental swimming—1, Jane Ferguson; 2, A. Bicknell; 3, Marie Bicknell.

Backstroke (speed)—1, Rox Vanstone, 15 4-5 seconds; 2, Ann Newton; 3, Suzanne Curry. Life saving—1, L. Elliott and R. Vanstone; 2, Anna and Marie Bicknell; 3, Molly and Grace Cook.

Inter-year relay—1, 3T1; 2, 3T0.

At half time Varsity men piled up a score of 3-0 in a water polo match with Vic seniors. The referee seemed fond of using his whistle, until in the second period the game became much faster, and the three winning goals were scored amid much applause.

The final scoring showed Rox Vanstone to be individual winner with 12 1-2 points, and Jane Ferguson a close second with 12 points. 3T0 was the winning year.

From all appearances Vic has a good group to enter in the interfaculty meet next March, largely due to the splendid efforts of the curator, Dot Darling.

LIBERAL EDUCATION IS UPHELD IN DEBATE

In summing up Mr. Edmondson stated, "As long as boards of colleges are dominated by narrow theologians and big business men, we do not have to fear for the spread of liberal education in North America." The McGill debater pleaded for "an educational system that will spread education for culture's sake and not for earning a living."

"The beating of the pedagogic drum brings forth such notes that people with a trained ear cannot recognize them," stated Mr. B. M. Alexander of McGill in seconding the motion. "On

"Blame must be put on popular modern liberal education in America if on this continent. For the amount of effort put into liberal education on this continent, very little genuine has evolved," said Mr. Alexander. He called liberal education in America a "second cousin missing the patrimony" that it had borrowed.

"This is very dangerously getting to be an age for specialization," stated Mr. Dodgson of Emmanuel College, speaking fourth. "Liberal education gives liberty to the individual," continued the speaker. "It will help garbage men and ash men to appreciate something of immortality. The people perish for lack of knowledge," he proclaimed.

SHALL WOMEN SMOKE?

thing," was the opinion expressed by one co-ed.

Ede Hunt, VI Arts, Vic, said that she didn't think that either men or women should be allowed to smoke where they wanted to, from a standpoint of cleanliness. "But I don't think women would stop smoking for men, and I can't think of any effective way to make them. Date boycotting would scarcely do any good, for there would always be lots of other men who wouldn't insist."

"Men couldn't stop women from doing anything," was the cynical though embarrassed opinion of W. K. Walls, III year Vic. "Besides, it's their own affair whether they smoke or not."
"I think that if a girl liked a boy a lot, and he asked her not to smoke, well, I think she wouldn't," said Irene Fitzsimmons, III U.C.

"If men were to try, the women would all smoke twice as much to show their independence, so what's the use?" dryly remarked D. Stewart, II U.C.

"Ha, ha, ha," was the expressive reply of M. Hagar, VI Vic.

"Oh, if all the men took a stand against girls smoking, well the girls would stop, because none of them would really do anything that men don't want," said Miss M. E. Watts, II Meds. "But there is no danger of that, because they could never all make up their minds to make women do anything."

UNIVERSITY MONTHLY?

"The Varsity," "Privateer," and the college magazines look after the students' interests quite adequately.

The general opinion of the students who were questioned seemed to be that it would be a good idea. Several thought it would be a means of fostering university spirit which would become common to all faculties. One opinion was that it would be unwise to make it compulsory to subscribe to the magazine as there is so much alumni news and year notes which would not interest the undergraduates.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Science has made war impossible, Francis P. Garvan, of New York, told the American Chemical Society gathered here. "I believe," he said, "that modern chemistry plus aviation has made war impossible. In case of a modern war between great powers it would be foolish and useless for a battleship or cruiser to leave its dock or an army to take the field."

New York City—Increasing industrial mergers will result in no increase in scientific research work, it is believed by prominent market analysts of this city. The principal reason for this, they say, is that mergers are the result of research work, not the cause.

conclusion itself, I venture to suggest that further consideration of the historical evidence would lead you to alter it.

I think that upon examination you will find that the English Government of the day made most earnest efforts to avert war, until it became evident that war could not be averted. I think that you will find, too, that the average young man in England fought and often died from a sense of duty, not for any desire for national aggrandisement. To imply that he endured what he did in order to crush an economic rival is to make a manifestly unfair statement. I assure you that so far as Canada was concerned war was the last thing that any of us wanted. There were, without doubt, men and groups of men everywhere, to whom war was welcome, you need only read such works as Bernhard's to realize it. But in order to justify such a conclusion as you voice you must prove that England as a whole, Government, Parliament and People entered deliberately on a war with the object of gain. I submit that this will be difficult.

I have another objection to your editorial—more serious than my complaint that you state opinions as though they were facts. In a time when men are aiming at peace you run the risk, I hope unintentionally, of sowing the seeds of international distrust and dislike. I am sure that upon further thought you will see that since Canada followed the initiative of England and suffered greatly in the process, a bald statement that England, which means the English people, was impelled by greed and self-interest cannot but do harm. Now when we have very little ill will left against Germany are we to stir up ill will against Germany, are we to stir up ill will against England?

It is not easy to put one's finger on the real cause of the war, but I should like to suggest two possible causes to your readers and yourself. One was the glorification of war, the constant use, for instance in poetry and prose, of war-like symbols and war-like imagery, as if war itself were something splendid and desirable. There were glorious incidents in war—incidents which displayed the finest qualities of mankind, but no man knows better than the soldier that was was never glorious or splendid or desirable, or anything but terrible.

Another cause was the general acceptance of war as an instrument of national policy. Ever since the days when rival dynasties quarreled over a few hundred square miles of Europe men held the view that as soon as two nations disagreed they ought to fight, and the reward of the wounds and blood was more and bitter hatred.

To-day this peril of international strife is lessened, though the use of arms in the quarrel between Russia and China shows that the danger is not past. But hatred is hydra-headed. It may arise between nation and nation, between class and class, but our goal should be something greater yet, the true and only basis of peace, our objective should be understanding and goodwill. I hope that this is the aim of the McGill Daily.

Yours faithfully,

McGILL DAILY REPLIES TO CURRIE REAFFIRMS POSITION ON WAR GUILT

Montreal, November 25.—The following editorial appeared in the McGill Daily of the above date, which was written in answer to the letter from Sir Arthur Currie printed in "The Varsity" yesterday. It is headed "Our Position":

"In this issue we print a letter from our Principal in which he comments upon the editorial of November ninth, entitled Never Again. We would like to draw his attention to the fact that the editorial was a reprint of the Armistice editorial of 1927 of the McGill Daily, and in view of the fact that then it was the official opinion of the Students' Council, that now, as we have freedom of expression in this column, and accepting the opinions expressed, it would still be accepted.

"If our opinions have been interpreted as facts we are indeed sorry, for it shows that our diction and composition need brushing up. We had certain facts before us and from them we formulated our opinions. Maybe they are erroneous and we are always ready to accept the opinions of others.

"But we cannot agree that we were running the risk, if even unintentionally, of sowing seeds of international distrust and dislike. We placed before the students certain facts and opinions and we trusted that they would interpret them in the manner in which they were presented. The average student has a mind of his own whereby he may interpret, even though the facts be unfavorable. Personally we have no ill will against Germany, for there seems to us to have been no other way out for her as she was then. Neither do we wish to stir up ill will against England, for we have confidence in her as she is now.

"The very first sentence of our opinions, after the preamble, was that we were much rather in favour of a constructive peace. In this view we persist and give our support to such institutions as the League of Nations and its counterpart, the Institute of Pacific Relations, the International Student Service and the Fellowship of Reconciliation. To no one has this attitude been brought home more forcibly than to ourselves, after we have made certain observations of the conditions of Central Europe at the present time.

"We realize that the peril of international strife, with the use of arms and force, is not past and that such strife is fostered by hate; but there is one hate which we reserve for ourselves; that is that we hate war."

AUSPICES OF S.C.M.

"With a background of rescue from starvation and subsequent interest in the International Student Service, Dr. Walter Kotschnig should prove an unusually interesting visitor in Toronto this week-end," said Miss Mary Rowell, S.C.M. Secretary, when interviewed by "The Varsity" regarding the Friday meeting for men and women to be held in Wynilwood from five to six. Dr. Kotschnig is coming by way of the States from the World's Student Christian Federation Office in Geneva, and will no doubt bring us most enlightening facts of the Self-Help Campaign instituted among students in all university centres.

Dr. Kotschnig, one of the first to be helped by the European Student Relief when Toronto students were sacrificing meal days, buying soup at twenty five cents a bowl to provide surplus cash, and collecting the "mile of pennies," was very active in the German Youth Movement, aided relief work in Austria, and later studied in Amsterdam, where he became a lecturer in economics at Kiel University. In 1925 he became editor of Vox Studentium, and is now general secretary of the I.S.S.

WILD WEST SHOW

Diving Exhibition and Water
Polo to Furnish Entertainment

Arrangements and regulations for the U.C. Follies have been made public by W. F. Arnold, chairman of the committee in charge. Guests will approach Hart House from Hoskin Avenue and enter by the south door. There will be parking around the campus and on Hoskin Avenue. Cloak room facilities will be provided for ladies in the billiard and check rooms, and for their escorts in the sketch and locker rooms. Gentlemen will meet their partners in the lower gallery and proceed from there to the year skits.

The evening commences at 8.15 with the presentation of the various year-skits. The first year offers a miscellany of circus acts; the second year will present a sketch entitled "Kingston Bound"; the third year's contribution is an ambitious imitation of a broadcasting station; and the more enterprising graduating year will be represented by a whooping wild west show. The location of the skits is given in the programmes.

A shield will be presented to the year whose efforts are considered the best of the evening. The programme of aquatic sports will include a diving exhibition, and a water polo contest between U.C. and S.P.S. Refreshments will then be served in the Great Hall, and dancing to well known orchestras will occupy the rest of the evening. The Big Gym, the East Common Room and the Reading and Music Rooms will all be available for dancing.

ALL EDUCATION QUITE LIBERAL THINKS DELURY

Student's Problem is Choice of Course in Which He is Interested

APPARENT WRECKAGE

Student Views With Alarm Increased Popularity of Some Courses

"I can think of no education that is not liberal," stated Professor A. T. DeLury, Dean of the Faculty of Arts, when approached by "The Varsity" in regard to the resolution of the recent Hart House debate. "The purpose of education, after all, is to liberalize and free the mind."

"The problem before the student is to choose that type of education for which he is best suited. He should get into something in which he is really interested, and which is most likely to lead him to a future prosperous career.

"It may be true that under the present educational system there is more apparent wreckage than there was in the old days. I say 'apparent' because no one can say absolutely whether any particular life is a success or failure. After all these are purely relative terms, and many a life of seeming failure, particularly in the domain of art, has in reality been one of glorious though unappreciated success. "This increase in 'apparent' wreckage is probably due to the fact that education is now so much easier to get than it formerly was, and that many are to-day constrained either by direct or by environmental forces to enter upon a course in which they are not keenly interested."

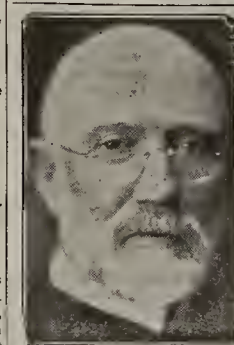

"I view with alarm the increasing popularity of such courses as massage," said J. Fenelon, I Philosophy, St. Michael's College.

"A university should teach a person to investigate the opinions and views of others and to form some of his own."

"I think that the faculties of dentistry, medicine, and engineering should not be included in the university as their graduates are only skilled mechanics. A university is a seat of learning in the true sense of the word."

Dr. Gertrude Wright, Dean of Queen's Hall, and Miss Grace Macaulay, received at the Hall's annual junior frosh dance last night.

DR. E. M. WALKER SPEAKS ON INSECTS AND DISEASE

Mosquitos Are Responsible for Spread of Malaria and Yellow Fever

"It hides in your pockets, behind the pictures on the walls, refuses to hum and then attacks you from behind," said Dr. E. M. Walker of the Department of Biology speaking to the Biological Club at Wynilwood last evening, of a certain species of mosquito in his address on "Human Diseases and Insects."

"Mosquitos are responsible for the spread of malaria and yellow fever. Birds, as well as humans, suffer from malaria," he continued. "It was the work of a certain Dr. Ross to solve the problem of bird malaria. 'Ross,' he said, 'was obsessed by the malaria-mosquito theory; his enthusiasm almost made a fanatic of him and he broke down. Mosquitos are also responsible for the spread of yellow fever.'

Slides showing the life cycle of various organisms were shown at the close of the lecture. Professor Thompson, last year's honorary president, spoke briefly toward the end of the meeting. He objected to the way in which Dr. Walker "had treated his pet mosquito."

Election of officers was held and a lively discussion followed, after which refreshments were served.

Employer Should Consider Himself After Consumer and Employees

DUAL EXPANSION

Separate Faculty of Commerce Not Favorably Regarded by Dean of Arts

"I never recognize myself as more than a simple country lad who grew up in a country town, working and living with other members of the human family. If there are any distinctions that come to me, I feel it must be that it is other people who earn them and I who get the credit," said Sir Joseph Flavelle at the meeting of the Commerce Club yesterday evening in Hart House.

The meeting opened with an announcement from the Warden that if anyone present had left a car parked in front of Hart House, he had better hustle out and move it in order to avoid police complications, and closed with a fatherly benediction from Sir Joseph.

After the toast to the King, Mr. Riggs, President of the Club, moved the toast to the university, winning amused applause by a quotation from Adam Smith. His statement that in its development, the university must expand in two directions, namely in greater provision for research and in the formation of a separate faculty for commerce, won vigorous applause.

Dean DeLury, responding to the toast, was not entirely favorable to the idea of a separate Commerce faculty. He feared that a separate Commerce faculty would be ruled too strongly by the professional idea. "After all," he said, "liberal studies are the important basis of your work, and this continent has many instances of the distinct failures of faculties and schools of commerce. I think that the tendency now among the better institutions is to weave the professional studies into the centre of liberal studies, that is, studies for their own sake."

Professor Jackson introduced Sir Joseph Flavelle, the speaker of the evening, and followed an established precedent by introducing the Club to (Continued on page 4)

FACILE OPTIMISM MOST DANGEROUS

Professor Waugh Claims That Mother Country is Indifferent to Canada

EMPIRE CLUB LUNCHEON

"People in Canada are too ready to assume that Britain is ready to maintain the Commonwealth at all costs," said Professor W. T. Waugh, Chairman of the Department of History at McGill University, in discussing some disrupting influences in the British Commonwealth at the Empire Club luncheon yesterday. "The British temper is not naturally imperialistic, and since the war imperial enthusiasm has been very low in Great Britain."

Claiming that the mood of facile optimism now prevalent in Canada is most dangerous, Professor Waugh stated that the British people have a cool and considered regard for the value of the commonwealth, but that at best the attitude of the Mother Country is one of friendly indifference. "The British know less of Canada than of any other Dominion," he went on, "and it is often regarded as an unimportant appendix to the American republic."

THE FUN FACULTY

Among the many new university departments which we shall urge upon the authorities when the appropriate occasion arrives is one in the Appreciation of Humour. The thought was first brought to us when we heard of a sermon of a Rev. Dr. William Norman Guthrie, who, addressing the parishioners of St. Mark's-in-the-Bowery in New York on June 3, last, spoke somewhat as appended:

"A sense of humor is essential to-day; we take ourselves too seriously; we live in an age that puts preponderant emphasis on commerce and industry. The number of petty annoyances one meets are multiplying. There is no crawling in a worm hole or escaping the consequences as our predecessors did.

"A sense of humor is essential to the human race. It is the way we digest petty annoyances. Most young people who commit suicide do it from the lack of a sense of humor."

And we feel sure that the detached critic will realize more and more, as we did, upon survey, that Dr. Guthrie was wise in his words, and will also come to conclude that the appalling state of affairs can best be alleviated by the suggested chair in Appreciation of Humour. We propose that the post-graduate privileges of this course be extended to all politicians and public officials, especially to the local specimens, and further, that it be compulsory for all undergraduates, not to be evaded by such mean excuses as having had a father in the legislature or intending to go through for a lawyer.

We suspect that the governing boards of universities in North America have never had an over-developed feeling for humour, for the history of countless rows between these bodies and students and professors argues otherwise in a mighty voice. At this point we may define an appreciation or sense of humour as a quality which enables its owner to see when a situation becomes ridiculous, particularly in relation to himself.

An appreciation of humour was certainly never an attribute of William, the Sawyer of Doorn; else history would have been otherwise than so tragically recorded. Nor has it been a characteristic of the average diplomat at any period in history. At times we have suspected Bismarck of an appreciation of humour, but he had it well under control.

Politicians, may we suggest, are none too well equipped in their perceptions of humour. We do not refer to the ability to turn on a good, gassy guffaw when occasion requires; this is standard equipment f.o.b. But we do maintain that most partisan speeches show a deplorable absence of the sense for humour. We once, when young and sillier, composed a typical political speech, which applied particular exaggeration to the cloud-leaping lyrical allusions of the standard bearers to the hinterland, (yet unscratched), and to the resources, (natural and undeveloped), and to the Ship of State, (who is at the helm?), et ad infinitum. It seemed to us particularly apt and ridiculous. Therefore, picture our surprise when, last summer, the leader of a federal party spoke with all solemnity on public platforms almost exactly those words which we considered so exaggerated and absurd!

Last year inmates of a residence not a thousand miles away ate some dubious food at a tea-party. They subsequently had a night of it. In the course of time a polite and restrained account of their grief appeared in this journal. The victims of this foul publicity at once soused a prominent undergraduate, who was so disloyal as to comment on the affair to a reporter, and caused him to run some distance in the winter air clad only in his undies. In addition, they laid in wait, ten strong, for the reporter who wrote the story—a mild individual, without malice, but owning a lively sense of humour. And more, the head of the residence in question went after the editor via official channels. Would not two hours a week in Appreciation of Humour have averted all this idiocy?

We feel that, as the graduates of this new department spread about, it would become a benison to Canada, and in a generation or so, to the world. Wars over a corridor to the sea or a duchy or a trade route would cease; the assassination of a brummagem archduke would cause relief, not revolt; the loud-voiced would shut up; the professional reformer would see himself in his true light, and anyway, the need for his professional services would have been obviated. We even go so far as to suggest that when the whole world has a sense of humour, complete and never-failing, the millennium will have arrived.

The sole obstacle is in discovering a professor competent to occupy the Chair of Appreciation of Humour. We feel the difficulty will never be surmounted.

ANTICS AFIELD

Our Office Boy, the "eminent editor" of Antics Afeld, as his friends and critics insist on terming him, has sent in the second report of his activities while journeying to Des Moines to investigate conditions there.

Oshkosh Junction, U.S.A.—Our party has found it necessary to stop over here in Oshkosh Junction, due to the loss of our railway passes. We are spending our time investigating conditions at Oshkosh College.

We went to a meeting of the Bummers' Club last night and listened to the funniest speech I ever heard. It looked like an acrobatic display with words and music. The speaker reamed off for hours about the duties of the model farmer, or something like that. He got away to a good start on page one by remarking that "the farmer is, as it were, what you might call a servant of the public, so to speak. And the public, in a manner of speaking, is to a certain extent, as it were, dependent somewhat at times on what you might call the farming classes for what is often termed in certain circles throughout this country, which I assure you is by far the greatest country under the sun, which while it never sets on the speeches of the Empire Club, a glorious institution of the Dominion to the north of us, a country which produces stalwart men and buxom maidens who produce in great quantities what I was about to term the agricultural necessities of life."

Here he waved his arms vaguely around in the manner of an octopus seeking the daily necessities of life. "And I must say," he continued, shaking his fist viciously in the general direction of Joey Slickereth, who covered under a table in abject terror, "that it is with great pleasure that I stand before such a representative group of young men and women, who ... # BLUE FACE PENN A.C. IN INTERNATIONAL POLO LEAGUE OPENER

SPEAKING OF SPORT

To-morrow night's International water polo game between Varsity and Penn A.C. has attracted widespread interest. By to-night tickets will be at a premium and a capacity house will greet the colourful Penn aggregation. The diving exhibition by Alfie Phillips of the Canadian Olympic team and Herman Ringler of the American Olympics is an added attraction to a smart program, which will wind up with a dance.

Varsity juniors lost a tough game to Marlboros in the second round S.P.A. series last night. The Blue had a margin in play in the first two periods, but Marlboros pulled out the game in the last stanza, scoring the winning goal with about four minutes to play. Varsity came mighty close to tying it up when a Blue player got through to the Dukes' goal with about a minute to go and Pringle, Marlboro defenceman threw his stick to avert a sure goal.

The rule by which a player, throwing his stick to save his goal is given a penalty might well be changed to the pro regulation where the referee can award a goal to the side offended.

In addition to the S.P.A. games Varsity seniors will play an exhibition game in Belleville early next month. The Blue and White will meet Queen's on December 6th in a house-warmer at the new Belleville hockey arena.

The Regina Roughriders-Tigers final at Hamilton to-morrow will witness the reappearance of Saul Bloomfield. Saul was the lad who got a lot of publicity early last fall as a western junior football star who was slated for Queen's. Bloomfield reached that venerable institution of learning, but was academically ineligible to play football. Nothing more was heard until Mr. Bloomfield suddenly came on the scene to play for Regina juniors against St. Thomas in the Dominion junior final. Incidentally Saul was one of the chief works at St. Thomas, his good all-round playing aiding the westerners in capturing the championship. Maybe Bloomfield will be able to repeat his last season's performance to-morrow.

The Varsity British Rugby Team will be in action to-morrow. The Blue play Torontos at the Oakwood stadium. Varsity's second team will play a game on the Back Campus.

CO-ED JOTTINGS

Occupational Therapy almost threw a monkey wrench into the interfaculty basketball schedule last night when they held the strong senior Victoria team to a 33-25 score. They were up two points at half-time, and Vic had to give everything they had to defeat them. Marion Gibson, O.T.'s stellar jumping centre, intercepted pass after pass, and was a tower of strength on defense. Vic's forward line is exceptionally fast, and both teams had hard luck on shots.

St. Hilda's made sure of their group title, by defeating senior U.C. 26-9. St. Hilda's played a really good game and seem to have few weaknesses. Senior U.C. battled hard all the way and they were unfortunate on a number of their shots. Bea Symons, the Saint's forward, stood out particularly of their shots. Sally Ballard is a threat at any time and notched 5 baskets.

Junior Vic defeated Medettes in a sloppily played game at U.T.S. last night. The game was of no importance, as far as influencing the league standing goes. The score was 31-21. Vic. had the better of the play all through, and Vera Peters' long shots and Vi Henry's good playing kept Meds' score up.

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

Exhibition of Fancy Diving by Members of Olympic Teams

To-morrow evening will see the opening game of the new International Water Polo League played in the Hart House Pool between Pennsylvania Athletic Club and University of Toronto. This outstanding event promises to eclipse all previous natatorial meets held in Hart House.

"The advance sale has been so heavy that we are having bleachers constructed. All signs point to a bumper evening. I advise all those who intend going and have not got their tickets yet, to get them this morning as we are calling in all unsold tickets at noon. The Athletic Office will handle the sale from then on," said Tommy Marsh, secretary of the water polo team to "The Varsity" yesterday.

The referee will be Leo Latchford, and the fans will see a well handled game. The team line up for Penn A.C. has not been announced as yet, but all the players are supposed to be the best swimmers in their colleges. Consequently the game will be a fast one from the sound of the first whistle. Varsity will have their regulars out in full force and they are all feeling at the bit waiting to go. They will be urged to victory by many celebrities among the most prominent being Mr. Emil Sauer, United States consul at Toronto and Sir Robert Falconer.

At half-time there will be an exhibition of fancy diving put on by Herman Ringler of the American Olympic team and Jackie Phillips of the Canadian Olympic team.

A programme of music will follow the game.

GOOD COMBINATION

The Varsity juniors threw a scare into the champion Marlboros in an S.P.A. second round game last night. The Blue youngsters stood the Dukes on their heads literally and figuratively for two periods and were holding a 1-0 lead till the last ten minutes of the game. Then the champions put on a spurt and ran in two goals and barely managed to stave off the Blues till the final bell rang.

The first period opened fast with Varsity forcing the play from the face-off. Both goalies had several close calls. Moore in the Dukes' nets was kept particularly busy. Finally, with

HOCKEY SEASON WILL BE OPENED AT BELLEVILLE

Intermediates Will Play Queen's in Exhibition Game on December 6th

PROSPECTS BRIGHT

Good Team From University
Augsurs Well for Hockey
Fans

The horizon looks bright for the Varsity intermediate hockey team this season. Their first game will be an exhibition one with Queen's in Belleville's new arena. This is the official opening of the arena and promises much for the hockey fans. The business men of the city have chosen Friday, Dec. 6th as being the most convenient date for the game and will be there in full force to cheer the winning team.

Varsity has rounded up a good selection of players who with a little more practice should make a first rate team. Several of last year's players have returned including McMillan, Graham, Leake, and Clute. McMillan and Graham will be playing defense and Bill Leake and Rog Clute back at the old job as forwards. Among the new players Malcolm, defense, looks promising and has had a good deal of experience playing for Paris intermediates. Kehoe and Pereyma, both from St. Mike's, are two useful additions. Kehoe starred last year for St. Mike's juniors and looks good in practice. Herb Moran is the goalie and the services of Bill Dewar have been obtained as coach. The team is under the able management of Jim Johnson. Queen's will undoubtedly put up some strong opposition, but the odds seem to be with Toronto.

SENIOR U.C. DRAW

IN WATER POLO GAME

Senior U.C. overcame a one goal deficit to earn a draw in their game with Dentistry. Moser, Dental playing manager, scored in the first half, and Richmond equalized in the second. University College had one goal disallowed when the referee ruled that Gibson's shot had not completely crossed the goal line.

3 minutes to go, Cunningham ran in a counter for Varsity on a pass from Cramer. It was a nice rush that split the Marlboro defense wide and Cunningham made no mistakes with his shot.

Varsity continued their heavy offensive in the second period. Don Smillie tested Moore with a couple of bullet-like drives but couldn't get the rubber past him. Both teams displayed a lack of finish around the nets and passed up several chances to score.

In the final canto the regular Blue forward line, who had been unable to get going in the first two stanzas, came to life. For about 8 minutes they had the Dukes bottled up around their blue line, but they just couldn't score. Then Marlboros awakened up and Good tied the score with ten minutes to go on a pass from Harvey Jackson. Several times Moore was called upon to stop hard shots from the sticks of Smillie and Hetherington. With about five minutes to go Gamble beat Hunnisset on a shot from close in, giving Marlboros the lead. Varsity came within an ace of tying the score, but Pringle threw his stick and saved a certain goal. The crowd were yelling for the Blue youngsters to tie it up and they gave every ounce in the effort, but couldn't get the rubber past Moore. The bell rang with the Dukes on the long end of a 2-1 score.

EMPIRE CLUB LUNCHEON

Even among cultured English people, the Professor averred, there is an utter ignorance of the colonies, and a failure to distinguish between the United States and Canada. Among several amusing instances of such lack of knowledge, he made mention of a letter, addressed to himself, at McGill University, McGill, Ontario.

Questioning whether there was any real enthusiasm for the British Commonwealth in Canada outside of Ontario and British Columbia, the speaker claimed that in many parts of the country the English are disliked, and that the anti-British feeling among the students at McGill University in particular is marked. "We don't want Englishmen, we want Galicians and Lithuanians," was, according to Professor Waugh, the comment of a prominent Western railroad official.

That there is no little danger in arguing about equality of status and that wrangling over abstract terms puts the Empire in great peril, were two points especially emphasized by the speaker.

dropped onto the floor, and he fell in the time pounding on the table while he tried to decipher his chirography) . . . who should be fed a diet of sour milk and corn cobs to fatten them for the market. Dear me! At this juncture he slapped his leg several times with great vigour, till the chairman offered him a fly-swatter.

"I wish to point out," he went on, waving one foot in the air and wiggling his ears to express emotion, "that the first duty of the farmer is to his public. If the public is satisfied with the milk he sells, then his cows will be more contented with their lot or pasture in life, and if his cows are contented then his milk will produce more satisfaction, and this will make his cows more contented and his customers more contented and they will produce more milk and he will have to buy a warehouse to keep his money in."

Finally the speaker's voice gave out and he concluded, "And now may Grace go with you all, and I feel sure that never in all my life have I faced a more attentive audience (here he thumbed his nose at Lower Down, who was looking the other way) and if you aren't all successes in the business of farming it's not my fault. The only thing you must remember is to think of the other fellow first and spend the rest of the time thinking about yourself, but don't talk to yourself too much as it's a sign of insanity. I thank you one and all, and I hope I've earned the free meal you so bountifully provided."

Then everybody woke up and cheered lustily because he was all through, and we all went to bed except Any Barks, who wanted to slide down the bannisters and kept it up all night. I hope to tell you a little about the athletic pastimes at Oshkosh College in my next report. Chaz.

SIR JOSEPH ADDRESSES COMMERCE CLUB

Sir Joseph, who acknowledged the introduction with an airy wave of the hand.

Sir Joseph commenced by remarking that he was glad there were no newspapers represented at the meeting, and no danger of headlines in the morning. He urged the spirit of co-operation on his listeners with the following words: "I am confirmed in the view that there is nothing which should be performed for human society, nothing which is needed, or of value to the community, which cannot be accomplished if men of fair parts get together in co-operation. I commend to you always and everywhere the co-operative spirit with the man who works beside you."

Referring to the efforts of the older generation to help the next avoid the same blunders it has made, he said, "Our hearts go out to you to help you avoid our blunders, and you facetiously say to each other, 'The old boy was pretty serious to-night.'"

The employer," he continued, "should recognize in order of importance, first, his duty to the consumer; second his duty to his work people; and lastly consideration of himself." He claimed that a pleased customer would result in a loyal workman, which would produce a greater pleased customer, resulting in a more loyal workman, and that the employer wouldn't have to think of himself; the profits would flow in of themselves.

GALAXY OF FUN AND LAUGHTER FEATURES ANNUAL U.C. FOLLIES

First Year Wins Shield With Skit Representing Side-Show

DIVING AND DANCING

Bar-Room Scene, Broadcasting
Bee and Train Parody All Well Done

Amid a galaxy of fun and laughter, gay cavaliers and their winsome ladies romped the night through at the annual University College Follies held at Hart House on Friday evening. Glamorous youth held sway; staid professors abandoned all dignity in the delights of the night.

Four skits were presented by each year in uproariously funny style. The fourth year staged a crazy scene in a bar-room away out in the wild west. A rag-time kid at the piano wailed out blue tunes, and a poor child ealed piteously to its papa: "Dear father, dear father, come home with me now." Spirits were guzzled freely throughout the parody.

The third year held an amateur radio broadcasting bee with a couple of good men at the piano and a live announcer at the microphone.

"The Varsity's" reports of the last train from the Queen's game were crudely parodied in the sophomore skit. The drunken scenes were very realistically enacted. So well was the "lady" made up that "she" was politely barred by the attendant of the men's cloak room with a courteous "Pardon me, Gentlemen only." The poker was prolonged while "she" shed an ample supply of lingerie. But the conductor shouted "Toronto next, Toronto!" And the lights went out just in time.

HISTORY IS DESCRIBED AS GROWING SUBJECT

Professor McLlwraith Delivers
Lecture on Earliest Civilization

TECHNIQUE EXPLAINED

"History is properly described as a growing subject," said Professor McLlwraith in his lecture on the Beginnings of Civilization in Europe on Saturday in Trinity College Chapel.

He pointed out that history dates back many thousands of years, to an age of ape-like men who used crude stone tools and of whom only the strongest survived.

Serious scientific investigation began in the nineteenth century led by Denmark and aided by the theories of Darwin. It was a University of Toronto man who first used the term "prehistoric."

Professor McLlwraith explained many interesting facts concerning archeological technique and the development of man. By illustrations he showed man in the different stages and also the tools that he used. Down through the Ice Age he came, living in caves and striving to conquer the fierce animals around him. At the end of the Ice Age, which, contrary to popular belief, was not one single period of cold, man emerged much as he is to-day.

Information is based on the findings of tools and bones but, "One of the fascinations of archeology is that there are so many problems that we cannot answer," Professor McLlwraith added.

Professor Annoyed

Prof. Kenrick, F.B., Ph.D., Leip., at the General Science lecture on Friday, Nov. 29, ordered one of the gentlemen out of the class.

"I will not be unfair," he threatened, "but I am going to do everything in my power to prevent your getting through this year. Disturbances annoy me."

The offending student, however, neglected to leave his name.

OPINION IS DIVIDED ON LIBERAL STUDIES

Professors Evade Giving Too
Direct Answers to Questions

NO TIME FOR CULTURE

Opinion on the campus is divided on the question, "Are liberal studies the basis of university work?" and "Are Medical, Dental and Engineering courses producers only of 'Skilled Mechanics'?"

At the annual Commerce Club banquet on Thursday last, the president, E. L. Riggs, declared that the university should make provision for a separate commerce faculty. Dean A. T. DeLury was not entirely favorable to this idea, fearing that the faculty would be ruled too strongly by the professional idea. He urged the weaving into the course of more cultural subjects, that is, subjects that were pursued for their own sakes.

"The Varsity" found that undergraduate opinion was inclined to favor the Dean, while members of other faculties were unwilling to speak on the subject.

H. W. Price, Professor of Electric Engineering, as a member of the faculty that teaches men to be "skilled mechanics," was approached, but preferred not to express any definite opinion. "I should prefer not to speak for the Faculty of Engineering without having consulted my colleagues on the subject in question," he said.

As a representative of the so-called "liberal" Faculty, J. C. Robertson, Professor of Greek at Victoria, was also inclined to doubt the advisability of giving any direct answer. "I should not like to express an opinion on such short notice. I should prefer to read the statement of Dean DeLury re the separate commerce faculty and Mr. Feulou's statement re 'skilled mechanics,' before I spoke. They would require careful consideration before answering."

A. W. Taber, III S.P.S., thought that there could be more cultural or liberal subjects offered to engineering students. "The only trouble is that (Continued on page 4)

PROMINENT CITIZENS TO SPEAK AT SCHOOL DINNER

Lt. Col. MacLean, Canon Cody Address Fortieth Annual Affair

Lt. Col. J. B. MacLean of the MacLean Publishing Co., and connected with the Financial Post, will address the Fortieth Annual School Dinner in Hart House to-morrow evening at 7.30. Canon Cody will also speak at this, the representative School function of the year.

This year the tickets have been reduced to one dollar each, since the Engineering Society has agreed to make good any deficit. This action has been taken that Schoolmen may take advantage of the reasonable offer and make the attendance a record.

HERBERT LITTLE

Charles Herbert Little, and Lionel M. Gelber, both graduates of Upper Canada College, are recipients of the coveted Rhodes Scholarships for 1930, according to the information given out last night by D. M. Michener, Chairman of the Rhodes Committee. The scholarships permit three years at Oxford for the winners.

L. M. Gelber is a member of the fourth year of University College, in the Modern History course. He is Literary Director of the U.C. Lit., member of the Debates Committee, Clerk of the House, well known debater and was distinguished last year by his interest in the reform of student government, supporting the stand taken by "The Varsity". He is president of the Historical Club.

Herbert Little is an honour student in Modern Languages at Trinity College; has consistently taken high academic honours; for the past three years has held a place in the line of the Intercollegiate Football Team and for two years played Intermediate Hockey.

"Herbie" is a member of the Historical Club, and of the Zeta Psi Fraternity. At Oxford he will attend Brasenose College.

GOOD TEACHERS SCARCE

Does Not Believe Curriculum Improved Because Many Subjects Taught

"Do our universities fail to educate?" asks a head in the current issue of MacLean's Magazine. Dr. Bengé Atlee, a graduate of Dalhousie in Medicine, fiction writer, and expert in university education, replies "Yes," under the enquiring title.

Dr. Atlee believes, according to the article, that the universities of America fail to kindle in the students the spark of enthusiasm which must dwell in all seekers after knowledge. For this condition of affairs he blames "that dry rot to which the academic mind is so prone."

The doctor strongly condemns the system of judging the teacher's ability by the degrees he possesses. "I wonder," he asks, "how many professors are chosen because they are enthusiasts, because they burn with a zeal to teach, and would sooner inspire than eat." He admits that such men are few and far between, but claims it is because, although with us potentially, they are never developed. "In fact," he protests, "we do rather the reverse."

Dr. Atlee also charges our universities with trying to "improve their curricula" rather by increasing the number of subjects taught than by increasing the value of the subjects they already teach. There is, he continues, "too much tendency to point singly to the all-embracingness of these curricula and say: 'You can learn anything here.'"

This system, he claims, produces "that glib and superficial university product who knows a few facts about a lot of things, but has a mastery of no one subject. We can give you So-and-So's opinion on this and Whosit's (Continued on page 4)

Varsity Team Wins First Game IN INTERNATIONAL WATER POLO

Wet Smacks at Polo

There is no truth in the report that the "chic" new "bawth" robes of the water polo team were designed by Paul Poirer or that the bathing suits are after a model by Paul Peel.

Although several spectators of the fair sex behind one of the goals got somewhat splashed when Varsity sank the ball for a counter no one was heard to observe that the evening was "all wet".

More than one member of the male sex seemed to have felt that the proper attire for a water polo game is "soup and fish."

We heard a he-man telling his fair companion that if she made one more crack about the polo game he'd "chucker" in the pool.

LACK OF A FALSTAFF STAYS HUMOUR CHAIR

Professor Sissons Declares Forced Humour Is Most Pathetic

STUOENTS LACK HUMOUR

"Unless a Falstaff be obtained to conduct it, I do not think there is much use attempting to establish the faculty," said Professor McDonald, when interviewed by "The Varsity" on the feasibility of introducing a Chair of Appreciation of Humour into the University of Toronto as suggested in Friday's editorial. "It is a humorous suggestion, but outside of that it is of no importance," he added.

"There is nothing more pathetic than forced humour. Like all things of the spirit, humour comes by grace, not by art," stated Professor Sissons of Victoria College. The professor even quoted Scripture to illustrate his point. "The wind bloweth where it listeth, you know," he said.

Another professor who did not wish to have his name divulged, had some unusual views on the subject. He thought that the best person to occupy the Chair of Appreciation of Humour would be one who did not exercise his sense of humour in his own life, and to prove his contention, he mentioned the mirth-provoking Charlie Chaplin, who is one of the unhappiest men in Hollywood. The same don claimed that students had to have a sense of humour, otherwise they could not endure four years of college lectures, but he deplored the fact that there is not a sufficient quantity to be found among the students.

Antics Afield

A society item in the Utah Chronicle states that an enterprising young business man at the University of Oklahoma operates a "darkened 'osculation booth'" at a flat rate of five cents for five minutes.

According to the Minnesota Daily, on article in La Critique, sober "ultra" magazine at the University of Chicago, stating that sororities and women's clubs were "matrimonial clearing-houses", aroused such ire among co-eds that they besieged the publication offices, where the editors covered behind locked doors and only ventured out in cases of extreme necessity.

Blue Defeats Penn A.C. Team in First Game of New Water Polo League

AYRES STARS AS GOALIE

Fancy Swimming and Diving
Add to Program Before
Big Crowd

By "Al" Dignan
Toronto's first game in the new International Water Polo League was put across on Saturday night with a big splash.

Who won? Why, University of Toronto.

Score? U. of T., 4; Penn A.C., 2. The crowd was the largest ever seen at a water polo game in this part of the country. They were there in every style of suit and dress. Notwithstanding the edict of the Caput that the evening was to be strictly informal, several fans and fanettes came dressed to the contrary. They added a touch of colour to a very colourful evening.

The game was honoured by the presence of the President, Sir Robert Falconer and Mr. Emil Sauer, the American consul at Toronto.

The opening was attended by all the frills of big time sport. Walter Spence, captain of Penn A.C., swam a 150 yard medley swim, consisting of breast, crawl and back strokes. John Mansure, manager of the Pennsylvanians, introduced his team, who all received a good hand by the crowd. "Chuck" Shortt, senior manager of the Swimming Club, introduced the University of Toronto players as they took to the water.

But let's get to the game. The great crowd was all tense as referee Leo Lachford, stepped to the edge of the tank and blew the whistle for the teams to be ready. Then in went the ball and the first international sporting event in the university was on.

Penn got possession first and tore in on Ayres the Varsity goalie, but Ayres leaped out of the water to make a (Continued on page 4)

UNIVERSITY LOYAL AVER MANY STUDENTS

England's Indifference Toward Canada Denied at University

STUOENT IS ADOVENTUROUS

"I think that every student at the University of Toronto is sane enough to be aware of the fact that under the Commonwealth we enjoy too great a freedom to allow any anti-British feeling to creep in," stated A. E. McDonald, IV Arts, St. Michael's College, when approached by "The Varsity" in regard to Prof. W. T. Waugh's address at the Empire Club in Montreal as regard Imperialism.

"I think it is anything but law at the University of Toronto. This is Canada and we are Canadians. Although most of us have no doubt read Mr. Rcmarque's novel and have shuddered at the common grave, nevertheless I think that students being of an innate, adventurous nature, would seek this great adventure even though it was their last."

A. E. Tyson, '31, School, says, "There is no sub anti-British feeling has as alleged at McGill. I hate to think that McGill students whose forefathers were mostly British, have this attitude that England is indifferent toward Canada. I am sure the students would soon volunteer to help preserve the safety of the British Commonwealth."

FELICITATIONS

"The Varsity" extends to the winners of the Rhodes Scholarships the general congratulations of the university. There can surely be no criticism this year of the selection made by the Rhodes Committee. The honour belongs not only to the individuals, but to the university and to the colleges to which they belong.

THE SAWDUST TRAIL

We print elsewhere excerpts from an article appearing in the current issue of MacLean's Magazine. It is written by Bengt Atlee, a fictioneer and medical doctor, graduate of Dalhousie.

It seems evident that Dr. Atlee manages to crystallize the opinions of those who know little about colleges, less about professors and nothing about students. The doctor bases his whole thesis on the assumption that students flock to college eager to be set on fire by sparks of intellectual learning.

They do nothing of the kind. The general attitude of the student, and the editors of "The Varsity" are no holier than the rest, is to postpone the intellectual bonfire until to-morrow. It may never be held, and no blame can be attached to the professors for the prevention.

Moreover, there are many professors who would skip across the campus at the prospect of one original idea from a student. Nor is it the inspiring professor who always teaches the most. A Harvard graduate tells us that he now realizes that the professor who fired him with vigour was a donkey, while the stodgy pedagogue taught him all he knew of value.

Inspire the students! What the doctor wants is an evangelist, a Billy Sunday, not a professor.

OF COURSE

We publish a fiery letter from students in Occupational Therapy, protesting against certain allusions to their course made recently in print. "The Varsity" wishes it made plain that it does not object to such courses, in themselves; their value is fully appreciated.

This journal has referred to Occupational Therapy only as an example of a course that is admittedly not one of the standard liberal arts.

We do not feel justified in claiming a false superiority for Toronto; one based on the supposed absence of courses which we approve, but others do not. To claim this superiority is nothing less than hypocrisy.

Correspondence

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

Bangs Author

Editor,
"The Varsity",
Dear Sir:

If the gentleman who writes for the U.C. Magazine had the intelligence or perseverance to do the smallest amount of research before writing on a topic of which he knows nothing, it would spare the public from reading trash and the honourable magazine from printing the same. He has evidently not even discovered the uses of the dictionary since he uses with no apologies such a word as "massagers", and the basket-making may be part of the O.T. curriculum, but I should not care to see the gentleman's attempt to pass their psychology examinations.

It is very obvious that the scribbling gentleman is one of those brutally healthy people whose development takes place at the expense of the brain. He walks with blind and unsympathetic eyes in a world too full of suffering and disability and sees none of it. What does he care if paralysis strikes a carefree child and neglect makes it a cripple for life when massage and remedial exercise might have saved much of the disability?

When the most eminent physicians in Toronto, a city ranking high in the medical world, sponsor two such courses as Occupational Therapy and Physio Therapy it does not behove an ignorant layman to be too critical. A course in hotel management may seem more suitable to one whose college career is evidently spent at the Royal York or King Edward, but I hope that some day he will be in a position to know what Massage and Occupational Therapy can do in a tedious illness.

"Basket-makers" and "Massagers"

Open house at the Women's Union last night was made an special event by the presence of the Deans and Head Girls of the various U.C. women's residences. Carol-singing, led by Dorothy Beattie was a feature of the evening, with Kathleen Elliott, B.A., soloist, and Bettie Burton, pianist, as the assisting artists.

Art, Music and Drama

Menorah Musicale

A delightful collection of popular compositions was presented by the Menorah Society at their Musicale last evening. All the numbers, except a Chopin, were short and expressive of lighter moods.

Three pieces by A. A. Milne were sung by Jane Mason. Of these, "Where does the Wind go", was rendered the best. Miss Mason's voice is contralto and is most subtle in little fairy pieces.

Bryant Robinson played in masterful style, "Scherzo, B Minor", by Chopin. His "Island Spell", by Ireland, was a sheer delight to the ear.

It wafted on the air like magic.

A trio, consisting of David Dubinsky, pianist, David Silverstein, violinist, and Norman Boysey, cellist, then gave three offerings "Hungarian Dance No. 6" by Brahms, ran the gamut of moods, from sad to gay. Its cadences were almost perfect and did justice to the great composer.

The programme, taken as a whole, was a happy experience. It was quite the shortest heard by this reviewer for a long time. It took a little over an hour and was arranged by Yona T. Elias, an undergraduate of this university.

THE RHYME OF THE MORNING DEW

Instalment the last

"Foghorn" was eating out his heart in literal sense, for, from the start Of the great gorging competition Outlined in our last week's edition He fell behind Chief Cat's Meow And stood to lose both rye and frau The boy was good, but came the question

He lacked the never-miss digestion. But, as in movie serial plays, Which used to run in by-gone days, When we skipped studying history And paid ten cents (child's fare) to see

Ruth Roland do her hairbreadth stuff, The heroine got treated rough, Got pushed off cliffs, left on the track Where railroad trains rushed forth and back,

Slipped in between a tiger's paws, Or (next week) an ore-crusher's jaws; But, always, the next Friday night The hero pulled an awful fight, Made the bad villains look like fools And copied the chart, will, dough or jewels,

So, in great Foghorn's foggiest hour Snar's little brain turned on the power, When Hankie left old Billingsgate, His poor, worn mother mourned grim fate.

But, in a little rubber sack, Made to hang down his manly back, She put (with tears) some Scidlitz powder

Lest ever he went off his chowder, And he, because she was so dear Had kept it as a souvenir. But noble men in noble cause Reck not of sentimental loss. He put the stuff in Cat's Meow's stew In one bowl white, another blue, And then stood by, without remorse And just let Nature take its course.

I sing of grander, nobler days, But ah, my cheap instalment lays Cannot do justice to McLeod, That doughty warrior and proud. Of Cat's Meow's explosive end, I leave you to imagine, friend. Just as you'd say, 'twas heavy sledging.

This is the romance part, I've told, Much more is there one might unfold: Danger, discovery, and death, But when, or who will give it breath? I really don't know, and, to boot, I don't know that I give a hoot.

LIBRARY SCHOOL STUDY IS EXCELLENT SAYS DIRECTOR

One Year's Interesting Work Comprises Course for Girls

"The only other school of its kind in the Dominion is that at McGill University," declared Miss W. S. Barnstead, director of the Library School, when interviewed by "The Varsity". "Therefore, of course, the opportunities for trained librarians are many. The entrance requirement is quite high—as a girl must possess her Honour Matriculation or first year university in 5 subjects, omitting mathematics. There are about 24 girls enrolled at present."

The course covers one year from September to June, and includes a basic study that all must pursue. Beyond that, each may choose an elective as: Special Libraries, Boys' and Girls' Work, School Libraries, etc. "It is a most interesting course of study," says Miss Barnstead, "and affords many unusual opportunities to hear expert people drawn from the city and throughout the Empire and United States. Dr. Locke of the city libraries and Mr. Wallace, head of the university library both devote time each week to lecture before the school. Recently such interesting speakers as Professor Brett of the Philosophy Department, and Rose Fyelman, who writes delightful fairy stories for Punch have addressed the school. Professor Sanderson, who is now touring Canada told the students about the new country libraries in England."

VARSITY DEFEATS PENN A.C. 4-2 IN INTERNATIONAL WATER POLO

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The local opener of the International Water Polo League at Hart House on Saturday night proved to be a huge success. Varsity's victory over the Penn A.C. places them in a tie with the Montreal A.A.A. for first place. The Blue and White had a big edge in team play and Bill Ayres in the Toronto goal was almost unbeatable. Penn have some exceedingly fast swimmers, Walter Spence of the visitors being the fastest man on either team.

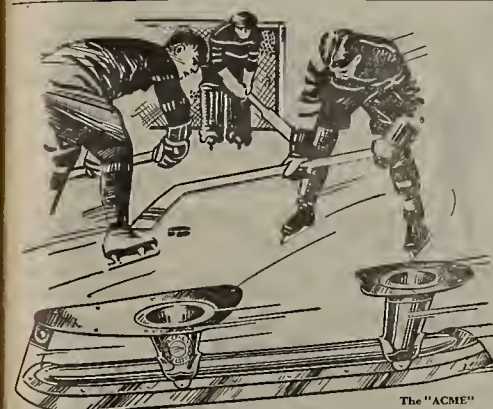

Walter Spence's exhibition of swimming immediately prior to the start of the game leaves no doubt as to his mastery of the natatorial art. Spence did fifty yards in each of the breast stroke, back and crawl styles. The Olympic swimmer makes incredibly fast time with the breast stroke.

Regina Roughriders made a fine showing against the Hamilton Tigers in the Canadian final Saturday holding the Junglers to a 14-3 score. The westerners made a great stand in the last period with the much-discussed forward or onside pass. This is about the first time this season that a losing team has been able to gain much ground by use of this play. The success of the Regina efforts may have considerable effect on any contemplated changes in the rules.

Notre Dame completed its football season Saturday by defeating the Army 7-0. This gives the South Benders a record of nine straight wins. Although it has been stated that Notre Dame would close the season with the Army game, even though victorious, it is to be hoped that Knute Rockne's men will be the eastern representative in the Tournament of Roses game at Pasadena.

Scoring Goals... with STARR Skates!

AS THE largest manufacturers of Hockey Skates in Canada the Starr Manufacturing Company has always endeavored to make better skates so as to make possible faster and better hockey. That we have succeeded is attested to by the fact that nearly seven million pairs of Starr Skates have been sold, a record not even approached by any other Canadian Company.

This year, in the "Acme" Professional Tube Hockey, we have developed a skate at a reasonable price which will satisfy the most exacting demands of any hockey player.

The blades are of tool steel, guaranteed to hold an edge—reinforced tube—patented cups extended and welded to the runner; the whole skate electrically welded, soldered and hand finished, and the price only $7.50.

DOCTORS AND SCHOOL INDULGE IN ASSAULT

Engineers Show Usual Anxiety to Lead University in Athletics

MEDICALS FIGHT TOMORROW

The School assault to-day promises to be exceptionally interesting. Almost every weight will be represented in boxing and wrestling, but fencing seems to be neglected. One entry only in a class will not be awarded a medal if there is no bout. Preliminaries start at 4 p.m., and semi-finals at 7.30 p.m. Competitors may sign the lists in the Engineering Society office until 2 p.m. to-day, and will weigh in at Mr. Banton's office at 3 p.m. Following is the entry list so far:

BOXING

Heavy—No entries.
175 lbs.—D. Strachan I; E. Ellsworth I; G. Eaton (bye).
160 lbs.—C. L. Wallbridge I; L. Walkom I; E. A. Hallut I; W. Thompson III; M. Elson I; Werry.
147 lbs.—L. Lawrence I; S. A. McCatty I.
135 lbs.—A. B. Green II; W. K. Marsh I; B. Cavan II; J. Punched III.
125 lbs.—J. W. Bell, J. Cairn.
118 lbs.—H. Kominke I; I. K. Chalmers II.

WRESTLING

Heavy—L. Litony.
175 lbs.—G. Eaton I.
160 lbs.—B. Robinson IV; R. K. Her, IV.
147 lbs.—J. A. Taylor II; R. Willis III; L. Price II; J. V. Reid I; H. M. Jones II; B. Langly I.
135 lbs.—H. E. Smith II; F. Masse III.
118 lbs.—W. J. Stain I; H. S. Howden I.
112 lbs.—W. D. Brownlee III.

FENCING

J. F. Moore II.
The Medical assault at arms will be an interesting event on Tuesday. In the past Meds have supplied several outstanding members of intercollegiate assault teams. The most prominent of these was, perhaps, Harry Hills, heavyweight boxer. The medical faculty will do well if they can keep up their past standard. A great deal of interest abounds among the doctors concerning the approaching assault. The boxing events will be the most keenly contested, but as yet there has been no entry in the 125 lb. class. Wrestling is not so popular, and fencing has scarcely any earnest followers at present. Before the list closes to-day it is expected there will be entries for every event in the assault.

Co-eds at the University of Washington have been placed on their honour to act discreetly before opening a cigarette case. If they sense a hostile atmosphere, where twentieth century ideas have not permeated as yet, they are urged to forget everything but a desire to keep harmonious. ### JUNIOR SERIES

Group No. 5—Big Four

Clubs—Marlboro A.C., Parkdale Canoe Club, Toronto Canoe Club, University of Toronto.

JUNIOR S.P.S. DEFEAT TRINITY BY 8-0

Junior S.P.S. waterpoloists went on a scoring rampage against Trinity. When the spray had cleared, the Schoolmen had won their scheduled interfaculty encounter by the comfortable margin of eight to nothing. Fisher and Hayhoe were the spearhead of the attack, dividing the eight goals, with Fisher on the action end of five. Hayhoe was responsible for the feature play of the game, scoring on a beautiful heave that travelled well over half the length of the tank.

Junior S.P.S.—Fisher, Lowers, Powell, Bryce, Hayhoe, Button, Withrow, Crocker, Adair.
Trinity—Hunt, Lund, Chambers, Chapple, Rea, Cuttill, Winyard, Merwynne.

EXPLAINS STOCK MARKET IN HISTORY OF FINANCE

C. P. Fell Addresses Liberal Club on Conditions and History

"There is a very fine opportunity for investing in good high grade common stocks," stated Mr. C. P. Fell in his address before the Liberal Club yesterday on stock market conditions. "Business conditions are not seriously affected and the stock market crash only accelerated a normal depression while there is an ascending period of prosperity ahead."

Mr. Fell traced the developments of financial conditions and outlined the rapid growth of bonds and stocks in recent years.

"In 1900 there were only six bond houses in Canada while now there are over two hundred reputable firms and where formerly a million dollar bond took the combined resources of several houses, the province can now raise a thirty million dollar loan without difficulty. At present the demands for bonds have gone away off and the public is demanding common stocks."

"The significance of the bull market is increasing prosperity, extreme optimism, speculative eraze, large per capita wealth and the low interest rates. But the most vital cause of the collapse was the issue of so many new stocks and their over inflation. The New York banks deserve credit for stepping into the breach and the Canadian banks for restricting brokers loans."

On the recent crash due to mob psychology, several stocks were driven

CRIBBING WAS JUSTIFIED

Special to "The Varsity"

Lawrence Kansas—Eight students out of nine regard cribbing as sometimes justified, according to results of questionnaires given to students at the University of Kansas. The answers represented 35 different classes and 24 departments in the university. Seventy per cent of the answers were from upper classmen and 30 per cent came from freshmen and sophomores. Only one in nine of the students regarded cribbing as never justified. There was a strong sentiment in favour of considering the professor jointly responsible for at least some of the cheating.

below their real value, but most stocks are gradually recovering. In reply to the question as to what happened to the loss in value when a stock depreciates, Mr. Fell stated it was rather difficult to explain, but that in reality it was only a disappearance of a fictitious value in the lowering of the stock. In reality the value never existed as long as it is paper profit. The market will take a long time to readjust itself, but the present crisis should be almost over, he concluded.

OPINION IS DIVIDED ON LIBERAL STUDIES

you haven't time. English Lit. is quite all right, but any more intensive study of it would mean sacrifice of time now given to engineering subjects."

G. A. Montemurro, V Med., concurred in the opinion expressed by Mr. Taber. "I enjoy good books any time. Tolstoy, or Voltaire are always a relief after a Pathological exam. But again there is the element of time. The course is long enough at it is."

W. T. Grant, also V Med., felt that he had rather travel than spend his time reading literature at college. "The course in medicine, as it is, affords no time for intensive study of cultural subjects. Instead of lengthening the course to provide for cultural subjects, I should be much more in favour of a year or two travelling, a pastime that is cultural too. Better to enjoy the last three quarters of your life than to spend half of it at university, and cut the remaining years for enjoyment of one half."

NO STEPS YET TAKEN RE NOON-HOUR RUSH

Recommendations Submitted to Faculty Heads to Take Action

HALL COMMITTEE MEETS

"Nothing more has been done about the congestion in Great Hall dining room at one p.m. beyond submitting the recommendations and the report of Mr. Gillie's checking at the door to the various faculty heads," said W. A. Rooke, S.P.S., '30, interviewed by "The Varsity" about the results of the Hall Committee meeting of November 28. Mr. Rooke went on to say that a change in the hour of closing midday lectures to rectify the noon-hour rush would depend on the attitude of the faculties involved.

It was decided at the meeting to post the menus of the 35-cent and 25-cent lunches outside the Great Hall in the future as an added convenience for the students.

Mr. Rooke also stated that the report of the sub-committee by Mr. J. F. Clarke on the condition of the north common room included only a few recommendations. The meeting as a whole, he said, was in no way out of the ordinary.

W. H. Clark, freshman at the University of Arkansas, is six feet tall. But that ain't all. Listens to this. He wears a number 11 shoe, has a waist measurement of 54 inches, his chest is normal at 55 inches . . . and he weighs 330 pounds. Furthermore, he plays football. Think of that in a fine. Out of 200 football suits none will fit him, so Clark had to practice in overalls.—Ohio State Lantern.

Ohio State University publishes a Student Senate Scandal Sheet called the "Scavenger", which deals in intimate details in the experiences of students.

BENGE ATLEE CONDEMNS UNIVERSITY SYSTEM

on that, but has none of his very own. It is partly this superficiality which, carried into our public life, is responsible for the tragic lack of a really intelligent opinion in America."

Dr. Atlee's "worst indictment of the universities", however, is that in these days of the moving-picture to illustrate vividly any happening, the radio to broadcast the lectures of our finest teachers, and the wide dissemination of printed matter whereby the student may obtain his knowledge of contemporary ideas or discoveries first-hand, our universities still use the antiquated note-taking lecture system of the Dark Ages. He says that the student "needs the teacher to help him digest and understand, to be a guide, philosopher and friend; but that is all."

Finally, after statements that, "Perhaps the truth is, that we, the public, are more insistent in our demands for a better motor car than a better education for our young", and that, "If education is to mean anything real in the development of a Canadian mind, or a world mind, our schools must give more leadership and more inspiration than they are giving to-day", he concludes:

"To use the annual graduation exercises have become a tragedy; hopes unfulfilled; enthusiasms that never burned; young minds untouched by the fire of inspiration; pitiful little ribbons floating from a roll of futile sheepskin; eyes turned without light on a waiting world—and the old woman grimacing in the academic dust."

Undergraduate Unintelligence Uncertain Interviewer Inveigles Impressions

By H. D. Price

Something that should enter into the life of every fourth year student (an epoch, as it were) (also an unavoidable ill) is an intelligence test, to ascertain, learn or find out, the rapidity of his reaction, his faculty of observation and correlation, and prevarication, all powers.

Not being able to find a student amid the flocks of communists, civic employees, policemen, and undergraduates cluttering the campus, we inveigled the night-watchman into giving his reactions. First we told him to make his mind a blank. He seemed to have no difficulty in doing this, so we continued by popping well known words upon him unexpectedly. With scarcely a tremor of hesitation, his impressions came forth in all their sheer transcendental beauty.

Test word—Reaction.
University—"What of it?"
Baldwin House—"Cheese and crackers."

Hart House—"Masquerades."

Fraternity—"Pin."
Sorority—"Meow."
S.C.M.—"Cast thy bread upon the waters."

The Old Elm—"Talk."
The Privateer—"More talk."
Trinity House—"Also censored, by the S.P.C.A.)
Charlotte's—"We girls must gather."

Queen's Hall—"Do I have to answer this one?"
Annesley Hall—"She's a good looking gal, but hungry."

U. of T. Library—"Once buried shall not be brought up again."
Burwash Hall—"Theologs and gab."
Convocation Hall—"A study in scarlets."
U.C. men's residences—"Bottles."

Another lovely moron.
Note—We then reversed the order, and to our ultimate glee, he clicked every time.

VARSITY WINS FIRST GAME IN INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

sensational save. A minute later Armstrong, for Toronto, scored the first goal with a long shot from centre. Almost immediately after the toss up, Alexander took a pass from Glass and shot in the second goal for Varsity. Penn began to come to life and played some good water polo, keeping up a persistent fire in the vicinity of the Toronto goal. The shooting of the visitors was very wild and weird at times. Ayres made the task of the Pennsylvanians tremendously difficult by his stellar goal keeping.

Just before the close of the first half, Glass intercepted a pass and scored the third goal for Toronto. Half time score: Varsity 3, Penn 0.

During the intermission, Herman Ringler, champion Olympic swimmer of the U.S.A., gave an excellent exhibition of fancy diving.

In the second half Penn set out as if they meant business. Darnell, the left winger, sent in two goals in quick succession. Then Spence scored for the Blue and White on a free throw. To make the score 4-2. The play then settled down to mostly passing and strenuous swimming up and down the pool. The hard checking of the Penn players kept the score from being any higher.

To mention the stars on the Toronto team would be a repetition of the line-up but Ayres deserves special mention. Spence and Darnell were the best for the losers. After the game two hours of dancing in the Big Gym was the final feature of the evening.

UNIVERSITY LOYAL AVER MANY STUDENTS

W. S. McDonnell, IV Arts, St. Michael's College, thinks that "The recent debate in Hart House in which intolerance in Toronto was upheld, by no means indicates a general tendency towards Communism at the university, much less the desire to throw off the yoke of Imperialism. If war were to be declared to-morrow by Great Britain we would surely see the Canadian youth as a body, don the garb of battle with the same loyalty as in the late war."

"I think war is needless," said H. I. Mackonen, III Medicine. "I would enlist only on invasion of Canada by a foreign country. Then I would enlist as a means of keeping Canada's independence and self-sustenance."
"I would fight against world-wide supremacy of any single power and would fight for the protection of weaker nations," stated M. McAteer, I Arts, University College. "Canada should never lose British freedom which she now possesses."

Professors, unlike students, refuse to comment on the anti-British feeling at the University of Toronto. They think that silence is the best attitude to be taken on this subject.

PROFESSOR MARTIN FINDS CRITICISM QUITE UNFOUNDED

"Dry Rot" is Caused Simply by Lack of Enthusiasm in Subject

DEGREES NOT CRITERION

Quietest Student Often Most Enthusiastic, Says Professor

"I have found during my limited experience here that Toronto students are extremely responsive," said Professor Chester Martin, formerly of the University of Manitoba, now head of the History department here. "The Varsity" was interviewing him with regard to the criticisms of Canadian universities made by Dr. Bengt Atlee, Dalhousie graduate, and alleged expert in university education. Dr. Atlee has charged that the universities fail to kindle proper enthusiasm among the students.

"That is not the mark of 'dry rot' which Dr. Atlee attributes to the academic mind," Prof. Martin went on. "I am inclined to think that the reason for 'dry rot' or the reverse is very simple. An enthusiast ought to have no difficulty in inspiring enthusiasm in others, whether students or colleagues. But of course there is an element of art, too, in that sort of contagion."

"But do you think, 'The Varsity' enquired, "that professors are chosen by their degrees rather than by their zeal?"

"Oh, I should hope not," Professor Martin replied. "You know the old definition of a university as Mark Hopkins sitting on one end of a log and a student on the other. But I suspect that Mark Hopkins had more than zeal to offer to the student on the other end of the log."

With regard to Dr. Atlee's charge that there were too many studies on the curriculum, resulting in a larger number being poorly taught, Professor Martin thought that at Toronto the tendency was in the other direction of a few subjects well done. "Of course," he said, "to say that the few subjects shall be this or that is another matter. Of course one of them ought to be history."

Professor E. K. Brown of the English department, University College, was of the opinion that the students in his course at least were enthusiastic about their work. "One can't always tell," he said, "sometimes the quietest one in the group is the most enthusiastic."

With regard to the engaging of professors by the string of letters after their names, Mr. Brown said: "I don't think that is a hard and fast rule at Toronto."

The undergraduates had some interesting things to say. "Do professors here fail to inspire?" they were asked. "Some do, certainly," said J. H. Merritt, U.C. IV. "Others need a course in public speaking," chimed in S. L. Howell, U.C. IV, then they'd be all right." C. R. Tracey, English and History, IV, said that his views were unprintable. Miss C. B. Ross, U.C. IV, did not think that our professors were chosen because of their degrees. "It's obvious that they are not," she said. "After looking at the list of their names in the Directory one sees that several haven't even their M.A."

"Varsity" Tea

A special tea meeting of the staff of "The Varsity" will be held this afternoon at 4.30 in the Women's Union for the purpose of holding elections to fill certain vacancies on the upper massed-head. Those members of the staff whose names appear in to-day's massed-head will be eligible to vote.

DOCTORS PRAISE THERAPY COURSES

Course Not Radical Departure From Old Standards in Education

AIDS CONVALESCENTS

"Occupational and Physical Therapy are both worth while as being beneficial to convalescent patients, and need a certain cultural background of human understanding to carry out their purpose," stated Dr. E. S. Ryerson, to "The Varsity" yesterday. "At present the course is in an experimental stage under the university extension department and it should be judged upon its merits. I do not consider the adoption of a course such as this would be, a radical departure from the old standards in education and it should be given a fair trial."

"The whole idea of occupational therapy is to occupy the mind of the patient while convalescing and to prevent introspection and morbid brooding. By having trained and experienced teachers, this training can materially help the patients' recovery and help the science of medicine. It is also of special benefit in mental hospitals."

Dr. Z. A. Oille, when approached on the question was unwilling to be quoted as he claimed he was not closely enough connected with the course. However, he seemed to be of the opinion that occupational therapy was a vital help to medicine and deserved to be ranked as a university course. The university should be a training of ability to think and react and fit one for a life of occupation. There is no reason why occupational therapy or any similar course should have any reasonable objections if it fulfills these purposes.

Occupational therapy has special uses in such places as the Sick Children's Hospital, Home for Incurables, asylums and special mental cases and although the surgeon may find no special use for the course it is of a real practical value.

MR. ARMITAGE SPEAKS TO FABIAN TO-NIGHT

Mr. John G. Armitage, journalist and author speaks to-night to the Fabian Club at the Women's Union on "Is Socialism a Failure?" Formerly a labour member in the Australian House and with journalistic experience as editor and special war correspondent in both China and Japan, Mr. Armitage brings a new view-point to Canadian social problems.

"I represent no party or organization," said Mr. Armitage, "unless the Canadian Authors Club would by some stretch of the imagination be so considered."

The long awaited grouping of the club into smaller divisions which will be federated under the one title, will take place at to-night's meeting.

VARSITY HOCKEYISTS ARE IN GOOD SHAPE FOR COMING SEASON

Seniors to Play First Game With Young Rangers on Thursday

"RED" PORTER COACHING

Prospects Are Very Bright For Intermediates and Junior Teams as Well

The pre-season dope seems to indicate a big year in hockey for all the Varsity teams. The seniors will meet their first test next Thursday night when they clash with Young Rangers in the S.P.A. senior series. The blues should have little trouble in winning this game. Last year's squad won the cup and then went through to the O.H.A. senior title, and the eastern Canada finals, and with the exception of Murray Snyder, the same team will take the ice this year. Bill Stewart has the centre ice assignment and McMullen and Harley will be the regular wings. This trio has speed to burn and have been playing together long enough to have combination down to a fine art. "Red" Whitehead and Bruce Paul are back on the defence and are going better than ever. Besides making one of the best rearguards in senior hockey this pair are top-notch puck carriers and usually make the

WESTERN STUDENTS EXPECT TO ISSUE NEW PUBLICATION

Will be of Special Interest to Canadian Student Readers

FOR YOUNGER WRITERS

Contest Will be Conducted to Find a Name for Magazine

London, Dec. 2.—A group of students at the University of Western Ontario is organizing the publication of a new Canadian Magazine. According to forecasts this literary infant whose first appearance is scheduled for the latter part of February will possess a decidedly Canadian personality, and will be dedicated at birth to the godness of original work. There will be also a page or two devoted to a review of the most recent doings of Canadians in the realms of drama, art, music and literature throughout the world.

"Though names well known to Canadian readers will appear as contributors from time to time, the main purpose of the new magazine is to meet the need, never more pressing than at the present time, of providing a medium for the publication of the work of the younger Canadian writers. An advisory board of experienced journalists will ensure a thoroughly readable ensemble. There will be, however, occasional departures from Canadian literary orthodoxy that will be as interesting as they are clever," according to the proponents.

During the next week a christening contest is being conducted. A five dollar gold piece will be presented to the person suggesting a suitable name for this, the youngest of Canadian publications. The contest closes December 6. The magazine will be issued four times during the year. Address all letters to Mr. Jack Holmes, Gazette Office, University of Western Ontario, London. The scope of the magazine is not in any way confined to the university that is sponsoring its appearance.

WOMEN SAVED TEACHING STATES U.C. PRINCIPAL

Professor Wallace Flays Teachers Who do not Know More Than Students

"Women have saved the teaching profession," stated Principal M. W. Wallace, at the 4th Vocational Conference last night in Wynniwood, "although more men are needed to make a permanent staff. Women drop off and get married."

Principal Wallace said that unless a person was very sure he advised them against the profession. "If you have been told you talk too much, consider it a sign of grace."

He also warned against the mechanical teacher. "Half the teachers in our Ontario High Schools don't know more Latin than their best students know."

Teaching, he thought, was to teach the imagination, to always keep one pace ahead. "And because you are a rational creature, you crave that your efforts have significance and I know of no better profession which fulfills this desire."

Miss Wilson of Oakwood Collegiate, formerly of a High School near Sheffield, England, gave an interesting talk of English schools. "Children enjoy school so much in England," she said.

College Spirit

There have been just three entries for the U.C. Assault, which is scheduled to take place on Thursday. The Athletic Director of the college has expressed chagrin and disappointment at the state of affairs.

CO-EDS ARE AGREED ON COLLEGE VALUE

Universities Do Not Fail In Educating Students, Say Women

INDIVIDUAL AT FAULT

Loud laughter was the first response to "The Varsity's" question: "Do our universities fail to educate?", and with out exception the answer was "No".

"The cause of an inadequate or faulty education lies in the individual rather than in the method; and universities fail to educate only those who do not want an education."

"The person who could get educated for example, Ramsay Macdonald, would find it easier here, because leisure for study is provided," said one III English and History co-ed.

"There is lots of enthusiasm in the university," protested Miss M. E. Wallace, III English and History. "The professors are chosen not for the number of degrees they can show, but for a combination of the scholar and the teacher. The academic reputation of a prospective professor is always looked into, and where possible a personal interview is arranged. However, a professor may be said to be proficient in certain subjects, at one university, and prove incapable at another—and there's the rub!"

Miss Clara Gray, IV U.C., had no doubts on the value of a university education. It has shown her how to work hard at her studies and how to rush from one executive meeting to another; but chiefly she has been educated in human nature—"Oh, mammal particularly its contrariness!"

"A university is rather necessary in a scientific course," was a Med's opinion. "You can't very well cut up rabbits at home!"

"No," was Miss R. Nevin's answer. "But in your work after graduating, the results don't repay you for all the trouble you go to."

The general opinion was that the cause of an inadequate or faulty education lies in the individual rather than in the method; and universities fail to educate only those who do not want an education.

Antics Afield

The eminent McGill Daily gets a line on the social whirl in a despatch from Oakland, California, where Police Chief Marshall has issued an edict to his men to stop them creeping upon parked automobiles with their flashlights to surprise innocent men and women innocently making love.

An account of a winning oration in a contest at the University of Kansas, published in the University Daily Kansan, pulls a hot one about the eternal six question. The winning orator, who proved to his own satisfaction that women are absolutely useless on the U.K. Campus, presented the argument that the average woman is so far superior to man as to occupy the same intellectual plane as Shakespeare, Plato, Dante or Schopenhauer, and consequently is no more at home in the modern practical, specialized scheme of university life than these estimable gentlemen would have been.

PROFESSOR DENIES UNFAIR ATTITUDE TO NOISY STUDENT

Disturber Was Merely Asked to Leave Lecture Room Quietly

NO VINDICTIVENESS

It Would be Impossible to Pluck a Particular Man Under Pseudonym

Professor F. B. Kenrick, of the department of chemistry, when interviewed yesterday by "The Varsity", stated that there was no truth in the statement that he intended to make it difficult for the student to get through examinations who had created a disturbance in his class on Friday last. The impression created by the story in yesterday's "Varsity", was that the professor intended to prevent the student from getting his year.

"That is absurd," stated Professor Kenrick. "No professor would endeavour to pluck a student on examinations for causing a disturbance in class. If a student became too annoying, the only course to take would be to eject him from the class and, if necessary, have him expelled from the university. Students write under pseudonym."

RADIO VALUELESS AT UNIVERSITY

Members of Faculty Think Use of Radio Cannot Replace Lecture Courses

GROUPS NECESSARY

The use of radio in universities as suggested by Dr. Bengt Atlee in MacLean's magazine, does not meet with much approval from the faculty of this university.

Mr. Glazebrook of the Department of History thought that Dr. Atlee's criticism was too general and sweeping, for it to concern any definite evil at universities and thought that the whole article could be better ignored than considered seriously.

"Radios and moving pictures illustrating a certain educational topic have been tried out and are still being given in England," Mr. Glazebrook stated, "But I doubt if a person who is the average age of university students would sit at the radio for an hour every night to listen to a lecture on some educational subject. If they did they certainly would not get the value out of a lecture that a student does who takes notes. After all it is the contact with people in which the university has its great value, and it is not like a factory, trying to put out a mass of products."

"As far as lectures in science subjects are concerned, generally speaking, the majority could not be successfully presented over the radio," said Mr. Loudon. "So often drawings and diagrams are needed to explain the lectures, and this fact would make lecture broadcasting impossible."

Mr. Loudon thought that Dr. Atlee's statement was much too general and ignored the fact that so many lectures require discussion groups which a radio programme would not give.

A student in third year Arts thought that the radio idea for lectures was ridiculous. This student laughed at the proposal of tuning in on a lecture in English or History when a good musical programme was being broadcast.

"It is crazy to think that an idea of this kind or even the reading of books could take the place of university life."

TO-MORROW'S FOUR DOLLARS

Once again we take a clear stand on a real issue of undergraduate government policy: not this time to deplore a decision which, however badly it has been made, is probably one with those of the Medes and Persians and shall not be broken, but to plead a case which will be decided, probably for all time, in the near future, for the permanent good or bad of the undergraduate body. If you be interested in anything other than the daily round of lectures and laboratories, if you, the governed, have any interest in your government, any of that spark of independence which, even in the middle ages made Englishmen refuse always to accept a dictum from high places, as you are indeed free men, hear our case.

The Finance Committee of the Joint Executive, having seen, with that penetrating perception which is theirs, that (the concern being out of debt and piling up a surplus) a four dollar fee is now more than ample to pay for the sort of "Torontonensis" which they wish to give you, speak of reducing the fee for the coming generation to its original amount of three dollars. The raising of the fee to four dollars, might we say here, was instituted some few years ago, by permission of the Board of Governors, to help get the Joint Executive out of debt. This getting out of debt was achieved not only by the increase of fee, but, as we have pointed out, by a frenzied niggardliness regarding "Torontonensis", which persists by sheer weight of custom to the present day, and also, a matter which we were disinclined to thrust before you, by downright stinginess regarding the "Varsity". This policy of poverty may have been justified in the past, and even with a three dollar fee, it may be in some measure modified in the future, but one fact remains. You and your immediate predecessors have paid for the sins of a past day, not only in a four dollar fee, but much more, in a nineteen-cent "Torontonensis". Now, when the debt is paid, are you willing to have your successors return to the scale of pre-war days. You have made a sacrifice; was it for the purpose of returning a dollar a year to the pockets of your successors? You have paid four dollars a year: ought not they to do the same? There is but one way to wipe out the memory of a nineteen cent "Torontonensis": that is by issuing a "Torontonensis" so excellent that it will be a repeated and glowing reflection of the wealth and excellence of the university. You gave four dollars to wipe out the debt of pre-war inefficiency; then let your successors, mindful of you, forever give four dollars to wipe out the sour taste of post-war stinginess.

Among the several things which distinguish a university in the land in the judgments alike of other universities and of the people, not the least are the publications of its undergraduates. Not least among those works by which the world judges us, are "The Varsity" and "Torontonensis". And it is an axiom which exceptions cannot shake, that given intelligent dealing, the more that is paid for an article, the better will that article be. Here is a university seated in one of the most opulent cities for its size in the world, in the centre of that country which increases in wealth and prosperity at a faster rate than any in the world: must, then, the students of this university, having become accustomed to pay four dollars to support their government, be niggardly. A dollar a year, the price of four packages of erment and its publications, now that the government too is proscigarettes, a dinner, or a bottle of native wine; this would be sufficient to give the university for years a real "Torontonensis". Have we no sentiment? Have we no pride?

As we said, this is a question not yet decided, a question which lies in the hands of your government, your representative government. We can only point to the question. If you have any care for the lustre of this, your university, any pride which is greater than the measure of a dollar, let your voice be heard.

Thanks!

Editor,
"The Varsity",
Dear Sir:
The executive of the Swimming and Water Polo Club desire me to express through "The Varsity" their keen appreciation of the support and interest displayed by the undergraduates in the opening game of the International Water Polo League.
Signed on behalf of the Executive,
Tom L. Marsh,
Secretary

Urges Wider Perspective

The Editor,
"The Varsity",
Dear Sir,—
Your issue of Nov. 29th, 1929, contains the opinions of an embryo philosopher who attempts to direct disparaging remarks toward the Faculties of Medicine, Dentistry and Applied Science.

Since when have the activities of scientists and medical men come to be regarded as those of "skilled mechanics"? Are men like Newton, Lord Kelvin and Pasteur not worthy of the association of a university? Or in the present day, is not the name of Dr. Banting one which reflects credit to an institution of this type? Are these men "skilled mechanics"?

Taking Mr. Fenelon's supposition that a liberal education enables one to use the opinions of more learned persons in formulating his own, does an education in applied science entail serious disadvantages in this respect? We sincerely hope that a broader outlook on life is developed that would enable one to consider a Faculty of Applied Science as a school for chauffeurs or a Medical Faculty as a butcher's training school.

It is to be hoped that four years of philosophy will enable Mr. Fenelon to view the activities of other colleges than his own in a true perspective.

Fourth Year S.P.S.

PLAN MODEL ASSEMBLY OF LEAGUE OF NATIONS

February 21st Named as Date
For Commencement of Sessions

A nation-wide gathering of the universities of Canada to a three-day session, at the University of Toronto, of a model assembly of the League of Nations, is planned for February 21st, 1930, by the committee of the general organization meeting.

A League of Nations Club, with officers elected in the open meeting, Thursday evening will take over the work of Miss Betty Lang's committee.

Canadian leaders, many of them active in the League, itself, are gladly supporting the students in thus demonstrating the workings of the League on a large scale at the University of Toronto.

Much depends on student support at the Thursday meeting.

The disadvantage of the dial system of telephoning is that you have to swear at yourself for not getting the right number.

It pays to keep your temper under all circumstances, and especially when smiling at a motorcycle cop's little witty sayings.

Professors should be divided into two great classes—and larned something—N.Y. Medley.

UPTOWN

The success of the bill at the Uptown this week is assured by the presence of Will Rogers in "They had to see Paris". Will Rogers in his talking screen debut, puts it across in great style in his own inimitable way as the Yankee from a small town who suddenly comes into money and at the request of his wife goes to Paris to give his children "background". If you want to know whether he gets the background or his children, you must see it for yourself and you are assured of a pleasant evening. "Colorhythm", with the Symphony Orchestra and the Uptown Girls, has its attractions and a good technicolour production, "The Doll House", includes some very good interpretative dancing.

W.F.P.

SHEA'S

Dancing is the keynote at Shea's this week, and strange to say, the dancing is both varied and good. Bill Robinson, that Black Cloud of Joy, is on the top of his form, tap dancing at the top of a stair case or showing how they do it down in Charleston. His representation of a mosquito is altogether too lifelike to be comfortable, even with three feet of snow on the ground. There is an unusual little act of Suburban Knights that would seem to indicate that when you build a dream house, it is not entirely composed of roses. Then Harry Howard with the "wolf of Wall Street" in the guise of a great black dog, and the Six Galenos with their lightning breath taking tumbling act completes a very entertaining vaudeville bill. "The Gamblers" is a picture portraying a Wall Street gambling romance where high finance and careers hang in the balance with love and beauty. In view of recent activities in the market, the picture is exceptionally appropriate.

PROFESSOR DENIES

denoms which makes it impossible for those correcting to distinguish their papers, but even if real names were used, no professor would mark a paper other than on its merits. As a matter of fact," he said, "there was very little disturbance created by the student in question. He left the room quietly upon request and the class continued as usual. I do not know who he is nor do I intend to inquire. As far as I am concerned the matter is closed. We shall let it drop." He ended by saying that if the student in question should come to see him some time he felt that they would have a very friendly conversation and that any possible misunderstanding would be removed.

Professor J. Satterley of the department of physics, was asked how he found discipline in his science lectures.

"On the whole," he said, "the discipline is remarkable, considering the size of the classes. There are bound to be a few disturbers in every large class. The only thing to do is to request them to leave. If they continue to create annoyance, one must make the class responsible. A class that is serious will soon find means of quelling those who are interfering with their work. It is the same as army discipline. The privates are disciplined for slight offences by the non-commissioned officers. The officers themselves merely hand the matter over to the N.C.O.'s to deal with, and remain in the background themselves.

When asked if he thought a professor would try to have an undesirable student plucked, he said: "No. The student would likely come back as a repeater. No professor wants repeaters. They are nuisances, always asking for favours on the strength of their work the year previous. Furthermore, if a student is undesirable, he is best removed from the university entirely so that he cannot come back."

"What of students being refused their results because of slight outstanding fines," we asked.

"Well," he said, "the university must have some means of collecting their fines, and what better way than this. I understand that at Cambridge even bills owing to tradesmen and like are handled by the university. If the student fails to pay his debts his results are withheld."

ALL QUIET ON THE FESTERN FRONT

Hour by hour my leave becomes shorter and the time for my departure draws nearer. As I sit and watch my lovely Dinkelsplink working for me I try not to think of the pain of our parting. She is knitting a suit of long woollen underwear for me to take back to the trenches. She is afraid that I shall be called away before it is finished and her busy needles flash in her skilful fingers.

C-C

But sometimes her eye wanders from her work and she stares out across the fields with tears glistening on her cheeks. At such times I am alarmed, for she is liable to spoil some of the suit. Only yesterday she became absent minded and knit two extra necks in the small of the back. At such times I speak softly to her and wipe away her tears with the tail of my shirt, and we fall upon each others necks and have a good cry.

C-C

How I dread my recall! It will be (*) to go back. I think of the bright cool mornings on the farm with the sweet song of the weidunks in my ears and the stimulating stench of the stables in my nostrils; and the warm sunny afternoons with Dinkelsplink by my side; and the nights—ah, the nights—Need I say more?

C-C

At last I am called away. I stand with my knapsack on my back containing my precious union suit. I have tied a towel around my neck so that Dinkelsplink can weep on my shoulder. She tearfully thrusts a package of cold tripe into my hands to munch on the way as I board the train. Her father has already pressed many good things upon me. He has put a paper bag full of stew into my knapsack, poured some potato salad into my coat pocket and hung a pound of black sausage from my watch chain. Such kindness makes me weep and as I wave farewell I promise to send them a little howitzer for a pct.

C-C

Poor little Dinkelsplink, shall I ever see her again? I bury my face into my union suit and sob hysterically. The conductor enters and I am thrown into the baggage car with some dogs. They are lousy and soon I begin to scratch. I feel at home again. I am a soldier, and this is war to the bitter end.

INTERCOLLEGIATE UNION ADOPTS FRESHMAN RULE IN MAJOR SPORTS

SPEAKING OF SPORT

School yesterday put on their mat and fist review and gave the other faculties a forcible illustration of college spirit. The list was large enough to necessitate the final skits being run off in the evening. To-day Meds stage their show, followed by U.C. and Vic.

The old story about U.C. Arn Cooke and Jimmy Jackson have been working on the heralded college assault, with a view to making the dream come true. To date Cooke's persuasive powers have inveigled three entrants. The list in the Junior Common Room is still open to-day and let us pray and hope that the boys of the liberal education keep Arn company.

International polo attests to the popularity of colourful international sport. The event on Saturday excited exceptionally wide comment and the attendance was especially gratifying to the executive. Six hundred people saw Varsity haul down the colours of the formidable Penn squad, and get away to a flying start. The Blue's next home game is on January 17th, when New York A.C. will be the guests. Incidentally the Manhattan poloists are all-American champions.

Coach McCutcheon has been working pretty hard during the past few weeks whipping the Blue basketball squad into a winning team. "Mac" has the boys playing a fast combination game that compares with the American game, and this year's tour should be a different story. McCutcheon announced the make-up of the squad yesterday. Horton, Davey, Riggs and Suiderman compose the forward line, with O'Leary jumping centre and Currie, Sakler, Cock and Don Wood guards.

Now the freshman rule is in for a try. McGill benefit by the disappearance of the four-year agreement in that Charlie Littlefield, twice captain of the Red and White, can again play next year. It is generally felt that the new agreement will make for better teams; each man in the big squad will have at least one season's experience in intercollegiate football, and the game will benefit thereby. In the case of Varsity, the Orphans especially stand to gain, and the intermediate and junior teams will also be strengthened by the addition of players of senior calibre ineligible to play in their fresh year. Western appears to be hard hit in the process of building up their team, and can no longer rely on new material that is specially imported.

S.P.S. LEAD SR. MEDS. IN WATER POLO FIXTURE

S.P.S. easily won over Sr. Meds. yesterday afternoon in a loosely played game of water polo by the score of 4-2. School are now the group winners and will play the winners of the Vic-Jr. S.P.S. game on Thursday. For the winners Alexander was by far the standout. He was all over the pool at all times. Davey in goal for Meds was very effective and kept the score from being any higher.

S.P.S.—Grant, Alexander, Ward, Gibbs, Boughton, Pierdon, Little, Puddy.

Sr. Meds.—Thompson, Dyble, Blackwell, Shortt, Brennan, Peacock, Irving, Jackson.

The next peace trip organized by Henry Ford should be one to Windsor, Ontario, to get the boys out of the hotels by Christmas.

C. I. A. U. MEETING DECIDES TO ADOPT FRESHMAN RULE

Four-Year Rule is Scrapped at Intercollegiate Parley at Montreal

ROWING RECOGNIZED

Queen's and Montreal to Enter Intercollegiate Hockey Next Year

The Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union, met at Montreal on Saturday, with an unusually heavy agenda before it. The most important agreement was the scrapping of the four-year rule and the adoption of the much discussed freshman regulation.

The four year rule was adopted in 1927 and during the past three years has been adversely criticized. The new regulation comes as a result of a lot of discussion, with hopes of working to the satisfaction of all concerned. Under this new agreement a student cannot play on the first team of a major sport until he has completed the first year of his course. Varsity brought up the question of the eligibility of a student who enters his second year arts with honour matriculation standing. The Union decided to refer the question to the board of Reference for a ruling.

Other matters discussed were of a routine nature. Queen's intimated that they would re-enter Intercollegiate hockey next year, and with the assured possibility of the University of Montreal doing likewise, the college loop will in all probability take on a new ease of active life next season.

Western's petition to enter the senior track meet was tabled for further consideration. Rowing was officially recognized as an Intercollegiate sport, and the title will likely be settled by Varsity and McGill at the Canadian Henley. The introduction of an inter-

U.C. WOMEN DEFEAT VIC 2-1 IN FINALS

University College won the women's intercollegiate baseball championship when they defeated Victoria by a 2-1 score last night in the U.T.S. gym.

The game was hard fought all the way through. Alice Tilley of Victoria, put her team out in front when she got the first run of the game in the second innings. The score was quickly evened by "Frankie" Dale, who came in from third on a passed ball, making a beautiful slide. Helen McKinley scored U.C.'s other run in the next frame, and that was the last of the scoring.

Both Marion Shaidle and Daisy Quance pitched good ball, the U.C. pitcher getting 15 strikeouts in seven innings, while Daisy Quance fanned 12 in six innings. U.C. did not require their half of the seventh. Daisy Quance was right in there all the time in spite of the fact that she had a very sore arm.

Victoria's rallied in the seventh, clouting four hits off Marion Shaidle, but they ran in very tough luck with two close decisions against them at the plate.

Some of the rooters did not show either good sportsmanship or good manners. If Varsity men cannot refrain from booing and hissing at officials and players, the sooner they stop coming to the women's games the better.

mediate tennis tournament was also considered, but no action was taken. A possible re-grouping of intermediate football was discussed. The plan was to arrange for just two groups, an eastern and western division in place of the present three.

The next meeting of the C.I.A.U. will probably be convened early in the coming year when business left will be finished up.

BULLETIN BOARD

going tough for the opposing goalkeepers. Herb Little and Ames are the leading candidates for the net-minding jobs. Three alternates are allowed under the O.H.A. rules this year and these will be picked from war and Laing, with the first three Murray and Marshall, Billy Bell, Deas the best bets. However, every man will get a chance to show his wares in the S.P.A. series. The coaching duties are, of course, in the hands of "Red" Porter, who is on the way to making as big a name for himself in this line as he did in the playing end. The intermediates have rounded out another strong aggregation. They will form the attraction in the opening of the new arena at Belleville next Friday night when they hook up with Queen's intermediates. Several members of last year's squad are back, including Rog Clute, Bill Leake, Everett, Graham and McMillan. In addition, several promising newcomers have turned out.

Although beaten in the S.P.A. junior series, the juniors look good enough to go a long way in the O.H.A. They face a longer grind than last year, having twelve scheduled games to play. Also the opposition is going to be mighty strong, but the blue "kids" will take a lot of beating. They have one of the strongest defences in junior hockey in Levinsky and Smillie, and are also well fixed for front line men with Brant, Hetherington and Bennet of last year's team, and Crerar, Cunningham, Magladeroy and Hodgetts. They play their first game in the Big Four group at the end of next week.

UNANIMOUS DECISION IS MADE TO CONTINUE U.C. LIT. SOCIETY

Motion Suggesting a Change
To Social Organization Is Defeated

TORRID DEBATE

College Spirit is Lacking Is Charge of Some Members

The motion, "Resolved that in view of present conditions University College Literary and Athletic Society should be abolished", was unanimously defeated last night in the debate at the university literary society meeting.

"The only functions of the society that are really carried out are the social functions," said C. H. Jermy, IV U.C., the first affirmative speaker. He pointed out that out of a membership of seven hundred, only thirty-two were at the present meeting. "The average member," he continued in a somewhat humorous manner, "doesn't care whether there is a society or not as long as he secures tickets through the society to university functions." Mr. Jermy proposed that the Literary and Athletic Society be abolished and a purely social society be formed.

W. P. Walker, II Political Science, of the negative side, rose and stated, "The extinction of the society is neither warranted nor justified by present conditions, because abolition of the Lit. would be a step towards disunion by students. 'That the society acted efficiently,' he said, 'was shown by the huge success of the Follies and other functions. The society provides a training ground,' he concluded, 'for university athletes and Hart House craters.'

The second speaker for the affirmative, J. T. Jackson, IV U.C., cited instances of disinterest in athletic activities in University College. He said that one man had to play four games in one day. "The Literary and Athletic Society can show no value to a freshman," he stated. "University College has life to it, but it doesn't express itself in the Literary and Athletic Society."

"The aims and objects of the society are worthy. There are seventy-five years of events behind the Lit," said L. T. Tarshis, last speaker for the negative. "Attendance at meetings is indicative of the society. University (Continued on page 4)

MISS WOOKEY SPEAKS TO U.C. WOMEN'S LIT.

"Tension and excitement caused a riot in the theatre—chairs were broken up and thrown at the actors," said Miss Wookey, speaking of the production of Sean O'Casey's "The Plough and the Stars", at the U.C. Women's Literary Society, which met Tuesday evening at the Women's Union. In the absence of Dr. F. C. Green, who was to have given a paper on Proust, Miss Wookey kindly consented to speak.

"The scene of 'The Plough and the Stars' is laid in a Dublin tenement house, and the time is that of the Sinn Féin rebellion, which accounts for the theatre riot," continued the speaker. The play is hilariously funny and pathetically tragic in turn.

Sketches from John Millington Synge's "The Shadow of the Glen", another typically Irish play, and a brief resume of a scene from George Bernard Shaw's "Major Barbara" followed.

A lively discussion of the three dramatists took place, after which refreshments were served.

"Varsity" Elections

At the staff elections of "The Varsity" yesterday afternoon in the Women's Union, Mr. L. L. L. Golden, of the fourth year, University College, won the official nomination for the position of editor-in-chief, succeeding Mr. N. J. DeWitt, who is resigning. Mr. W. F. Payton, of the third year, University College, and a resident of Wycliffe, was elected managing editor. Mr. Golden is at present associate editor, and Mr. Payton is now managing editor, and hence, re-elected.

Miss Grace Macaulay, of the fourth year, University College, at present assistant women's news editor, was elected women's editor by acclamation, to succeed Miss Lois Girvan, who is also resigning.

Miss Clara Gray, women's news editor, also announced her retirement.

These new officials will assume office with the Easter term.

UNIVERSITY IS SAID TO BE REACTIONARY

Socialism Is In Evidence in Western Canada Says
J. G. Armitage

FABIUS CLUB MEETING

Suggesting that Toronto magistrates were preparing for trouble in the future as the result of a policy of repression pursued in the past, John G. Armitage, Australian novelist and former labour member of the Australian house, predicted that the class struggle would make itself felt in Toronto this winter.

Mr. Armitage, who has been in Canada for some time, was the guest speaker of the Fabius Club at the Women's Union last night. He chose as the subject of his address, "Is Socialism a Failure?"

Seven months spent in the United States failed to reveal the slightest traces of socialism. "I looked for socialist legislation there, but I did not find any. We only have to look at what is going on there to observe that as far as legislation is concerned, the mass of the people are unprotected." In evidence of this contention, he mentioned the recent strikes in the south. In British Columbia, Alberta, and Saskatchewan, I found traces of socialist legislation. I believe I can say that the wheat pool which is a credit to Canada, was fostered by the old Socialistic Party.

"In the university I found some professors very advanced in thought; however, my general opinion of the University of Toronto is that it is somewhat reactionary."

In conclusion, Mr. Armitage stated, "I believe socialism by force futile in the extreme, but I think that in socialism, and the spread of socialistic thought, lies the future of our present civilization."

WIDELY DIVERGENT VIEWS DISCOVERED ON FEES FOR S.A.C.

Willing To Pay Extra Dollar
In Order to Ensure Good Publication

S.A.C. FEE POPULAR

School Man Thinks Efficiency
Would Produce a Good Torontoensis

Whether or not the four dollar fee levied by the S.A.C. should be reduced to three dollars, is a question on which undergraduate opinion is emphatically divided.

"If the resumption of a $3.00 fee will lower the standard of the Torontoensis, I am opposed to it," said G. Masters, III U.C. "Over a period of a year, the student does not miss the extra dollar, but we would certainly be disappointed if we had to carry away with us when we graduated a 'nineteen cent' Torontoensis." G. F. Barry, I C. & F. offered the same opinion.

Supporting the change to the lower fee, D. Smith, I S.P.S., stated that "If there was more efficiency and less mismanagement, a good Torontoensis could be brought out on a $3.00 fee. The fee used to be $3.00 and the Torontoensis was of a high standard. The S.A.C. reports a surplus, then why the extra dollar?"

Many undergraduates when questioned by "The Varsity", offered opinions, but refused to divulge their names. The general opinion, however, was that a $4.00 fee was satisfactory if a $3.00 fee was not sufficient to bring out a good Torontoensis. That extra dollar would not be missed.

NEW UNIVERSITY CLUB INSTITUTED

Community Club Organized
By Social Science
Members

TO DISCUSS CHILD LABOR

Are women interested in matters of political and social concern? An enquiring "Varsity" reporter some weeks ago gained the impression on the campus that they were not. To this the students of the social science department, who are predominantly women, have answered that the reporter was wrong, by the formation of a Community Club expressly for the consideration of social and political issues.

The purpose of the club, more directly, is to provide a forum for the discussion of such problems as juvenile delinquency, the treatment of prisoners in penitentiaries, child labour, immigration and the education of the mentally retarded.

The first meeting of the club will be held on Thursday, December 5th, when Miss Florence Goddard will give the address on the Organization of Social Work in Northern Ontario. Mr. D. B. Harkness will lead the discussion. This first meeting will be a closed one, but the club plans to have a number of open meetings to which all members of the university are invited.

The interest shown in the Political Club which held a number of meetings prior to the provincial elections, was the nucleus for the formation of this Professor Urwick when interviewed.

"I think the formation of such a club a most excellent idea, and I shall be glad to assist the club committee." (Continued on page 4)

FRATERNITIES DENY THEIR FUNCTION TO FOSTER MARRIAGE

Rugby Captain Does Not Belong to Sorority So Cannot Decide

CO-ED'S FAMILY ADVISES

Meds Student Thinks Idea
Is Good One and Should Be Tried

The sorority sisters and fraternity brothers of Toronto are emphatic in denying that their respective organizations are used as "matrimonial clearing houses", so "The Varsity" learned on interviewing their various members.

"I can't think after five o'clock. School's out then. I don't belong to a sorority so I can't speak for them, but I've never seen a sorority sister hanging around the Sigma Chi house looking for a man." So spoke George Morgan, Dents.

"It is absolutely ridiculous," protested Hilda Daley, III U.C., "No one has that idea at all. Where did it come from anyway? It is an incidental fact and not a fundamental one that sorority girls get the fraternity men."

Al Contway, II Meds, never reads the "antics afield", but said "there are more ways of killing a cat than by poisoning. Fraternities aren't used as matrimonial bureaus, but during the winter the Varsity Stadium is, and up there it is imperative to speak the language."

Ken Brandon, IV Meds, answered, "It is a charming idea and has its possibilities, though I've never been able to use any of the matrimonial opportunities that our fraternity offers."

"I don't like the idea and it's not entirely true," said Leslie Leitch, IV Dents. "Many girls who don't belong to sororities get fraternity men. Often a sorority sister marries a fraternity man."

"Oh, I wouldn't say that, but I've really been too busy to take much notice. I don't think there is anything to warrant the statement," said Oliver Baillie, III Meds.

Kay Gillies, III Household Science, thinks that "sororities aren't for that purpose at all. Why, the same girls might be married whether they belonged to sororities or not. I'm really not much help, but I don't think they have much to do with matrimony."

While the reporter held the line, Marion Orr, II Household Science consulted with her family on the subject, and finally decided that it was "food for thought."

The library of a friend of Dr. Locke's is made up of one yard of George Eliot, four yards of Charles Dickens, several yards of other authors, all bound to carry out the colour scheme. The Great Hall at Hart House was taxed to its utmost when S.P.S. held their fortieth annual dinner last night. Never has Hart House seen such a capacity crowd at a banquet. The Great Hall was filled to overflowing. The overflow was accommodated in the faculty dining room upstairs and it too was taxed to its capacity.

School has always been noted for its spirit. It certainly was prominent last night. Toke Oakes and the Hymn of the Innumerable Demolishable Beers shook the rafters at periodic intervals. An orchestra of first year School men supplied music hot enough to burn.

It is estimated that there were between four and six hundred men at the banquet, quite an increase from the first annual school banquet held in 1889, when the attendance was fifty two persons. It was by far the largest banquet in the history of S.P.S.

At the conclusion of the sumptuous repast the customary toast was proposed to the King, followed by a vigorous "Toronto".

The university, the faculty, the profession and the sister societies were then toasted in turn. Sir Robert Falconer replied to the toast to "Our University." He remarked that judging by their songs, S.P.S. men must combine the virtues of modesty, learning and piety. He also proudly referred to the years of tradition behind S.P.S. and our university.

Dean Mitchell, in replying to the toast to the faculty, remarked, "S.P.S. has taken an active part in university affairs for 40 years. We are now pressing on a new age. Attendance is increasing. We are building for the industrial future of the country. Furthermore, the method followed in this faculty tends to produce men of top rank in this country."

The toast to the sister societies was proposed by D. DeF. Bayly, and replied to by representatives from O.A.C., Queen's, and McGill.

The main speakers of the evening were Rev. Canon H. J. Cody and Lt. Col. J. B. MacLean.

In exhort Canon Cody said, "Forty years ago the School was the most en-

"The soul is the greatest thing in the world," stated Mr. Bonsall, V, Knox, president of T.I.C.C.U., at the regular weekly prayer meeting in Wymilwood yesterday afternoon. It is individual work which counts the most in winning souls, rather than in evangelical meetings. We have to have a conviction brought to a climax before a definite decision on the soul.

"I think it is very hard for a minister to get right down into a working man's position," stated Miss David, IV Philosophy, vice-president of the T.I.C.C.U. "The minister is sometimes too professional and usually never becomes well known to people in general. If in trouble I would not always go to a minister and outside of my family, from which I first seek the right thing to do, I always go to some personal (Continued on page 3)

From the wilds of Boston comes an announcement, published in the M. I. T. Tech, of the conventional atmosphere of the University of Detroit, where the fifty co-eds are forbidden from holding converse with any male student at any time or place on the campus.

The Roumanian correspondent of the University of Washington Daily reports the failure of plans to give young King Michael a democratic education by sending him to a special school picked fellow students from the lower classes. His Majesty vigorously defended his unofficial title of Fighting Mike by proceeding to beat up his class-mates, and the school had to be offered condolences to Mr. Leslie.

MORE COATS STOLEN FROM HART HOUSE

While Toronto suffers from a flu epidemic Hart House is still in the throes of a hat and coat stealing epidemic. K. G. Partridge is the newest patient reported. Partridge claims that while in Hart House he missed his hat and coat. At 10.40 p.m. last night he left a brown fedora and a blue coat near the Warden's door on the hangers located there, secure in the belief that due to the closeness of the office, from which law and order comes forth, he would find his belongings safe on his return. But, alas, he found that some knave had played him false. For instead of finding one hat and coat, he found—nothing. Accordingly he had to journey to Brampton to get another and in cold weather. At time of press a new victim is reported. L. Leslie of "The Varsity" staff reports that while in University College on important business, someone pilfered his pockets. We also offer condolences to Mr. Leslie.

O CANADA

Timeo Danaos et dona ferentes

Of the many inscrutable mysteries which abound in university life, the most affecting, in the estimation of the present writer, is the boundless glee which bursts forth when it is announced that some scholarship is going to take one or two of the ablest and most outstanding men on the campus and send them abroad where an exotic culture and ideals in certain respects different from our own hold sway.

And moreover, when it comes time to travel for purposes generally known as "broadening" or "cultural", our students are herded across the Atlantic by transportation companies and travel clubs, of whom the companies are admittedly out for business and the clubs allegedly altruistic.

Now, we examine the will of the late Cecil Rhodes, father of the famous scholarships, and we find a direct statement that his money was to bring colonial students to Oxford, that they might drink Pierian springs in the motherland with a dose of imperialism slyly added. In this connection we referred above to an "erotic culture". The truth of this must be obvious, for were the culture beneath the great grey skies identical with that popular in Halifax, Winnipeg, Saskatoon, Vancouver, and Owen Sound, the existence of scholarships would be pointless.

Then we return to the travel clubs. We find the largest advertised "under the auspices of the Government of the Dominion of New Zealand, the Government of Newfoundland" and provincial departments of education. The Government of the Dominion of Canada is a conspicuous omission, one notes, while New Zealand and Newfoundland, of unimpeachable imperial faith, are included. More, this society has honorary vice-presidents in the persons of Lord Plumer, and that enthusiastic Dominion-tourer and champion of invisible ties, Colonel Amery.

The imperialism of Rhodes, and we suspect, of Amery, is not one that gives something for nothing; it is one that takes raw materials and hands back manufactured articles to the colonies; it is not the strong, tacit, understanding that now binds equal nations of a great race. The old-time imperialism was strictly business, and the empire no boy scout troop; yet it is under the auspices of this ideal that some of our best men go abroad. And, in spite of it, there can be no violent objections to such a procedure, provided all concerned have no illusions. Nor can it be denied, with a complete acceptance of results, that a good work is done.

Yet we can think of a better work. Let some trust send our better students, the recognized leaders, to the Yukon, to the Peace River, to the frontiers of our new Canadian empire; let them learn and know their own people in Vancouver, Toronto, Quebec, Charlottetown and Moosomin, Sask. We can think of no better organizations for this purpose than our railways and the more or less inactive Federation of Canadian University Students; the former already lean towards benevolence in music festivals and the like, while the latter could make a big thing out of a couple of well-chaperoned special trains, and at the same time demonstrate that it really has a purpose.

Moreover, we would recommend that the energy now devoted to the celebration of bestowal of awards which are partially propaganda be applied to bringing students to this university, which, at the same time, should be made and recognized to be an institution of unqualified eminence. More, as Canadians, we suggest that some local imperialist create a fund to bring smart young Oxford graduates out here to the colonies, and allow them to take our third and fourth year before giving them a B.A.

AD NOT JUSTIFIED

The advertisement of the Overseas Education League, which formed the back page of Tuesday's "Varsity" did not meet with the approval of the general public. Gerry Gray, a graduate of '29, said, "he would not want to take the blame for a page like that." And Agnes Jamieson thought "Tuesday's 'Varsity' would be a good copy to send to one's family."

However, Dorothy Moir, when interviewed by "The Varsity", did not see why "there should not be enough news for the paper without filling it up with advertisements", and went on to say that "the editor must have got lazy."

VICTORIA BEATS ST. MIKE'S 25-15 IN BASKETBALL GROUP FINAL

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Vics win from St. Mike's concluded the group fixtures in the women's basketball league. Vic now meets U.C. in the first interfaculty game, St. Hilda's having drawn the bye.

***

U.C. wrestled the women's interfaculty baseball championship from Vic on Monday night. Vic, who were the champions last year, put up a stiff fight, keeping the score to 2-1.

***

The unsportsmanlike attitude of several men watching the game found voice in booing and hissing both players and umpire. If this is the best behaviour they can show, their presence at women's games is highly undesirable.

***

Willie Ann Luckett of St. Michael's, came first and Edith Blackwell second in the free shot contest at the west end Y.W.C.A. on Saturday. The winning score was 13 out of 20 and the runner-up just one less. The Varsity girls shot girls' rule successfully against others using the men's rule game.

***

In spite of the loyal support of many of the women and their friends, the profit from the W.A.A. theatre night a week ago left much to be desired. The amount cleared was less than half that which had been set up as a goal.

VIC ASSAULT

The following are the entries received to date in the Vic assault which is being held to-night in the Hart House gymnasium at 7:30 p.m.

Entries may be handed in up to the time of meet. All Vic men are urged to turn out and give the boys a good hand. There is much promising material in the above entries and many good bouts are expected.

Admission is free.

U.C. FRESHIES LOSE

Both Occupational Therapy and U.C. Freshies put up a good fight in their last league basketball game at U.T.S. gym last night, which resulted in a win of 22 to 16 for Occupational Therapy.

Up to half time the teams were even with a score of 8-8. In the latter half, however, although the Freshies worked hard, their opponents had the edge of the play. Annie Ramm proved to be very speedy for U.C., but the winners had a superior forward line composed of Dorothy Burton and Isobel Adams, while their guard, Rae White, displayed good interception.

U.C. Freshies—Forwards, Ruth Snure, Annie Ramm; guards, Dorothy Wilson, Margery Wright; centres, Audrey Coleman, Muriel Atkin.

Occupational Therapy—Forwards, Dorothy Burton, Gertrude Ellis; guards, Rae White, Joy McLaren; centres, Marion Gibson, Isobel Adams. Subs, Eileen Cover, Edythe McNeill.

ST. MICHAEL'S WOMEN BEATEN BY VICTORIA

Senior Victoria won the right to enter the semi-final round of the women's interfaculty basketball tournament when they defeated St. Michael's girls' team last night by a score of 25-15. In the first half Vic had much the better of the play and were leading at the interval 14-6. St. Mike's profited by the rest and came back strong. Vic had to play hard to hold their lead. Vic seemed comparatively sure of themselves, passing the ball with a speed which St. Mike's could not duplicate, except for a few times when they showed a rare turn of speed.

For Vic, Norma Bateman stood out particularly and she is a real prospect for the intercollegiate team if she can be persuaded to abandon hockey.

Eleanor Sedgewick on the forward line was high scorer for the evening, notching 12 points. She also played a great game, paving the way for most of Vic's scores.

It is rather unfair to Vic to pick stars, for the whole team played a good game.

For St. Michael's, Loretto McGarry, jumping centre, was good, while Victoria Quinlan and Olive Macklin tried hard all the way and were shooting fairly well. St. Michael's are deserving of great credit as this is the first year that they have been a real threat for a long time.

Vic—Helen Hilliard, Willa Mahoney, forwards; Eleanor Sedgewick, side centre; Marie Lauder, Norma Bateman, guards.

St. Mike's—Olive Macklin, Willie Ann Luckett, forwards; Victoria Quinlan, side centre; Loretto McGarry, jumping centre; Eileen Harrison, Pauline Bondy, guards.

By reason of their victory over St. Michael's last night, Vic now enter the finals with U.C. juniors and St. Hilda's. St. Hilda's were lucky enough to get the bye, which means that U.C. and Vic play off in a two-game series, beginning Thursday night. The second game will be played next Tuesday night. Total points on the round are to count. The date of the finals has not yet been set, as it is not yet known when Hart House will be available.

PROMISING ATHLETES AT MEDICAL ASSAULT

Boxers and Wrestlers Display Wares in Convincing Manner

The boxing room was filled by the attendance at the Medical assault at arms. Many interesting and amusing bouts were featured. Moffat and Lowry seem like promising material for the interfaculty boxing, and Cameron and Fletcher exhibited some nice wrestling in their respective weights to win over Regan and Wilson. Allen came in strong at the finish to win from Cullinan by a technical K.O.

To-morrow evening the final bouts in the 160 lb. and heavy classes will be finished at 5:15 p.m. when Prott will meet Moffat, and Jim Scott will meet Baldwin in the heavy.

The results were as follows:

WRESTLING

125—Robertson I, defeated Thomas, III.
145—Fletcher, II, defeated Wilson, IV.
160—Cameron, II, defeated Rogon, III.

BOXING

135—Lowry, I, defeated Dunsmore, II.
160—Moffat, IV, defeated Parsons, VI.
175—Allen V, defeated Culham, II. (tech. K.O.)
Heavyweight—Baldwin III, defeated Christie IV.

friend on whom I have depended for help. As students we have a greater influence on our fellow students in helping them with their daily difficulties, than a minister. With this in view we shall all try to do the most good we can amongst our fellow students every day.

The president continued his address, taking his topics and questions from C. G. Trumbull's book, "Taking Men Alive". "There are two ways that man can be taken alive—all men are taken alive by God and some by Satan. As far as will is concerned there has to be a definite transaction before a decision is reached."

On taking up the question of "Salvation", Miss David said that salvation can be used in several ways if you are going to have divine life. Salvation often comes to a drunkard's spirit and soul whose attitude in life is suddenly changed, his spirit and soul is changed. He is so disgusted with himself that he sees the immediate need of salvation.

Mr. Bonsall asked the group if they knew the striking fact in Christ's ministry in soul winning. Mr. Hart-Davies, Wyckoff, replied that it was when Jesus met Peter and Andrew. He said it was more than likely that the two brothers were in contact before the miraculous fishing incident.

Miss David said, "It was easy to pray in public, but individual work is hardest, because Satan is after it. He is working against that individual work which means the most in soul winning."

WOMEN TO CELEBRATE

Next Wednesday a collection of young persons, newly arrived at that state, will celebrate the fact that they have at last been admitted into that category. They will gather at Annesley Hall.

After assimilating a chicken dinner they will listen to an exposition of the legal processes through which they became persons.

Miss Grace Hunter, prominent in legal circles, will probably be present to explain the recent ruling of the privy council in England, through which members of the weaker sex, so called, were held to be "persons". Judge Emily Murphy fought for this right through all the courts in Canada, and carried the claim to the highest authority in England.

The new status has little apparent effect. No one has been found who admits a change in manner of living, appearance, or way of thinking, traceable to the ruling.

The consensus gleaned in an interview went something like this:

"Does being a person make you feel differently?" asked "The Varsity".

"I always thought I was a person," the subject answered.

"Did you know any persons before you became one?"

"Well, I heard certain individuals referred to as 'that person', or 'this person'."

"Do you feel that you are 'that person' or 'this person'?"

"I don't know. Please stop annoying me. I'm busy."

Special in "The Varsity"

Minneapolis, Minn.—"The music of the future," said Alfred Cortot, distinguished French pianist recently in Minneapolis, "will be set forth more and more by means of mechanical instruments. Artists and interpreters, will find it increasingly difficult to make a living."

Cortot believes that the radio, phonograph, and other reproducing machines, will bring about this dearth of concert musicians. "Possibly composers," he thinks, "will themselves record their creations through some mysterious medium. Maybe the product will be labelled 'From Composer Direct to Consumer; No Human Hands Have Touched This Commodity!'"

This prophecy coming direct from Cortot is particularly interesting, because he, himself, has made many records. He has even been heard in joint recitals with himself—his other self being his records for pianos. Of course Cortot recognizes that there is that something in the make-up of an artist which enables him to speak his own accents.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lismer were the dinner guests of Miss Kilpatrick at the Women's Union last evening. After the dinner Mr. Lismer gave the students present a much appreciated explanation of the charm of the pictures hung in the dining room of the Union.

UNCLE NED

Dear Uncle Ned,

What is your idea of the height of incongruity?

ADELE HEDDED

Dear Adele,
The height of incongruity, in my opinion, is a Rhodes scholar with a size 6 hat, or perhaps H. L. Mencken occupying the chair of Dogmatics at Des Moines University. Maybe co-eds and flannel underwear would fill the bill.

UNCLE NED

Dear Uncle Ned,

Would you please tell me what the following quotations mean:

1. Pax in bello
2. De gustibus non disputandum
3. Arma virumque cano
4. Eheu fugaces, Pastume, Postume
5. Nuda genu.

P. DANTIC

Dear Mr. Dantic,

Professor Nowall gives the following translations for your quotations:

1. Freedom from indigestion
2. You mustn't argue in a high wind
3. Arms and the man ean—oh!

(The opening lines of a traditional flapper hunting song.)
4. Alas, you're all split, Postum, my Postum!

5. Stockings rolled.

The Professor will be glad to interpret any other quotations for readers.

When in danger, doubt, sipid, or sane, write Uncle Ned, care of "The Varsity", Hart House. He will be glad to advise you or help you.

BULLETIN BOARD

The U.C. Players' Guild will present their evening production for the fall term both to-night and to-morrow night at 8.30. The play is Masefield's "Melloney Holtspur" and is directed by Mr. Raymond Card.

Mr. Campbell McGinnis will be in charge of the next W.U.A. musicale for U.C. women, on Sunday, Dec. 8, from 4 to 5 p.m. at the Union.

All University College students, particularly those studying modern languages, and graduates in those studies, are invited to the faculty tea in Croft Chapter House to-morrow afternoon. Mrs. Jeanneret and Mrs. Needler will receive.

The Oriental Association will hold its first meeting of the year at the Wycliffe College library to-day at 4 o'clock. A paper will be read by Lou Golden, on "The Utility of an Historical Study of the Ancient Orient to the Modern Student". Refreshments will be served. The invitation is extended to all those interested in Oriental Studies.

U. of T. CHESS CLUB

There will be a meeting of the University Chess Club on Thursday, Dec. 5, in the South Common Room, Hart House, at 8 p.m. The Major and Minor Tournaments will hold their third session. As this may be the last meeting of the term all participants in the tournaments are urgently advised to turn out. All chess enthusiasts are cordially invited.

GRADUATING CLASSES

All members of the graduating years must have their Torontonensis Biography in the hands of the editor by Dec. 10th. Get your Biography forms from the Torontonensis representative or your year executive. Graduation photos must also be taken by this date.

3T0 VICTORIA

All members of 3T0 Victoria are asked to see the notices in the college bulletin re Torontonensis biography cards. These cards must be filled out and handed in by Dec. 10, so it is important that every person attend to his at once.

U.C. 3T0 MEN

Will all 3T0 men in U.C., who have not got Torontonensis biography cards please call at Room B, Hart House, between the hours of 2 and 4 this afternoon. These biographies have to be written before the 10th, so your co-operation is essential.

MODEL ASSEMBLY OF LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Will all interested in the model assembly of the League of Nations be present at Wymilwood on Thursday, Dec. 5, at 7.15 sharp. The committee appointed at the last general meeting will report and make recommendations as to the constitution.

VICTORIA

Those who desire tickets for the Hart House musicale on Sunday, Dec. 8, should sign the lists in the college from 1 to 2 on Wednesday.

PHYSICS SEMINAR

The Seminar will be held to-morrow in Room 43 at 4.15 p.m. Subjects to be discussed: Electrical Circulation and the Possible Structure of the Plasma Membrane; Electron Collisions with Molecules and Resultant Quantum Losses.

JUNIOR INTERFACULTY ASSAULT

The junior interfaculty assault will be held on Dec. 11 and 12. Following the junior assault P.T. attendance for boxing and wrestling will be given only to those who compete in the assault.

WATER POLO

The Varsity water polo team will meet Central Y in a City League game in Hart House pool to-night at 8.30. All the players are requested to be on hand in good time.

SLIPPERY SIDEWALK IS NO EXCUSE FOR STUDENT'S FALL

Few Unsafe Spots on Campus
Says Colonel LePan
Apropos of Ice

PLDUGHING IN THE DAWN

Correspondent's Protests Are Answered by Voice of Authority

In the correspondence columns of yesterday's "Varsity" there were two short letters, both demands for reform.

The first had to do with the tale of a student who came to grief on a slippery sidewalk somewhere west of Hart House.

When Col. LePan, Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds, was interviewed on the subject his remarks were, "If an inspection of the sidewalks around the campus were made, it would be found that on the whole the walks are fairly clean and sanded where there is ice or snow."

The morning after the big snowstorm the men were out with the snow plough at half past five. Most of the walks are well sanded and very few bad slippery places can be found. There is very little danger of students even falling, let alone being seriously hurt.

The other letter was a protest at the length of time the wreaths are left on the memorial tablets after Armistice Day.

Again we quote Col. LePan, who tells us: "Our policy in regard to this matter is that the caretaker of University College is given orders to remove the wreaths as they become faded. This is the plan in operation at the present time. As long as the wreaths do not become faded they often remain in place for two or three weeks after they were placed there."

SMITHS AND JONES ATTEND U. OF T.

He Who Steals My Purse, Steals
Trash, but He Who Steals
My Name—

Out of 6,617 students at the University of Toronto there are 69 Smiths and two who prefer to spell it Smyth; yet the faculties of Forestry, Music, Social Science, Public Health Nursing, and Physiotherapy haven't one Smith between them. The Joneses are far outclassed, there being only 7 in the whole Arts Faculty, and 21 in the University; Meds, with 762 students, can't boast of a single Jones, much less a married one.

Anyone at Knox who tried to phone some unknown by the name of 'Mac' would need to equip himself with $19.25 in nickels, as there are altogether 385 Mes and Macs enrolled, with McDonalds, MacDonalds and Macdonalds in the majority.

The names range all the way from Abbot to Zwig, including Bauleh, Christlaw, Danuik, Eplett, Fraido, Goodenough, Higginbottom, Ingmundson, Jupp, Kemkes, Lautenslager, Mel-drum, Nafitfin, Orok, Perekut, Quance, Rehms, Slemin, Terrassa, Ulen, Vyvyan, Wagar and Yoerger. There are no X's.

League of Nations Club

The officers of the League of Nations Club of the University of Toronto, will be elected at to-night's meeting in Wymilwood at 7.15. This club will handle the Model Assembly of the League.

Christmas Issue

The next Literary Section of "The Varsity" will be included in the Christmas issue to be published on Monday, December 16. For this issue the judges announce awards totalling $25, of which $15 will be provided by the Literary and Debates Committee and $10 by the regular prize budget of "The Varsity".

A prize of $3 will be awarded for the best sketch or line drawing of a scene on the university campus, and the same for a sketch or line drawing of any scene.

Further announcements will be made on Friday. All contributions must reach the judges by 5 p.m. Thursday, December 12.

While in England the personality girl will christen a new freighter, "The Thorold", which is being built on the Ontario Paper Mills.

Miss Battle will be accompanied by her sister, Miss Regina Battle. The prize winner is registered in the second year of the course in Modern Languages.

MORAL FIBRE OF NATION MUST BE WOVEN WELL

Mr. Golden Expounds on Value of Ancient to the Modern

"A people is as strong as its weakest link," said Mr. Lou Golden to the Oriental Association, in his talk on "The Utility of an Historical Study of the Ancient Orient to the Modern Student" at Wyke College yesterday afternoon. "The moral fibre of very nation must be strong, else the kingdom cannot last."

"People cannot be forced into anything. It is the slow process of tedious teaching that makes a people change. When Alexander conquered Greece, he changed the superficial things, but the people remained Greek at heart."

'Ooooooh!' Says Dick

The University of Toronto Press was invaded last night by three generations of Women's Editors of "The Varsity". The grandmother of the flock was Eve Powell, who was Women's Editor of the paper for the year 1927-28. The more juvenile members of the party were Miss Powell's immediate successors, Miss Helen Allen and Miss Lois Girvan. The three veterans assumed entire charge of the paper for the night.

During the evening many present members of the staff were taken on a personally conducted tour of the Press and night work was explained to them. Tales of nocturnal journalism roused the horror of the probationers, but they were soothed by the small tokens which were given away in return for votes at the next Hart House election.

Members of the technical staff endured the invasion nobly. Their opinion of the situation, carefully expurgated, appears at the head of this article.

BIRDS IN BEHRING STRAITS

Major Brooks Makes Drawings
Because of Impermanence of Live Specimens

Mrs. Jonathon Dwight of New York City, has recently given the Museum of Zoology a large and valuable collection of technical illustrations of birds from the collection of her late husband, who was a well-known ornithologist, and past president of the American Ornithologists' Union. The collection comprises 210 coloured drawings of the feet and bills of birds. The local colour of the parts disappear rapidly in specimens and records can only be kept in this manner. They are the work of Major Allen Brooks, the Canadian artist and ornithologist, and although some of the drawings were made several years ago, the collection as a whole is up to the standard of work by this eminent artist. The collection will be placed on exhibit in the Zoological Gallery for a short time.

The Museum of Zoology has recently acquired a small collection of birds from the Arctic regions of Alaska amongst which are two specimens of Ross' Gull, an extremely rare and beautiful bird which has been practically unknown in most collections of North American birds. The species nests in the Arctic regions, perhaps as far north as any bird and in the fall it appears moving southward through the Behring Straits. It is thought that the winter is passed in the open north Pacific. These and other specimens new to the Museum's collection will form part of the valuable Schick collection, which is now being built up at the Museum.

Miss Ruth M. Home, M.A., on Tuesday gave the concluding lecture of the series at the Museum on "Our Debt to the East".

The Museum has brought out a very attractive Christmas card, the Della Robbins Medallion with the Madonna and Child with Saint John enameled in terra-cotta on a blue background.

The attendance at the Museum for November, it has been found, reached the total of 14,308 persons.

VARSITY BASKETEERS DEFEAT WEST END Y IN EXHIBITION GAME

Regular Forwards Play Stellar Game, but Subs Are Good Too

READY FOR TRIP TO U.S.

Heavy Practices Scheduled Before Annual Tour of American Colleges

Varsity displayed mid-season form when the senior quintet beat West End Y by 38-24 in an exhibition game. The Blue and White played a man-to-man defensive formation in preparation for the big floors across the line. The encounter offered Coach McCutcheon an opportunity to see each man in action in senior going, and Mac used every sub. West End scored most of their points in the last half while the Varsity regular line was off the floor.

The big point getters for the Blue were the regular forward line. O'Leary notched 11 counters, Horton 8, Davey 4 and Sniderman 4. The subs showed up particularly well with Gord Cock and Don Wood playing a steady game on the defense, and Riggs and Sniderman fitting in well on the forward line.

It looks as though Sniderman's move from guard to forward is a wise one although Newman is ineligible for the intercollegiate there is a good possibility of him making the American trip, thus bolstering the pivot position. Collins and Douglas showed up well and will be seen in action on the intermediate squad.

Heavy practices are called for this week and next, before leaving on the annual tour of American colleges. The squad will meet West End Y once again in an exhibition tilt, and Broadview Y and the Lizzies may also be taken on.

It looks as though Davey, Horton on the forward line, O'Leary as centre and Sakler and Currie as guards, will form the regular quintet with Riggs and Sniderman as sub forwards, and Cock and Wood sub guards.

SURPRISED AT QUESTION OF SYSTEM EFFICIENCY

Provost Says Some Students Are Incompetent to Continue

The student on probation who neglects his work during this term will soon find how efficient the probation system really is," remarked Provost Cogrove, of Trinity College, when interviewed by "The Varsity". The remark was in reply to a query as to the efficiency of the probation system.

"If the question is, is the probation system working, the answer is yes," emphatically stated the Provost who was not a little surprised at the nature of the question. That anyone could question the significance of the system appeared strange to him.

The student's marks in his respective studies are assembled and carefully noted," continued the Provost, "and sometimes the student is not considered competent enough to continue at the college."

Professor E. J. Urwick, head of the Department of Economics, is to speak before the Charity Organization Society of London, England, on January 9, on "The Principle of Reciprocity in Social Life and Action."

Dr. Helen McMurchy Congratu-

Thrilling Age

FDRECASTS NEW ERA

Dr. Helen McMurchy, who is head of the Child Welfare Work in the Dominion Department of Health, gave a talk to the Medical Women's Undergraduate Association, at the Women's Union yesterday afternoon. Dr. McMurchy congratulated the medical students on the age in which they were living, where so many thrilling medical advances were being made. "The most thrilling discovery made during the last ten years has been the use of serum to prevent paralysis developing in cases of infantile paralysis, and our next big advance we hope will be a cure for cancer," said the speaker. "To-day, because of the great help we receive from the press and the interest taken by the general public in things medical we are able to broadcast our discoveries very quickly and so derive benefit from all parts of the world," said Dr. McMurchy.

The doctor went on to tell of the new age of medical science that was coming, where Public Health Units would be established and there would be periodical examination for everybody, and systems of health insurance carried out. Thus the spread of disease would be controlled and the general health of the race kept up to the highest level possible.

Antics Afield

A piece of filler in some undoubtedly eminent and illustrious contemporary whose name is in every month, gives an interesting insight on the primitive customs still extant at the University of California, where coarse gelling and uncouth cheering are absolutely taboo as far as the lady-like o-eds are concerned. They may sing, but they must not yell at rugby games.

BLUENOSE SCHOLAR DISAGREES WITH VARSITY EDITORIAL

Believes England to be Better

Training

FINDS TOLERANCE

Thinks English Do Not Know Much About Dominion of Canada

Mr. F. F. Musgrave, a graduate of Dalhousie University, N.S., who is doing graduate work here in physical chemistry, has been awarded the 1930 Rhodes Scholarship for Nova Scotia. When interviewed by "The Varsity" last night he did not entirely agree with the opinions expressed in yesterday's editorial, especially in connection with the sending of outstanding Canadian students to our frontier districts.

"I don't think the idea is so good," he said. "I think it would be better for the man if he went to England. I don't think that sending men to the Yukon would produce any results, and I believe most of the men would prefer to go to England."

He agreed, however, that it would be a good idea to bring English students over to Canadian universities. "It wouldn't do most of them any harm," he said. "Most of them don't seem to know much about Canada."

He disagreed strongly with the statement that the Rhodes Scholarships were founded with imperialistic intentions, basing his contention on the number of the scholarships awarded in the United States and Germany.

Questioned as to the degree of tolerance exhibited in Toronto, Mr. Musgrave said, "I have found the Department of Chemistry very tolerant, but (Continued on page 4)

BACK TO THE PEN FOR THE SON OF THE 'PEN-PUSHER'

Judge O'Connell Rules Case to go Before the Division
Court

R. E. Knowles, Jr., is back in jail. His appeal was thrown out of court yesterday by Judge Denton in the General Sessions, who ruled, after a conference with Judge O'Connell, that the case would have to go before the Division Court.

Knowles was given a fine of $25 or thirty days, plus thirty days, by Magistrate Browne some time ago, on a charge of "incommoding and vagrancy". He appealed from this sentence.

During the past few weeks, Mr. Knowles was to be seen about the university, and particularly in Hart House. When questioned by "The Varsity", he said that he was registered in Second Year Political Science. Mr. Knowles was once registered in S.P.S. It will be remembered that he ran for the legislature in the last election, polling a negligible vote.

Lateness Explained

The late delivery of "The Varsity" yesterday was due to a breakdown in the mechanical equipment of the University of Toronto Press, which held up the composing of the paper, and, in addition to causing many unusual errors, made proof-reading impossible.

The staff of "The Varsity" regrets the many inaccuracies which appeared in the paper, but owing to the circumstances, does not feel disposed to accept entire responsibility for them.

THE HEADLINERS

We are tired of being in a coloured spotlight. Conversation with young 'uns about to enter college, and with grads both ancient and modern has convinced us that we are being exhibited upon the worldly stage in frills and furbelows that do not fit our role as an institution of learning, and in coloured lights that cast over us a false and ungodly hue.

We are to the future students of this university, as well as to the graduates, a world apart. Those who will in the next few years come here for the furtherance of their education place about us an eerie blue spotlight that is the result of a prismatic reflection of sporadic publicity, which has endeavoured to prove in every case that we are all brimming over with wild youth and rebellion, and that when inspired with a few after dinner speeches and a little mob psychology, we become like so many shorn sheep following a garrulous goat. They see us sitting upon an Olympus of twentieth century cynicism, and thumbing our intellectual noses at mayors, playing with the fire-crackers of Communism that have so impressed the city police with their pyrotechnic display, and withdrawing like hurt children from positions of responsibility because the slow wheels of reformation have not clicked to the metronome that was set for them. They see us endowed with the Divine Right of Students because we question the ability of a man, who is not an educationalist but a politician, to say what shall be and what shall not be, in this university.

They see our professors as "men of a noble profession", but as Principal Malcolm Wallace said Monday evening in Wymilwood, "They are mere words and they do not really think we are noble." They see knowledge concentrated in one man—absent-minded from an overdose of joke-column mania with the occasional bright spot in his life when a police officer twists his wrist and he gets an eight column streamer in a downtown daily, because he has forsaken the pursuit of his Muse for the more commonplace thrill of a lawsuit.

Even our graduates lay a heavy hand upon our shoulders, and with that attitude that permeates rose coloured lights all about our present hallowed existence here, they say, "Appreciate your college years, my boy, for you'll be getting into real life after you graduate." They regale us with wild yarns about the "rip-snorters" they were in college, of the doings of their rebellious spirits, which they refused to keep bottled for more than a term; but they never tell us how many hours they spent in the stacks or how many hours they sat and gazed at the assistant librarians.

Our mission is eclipsed—we are an institution of learning, of the search for deeper knowledge, and our students are here to acquire that knowledge and that learning. But how are we to step boldly forth in a true white spotlight when the electricians of our future students and our graduates insist that we do our turn in all the glamour of technicolour?

AT LEAST, WE HOPE NOT

"The Varsity" wishes it made clear that the inaccuracies in yesterday's issue were due almost entirely to mechanical defects in the equipment of the University of Toronto Press, with which the Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Councils has a contract for printing. A breakdown in the linotype machine made proof-reading out of the question. With this in view, we wish to point out that the word "erotic" in the fifth line of the editorial should have read "exotic". We would hesitate to assume that Mr. Lionel Gelber and Mr. Herbert Little were destined to three years of erotic culture.

THE CAP FITS

In yesterday's issue appeared the notice of a sad gentleman who had lost an asses head. It appears that this piece of Follies property was taken from the Hall Porter's office after the show in the U.C. Follies. Apart altogether from the strong comment which might be made on the fact of a guest in a house having stolen valuable property for which someone will have to pay, the culprit, in his choice of an article, has made perfect comment alike on himself and on this form of souvenir-hunting generally.

U.C. Players' Guild

Last night we saw the best acted play of the current season done by the Players' Guild. The offering, which was their evening production for the term, was John Masefield's "Mellony Holtspur". The play is an unusual venture into the effect of supernatural beings in human action. We should hesitate to describe it by that much-abused term 'good theatre'; it is the sort of thing you either like or you don't like.

Be that as it may, the acting of the principals was excellent. In catching and portraying the rather elusive atmosphere of the play, they deserve no small credit. Stanley Ryerson, as Laurence Copshrews, gave an outstanding performance; his elocution was very satisfying. Dorothea Greening made the most of her part, although it consisted chiefly of entrances and exits. The difficult part of Lenda Copshrews was taken with restraint by Helen Musson.

It is hardly fair to single out individual members of the cast for special mention, but the parts of Kezia Spinfeld, Lady Mento, Bunny Mento and Susan and Peter Jones were also ably enacted.

The first act was the smoothest piece of work we have yet seen done at the Guild, but there was a certain hesitancy in later acts, due to ignorance of lines. On the whole, a most creditable production.

Contributed

Conditions at the University library have reached the point where something has to be done and whatever is to be done must be done quickly. Yesterday afternoon about four-fifteen an undergraduate in the men's reading room decided to take home the volume he was studying. He saw the line-up for night books extending down to the door of the women's reading room and took his stand at the end of it. Exactly seventeen and a half minutes later, he reached the delivery desk only to discover that his book had been signed for. He departed sadly to look up another on the subject and since he was not acquainted with the one he selected he decided to take it into the reading room and look it over. One attendant was engaged in handing out reading room books and after six minutes' wait, he obtained his book, found it good and after a fifteen minute wait in the line-up, got it out overnight. Having spent forty minutes from the time when he first decided to take a book home, he left the library wondering certain things.

Why was there just one attendant looking after night books when two could handle them twice as fast. It's on a par with the inefficiency of the "Marriage and Morons", my forthcoming book, ought to prove one of the sensations of the Christmas season.

C—C

The Christmas season, as everyone knows, is the open season for books, lewd cravats, quotations from Dickens, and false whiskers.

C—C

No one knows what a clump of white shrubbery may hide at Christmas time. It may be concealing one of your sisters, your cousins, or your aunts; or it may be the editor of a Smart Young Campus Publication hiding from his Better Self.

It might be N.A.B. in pleasant pursuit of primroses.

As for books, even Toronto buys books at Christmas time.

C—C

Unless I am altogether out in my calculations, "Marriage and Morons" should score a decided hit, and perhaps net me enough to make a down payment on a ticket to the Arts Ball.

VARSITY BASKETBALL SQUAD TAKE 38-24 GAME FROM WEST END Y

SWIMMERS SUBMERGE CENTRAL Y. M. C. A.

Varsity's Superior Combination Maintains Top Position in City League

13 LUCKY FOR BLUES

The University of Toronto polo team maintained their position at the head of the City League by defeating Central Y in easy fashion at Hart House last night. The Varsity team, although they used quite a bit of individual play, were masters of the game at all times, through their superior combination play.

The game opened with play fairly close for the first couple of minutes until Alexander opened the scoring on a pass from Spence. In quick succession two more goals were scored for Varsity, Spence and Armstrong being responsible. Varsity continued to press hard and shoot to the corners of the goal and brought the half time score to 6-0.

Central came back somewhat and took some shots at Ayres but failed to put them past him. Their shots were either wild or directly at him. Varsity Soccer—A. C. Corbett, G. O. Cox, J. A. Downing, M. Goldenberg, G. T. Gregg, D. Rowland, M. Ward, J. C. White.

continued to bombard the Central goal and Alexander, Glass and Spence brought the total to twelve.

Final score, 13-1.

Varsity—Ayres, Sinclair, Graham, Spence (capt.); Armstrong, Alexander, Glass.

Referee—Leo Latchford.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

To-night Varsity's senior hockey team meets Rangers in the first game of the senior S.P.A. series at the Arena Gardens. The Blue and White should triumph. With the exception of Murray Snyder in goal, they have the same squad which captured the S.P.A. and O.H.A. honours last year. Moreover, Coach "Red" Porter is back at the helm and the team will have the advantage of the same tutelage as they have been accustomed to. The fact that this is the second year that the team has played together as a whole should stand them in good stead.

* * *

The Rangers are an unknown quantity but might easily upset the proverbial apple-cart if they meet a team which plays solely on its reputation. Nationals got a bye and will play the winner of to-night's tilt for the trophy.

* * *

There are two candidates for the goal tending duties, namely, LeBarr and Ames. Which one will start in to-night's fixture, will not be known until game time.

* * *

S.P.S., Meds and Vic have held their annual assualt-at-arms this week and U.C. hold theirs to-day. As in former years, much promising material has been uncovered and prospects are good for the Junior Interfaculty Assault which will be held Wednesday and Thursday of next week. As was to be expected, and yet to be frowned upon, many of the competitors revealed a woeful lack of condition. Those who were in the best shape physically usually won out. This fact was demonstrated in the School assault when Mel Elson took the middleweight division. His season of football with the intercollegiate gave him the edge on his opponents.

* * *

Senior S.P.S. have won their group championship in the interfaculty water polo league. Victoria and Junior School are tied for their group leadership and this afternoon they play off for the title. This fixture is to be a battle to the finish even if it necessary to play overtime in order to declare a winner. Both teams have won seven games and lost one, and are two evenly matched sevens.

BLUE PUCK-CHASERS SOPHS TALLY TOTAL ALL SET FOR TUSSELE IN FACULTY ASSAULT

LeBarr and Ames Are Trying for Murray Snyder's Position

RANGERS ARE MYSTERIOUS

When the University of Toronto senior hockey team takes the ice to-night at the Arena against the Rangers they will use the same team that was used last year, with one exception. That one position is goal. Murray Snyder's position of last year will be a hard one to fill. There are two candidates for it—LeBarr and Ames. Both are working hard and seem to be quite equal in merit. The team had a short snappy workout in the Varsity Arena last night. The team is in good condition to go the hour and are confident of the fortunate outcome of the battle with the Rangers, although that team's qualities have been kept in a haze of mystery. Stewart will start at centre, Harley at right wing, McMullen at left wing, and Paul and Whitehead on defence. The spirit that permeates the team bids fair to lead them to a repetition of last year's glorious record.

CAESAR K.O.'D

In the Vic assault last night boxing was featured with several good bouts, with wrestling a good second, while there was no fencing. The sophomore year easily carried off the most points. In wrestling Edwards and Algier proved for the 135 lb. championship, and it was decided only after three minutes overtime in favour of Edwards. In the 145 lb. class K. Armstrong defeated Smith in the semi-finals, but was an easy victim for Husky Fletcher in the finals. In the semi-finals of the 160 lb. class, Searle defeated Spencer and was also victorious over Ireland in the finals. Hatton proved his supremacy over Armstrong in the semi-finals of the 175 lb. class and also over McLean in the finals.

Vic has several good boxers. Witzel is undoubtedly the best. He defeated Erwin in the heavyweight class rather gracefully in a clean-cut bout. In the 160 lb. class Winch won by default. Kay defeated Glass in the 147 lb. class. In the semi-finals of the 175 lb. class, Heustis beat Caesar by a technical knockout and defeated Baker too, in the finals of that weight. Edwards beat Muir in the 135 lb. class. In the 18 lb. class MacLeod used a certain amount of head work in beating Partidge.

It was left for Mr. H. M. Burton as referee to decide most of the bouts in points. There was not a knockout during the whole evening, due to the lack of the addition of science to brawn.

Mr. K. Mackawa, a Japanese student at Vic, and a Jui-Jitsu artist, gave a clever exhibition of trick fighting during the assault.

On Dec. 13, U. of T. plays the University of Buffalo in the first game of the exhibition matches with American colleges. The following evening they take on Rochester "U". And on the 16th they meet Colgate. These games should allow Varsity to get away to a good start in the intercollegiate campaign.

ad any thoughts at all upon the subject. "Whatever advantages it might have, would be offset by the length of time necessary for the establishment of the rule," said Miss L. Greer, I.S.P.S.

The consensus of opinion labelled the rule as "childish, ridiculous, feeble or what have you." One theological senior condescended to call it "futile and pusillanimous", while a U.C. resolute was appalled at the hideous idea. "Just imagine not being able to talk to people on the campus. Half the pleasure of coming to classes would be lost."

CONTRIBUTED

Bursar's office? he thought bitterly, where one stands in line for hours because the fees of six thousand, six hundred and seventeen students have to be paid, through one wicket to one man, unless they are mailed in?

Why was there not a place where one could enquire if a certain book was signed for so as not to waste time standing in line for it, if it were?

Why was there no special provision made for those coming from the reading room with the desired books in their hands since they were prepared to leave at once if only someone would take their slip.

Why were there not more attendants in the library, and if there were enough, why were there not more attending to night and reading room books. Why should attendants stand and chat and seem to be doing nothing in particular when impatient undergraduates are waiting unserved at the desk?

The bitter one met a friend who told him of leaving Hart House after dinner at 7 p.m. and spending three-quarters of an hour trying to obtain a night book at the library, because of the newness and inexperience of the part-time attendants.

Everyone realizes that the librarian is handicapped by lack of money and lack of space, but surely some of the present glaring and increasing disabilities could be overcome.

NEW LIBRARY WING URGED AS SOLUTION OF PRESENT PROBLEM

Confusion Would be Increased by Major Additions to Staff

ONE NEW ASSISTANT

Dissatisfaction is Inevitable
Under Present Cramped Conditions

"President Falconer is considering the plans for the new library wing, and there should be a definite decision made very shortly," stated Professor W. S. Wallace, head librarian. "However, until this new wing becomes a reality there seems to be little hope for a speeding up of the service."

"I expect there will be an extra assistant librarian within a few days, but it is not a scarcity of librarians, but of space that makes the congestion. It really would need a person with one head and a hundred hands to give out the books efficiently. As conditions are now if we added more assistants it would only result in more confusion and delay to locate the books. The present line-up for books is a very recent occurrence, and the service given is as fast as possible under the circumstances. From eighty to one hundred books are given out in an hour and so there should not be a very long wait in order to get night books out. It is a student's own fault if he gets in line with a book he has not signed for and finds somebody ahead of him who has already signed the list for that particular book. The only proper way to obtain a book is to sign for it ahead of time."

"Even with one extra assistant I do not expect we can cope with this sudden rush for night books. At the delivery desk there is one person who collects the slips and hands them to a second person, who procures them, and there is no other way in which this can be handled. Until this new addition becomes an actuality there is bound to be dissatisfaction."

Elsewhere in this issue Professor Wallace explains in a letter the terrific pressure on the library's resources and gives additional facts about present struggle to obtain books.

OXFORD'S DEBATORS MEET U.S. SALLIES

"Nasal Disarmament" Alleged Oxon Aim by Talkers in California

Special to "The Varsity"
Lawrence, Kansas—Debaters from the University of Kansas will meet the team from Oxford, and debate on the question of installment buying as a menace to American property, the Oxonians arguing against the practice.

In a debate with the University of California at Berkeley on the menace of talking pictures to western civilization, Richard Acland, Oxford debater, summarized the seeming unpopularity of the movies by telling of a man who gargled listerine for three months and was still unpopular. Earl Wilson of California retaliated by comparing the Oxonians to "gas bags" and expressed the opinion that the purpose of their tour was "nasal disarmament."

The principles of American democracy, according to William Diplof of Oxford, are Liberty, Equality, and Fraternity, least of all Sorority. Liberty, he said, may be purchased for two bucks a case. Breyer of California refuted with the statement that the Liberty magazine could be bought for a nickel.

WHEAT-GRAIN PRAYER HAS LITTLE VALUE

Women's Press Club Speaker Stresses Simplicity and

NOT FREAKISHNESS

"You can get the Lord's Prayer on a grain of wheat, but it wouldn't do much good," said Mr. Brodie Taylor to the Women's Press Club at the U.C. Union yesterday, in illustration of the point that the beginning of good printing is the copy.

The cardinal virtue of all advertising is simplicity and its appropriateness to the matter advertised. Since it has to look easy to read, the layout must be a unity—it should not be top-heavy nor should the printing matter be solid; short paragraphs are to be preferred to long.

Use and beauty should be tied up together in an advertisement. And the printing should help you sell your goods; it must be distinctive, and attractive, and different from other advertisements; it must be easy to read; it must catch the attention of the reader and then hold it. As a definition of "good printing," Mr. Taylor quoted "Good printing is printing that is agreeably and exactly suited to the object for which it is to be used."

Practically every kind of type is used in advertising. Antique lettering of the period would be used for an advertisement of an old French volume or MSS; modernistic lettering for some new Parisian perfume.

To the handwriting expert it presents an interesting study. The signatures range all the way from beautifully legible script to an almost indecipherable tracing on the paper. A few are printed.

In such a list it is difficult to single out any special ones. In past years some of the most interesting are: Bliss Carman, the late Canadian poet, nearly all the governor-generals and lieutenant-governors; Margaret Bonfield, the lady member in the present Labour government; Sir Robert Baden-Powell

Plans for Model Assembly to Claim Precedence in Initial Weeks

"How much do you want and what else can I do?" is the general and encouraging reply of everyone regarding the Model Assembly of the League of Nations, which makes it appear to be going over on a large scale, according to reports at a general meeting last night in Wymilwood. The League of Nations Club of the University of Toronto was formed and a constitution drawn up with its object "to further general interest and understanding of the League of Nations."

The club was formed for the purpose of organizing a Model Assembly, and plans are already well under way for sessions on Feb. 21, 22, and 23, when Colonel Meredith of Ottawa and Canon Cody will be among the prominent speakers, and delegates from all parts of Canada and the United States will be present.

Miss E. H. Lang, II U.C., was elected president; Mr. B. G. Whitmore, of the School of Graduate Studies, of London, Eng., vice-pres.; Mr. T. J. Keenan, also of S.G.S., graduate of the University of B.C., corresponding secretary; Mr. Earl Davidson, II Vie, recording-secretary, and Mr. Del Bea-mish, treasurer. Mr. Lou Golden, Miss J. L. Plumtre, Mr. Leo Clayton and Miss Beth Foster were elected heads of sub-committees.

PATIENT'S DRESS FIRED IN DENTAL EXPLOSION

Prompt Action of Students
Averts Further Havoc

The explosion of a can of ethyl-chloride during an extraction operation caused considerable excitement in the Dental Infirmary yesterday.

The ethyl-chloride, which was being used by a student operator under the supervision of a member of the faculty, exploded and set fire to the dress of the patient, but prompt action of students in the infirmary prevented any great amount of damage either to the wearing apparel of the patient or the equipment in the infirmary. The shock to the patient at the sight of seeing her dress in flames, was the only damage reported.

Illustrious Names Adorn Hart House Tome

That the Hart House visitors' book is one of the most interesting volumes of its kind in the world is one's reaction after glancing through its pages. Since 1919 the signatures in this remarkable book have been accumulating until their number is now quite pretentious.

To the handwriting expert it presents an interesting study. The signatures range all the way from beautifully legible script to an almost indecipherable tracing on the paper. A few are printed.

In such a list it is difficult to single out any special ones. In past years some of the most interesting are: Bliss Carman, the late Canadian poet, nearly all the governor-generals and lieutenant-governors; Margaret Bonfield, the lady member in the present Labour government; Sir Robert Baden-Powell the boy scout leader, and Sir Austen Chamberlain, the well known British politician.

The clergy are well represented: Dr. F. M. Head, Bishop-Elect of Melbourne, Australia, was a visitor here. The Bishop of Winchester, who was on his way across Canada to consecrate a new cathedral in Victoria, signed the book.

Men of other universities are frequent callers. Dr. Robert Wollenburg, head of the University of Breslau, Germany, and Professor Mahain of University of Liege, Belgium, are among those seen here this term.

The visitors' book is kept in a glass case facing the entrance to Hart House Library. For safety it is kept locked, but the recent signatures can always be seen. An occasional glance at it will well repay the trouble.

In addition to lecturing on Social and Political subjects, it is rumoured that Professor Urwick will also make efforts to establish an exchange of students and workers between the University of Toronto and the Universities of the British Isles. Professor Urwick has already brought several English students to Canada to study social conditions here.

Professor Urwick will return to Toronto about the middle of January.

STUDENT SYMPATHY ASKED

The following letter has been received by the Editor from Professor W. S. Wallace, in regard to the conditions now prevalent at the University Library:

"I am glad to have the opportunity which your article entitled 'Contributed' affords me, of saying something in 'The Varsity' about the congestion, which at present prevails at the main circulating desk in the University Library."

"I have watched recently with a good deal of concern the growth of the waiting line at the desk and the way in which the statistics of circulation have been leaping upward. It may be of interest to members of the University to know that the circulation of books among undergraduates during October and November of this year was twenty-two per cent. greater than in October and November of last year, and three times greater than it was eight years ago. In order to cope with the increase this year, I asked the Board of Governors the other day for an additional appropriation in order to enable me to obtain extra assistance. I hope within a few days some relief may be obtained from this source. But I must say frankly that I do not think that this will bring about any very great improvement in the situation. The truth is that there is a limit to the number of assistants who can be effectively employed behind the desk at any one time. Permanent relief, I am afraid, can only be obtained through the establishment of separate reading rooms for specialized purposes, so designed that they will take some of the pressure away from the main desk. But until we get the long-looked-for addition to the library building, the establishment of any more specialized reading rooms is physically impossible."

"In my judgment, the University has outgrown its present library building. The stacks are full; the reading rooms are over-crowded; the work-rooms and the arrangements for the circulating of books are on too small a scale. Only considerable additions to the present building will remedy the situation. Until then, I venture to ask from the undergraduates of the university the most generous forbearance."

Reg DeGruchy Tells "Varsity" Rule Quite Certain of Adoption

THIS SEASON OR NEXT

Twenty-Five Yard Clause Upheld as Aiding Play's Colour

"It is very likely that the rule allowing the use of the forward pass in eastern senior rugby will go into effect this year," stated Reg De Gruchy, secretary of the rules committee, of the Canadian Rugby Union, when interviewed by "The Varsity." "If it does not go into effect this year it will without doubt do so next year. We have continued our practice of letting junior teams try rules and prove them satisfactory before adopting them in senior circles. The way in which this play has lived up to the game has made it obvious that it would do much to heighten interest in senior fixtures."

Discussion of the clause which demands that the pass be caught outside the opponents' twenty-five yard line ensued.

"Don't you think it advisable that this rule be thrown out?" queried the "Varsity."

"No, obviously no," replied Mr. De Gruchy. A short forward pass would result in five points. As a result the scores of the games would be too high, perhaps as high as 70-0."

"But, here is where this rule has its advantages," he continued. "By forward passes the team will work itself up to the opponents' 25 yard line. Here where play is most exciting to watch will be the principal part of the game."

Christmas Issue

Contributions for the Christmas issue of "The Varsity" must reach one of the two news offices before 5.00 p.m., Thursday, December 12 in order that the four page literary section may be set up for Monday in advance.

Prizes will be offered for the literary contributions as follows: First Award, Short Story, (1,000 words), $4, Second Award, $2; Best Sonnet, preferably with a Christmas theme, $4; Best Poem, in Carol style, $4; Best Humorous Feature (c.f. Back Page Feature), $2.50; Best Humorous Verse, $2.50.

In addition, a prize of $3 will be awarded for the best sketch or line drawing of a scene on the campus, and the same for the best scene located elsewhere.

Those who turned material in late for the last literary section are notified that their contributions will be considered for the Christmas issue.

The high-minded Florida Alligator takes a whirl at the Book of Etiquette, as interpreted at the University of Florida dining-hall. The following excerpts attest to the high level of culture in vogue—

The rule for serving one's self seems to be, "Take twice as much as you can eat so you'll be sure to have all you want."

The vocabulary used is reminiscent of a Greek restaurant. The diners at the commons call "shoot the bull" or "pass the grease". Other foods have unmentionable names.

Chances for Field Research

England seems to absorb and attract many of the outstanding university students who, through the Rhodes Scholarships and other inducements seem to prefer to spend much of their time in research at English universities. An editorial in "The Varsity" suggested that these students might well study other parts of Canada before proceeding abroad.

Alex Stringer, IV U.C., who comes from the Yukon, stated definitely that there was great value in studying the west. There are no universities in the Yukon, but Mr. Stringer thought that a student could get a wonderful outlook by seeing the ways and customs of the people in the Yukon.

"Whether it would be more profitable to study in the west rather than in England is doubtful," said Mr. Stringer, "but I should say that in geological research there is good opportunity in British Columbia. Here the student can study rock formations first hand. This research would certainly be valuable."

Mr. Stringer thought that along social and economic lines a study of the west would be interesting to a student interested in these particular subjects.

Mr. J. B. Bickersteth, Warden of Hart House was asked what he thought was the value in Canadian travel. The Warden considered that travel in Canada like any other travel, would certainly be valuable, but he refused to give any further opinions because he thought he had not enough experience in Canadian travel to express his view.

Many Settlement Activities Result From Workers' Predilections

"Our Little Theatre idea arose from the simple question which I put to everyone volunteering help, 'What is your particular interest?'" said Miss Olive Ziegler, head resident at the University Settlement, when interviewed by "The Varsity" yesterday. "It is really in the nature of an experiment, as most of our activities have arisen. Miss Saida Gerrard's interest in Russian dancing was the key to the formation of a most enthusiastic class, Miss Peart of the Margaret Eaton School stimulated a group of our older girls in Folk Dancing, and a trained school teacher, now married, has found a niche in assisting our foreign mothers with our language. Then there is the Joleum cut-work directed by our Japanese friend Mr. Matsumura. Miss DeLoe's Reading Club which is developing a keen appreciation of literature in some of our children. You will be interested to know that four of the Household Science girls have undertaken to promote our Home Makers' Club by cooking and sewing classes. Our Nursery School, too, is becoming more and more popular, both with the tiny kiddies in our neighbourhood and with the students who have been assisting us."

A LOST ART

We point with alarm to certain deplorable tendencies in the art of cooking food and the eating thereof. For on all sides we see shops springing up, devoted entirely to sandwiches of a gaudy construction, and to a restricted bill-of-fare. And in the larger restaurants, catering to people of moderate means, we find an increasing tendency towards such conventional arrangements as roast beef, mashed potatoes, apple pie and ice cream. Gone, too, except at festive boards, all the great old North American dishes; home-cooking is becoming a matter of a few popular cuts of meats, and what can be purchased in chain stores and served with a can-opener. Cooking and, logically concomitant, eating, are vanishing as an art, and becoming mere functions.

Consider then, the plight of the undergraduate who desires his meal to be on a plane other than physical. He may wish to linger over his food, to chat, to be social, and, if of the few, to think. His first alternative is Hart House—the Great Hall. To the listener at the door comes the clatter of dishes and cutlery, a rushing as of flowing waters from the tables at the preliminary or soup stage, and Olympian tones from the high table. There is little peace within. Mind, we place no philippics against this hall; like most Big, Quick and Noisy places, the food is wholesome, worth the money, and more, but not at all surprising or exciting. Hence, it can readily be seen that he who wishes to exercise the philosophical mind must go elsewhere.

Again, the student, if enrolled in a denominational college, may eat in his own residence. At this point discretion halts our type-writer.

Then there are tea places. First and foremost are the salons that give one the urge to ask when the pall-bearers are due to arrive. The food is usually nourishing, but the suspicion of tear-drops in the consommé is a deterrent from active thought. Secondly, one finds the Bohemian places, where it takes time and prayer and thought to produce a lunch, and where one's contemplation of Nirvana is likely to be interrupted by Frankie and Harry and Bessie arguing about Fate, or Chinese Art as applied to skyscrapers, in the next room.

Gastronomically, therefore, we are up against it. The women are slightly more favoured, but not appreciably, we are told. One can always eat the $1.50 luncheon at the York or the Eddie, while dulcet strains sweep o'er the scene, but naturally, one likes to preserve the academic atmosphere and remain on the campus. It occurs to us as a great pity that the architects did not leave a nook or cranny in Hart House where the undergraduate could be served a quiet and more thoughtful meal from the main kitchens. But this was not to be.

However, the contemplation of the gastronomical situation does not lend itself to solution; we have none to offer. Yet we do make a serious and well-intentioned suggestion to the Hall Committee: that a good electric phonograph be purchased and played during the luncheon period, with a view particularly toward the best music. The expense, we believe, would be justified by the results, for good music has a soothing and uplifting effect, even when we are not consciously aware of the sound.

ANTICS AFIELD

Our Office Boy has just sent in another report from Oshkosh Junction: I had intended to tell you something of the athletic activities at Oshkosh College this week, but I have been too busy with other duties to investigate them. The regular elections of the "Varsity Advertiser" have been occupying all my time.

The "Varsity Advertiser" is the "official" undergrad stewed daily of Oshkosh College. It is supposed to come out every day, if the press does not break down. Last week they held elections for the positions of Editor-in-Chief, Women's Editor and Managing Editor. The Editor-in-Chief resigned because she wanted to spend all her time stirring up suffragette agitation. The Managing Editor resigned as a result of criticism of his editorial policy. It was said that he filled the paper up with advertising because "he was too lazy to write edited because he had to.

In the beginning there were about a hundred candidates for each position, so an elimination contest was held. Each candidate gathered up as large a pile of mud as he could find and made it into little balls which he threw at all the other candidates. The battle lasted as long as any mud could be found, and when it was over, most of the candidates had been eliminated. In fact, the Women's Editorship was given away to anybody who would take it, and the other two jobs had only three applicants between them, and one man had to run for both.

Our party had at first intended to remain aloof from such undignified goings on, but by a singular coincidence, we were all offered positions on the staff just a few days before the elections. We found that there were two men trying for the Editorship, named Toldem and Mxexmxmx. The latter was also running for Managing Editor against a man they call Bishop Payroll, the resigning Managing Editor.

Another funny thing that happened—it seems that down here they have a special table in the dining-hall where everybody that is important or smokes good cigarettes in the spring is allowed to sit. It's a great privilege to sit at this table because they give you two glasses of milk. Well, what I wanted to tell you was that just before the

Editor,

"The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

In reply to Mr. Muir I may say, that nothing my poor tongue can utter, or nothing my poor pen can splutter, would justly express my esteem for one who appears to be such a very learned and excellent person.

He attacked the opinion I expressed. I feel honoured to be attacked by such a personage.

He implied that I consider Newton, Kelvin and other great scientific, medical and dental men, as unworthy of connection with a university. He implied that I consider the Meds, Dents and S.P.S. faculties unworthy to be in the university.

I said no such thing.

I believe that these men, and these students are worthy of the university, but that is no reason why they should be in it. Your friends may consider you worthy to hold a high office, but that is no reason why you should.

RANGERS ELIMINATE VARSITY FROM S.P.A. RACE BY 5-4 SCORE

UNKNOWN MAROONS PROVIDE SURPRISE

Rangers Slam in Three at End to Cap Desultory Display

RAGGED HOCKEY

Varsity were eliminated by the score of 5-4 from the S.P.A. race by the unknown Rangers last night at the Arena. The event furnishes the biggest upset of the season. The Collegians were heavy favourites to retain the cup they won last year, but over-confidence spoiled their chances.

The brand of hockey displayed in the game was inferior to that dished up by the junior teams. The "mystery" boys played a listless and ragged game till the last five minutes when they suddenly came to life and found the champions to rthree goals. The regular Varsity sextet started and in the first ten minutes of play skated rings around the Maroons. McMullen and Harley banged in two goals, and the final result appeared a cinch. Coach "Red" Porter replaced every regular but Whitehead with subs. The Blues tried hard but the Rangers tied the count to end the period.

The second stanza saw some loose playing. The Blue forward line went down abreast time and again, but lacked the necessary punch around the nets. Had the Blue extended themselves and played the hockey that they are capable of, there is little doubt of them winning. The winners were slow in starting but in the last five minutes they displayed a flash of play which coupled with the breaks, earned them the game.

For Varsity, McMullen and Paul stood out. Harley accounted for three goals, and with McMullen and Stewart on the forward line, played a good game. Whitehead and Paul on the defense broke up rushes effectively. Allan, Hughes and Forrester were the pick of the Rangers.

Play in the first period was carried by Varsity into Rangers' end of the ice. McMullen opened the scoring on a nice rush. On a pass from Jimmy,

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The Blue and White senior basketball squad's smart victory over the Central Y.M.C.A. outfit amply demonstrates that Varsity will again be the team to beat for the intercollegiate title. In spite of the loss of Newman, Beaton and Mitchell, forwards, and of Johnny Murray, guard, Coach McCutcheon has a team that will compare favourably with the intercollegiate champions of past years. Roy Currie is the only one of last year's regulars on the line-up, but the addition of newcomers and of those moving up to higher ranks has worked well. The impending American trip will put the men in condition for the season's grind, but will be particularly beneficial in establishing team-play.

* * *

The Varsity intermediate sextet play Queen's seniors to-night at Belleville in an exhibition tilt. While the Blue second team looks to be a greatly improved aggregation this year it will be too much to expect that they will defeat the Tricolour puck-chasers. The latter will have to show more class than displayed last season if they hope to keep pace with the local senior O.H.A. entry.

* * *

To-morrow afternoon the rugby season will come to a much belated finish. In the east Hamilton Deltas will meet Kingston Collegiate in the Limestone City in the finals of the O.R.F.U. Interscholastic. In the west St. Thomas will play Moosejaw juniors in the Canadian junior finals. Unless weather conditions in the west have greatly changed in recent years it might be easier on the players if the playing field was flooded and the game played on a nice smooth ice surface.

* * *

The Junior Assault to be held Wednesday and Thursday next is an annual event which is looked forward to with some interest. These bouts bring to light most of the new material available in the boxing, wrestling and fencing classes.

Water Polo

The finals of the interfaculty water polo will be played off next week in home and home games, Monday and Thursday at 5.00, Sr. S.P.S. vs. Jr. S.P.S.

Harley banged the disc in for the second counter. Rangers tried a few solo rushes, but the Varsity defense proved too much for them. Subs replaced the regular Blue squad. Allan and Forrester got by the defense and shot the rubber past Ames to tie the count.

The second period opened with both teams at top strength. Play was pretty ragged. Varsity were going down 3 men abreast. Harley beat Ross on a fast shot. The Maroon lads could not get anywhere and resorted to a defensive game. McMullen aimed a sizzler at Ross, and Harley slapped the rebound in, but the goal was disallowed because of an offside. Ross and Ames saved a goal each when they caught the puck under the arm pit, delaying the game until the disc was ferreted out by Lou Marsh.

The Blues broke away in the last period and Harley, on a pass from Paul, sent the puck skimming from the left side that fooled Ross. Gates got a goal for Rangers when a shot of his lobbed past Ames. The Maroons swarmed around the Blue net. Ritchie scored the equalizer, and with three minutes to go Hughes got the winning counter. Varsity tried hard and the whole team went down in an effort to notch a goal. But the Rangers pulled the game out of the fire by shooting the puck up.

BLUE INTERMEDIATES GO TO BELLEVILLE

Face Queen's Seniors To-night to Open Town's New Arena

PROMISING OUTFIT

Jimmy Johnston's intermediates will assist in the formal opening of the new Belleville Arena to-night when they engage Queen's University seniors in an exhibition tilt. Despite the fact that they are stepping out of their O.H.A. class by a couple of grades, Coach Jimmy is confident that his 1929 edition can give the Tricolour firsts a right royal argument. The majority of the team which also named Queen's intermediates 8-0 last year are back again, and with both quantity and quality in the new material, the intermediates look to have one of the best balanced and most powerful sextettes in some several seasons.

Twelve men will make the trip to Belleville, and all the newcomers on the team will be given an opportunity to show their wares. Moran, who managed the intermediates last year, will start in goal, with McCartney held in reserve. Graham, of last year's regulars, Smith, who graduates from the Varsity juniors, and Robinson who played last season with Orillia O.H.A. intermediates are available for defence duty. The regular forward line will probably comprise Clute at centre, with Malcolm and Leake on the wings. Clancy, Statham and Conn will share the relief work.

The team will be guests at an honorary dinner during their stay in Belleville, and other entertainment is also being arranged.

BLUE WOMEN PUCKSTERS WANT MORE ENCOUNTERS

A meeting of the University of Toronto women's hockey club was held at St. Hilda's common room last Monday. The remaining members of last year's team were present to discuss the advisability of joining the Toronto Hockey League. Neither Western nor McGill enter teams in the intercollegiate series, and the blue and white girls feel that it is not worth all the time and work spent in practices for the one game with Queen's.

JUNIOR S.P.S. TAKES WATER POLO GROUP

Thrills Galore as Victoria Bows to Schoolmen by 7-1

FINALS NEXT WEEK

In one of the most thrilling of water polo games, Junior S.P.S. defeated Victoria 7-1 and by so doing they gained the right to play Senior S.P.S. in the interfaculty finals for the Eckhardt trophy.

The School men started the scoring and tallied their seven before Victoria saved themselves from the kalsomine by scoring in the dying moments of the game.

Towers scored the first after a few minutes of play and Victoria immediately tossed away two chances that could have been sure goals. Fisher scored numbers two and three and ended the first half at 3-0 for S.P.S.

The scoring in the second half was done by Hayhoe, Fisher and Powell, the latter getting two. With about three minutes to go, Gould scored for Victoria on a real shot that was impossible to stop.

Victoria—J. McLean, R. Cowle, H. Gould, H. Perkin, G. Glass, H. Barrett, S. Wood, H. Edmison, A. Smith. Junior S.P.S.—J. Powell, J. Fisher, H. Hayhoe, J. Towers, E. Withrow, R. Bryce, L. Sutton, J. Craig, R. Adair.

BRITISH RUGBY CLUB TO COMPETE IN SPRING

Varsity Representatives Chosen for Ontario Union Committee

At a meeting of the U. of T. British Rugby Club held on Wednesday evening, Manager Archbold announced to the enthusiastic members that permission has been granted to the club to enter a team in the Ontario schedule next spring. E. C. Knowles' motion requesting the secretary to notify the Union of the Varsity's entry was unanimously passed, and prayers asked for an early spring.

The three Varsity representatives on the Ontario Union Committee for the ensuing year were elected as follows: F. O. R. Garner, secretary; H. S. C. Archbold, manager; G. H. Lugsden. The colours awarded to this year's intercollegiate team were announced.

U.C. WOMEN TRIUMPH

Junior U.C. women's basketball team defeated Victoria by a 26-25 score in the first game of the interfaculty play-offs last night.

game be played. Plunging will be favoured. That is how the rule will serve its purpose; injecting colour into the game."

Discussing the question of a third official DeGruchy thought it very necessary. "In fact," he said, "I intend bringing this matter up at the next meeting of the rules committee. The head linesman at present watches the line of scrimmage. That should not be so. He should be left free to attend to the proper use of the yardsticks. Numerous unpleasant situations arose this year that might have been prevented if a third official had been present."

A third rule he said that probably would be passed this year is the one which states that "if a player goes out of touch and returns to the scene of play and tackles an opposing player he is ruled offside and his team is given a no-yard play."

The above rules will be voted upon at the annual meeting of the rules committee which will be held in the early part of January in Montreal.

Smoke?

The Editor,
"The Varsity",
Dear Sir:

From the article published in "The Varsity" of the 28th of this month on the question of smoking by women, it seems that the opposing factions are the ultra-conservatives and the ultra-modernist-feminists. The ones seek to assert that it is only man's right to acquire the manly habit of smoking. The others want to show that a cigarette, who knows? it may be a cigar or even a pipe later on, is just as appropriate and womanly in a woman's mouth as it is appropriate and manly in a man's mouth. But why do not the opposing camps base their arguments on scientific facts rather than on mere assumed or inherited rights, or the rather comic way of some women showing their independence of man by imitating him and showing him that they can do and say anything he does or says? Imitating is a sign of lack of originality and independence.

I would suggest the following resolution for them to debate out: "Resolved that the tobacco smoking habit in both men and women is beneficial." Once either side proves its case, the course to take is clear.

Yours sincerely,
K. EVANS

Sit down, gently but firmly, before your desk. Now, what's the subject? Scratch your head with your pencil. Is that a crack in your head or is it something wrong with the pencil? Do you always write your essays in pencil? Do you think a pen is better? How about a typewriter? An adding machine? Do you suppose it would be easier to carve the essay in linoleum or the head of a pin? Who invented essays, anyway? Do you enjoy writing them? Name ten things you'd rather do than write an essay. . . . What did you say the subject was? Who cares? Did you read any books on the subject? Did you ever read a book? Why? . . . . Do you suppose there's anything interesting happening outside? Go over to the window and see. Well? Nothing but a man passing on the street and a pot of geraniums on the window-sill? Push the pot of geraniums off the window-sill. Now is there anything interesting happening outside? . . . . Retire to an easy chair and drape yourself over it. How long overdue is this essay? election two of the candidates invited all their friends up there to eat with them, and have two glasses of milk. I understand the other candidate isn't allowed to eat there at all, because he doesn't know any "funny" jokes, which is a great handicap.

Finally the elections came around. First they voted for the Editor, and the candidates both made speeches. One of them said he ought to be elected because he had worked on important papers for years and years while the other one thought he ought to be elected because he had never wasted any time on important papers.

Then they elected the Managing Editor. The third candidate got up and asked them to vote for him. "But," he said, "if you can find anybody worse than I am, go ahead and elect him."

That's all for this time. More next week.

wanted an academic position would be better off in England, but if he wanted purely inspiration in his particular work, the west would be valuable, provided he were to get his academic side later. The west offered great fields for research, but the main thing rested with the student regarding the particular work he wanted to do, he said. It would be undoubtedly inspiring to see the needs of Western Canada and interesting to study its problems. He doubted the suggestion that all students should go to eastern colleges and neglect a field for work so promising as the west.

"There must be a spiritualist among us," stated Professor L. A. McKay, in the midst of his first year Latin lecture at U.C. yesterday. ### LECTURER APPROVES ANGLO-SAXON STAMP EVIDENT IN U. OF T.

Advantage of Toronto Beyond Any Other University in the World

SPOKE IN CONVOCAION

Tells of Economic Conditions in China and Other Oriental Nations

"The University of Toronto has the unique and great advantage of being the most Anglo-Saxon university in the world," said Dr. John R. Mott, in an interview to "The Varsity" after the service.

"Situated as you are, and owing to the homogeneity of the students, you are able to set examples that will have profound influence on the thought and both ethical and religious expression of the times." He added, however, that he missed the foreign students here. "You have not your proper share of Oriental students."

Referring to the theological colleges here, Dr. Mott considered that they were more closely integrated and that there was more symmetrical development than in the other large universities. "There is a lot of live and genuine interest in religion in a practical way here, which is encouraging, but you have not achieved as yet a clearly organized expression," he continued. Dr. Mott was next questioned as to whether he considered education responsible for the moral laxity of the day. "I don't think you can have too much education," he replied, "but there is no doubt that we owe a great deal to the downward trend of morality to a naturalistic philosophy, and a definite clear-cut expression of sincere, intelligent men."

"Student life is so complex," he concluded, "that they don't have time to play their doubts in serious, conscious."

EXPRESS OPINIONS ON RULE CHANGE

Student Opinion Against Advantage of Professional Coaches

KICKING GAME BEST

The undergraduate body has little or no interest in whether or not the forward pass is adopted in Canadian rugby, if the opinions expressed to "The Varsity" are authoritative.

Some members of the student body, regarded with alarm the introduction of American plays in Canadian rugby. The opinion was expressed that while both the American and the Canadian games had a common ancestry, they had each developed along separate lines and should be allowed to continue to do so. The introduction of play or plays from one would destroy the individual development of the other.

The employing of professional coaches for intercollegiate rugby, was generally frowned upon.

A. W. Taber, III S.P.S., thought the forward pass with some alterations might be adopted. "There is a strong tendency," he said, "to adopt American style of play. I think it a mistake for it would mean the undermining of the foundations upon which Canadian rugby is built. I should hate to see the Canadian kicking game disappear."

Other undergraduates about the campus were content to "know nothing about it" or failed to see where the projected new play would make a difference.

Press Club

The next meeting of the University Press Club will be on Wednesday, Dec. 11, at 1 o'clock. The guest of honour will be F. B. Strangways, editor of the "Varsity", 1925-26, and now on the Telegram. It will take the form of a luncheon meeting, and will be in the North Common Room, Hart House.

COLLEAGUES HOLD BANQUET FOR RETIRED PROFESSOR

A banquet in honour of W. S. Milner, M.A., Professor Emeritus of Greek and Roman History, was held in Hart House on Saturday evening. The dinner was arranged by Professor Milner's colleagues on the faculty on the occasion of his retirement after thirty-eight years' work at the University of Toronto. Following the meal in the Faculty Union, the guests adjourned to the Music Room. Here, with Principal M. W. Wallace in the chair, tributes were paid Professor Milner by Professor G. H. Neeldner on behalf of University College, and by Professor J. C. Robertson, Victoria, for the sister colleges. Sir Robert Falconer, as President of the University, also reviewed the accomplishments of the retiring professor.

HOLD HEALTH TALKS YEARLY AT VICTORIA

Series of Three Lectures Begins To-day at Victoria

SPONSORED BY W.U.A.

A rather exceptional opportunity is offered to all the women of the university in the three Health Talks to be given in Alumni Hall, Victoria College, the first of this week.

Dr. Norma Ford will speak to-day at 5 o'clock on "Hereditry". Dr. Ford is intensely interesting and the talk will be well worth hearing.

On Tuesday Dr. Edna Guest will show a reel "The Gift of Life". This reel supplied by the government, was made for the purpose of educating people on health topics.

Wednesday Dr. Margaret Patterson will speak on "The Women's Court". Dr. Patterson has had many interesting experiences and is in touch with the problems of interest to women in Toronto.

The Health Talks have been arranged by Miss Addison, Dean of Victoria women, in conjunction with the W. U. A., and the speakers have all been chosen with a regard for the students' interest.

The Health Talks, which are held each year at Victoria College are an indication of the progressive mode and of the increased interest in health in the last decade.

DENTAL PROFESSOR ISSUES STATEMENT

We publish below a statement issued by Dr. A. M. A. Mason, head of the Dental Infirmary, to correct a news story which appeared in Friday's "Varsity". The information from which the story was written and which was gleaned from sources believed to be reliable, has since been found to be inaccurate in certain details.

"The statement in 'The Varsity' is quite in error in that it would appear that ethyl-chloride was being used during an extraction operation. The facts are that no extraction of teeth or any other operation on the patient was taking place, but that the ethyl-chloride was being used only as a refrigerant on a piece of cotton."

Guests at the Delta Sigma subscription dance had a enjoyable evening in the banquet hall of the Royal York Hotel on Saturday.

JOHN KEITH

John Keith, Meds '30, who has been elected football captain. Keith has played at the centre position for three seasons and is rated as the best snap-back in intercollegiate football.

TO DEBATE QUESTION OF SMALL COLLEGE

Men and Women to Debate
At St. Joseph's on Tuesday

An interfaculty debate will be staged on Tuesday, Dec. 10, at 8 p.m. at St. Joseph's College.

This debate, the resolution for which is, "Resolved: That a small college contributes more proportionately to university life than a large college." Will be of particular interest in that men will debate with women students.

The debaters are Miss Geraldine Maloney, IV Arts, St. Joseph's; Miss Isabel Jordan, I Arts, U.C.; Egbert Carsan, III Vic; Gerald Graham, III, Trinity. Miss Maloney and Mr. Graham will uphold the affirmative, and Miss Jordan and Mr. Carsan the negative. The Women's Debating Union is responsible for the idea.

GROUP ENTERTAINED AT WOMEN'S UNION

Open house at the Women's Union is becoming an institution anticipated with enjoyment by many of the women of University College as well as their friends.

Last night Dorothy Beattie contributed several well chosen piano selections, and led in the singing of familiar negro spirituals.

The delightful intimacy of "Open House", made possible by the charming personality of the hostess, Miss Kilpatrick, leaves a most refreshing impression on those who have availed themselves of such an opportunity.

Installation Of Phonograph Favored By Some For Hart House Great Hall

"It is a pity that there are not more small dining rooms in Hart House, which are, undoubtedly, a great need at the present time," said Warden J. B. Bickersteth, commenting on the editorial in Friday's issue entitled "A Lost Art." Concerning the question of having an electric phonograph installed in Hart House, the Warden remarked, "It would seem to me fairly obvious that a phonograph would only add to the noise."

F. G. Boardman, II Vic, said, "I certainly agree with the suggestion of having music with the meals. I don't see why a Victrola couldn't be installed in Burwash Hall and in Hart House. Music would be a welcome addition." Concerning the quality of the meals, he continued, "I eat in Burwash Hall regularly. Haven't eaten any place else except on Sundays. We have no Sunday evening meal here. Some fellows kick, but the meals satisfy me."

"I consider that the meals at Knox are the best on the campus," said C. G. Boyd, "but it grieves me to think

MEN CHARGED WITH OVERCOAT THEFTS

Recent arrests by Toronto police of several young men charged with theft of coats from university buildings bid fair to bring to an end the epidemic of overcoat thieving that has been going on about the university for some time. William Brown, 261 Church St., is charged with the theft of coats and vagrancy. Two others, Thomas Bellmore and Philip Oldfield, both of 33 Alexander St., were also arrested of whom Oldfield is charged with stealing a coat.

WOMEN SATISFIED WITH DAILY 'EATS'

Week-End Research Finds the Women More Satisfied Than Men

NO COMPLAINING VOICE

That the women of the university are better satisfied with eating conditions than the men was proved by "The Varsity" over the week-end.

Elizabeth Eedy of I Vic said, "the service at Annesley is good, but one does weary of prunes and carrot soup." Ruth Treacy, II St. Mike's, thought that the dining room service at Loretto was nothing out of the ordinary, but that the meals were good—no complaints registered. Dorothy Riley, I St. Hilda's, with characteristic Trinity spirit, said their meals were "the best on the campus." "The food is as good as at home, and there's plenty of it," she added.

"They certainly are not," said Miss Mary Appleby, when approached as to whether eating conditions at the Women's Union were satisfactory. "Every day at 1.30," she continued, "when the doors should close there is a line-up 100 feet long, and many of the girls have two o'clocks. And then the beans—need we say more?"

Gertrude Johnson, IV Vic said, "The meals at Queen's Hall are most appetizing except, perhaps, for excessive quantity of almond flavouring, which to date has crept into everything but the bread; pork, muddy coffee, ham, and tapoca, commonly called 'fish eyes and glue'."

Margery Pickering from the same residence, said she found the meals good on the average, but "strongly objected to fish dinners."

You can govern all people with flattery, but when dealing with royalty you must lay it on with a trowel—Disraeli.

WOMEN ORGANIZE BAOMINGTON CLUB

Expect to Hold Tournament at Beginning of New Year

The organization tea of the Women's Badminton Club which was held at the Women's Union on Friday was a decided success.

The meeting was opened with a pleasant social half hour during which tea was served, Miss Boyd presiding. The discussion of plans that followed was led by the president, Laura Varing. It was stated that a number of new birds were required for this season and that the floor should be marked. To meet these expenses the president suggested a small fee for membership. It is expected that matters will be well under way next week.

A tournament will be held at the beginning of the New Year. The ladder system of playing will be adopted, as it is thought that this method would arouse keener interest. It was decided that graduates should be allowed to come members upon making proper application. Members may play any day except Wednesday afternoon when the Players' Guild occupies the room.

RIFLE CLUB CEASES SHOOTING FOR TIME

Members' Inactivity Makes Step Temporarily Necessary

WILL HOLD MEETING

Owing to inactivity on the part of range officers in turning out to supervise shooting, it has been decided to postpone all activities of the University of Toronto Rifle Association for an indefinite period of time.

G. H. Lucas, president of the organization, explained the situation, saying that the lack of interest and co-operation on the part of the majority of the members threw all the work onto the shoulders of a few active members—a very unsatisfactory state of affairs for the association as a whole. "We can't get men to act as range officers. Three or four active members are doing all the work, and until we can get members to work as they should, there is no use in going on," said Dr. Lucas.

The organization has about 100 members, of which 7 showed up at the first meeting held this year and 5 at the second. In the near future a meeting will be called for the purpose of stirring interest in the association and engaging the future co-operation of the delinquent members.

It is expected that shooting will start with renewed interest after the first of January, as it is likely that impending Christmas exams and other activities are responsible for some of the lack of interest in the rifle association.

Dr. Lucas pointed out that all the time required of a range officer would be one and one half to two hours a month.

SUPPER IN GREAT HALL

Dancers and Diners Give Vent to Yells of Season's Rivals

With a setting that was both exotic and prismatic, the At-home of the University of Toronto Athletic Association was held in Hart House Friday night. Personages of note in athletics and in letters danced in the big gymnasium, which was completely disguised with festoons of brilliant colors hanging from the roof and from the gallery. At one end of the floor the orchestra played on a dais backed by a screen painted in the shades of the spectrum, and at the other end, a spotlight shone on the shield of the Athletic Association.

In the pool, too, there was colour. A mirrored globe was suspended low over the water; as it revolved slowly, coloured spot-lights played on it, with the effect that a myriad dashes of variegated light floated over the entire wall and ceiling of the room.

A sit-down supper was served in the Great Hall, consisting of hors d'oeuvres variety, combination jellied chicken and potato salad, ice cream moulded into animal figures, and coffee, and candies.

During the two suppers, vigorous university and faculty yells were given, as well as Queen's and McGill yells.

The At-home committee consisted of Messrs. W. A. Bean (Chairman), J. W. Graham, J. T. Jackson, W. S. Kerin, W. M. Martin and J. D. Sinclair.

NO JARLINE AWARDS YET

"As yet no result has been issued by the examiners for the Jardine Memorial Prize for English verse," stated the Registrar in reply to "The Varsity's" question as to when the announcement of the award will be forthcoming. "The date is undecided; it will not be for a while yet."

The Jardine Memorial Prize is awarded annually and is of the value of one hundred dollars. It may be withheld in any year if the poems submitted have not sufficient merit to warrant the award. The prize was given in 1926 to N. A. Benson, in 1927 to F. W. Burton and last year to Miss Dorothy Livesay.

"I DINNA KEN ABOUT IT" SAYS HART HOUSE PORTER

Who broke the glass in the fire-hose cabinet just outside the Great Hall in Hart House the night of the School Dinner?

When asked this question the Hall Porter replied, "I don't know, I'm sure."

"Are you sure?"
"Positively."
"When was it done?"
"I dinna ken a thing about it."
The mystery is still unsolved.

Antics Afield

Our omniscient contemporary, the Denver Clarion, has recently published the results of arduous research into the genetic art of labial osculation. Noted bacteriologists are quoted as saying that modern cosmetics are quite strong enough to kill any bacteria that might be transmitted, but that "the short and snappy kiss is better by several thousand bacteria than the long and lingering kind." The quotation, "It is safer to kiss a cow than a woman," has been proved incorrect, according to the Clarion.

N.F.C.U.S.

We note with pleasure that the National Federation of Canadian University Students is proposing student tours to Europe. There is no doubt that the N.F.C.U.S. has more claim to this function than any other body; it is Canadian. We are more than pleased to note that the Federation shows signs of action that are discernible in Toronto. And now we wonder if the Federation could be persuaded to look into the matter of excursion rates to and from important and strategic points in Canada for students, individually or collectively.

IS THIS, THEN, TREASON?

Certain misunderstanding has become evident since the publication of our editorial, "O Canada", for we are imputed with the opinion that travel in Canada is an all-sufficient and all-embracing education, superior to a sojourn beneath the spires of Oxford, or a grand tour of Europe. We are not prepared to go so far as to assume responsibility for such a suggestion, but we do declare that the man who goes abroad before he knows his own country thoroughly, and seeks strange learning before he masters that of his people, has either an infernal nerve or a singular absence of national pride. More: Canada, a country of diverse creeds, opinions and interests, looking to the future and not dwelling on the past, offers in herself a liberal education which requires but little supplement.

FACE FACTS!

We refer the reader to a sour letter printed elsewhere on this page from a J. L. Mortimer, who appears as a woman-hater and a synical bird in spite of his own protestations to the contrary. The man must be a powerful jumper to conclusions, for he overlooks one prime fact: the members of Hart House are present on Sunday evenings at those concerts, and they do appreciate the music. The applause following the programme of the Hart House Quartet last night is ample proof of this.

We challenge J. L. Mortimer to get around this fact.

More, suppose the Concerts do provide a place to go on Sunday evenings. We submit that this is a fine thing, and a justification in itself for Sunday Evening "mixed" Concerts.

Perhaps we may hear again from J. L. Mortimer.

BACK TO THE KITCHEN!

An anonymous dean, writing in the Saturday Evening Post, tells of mothers he has met in his career as disciplinarian and adviser of students. He implies that the maternal hand guides a little too strongly for the good of the twenty year old son, and cites painful cases where maw has over-riden the bounds of taste and expediency in bossing the son and, incidentally, clashed with the dean himself.

Earlier in the season ebullient Professor Alfred Rogers, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, publicly opined that women were dominating our civilization. He pointed to school teachers, invariably female, who shape the formative years of youth with the result that men are led to be mental sissies.

There are rumblings on our own campus. Victoria finds a first year preponderantly girlish. Acta Victoriana complains about it in the October issue. We suspect, and believe that observation will verify our suspicion, that the masculine tribe is realizing the peril, and will soon adopt drastic measures before becoming utterly dominated abroad by women, as it is now at home. In this event, we prophesy a sudden picking-up in the spinning-wheel, crochet-needle, tatting-hook and churn business.

Vic. Dramatics

Noel Coward and the Victoria College Dramatic Society sound like two distinctly anomalous entities, but by some mysterious alchemy the anomaly was not evident in last week's production of "Hay Fever", which Vic Dramatics presented at Hart House Theatre. Direction doubtless had much to do with it. The production showed conclusively what can be done with young amateurs by capable directors. Mr. Edgar Stone and Mr. H. H. Hitchman merit a large share of the plaudits through their work in easing a group of undergraduates into a sophisticated modern drawing-room comedy.

"Hay Fever" has situation rather than plot. It concerns the artist-fam-ily of Bliss and the complications which ensue at a week-end party due to a series of guests, each of whom has been introduced to the household by a different member of the family in pursuance of the engrossing individualism which each member has built up around his or her own particular art and without reference to the demands of family or the amenities of society. The title comes from the game in which the uncomfortable party—the ill-sorted couples shuffled since the original introduction—attempts to indulge at the beginning of the second act.

The most amazing feature of the production was the quality of the individual performers. The high spot was the work of Miss Louise Hurlburt as Judith Bliss, the actress-mother who didn't know how to grow old. Miss Hurlburt has a sureness of touch and a degree of poise rarely seen on the amateur stage. What weaknesses she has are not visible to the untrained eye and are of the sort which further experience and constructive direction will eradicate. Second choice for honours should go to Miss Ruth Moore as Jackie Coryton, the vacuous flapper whom Judith's authority husband introduces to the home to afford him the opportunity of studying

Dear Sir:

I notice that there is a sign posted in the Tuck Shop requesting members to vacate the space at the counter when they have been served. The abuse of this notice has been both long-standing and flagrant. I am sure that no one particularly wants to stand around waiting to be served, while two or three possessive individuals eat their lunches draped along the counter.

Now, Sir, if I can presume upon your kindness to print this letter, we may get some really satisfactory results in the matter.

OPEN EVENINGS

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Wednesday and Thursday of this week are the dates set for the annual Junior Assault. Competition is restricted to those who have not won in their class at previous Varsity meets. The bouts are generally hotly contested with plenty of heavy slugging on the part of the embryo boxers. Each year this assault brings out at least several men who make a name for themselves in the ring.

* * *

Reports from Queen's indicate that the Kingston centre of learning hopes to be a big noise at the Intercollegiate Assault-at-Arms. Coach Jack Jarvis is said to have unearthed a demon boxer in the welterweight class who will bring home the bacon. The Tricolour have made a good showing in the last few years and will provide tough opposition for Varsity and McGill.

* * *

Jimmy Jackson, intercollegiate light-heavy boxing champion, has decided not to compete this year. After winning the middleweight championship two years in a row, Jackson represented Varsity in the 175 lb. class in the Intercollegiate Assault at Queen's last winter and won handily. This season as president of the B. W. and F. Club, he will still have an active part in the game.

* * *

Harry Hills, 1929 heavyweight boxing champion, is another absentee from the Varsity boxing squad. Hills graduated in Medicine, leaving a place hard to fill.

* * *

Varsity intermediates opened their season by losing an exhibition game to Queen's seniors in Belleville. The Blue and White held the opposition in the first period, but the Tricolour held the whip hand thereafter. The second sextet look good enough to at least win their group this year and also another Intermediate Intercollegiate Championship.

* * *

Young Rangers' win over Varsity seniors in the senior S.P.A. opener won't do the senior grouping any harm. And it will do the Blue and White a lot of good. Varsity, after playing together for a season, and having gone as far as the eastern finals last year, should have walloped the Rangers properly. Perhaps the Blues will get down to work now. Queen's have an improved collection of puck-chasers and the National Yacht Club, the fourth senior entry, on paper appear to have a much stronger team than Young Rangers. Varsity will find the going a little tougher this season, but have the ability to win another O.H.A. title when they get the condition and team-play that their annual American trip should give them.

* * *

St. Thomas Tigers won the Canadian junior football championship by defeating Moosejaw Saturday by 14-0. St. Thomas lost the finals in '28 to Regina Pats, but got ample revenge by Saturday's victory on the home grounds of the western team.

Intermediates go Down Before Queen's Seniors at Belleville

NEW RINK OPENED

The University of Toronto intermediate team was defeated 7 to 2 by Queen's seniors in an exhibition game which officially opened Belleville's new artificial ice hockey arena last Friday night. The rink was made possible by a generous gift of $50,000 by Mr. W. J. Hume. W. A. Hewitt, president of the O.H.A., P. J. Mulqueen, president of the S.P.A., and James T. Sutherland, past president of the O.H.A., were present at the formal opening. Mr. Hewitt dropped the puck to mark the initial game at the new arena.

Queen's had the edge in play throughout the game, holding a lead in every quarter. They showed a better condition and maintained a fast pace for the entire 60 minutes. Mungavon, the Tricolour coach, used two forward lines, Lee, Reist and Reid composing one line, and Lawlor, Smith and Bellringer the other. The latter trio was the smoother, having played together for the past three seasons. Lawlor, at centre for the winners, proved extremely tricky and was the best man on the ice. "Gib" McKelvey was a tower of strength on the Queen's defence, while Quinn in goal was called upon to make a brilliant stand in the nets.

Statham and Clute were the stand-outs on the Blue and White line-up, while Leake was effective. Lee counted first for the Tricolour, from inside the defence. Leake quickly retaliated. Quinn was bombarded by the blue sharpshooters, but was not scored upon again that period. Smith put Queen's in the lead when he batted in Lawlor's rebound.

In the second frame Queen's opened out and Lee, Conn, Bellringer, McKelvey and Lawlor scored. Statham accounted for Varsity's other tally. The last period was slow and Lee completed the scoring for the evening to make the final count 7 to 2 for Queen's.

After the game the players were taken to the Belleville Club, where they were entertained by the directors and their friends.

Queen's—Goal, Quinn; defence, Boland and McKelvey; centre, Lee; wings, Reist and Reid; subs, Squires, Murphy, Bellringer, Lawlor and Smith. U. of T.—Goal, Moran; defence, Smith and Graham; centre, Clute; wings, Statham and Leake; subs, Clancy, Conn, Pereyema, Malcolin, Robinson and McCartney.

tinuous, and, above all, conclusive thinking."

On being asked if the allegations in K. Mayo's "Mother India" were true, Dr. Mott replied in the affirmative. "Her book has done a great deal of good in stimulating interest in India," he declared. "The weak point is that it isn't the whole truth; that is, she has seen only one side of the shield." "The peoples of Asia are carrying well-nigh impossible economic burdens," said Doctor Mott, who has just returned from the Orient, addressing a large gathering in Convocation Hall yesterday. The average peasant family of Japan lives on a dollar and a half a month, and all strata of society are similarly handicapped. In Montreal, Que. Dec. 6.—The Royal York Hotel at Toronto is to have an important addition upon which the actual work is to be started almost immediately. The matter has been under discussion for some time and President E. W. Beatty this afternoon gave his approval to the plans and announced the signing of contracts for the work.

The addition will consist of a new wing rising in the centre of the north side of the present building. It will rise 21 storeys above the ceiling of the convention mezzanine, and will contain something over 160 rooms, including six special suites. All the rooms and their furnishings will be up to the standard of the rest of the hotel. Two of the special suites will be termed flower suites, with special decorations in which floral motifs and colours prevail. Two of them will be Dutch in style while one will be Swiss and one modernistic.

U.S. THROWS LIGHT ON FOOTBALL GAME

PITTSBURGH VS. CALIFORNIA

With the close of the U.S. football season comes the announcement that the University of Pittsburgh has been chosen to represent the east against the University of California, western standard bearers, in the annual Rose Bowl game at Pasadena on New Year's Day. Football spectacles of his sort and games such as the recent Notre Dame-Southern California encounter which 123,000 people witnessed at Soldiers' Field, Chicago, forcibly demonstrate that American college football has been developed and exploited to an amazing extent.

The development of night football in certain sections of the States is another aspect of the game which is bound to receive more and more attention. The use of artificial illumination for sporting events staged outdoors has gone a long way from the few feeble spot-lights of some years ago.

The writer recently attended a night game in Detroit between Dayton University and the University of Detroit. The latter's stadium, Dinan Field, is a fine new modern structure of two large concrete stands each side of the gridiron, seating about twenty-five thousand spectators. Around the field was a series of forty poles about fifty feet in height, each bearing two huge lights set in a reflector. These lights illuminated the field to an almost unbelievable degree, and gave a uniform illumination over the entire gridiron. The highest punt during the game could be seen by players and spectators alike as clearly as by day. In place of the usual light-brown colour, the oval was painted with some sort of white composition which greatly increased its visibility.

Whether or not night football is a success in Detroit may be judged by the fact that the stadium was completely filled at the game at which the writer was present. Incidentally this was the second night scheme of the season and not exactly a novelty.

Night football appears to have two great virtues. The first is the avoidance of schedule clashes between neighbouring universities. In other words one college game does not suffer because of another one being played at the same time, and but a few miles way.

Korea conditions are improving though fifty per cent of the peasants are in debt and both India and China are suffering from famines. The conditions influence missionary activity in the East, and the question arises as to whether or not industrial practices of the West are justifiable when applied to the East.

Dr. Mott went on to say that Turkey is making great progress in the world to-day. Its influence is being felt even in India and Arabia. The Turks have a definite goal and are making great strides toward that end, never losing sight of it for an instant. China is the most national nation to-day—there, patriotism is great in its manifestations. This spirit is remarkable because the country is fraught with civil war.

There is not one nation in the East or West that understands its neighbour, yet the international question is more hopeful, thinks Dr. Mott, even if there are ten million more men under arms than in 1914, twenty nationalists are writing for peace where formerly there was only one.

Unfortunately there is a lowering of Western prestige among the people of the Orient and there are reasons for it. The nations are not satisfied with external diplomatic relations. A short time ago there were less than two score Chinese students attending foreign universities. Now there are hundreds attending colleges in England, America, France and Germany. When these students return to their native China they play leading parts in their municipalities. Four out of six of the Cabinet of Chiang are these foreign trained students and Christians.

With the introduction of Christianity into Asia there has been a great transformation. It is the beginning of an internationalism of Christ.

Simon Bliss, the caricaturist-son of David and Judith, but at times was inclined to heaviness. Mr. Martyn excels in broad comedy, and in the moments when this was demanded of him he was excellent. Mr. Ellis Snelgrove as David Bliss, the father, had a good understanding of the character, but seemed to lack the polish which experience brings. Mr. Keith MacMillan as Sandy Tyrell did a good job in the part of the awkward young boxer. Miss Olive Ives as the maid, Clara, did a neat bit of character work. Miss Lois Reynolds as Myra Arundel was or the most part convincing as the intelligent woman of the world, and not only in the moments when she seemed to have difficulty with her delivery. Miss Marion Scott as Sorel Bliss, sister of Simon, appeared to feel the part of the dissatisfied girl, but was handicapped by paucity of gesture. Obviously the directors had ruled that attempts at an English drawing-room accent were barred—a wise decision under the circumstances, but it required all the fine work of the cast to regain the illusion thus lost. A uniform lightness of make-up, too, lost fineness in the characters, especially against the drab background of the set.

Sunday Evening Concert

The fifty-ninth of the Hart House Sunday evening concerts was presented by the Hart House Quartet, playing the Sextet in G major, Op. 36 of Brahms and the Quartet in C major, Op. 33, No. 3 of Haydn. The Sextet was rendered with the assistance of Vito Harisay playing the viola and Leo Smith at the violoncello.

While the enthusiastic applause testified to the respect with which these famous artists are regarded in Toronto, the postures of many in the audience during the recital of the first offering especially would almost lead one to believe that the masterful rendering of the many technical intricacies was rather over the heads of a musically uneducated audience. The sweeping cadences of the Brahms quartet, and especially the delicacy of the Finale were evidently much more to their taste.

W.U.A. Musicale

Mr. Campbell McInnes arranged a highly enjoyable hour of music at the W.U.A. musicale yesterday afternoon. Ably seconded by Professor Kemp at the piano, Mr. J. J. Knights, violinist, and by those in charge of the lantern, Mr. McInnes initiated an enthusiastic audience of U.C. women into the de-

Lurid Letters Later Leave Latent Lover Listlessly Longing Lavender Literature

By Helen Price

We have long been addicted to the habit. The habit of saving our letters. Not that we read them over or wrap them up in lavender and pink ribbon, but we save them.

At present three desk drawers, the top drawer in our trunk, and a large box at home are crammed with the epistles of our childhood, girlhood, womanhood (see the Elsie series for further details).

We keep them for—

A. If any of the writers should become sufficiently famous or sufficiently infamous, we could collect series 946, e. viz., the correspondence of Myrtle M. Miller at the age of 15. Here would be found the girlish character developments of Miss Miller and meaty little extracts could be chosen for illustrations.

"My dearest, 'he' is so heavenly. Dark men have always been my passion, and he canoes so gracefully."

"B. If any of the writers became sufficiently wealthy, we would have all facilities for practicing a good facsimile of their signatures. Mr. Croft, who makes his name look like Elliott by some divine gift, would render us a very handsome income from small forged cheques."

C. If any of them became sufficiently wealthy and sufficiently respectable, here would be the vast field of blackmail opened before us.

Mr. G. D. Welles would have to pay large rolls of hush money to quiet our disclosures, and Miss E. L. McDougall would be ruined if we disclosed her background.

Ah, yes, quite literary, these letters. D. Then we would always have means of an evening's joyous entertainment. A few old friends drop in to see us.

"What shall we do?"

"My dear, I will get my letters."

Then we read series 386, and 794, and while George Jones and Miss Turner become increasingly red and purple, the rest of the guests will be amply amused.

E. It occurred to us recently that the love letters of one's husband could be handily used to paper the living room, or den, etc. The more lurid ones could be concealed tastefully behind the prints of "The Song of the Lark," or "The Doctor," (what is a home without "The Doctor"?). Then when friend spouse became cold, angry, abusive, or merely disillusioned, one could point, proudly, coldly, plaintively, or even threateningly, to letter number 8, two rows down from the moulding on the south wall.

Or in highly dramatic moments, "The Doctor" could be snatched down (special snatch permitting picture hangers for "The Doctor" at 59c a case) and with flashing eyes point to the inscriptions—

"All my love, dearest heart, forever and ever—Your own little Ralphie." This is the end.

BULLETIN BOARD

ITALIAN-SPANISH CLUB

A meeting will be held on Tuesday evening, Dec. 10th at 8.15, at Wymilwood, 84 Queen's Park. Signor Amrosi, Italian Vice-Consul, will give a talk, illustrated with moving pictures. Musical program and good refreshments; everybody welcome.

lights of community singing. "Music has grown out of carols and folk-songs," stated Mr. McInnes. "To appreciate music, you must do music. The individual who has made an effort to produce music, will appreciate infinitely more the efforts and success of others whom he may hear." Christmas carols and folk-songs were sung with much delight. "Adelstein Fideles," "The First Nowell," "O Polly Love O Polly," "John Peel," "Two Magicians," "Good King Wenceslas," "In Bethlehem City," "The Twelve Days of Christmas," an accumulative carol; "A la Clare Fontaine," "Shenandoah," and "The Curate Song," comprised the programme. Although a somewhat new departure, the songster met with such success that it is quite probable more will be arranged for at a very near date.

U.C. CHRISTMAS CARDS

University College students who signed the lists in the main hall or in the women's cloak room prior to 11 a.m. Friday, Dec. 6th, may receive their Christmas cards in the main hall of the college between 9.45 and 11.45 a.m. to-day (Monday).

RIFLE ASSOCIATION

A meeting of the association will be held on Tuesday at 1.15 at Hart House. The place of meeting will be announced to-morrow.

CORRESPONDENCE

Fussing, Not Music

Editor,
"The Varsity".

Sir:

May I, through your columns, ask: Are there music lovers at the University of Toronto? I just wonder whether there are, or not, for I saw a packed Great Hall last night at the Sunday Evening Concert. I wonder how many of those that attend care a rap for the programmes given, or for music in general.

It is always difficult to get tickets or the concerts, which may also be a good sign, and then again, it may not be. I feel that it is the latter.

The Music Room seems quite big enough for all the men lovers of music, as the Friday afternoon recitals have shown. Then why have the concert on Sunday evening in the Great Hall where a woman companion may be brought and where many who only wish to fill in an evening with a girl may come while he who really comes for music can find no place?

A peculiar feature of the ticket distribution is that when the double tickets are handed out there is a lot of bother and hocus-pocus, while when single tickets are given out there is never a crowd, and though the announced hour is one o'clock, one can always get a ticket at two.

The deduction that one must invariably reach is that the concerts on Sunday evening are only for those who wish to bring a "woman," as they call the females, to Hart House and fill in an otherwise vacant evening.

If it is being run for that purpose, why not have a jazz orchestra down and show movies with a view of hockey players at practices. The darkness that is so necessary for the movies, would certainly be welcomed by those attending.

I throw this out as an earnest suggestion to the Music Committee: Try one evening with men alone. See how many come. No, I am not cynical; I just want to disprove what has been forced upon the students by circumstances.

J. L. Mortimer.

WOMEN BAD MEDICINE

Burwash Don States Few Men
Misuse Privileges
Granted

Describing women as everything from "bad medicine" and "awful nuisances" to "pleasant and agreeable," men on the campus hold varied opinions concerning yesterday's editorial, "Back to the Kitchen."

Rev. W. J. Little, B.A., Don of North House, Burwash Hall, stated that he had never experienced any clashing between parental guidance of the men in residence and his own influence, but that there might be isolated cases.

"Since the war," he said, "high school students have been given much more freedom than before. I take the view that a man coming down here is old enough to think for himself. Of course, here it's different from the ease of a man coming down to get a job in the city without knowing anybody. The residence forms a community which is pretty well self-sufficient. The men all know each other pretty well, and the upper class men and the officials can keep an eye on the rest. I have found that very few men coming down here misuse the greater freedom they experience."

Speaking of the effect of too much parental control of university men, A. E. S. Davison, II Vic, said, "Most of the people that live in residence have an advantage over out-of-residence people, because with the latter, not only maternal but also paternal guidance is too clinging. The tendency of parents is still to regard their children as children, no matter how old they are. It's bad for their outlook, I think. After high school, if a person is out on his own, I think he's alright."

Asked what he thought about the increased attendance of women at the university, Mason Stinson, II B, and M. said, "I don't know anything about women. They're bad medicine for students."

Stan Taylor, II Vic, on the other hand, was all for the women. "I think they make life pleasant and happy and agreeable," he said.

W. E. Ricker, B.A., a graduate of Victoria and class assistant in Biology, would only say, "I think women are the diesel, especially in Victoria College." He declined to define the term.

A popular student in II St. Mike's, who refused to give his name lest it damage his popularity, waxed eloquent on the subject. "It just shows," he said, "that the women are trying to reach the heights men have reached in previous years. They'll never succeed; it's all in their imagination."

RESEARCH SCHOLARSHIP OPEN TO STUDENTS HERE

The Royal Commissioners for the Exhibition of 1951 have invited the University of Toronto to nominate a candidate, or candidates, for the three Scholarships to be offered by the Commissioners for award in Canada in 1930.

Information regarding these scholarships may be found on pp. 82 and 83 of the current Arts calendar. Applications accompanied by theses as evidence of the candidates' ability for original research must be received at the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall, not later than April 15th, 1930.

Readers are requested to take notice that contributions for the Christmas issue of "The Varsity" must reach the "Varsity" office, in Hart House, or the women's news office in University College before 5:00 p.m., Thursday, Dec. 12. Contributions should be addressed to P. E. Usher, feature editor of "The Varsity."

Available Room to all Women Students

"Please emphasize the fact that the Rest Room is for ALL the women students of the university—public health nurses, students in Social Service, everyone," said Dr. Edith Gordon, when interviewed by "The Varsity" yesterday.

Dr. Gordon finds that many students who report at the medical office are benefitted by a sojourn in the Rest Room, and those whom she does not consider in condition for gymnasium classes may spend the gym period in the Rest Room with no loss of marks for attendance. It is a most inviting room with its open windows, its fireplace, and its four comfortable cots furnished with cozy, coloured blankets.

This welcome addition to the facilities at 81 St. George Street, was considered to be officially open after the visit of Sir Robert Falconer on Wednesday, November 27th.

QUEEN'S PROTEST DEBATE METHODS

DO NOT WISH NEW DEBATE

The secretary of the W.I.D.U. of Toronto has received a letter from the president of the Levana Society at Queen's objecting to the manner in which the recent intercollegiate debate was carried on. It seems Queen's doesn't like the open house method at all, but in particular they very much dislike the variety we had. They expressed the opinion that their speakers should not have been interrupted from the floor, and once interrupted, should have been allowed time at the end of their speech to make up for the loss incurred. However, neither Miss Bell nor Miss Schroeder, their first and second speakers, used any more than 16 minutes of the original allotted 20.

They suggested that in the event of open house debating continuing, each visiting team should be accompanied by 4 or 5 loyal supporters. They pointed out the fact that formal debating is in vogue at Queen's, and that the type of debate to be used is not clearly defined in the constitution of the W.I.D.U. Nevertheless they didn't wish a new debate, but merely to call attention to the facts as they saw them.

Miss Marie Crean, secretary of the W.I.D.U. of Toronto, has answered the letter and tried to explain away the misunderstanding and to state the fact that open house debating is the only variety that Varsity indulges in.

Identical Twins, Separated From Infancy

"Heredity is a little like fortune telling," said Dr. Norma Ford, speaking on Heredity last night, at Victoria College, the first of a series of Health Lectures sponsored by the W.U.A.

As an outstanding example of Heredity, Dr. Ford showed the famous chart of two American families, the Max Jukes, who never did one outstanding deed for the welfare of the nation and who through jails and asylums cost the state $1,250,000, and the Jonathon Edwards family who were all professors, lawyers and of whom no one was ever known to have been convicted of crime. Of this family Sir Vincent Massey is a descendant.

Dr. Ford explained "genes" as the basis of all our characteristics. Of the dominance of certain genes she told of the peculiar lip of the Spanish Royal family, traced through eighteen generations.

A very interesting experiment in Heredity was the case of a pair of girl twins, separated from infancy and brought up in entirely different environments. They were found to be physically equal, both with superior intelligence, and popular. It was even found they had suffered breakdowns at the same time. Psychology found a few differences, but the Biologist found them entirely similar.

"Boys and girls are only identical twins in story books," stated Dr. Ford. "Brother and sister twins are called ordinary twins and are never identical."

A letter was written by this student to the "Varsity" deploring the fact that members do not vacate the space at the counter as the sign suggests. This poster reads: "After being served, will members please move away from the counter so that others can be waited on."

"A part of the counter was covered especially for the purpose of serving bottles on it. The whole idea is to make the service as fast as possible. Three law-breakers are now looking through the grim iron bars of a Toronto goal, as a result of thieving on the University of Toronto campus. They are William Brown of 261 Church Street, Thomas Bellmore and Philip Oldfield, both of 33 Alexander Street.

Brown has had experience in this sort of work before and has been watched by the city police. He was on probation when he was arrested last week and although he was not caught with the actual goods, his appearance around the university was warrant enough, it seems, for his arrest.

The overcoats had been stolen from the Botany Building and the Mining Building. Besides the overcoats, gloves and silk scarfs were stolen. The gloves and scarfs were traced to one of the offenders' home and are being held as evidence.

"It was entirely due to the good work of Sergeant Darcy of the University Police," said Detective Sergeant Johns of the Toronto police force.

"Darcy suspected these men and then turned them over to us. We have not got the overcoats yet, but we hope to in a couple of days."

The three vagrants were brought up for trial last December, but were remanded until Dec. 13, when they will appear in court at 10 o'clock.

They expect at least fifty enthusiastic members and their first tournament to be held after Christmas will depend on the working out of the challenge system.

PICKUP TEAM GIVES VARSIITY REAL BATTLE

Varsity's intercollegiate basketball team defeated the Broadway "Y" by the score of 44-23. Broadway was not represented by a regular team and their hap hazard method of playing somewhat disrupted the team play of Varsity.

Varsity shone in parts of the game, displaying a superb team play, the dream of the coach, but in others their judgment would and did cause him much grief. At no time was Varsity in danger but for a space of ten minutes they did not sink the ball and a mere pickup team seemed to have cornered them. Coach McCutcheon begged them to show something, and they came through in fine style.

Their play will be a feature in making a better name for themselves in international games. Horton for Varsity, played a nice offensive game, but needs much improvement on the defense. O'Leary displayed his usual (Continued on page 3)

FRENCH LANGUAGE SUBJECT OF TALK

Universal Use of French Due to Cleanness and Preciseness

PRECISIDITY DISCUSSED

"Precisidity marks the first direct influence of women in French literature," said Rev. Father Bondy, C.S.B., in his address to the Cercle Français at St. Joseph's College. "Till then women inspired, but did not criticize literature. The 17th century was the beginning of the salons. Precisidity was not a feature in literature only in France, but could be found in England, Italy and Spain under the names of Euphuism, Marinism and Gargoylism. Precisidity at first stood for culture and refinement and it flourished in the salon of Catherine de Vivonne, Marquise de Rambouillet. She succeeded in attracting around her the greatest men of the age, Corneille, Bossuet, Voltaire and Racine; Richelieu did not attend because he could not direct the Hotel Rambouillet. Bossuet made his first sermon there at the age of sixteen at eleven o'clock in the evening which led Voltaire to say, 'Je n'ai jamais entendu un sermon si tôt et si tard.'"

The salons helped to render the French language clear and precise; these qualities made it a universal language in Europe for two centuries and it has remained the diplomatic language to this day.

Amusing allusions were made to the epithets the Precisitudes substituted for the language of everyday life. Exaggerated adverbs and the conclusions of letters, are present day revivals. A stop was put to affectation with the coming of Boileau and Moliere. However, it had a revival in the salons of the 18th century until the coming of the philosophers.

A "Noel" artistically rendered by Miss Helen Dolan and "Les Soirees de Quebec," a medley of French-Canadian folk songs, sung by the College Glee Club ended a most pleasant evening.

OPINION FAVORABLE CLASSICAL TONE IN PROGRAMMES

Hart House Sunday Musicales
Are Honestly Enjoyed
Say Students

APPROVE FEMININE GUESTS

"If They Were Out for a Free
Date They Could Go to Church"

"It is absolute nonsense, and the ideas are absurd," stated Mr. N. E. Algie, III S.P.S., a member of the Music Committee of Hart House, in reference to Mr. J. L. Mortimer's letter in yesterday's "Varsity." "Most of those present come solely to enjoy the music and there is no reason why the girls should be deprived. If they were out for a free date they might just as well go to church. The musicales afford an opportunity for culture not gained at lectures and quite often two male students make use of a double ticket. I don't see the sense of having a concert for men alone because there is no real need for it. The Sunday concerts are a real change from most phases of university life and need no substitute."

"During the last few weeks I have found that some such opinion as Mr. Mortimer expressed does exist, but the majority have a love for music," stated Mr. A. M. Ross, III U.C., also a member of the Music Committee. "A concert open to men only would hardly prove advisable as the girls have as fine a musical taste. As for having jazz orchestras and movies instead of the concerts, there is no sense to that as we can get that anywhere."

"Only those who have a real appreciation of their worth go to the concerts," was the opinion of Mr. J. M. Friedman, IV U.C. "I think girls have a finer taste for music than us, and the presence of a female companion leads to a discussion and better appreciation of the concerts."

"In these modern days of easy access to automobiles or radios in the parlour, only true music lovers take advantage of the opportunity afforded by these Sunday evening concerts," stated Mr. S. Hermant, I U.C. "Sunday night is one night in which to appreciate real worthwhile concerts, and any other thing such as jazz orchestras or movies would only make us more barbaric. The Sunday night concerts are one of the few civilizing forces and their worth is realized by all who attend them."

Antics Afield

The undergraduates of dear old Hallowd have been upholding the ancient dignity of their illustrious university in traditional fashion. Members of the staff of the "Lampoon" recently invaded New Haven, Conn., the seat of Yale University, and removed with due stealth and solemnity a portion of the famous Real Old Fence, a relic of the barrier which surrounded the Real Old Campus in the Real Old Days of the last century.

Of the two portions still in existence, one is in the possession of a Yale fraternity, and the other is that which was abstracted from the premises of a local photographer, where it was used as a perch for all the college heroes when they looked at the pretty birdie.

A long week later the staff of the Yale "Record" were accorded a dinner at Hallowd and their prodigal Real Old Fence was returned, to the accompaniment of a quartet on the piccolo, soup, and first and second celery.

SKATOLOGY

In the recent weeks we have attended two shows in local movie palaces. At both of these we heard more insinuations, sly meanings, fast ones, droll allusions, and general skatology, than a sleuth could pick up in a year's attendance upon stag dinners, locker rooms and army barracks. And these lowlinesses seem to be tolerated in public theatres, when the average person would scarcely care to repeat them in private. More, it is one thing to whisper such fast ones behind the hand, and distinctly another to have them belloyed at one from the silver screen.

In addition to the movies, a small humorous work treating the perfectly ludicrous subject of back yard architecture has enjoyed wide circulation, and has been discussed in the best circles during recent months.

We wonder if a certain lowering of moral tone may not be adduced from such symptoms as these we mention. It is to be hoped that the student of history will not be led to draw certain obvious parallels between these times and the decadence of ancient civilizations.

DILEMMA

The time is at hand when every undergraduate must take counsel with his soul. During the fall interesting activities are joyfully entered, responsibilities gladly taken on: now even the smallest committee meetings begin to bite into the time needed for examinations and long-overdue essays. There are, regrettably, only twenty-four hours in each day, and one has to sleep for eight of them. The deciding of which activity to drop is long and bitter.

We do not paternally advise either studies or activities; how could we? Studies build a mental capacity for concentration on a long and complicated problem, which is a valuable asset, but the better physical and mental extramural activities build up certain qualities of character just as valuable in life. Too much study makes the cleverest man dull; too much diversified activities make the sanest man superficial. But to all those who struggle now in the throes of indecision we throw out a cheery thought: this very decision is itself perhaps one of the most educational phases of a university career. Life itself is largely a problem of finding out one's capacity and then carefully choosing varied activities to fill it, without leaving time for mental indolence or robbing precious leisure.

A MODEL LEAGUE OF NATIONS

In our news columns the other day we carried an account of the formation of a university club to organize a Model Assembly of the League of Nations. Delegates from all Canadian universities and a number of prominent folk will be invited to the event; it will take as nearly as possible the exact form of an assembly of the League of Nations at Geneva, and everyone will pretend he is a representative from France, Lithuania or what have you. May we commend this project. An economically young and growing country like Canada becomes so intensely interested in its own development that it is likely not to find time to think much about international affairs or to try to grasp the viewpoints of other nations, an omission which can be found even in a university. In this assembly the delegate must not only speak on world problems, but must do so earnestly and passionately from the point of view, say, of Czecho-Slovakia; besides which he can observe the machinery of the League at work in miniature and judge himself of its aptness for the task in hand. Surely, we feel, no enterprise is better calculated than this to breed that cosmopolitan attitude which so well becomes a large university. When undergraduates can attempt such a project, perhaps our fathers are wrong, and the younger generation is not going to the dogs.

WE DO NOT CRITICISE

We print a second letter from J. L. Mortimer in our Correspondence Column. We hardly feel that his statements merit comment, for there can be no doubt in anyone's mind that the Hart House Quartet programme Sunday evening was fully appreciated by the audience, no matter what our correspondent says about applause.

Art, Music and Drama

Sketch Room

Pictures have personalities just as human beings have. The expressive power to reveal the individual behind the brush and canvas is the quality possessed by a great master. Tom Stone, whose latest work is now on exhibition in our Sketch Room, may not be a "great master" in the modern and generally accepted interpretation of the phrase which mere usage insists on restricting to such classics as Giotto, Raphael, Da Vinci, Rembrandt and others, yet, to such an extent has he projected himself into his work, that it is impossible to separate him from it. A rising young Canadian artist, he received the greater part of his artistic training in the stronghold of the Group of Seven, but remarkable to observe, he has resisted their dominating force and has remained entirely uninfluenced by it.

An independent spirit, striving for realism in his own way, the careful designer who thoroughly understands the third dimension and who has apparently assimilated the teachings of every school of art, a colourist who is not a slave to artistic convention, but who can neither be called a modernist, a sincerity of purpose and a highly optimistic note looks out upon you from his landscapes, which are full of sympathy and warm with a love of life.

Mr. Stone has caught nature in her various moods, and has depicted them accurately. Several of his landscapes show the influence of the Impressionist School, whose founder was Claude Monet, and which included such men as Pissarro and Sisley. Dabs of complimentary colours are set upon the canvas in an apparently careless fashion, but with remarkable effect. Air that actually floats, and water that is wet, are depicted in all their reality. Standing beside his running streams and waterfalls, you actually feel the spray upon your face. In one or two of his pictures, Cezanne and his school seem to have cast their shadow. Yet despite all these evidences of wide research in the field of art, it is remarkable that Stone has preserved his individuality and has consistently refused to submit to the bonds of the artistic convention which have been the bete noir of so many promising young artists.

Victoria Music Club

Still another indication of the awakening interest in music in the university is shown in the enthusiasm of over 140 members of the Victoria College Music Club, which is presenting "Pirates of Penzance" toward the end of January. The club, which is the largest musical organization of the university, is well-known for its successful productions of Gilbert and Sullivan operas. Last year "Iolanthe" was presented and "Merrie England" the

Dear Sir:

You have challenged me on a subject, Mr. Editor, about which neither you nor your staff know anything. You claim that I am cynical and therefore, I am wrong. You do not disprove my contention that there would be very few attend the Sunday Evening Concerts if men had to go alone. Many times have I sat in the Great Hall and looked at the faces that never appear at the Friday afternoon recitals. For straight, unvarnished lack of musical appreciation there is no audience that can equal that of the one that attends at Hart House Sunday evenings.

The fact that there was applause when the quartet concluded their work in the Brahms section of the program is no proof of the appreciation of the mob. It is "the thing" to applaud an artist and that means not a thing except that the devotees of "fussing", as you call them, feel that an encore will fill in the time required until the parents of the "woman" retire.

If, as you say, the concerts justify themselves because they provide a place with heat for those who have nothing else to do, why then, not carry my idea of movies out?

Further, while I am wasting so much of my time writing to you, why are your criticisms of the music at the university so innocuous and childish? It is a long time since I have seen an intelligent criticism in "The Varsity" concerning music. Is sport and the She's the only thing that count?

J. L. Mortimer.

UPTOWN

If you like back stage revelations of the intimate type, with a cold blooded murder thrown in for make-weight you may like the feature presentation at the Uptown this week. Also, you will have to be able to appreciate a peppy young man who just knows he is good and waits for everybody to crowd round and congratulate him on his personality, if the show is going (Continued on page 3)

ALL QUIET ON THE FESTERN FRONT

Poor little Dinkelsplink! Shall I ever live to see her again? Shall I ever return to her father's farm and settle down to live on her father's money? Ah, that is a beautiful thought and fills me with longing. But what if I am maimed and go back crippled or bald? Would she still have me if I presented myself with a leg blown off?—Or my arms?—Or my neck?

—C-C

I am a veteran now and I have been wounded many times. I cannot stand it much longer. My back and my neck are stiff from dodging bayonets, shells, runaway tanks and falling aeroplanes. I have been limping since this morning when my friend Hans Zandtfelt was killed by my side. He was blown to pieces and scattered in all directions. His false teeth hit me in the ankle and bit me to the bone. How Dinkelsplink would weep if she knew!

—C-C

It rained in torrents all day and soaked my union suit through and through. I have hung it in the dugout to dry while I sleep. It is now freezing outside and I am shivering with the cold. I drop into peaceful slumber murmuring, "Dinkelsplink, Dinkelsplink, Dink-el-splink—"

—C-C

I awoke with a choking sensation. At first I thought that I had been buried, but I soon found that it was only a knapsack that someone had stuffed into my mouth. Corporal Eczema told me he did it because I kept muttering Chinese curses half the night. I might have choked to death as there was a pair of old socks and (Continued on page 3)

VARSITY WINS WATER POLO AND BASKETBALL WITH BROADVIEW

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Varsity invaded Broadview Y last night and came away victors in water polo and basketball. The water polo team showed the Y men how it's done. With a team including a couple of substitutes the Blue mermen came out on the long end of a 4-1 score. Alexander and Captain George Spence displayed some neat combination play. Varsity looks as though headed for the City League, Intercollegiate and maybe International League titles.

The Blue basketball squad are engaging in a pretty strenuous practice schedule. Last week Mac's men defeated West End, took Broadview's measure last night and to-night meet West End again at Hart House with the added possibility of entertaining the Lizzies this week. Then the team begins its American tour on Friday, facing Buffalo U. at Elmwood Hall. McCutcheon believes he has another championship quintet this year, and also hopes for a successful invasion. Varsity have been working hard on the man-to-man defense formation and with a faster breaking team, the Americans are in for a little surprise.

The annual Junior Assault is with us again to-morrow and Thursday. The entry list is large and some Intercollegiate material should be uncovered. With Harry Hill and Jimmy Jackson out this year, the boxing division seems in bad shape. However, Martin has never been so optimistic in years with his wrestling brigade.

The most popular pastime in the United States, which eclipses even the elections and stock market crashes, is sweeping the country. The All-American teams are being picked, and the Rose Bowl is going to be the scene of the mythical national championship game on New Year's. While on the point, we are open for nominations on an All-Canadian Intercollegiate. Let's see yours.

SCIENCE SEPTETS WATER POLO FINAL

Junior and Senior School Play
3-3 Tie in First of Eckhardt Series

The first game in the water polo finals for the Eckhardt Cup, between Jr. S.P.S. and Sr. S.P.S. played yesterday afternoon, ended in a tie, 3-3. The teams were the most evenly matched seen in Hart House tank this season. Jr. School had a slight edge in the play, if any difference could be noted.

In the first half Fisher for Juniors and Alexander for Seniors each scored a goal.

The playing of Crocker and Ward in goal for both sides was sensational during this half and they prevented many goals.

At the beginning of the last half Sr. School seemed to start in with a bang. Pierdon scored on a long shot to make the score 2-1.

Then Towers, on a wonderful combination play put in a torrid shot to put Juniors in the lead.

But the Seniors were not to be denied, and Alexander put in the tying score on a pass from Pierdon. As the whistle blew Juniors were fighting desperately around the Senior goal endeavouring to score a win.

For Juniors, Fisher and Towers were untiring in their efforts while Alexander, Pierdon and Grant deserve special mention.

Jr. S.P.S.—Towers, Fisher, Powell, Crang, Crocker, Bryce, Hayhoe, Withrow, Sutton.

Sr. S.P.S.—Ward, Little, Gibbs, Boughton, Grant, Alexander, Pierdon, Puddy, Hick.

JUNIOR ASSAULT FOR BEGINNERS

Interfaculty Assault Will Be Held Wednesday and Thursday

DRAWNS NOT YET MADE

The junior interfaculty assault-at-arms will be held on Wednesday and Thursday of this week in the big gym at Hart House. The draws have not yet been made, but more complete information will appear to-morrow. The purpose of this assault is to discover talent amongst the beginners. This is strictly an assault for novices and to make sure that no experts enter the following three rules have been passed concerning eligibility.

No man may compete—
1-If he has ever entered a senior assault.

2-If he has ever won in a junior assault.

3-If the coaches deem him sufficiently experienced to enter the senior assault.

The entry lists are in the Athletic Office. Every contestant must get his eligibility papers and have them signed and handed in before Wednesday. They may be obtained from the manager.

Mr. Martin is enthusiastic about his wrestlers. "This will be the liveliest assault in years," he declared. Cameron in the 160 lb. class shows promise while Mervynne will put up a real display amongst the light heavyweights. There are already about thirty entries amongst the wrestlers.

In boxing there will be plenty of fireworks. Elson, the hard-hitting engineer, will do some tall slogging in the 160 lb. class. Hume is a fiery middle-weight who will give a determined display. Rapsey, Skelly, Stewart and Strachan are other good wallpapers.

There are plenty of good fencers out whose efforts will be enjoyed by the foil fans. The whole assault promises to be both entertaining and destructive.

Few students at the University of Kansas are taking advantage of the free vaccination against typhoid and smallpox offered by the university hospital.

The wave-motion of the water at sea prevents the showing of talkin pictures through some obscure interference phenomenon.

A bill is to be introduced in the Cuban legislature prohibiting the exhibition on the island of English talking pictures.

Triumph

VARSITY USE SUBSTITUTES

Varsity senior water polo seven defeated Broadview Y.M.C.A. 4 to 1 in last night's City League game at Broadview. The "Y" team held the students for the first half when they defended the shallow end. The count at half time was 1 to 0 for Broadview, Mullis accounting for the goal.

Alexander solved the "Y" defence and straightaway found the mark for three points. Captain George Spence added another when he drilled one home from centre.

Varsity used two substitutes, Ward in goal and McConachie at centre. As the goalie in the shallow end was more than half out of the water it was impossible to score for either team when opposing it.

Varsity men had a difficult time to keep their feet off the bottom while Broadview was right at home in the shallow tank, resulting in many throws for the "Y".

Varsity was the superior team during the entire game.

Varsity—Ward, Sinclair, Graham, Spence, Alexander, Glass, McConachie. Broadview—Devlin, Angus, Dunlop, Lansitie, Baker, Mullis, Low.

Ranking and Loughheed were the best for Broadview.

Varsity—Forwards, Horton and O'Leary; centre, Newman; defense, Currie and Sakler; subs, Collins, Riggs, Cook and Wood.

Broadview—Forwards, Guard and Morgan; centre, Morris; defense, Rankin and Loughheed; sub, Yeates.

CO-EDS COME TO VARSITY FOR SAKE OF POPULARITY

Some don't even try, they just come for the sake of the popularity they get from being co-eds."

H. S. C. Archbold, II B. and M. Trinity volunteered to answer the question he put himself, "Why do all the women want to know why I am not in 'Pure' Meds instead of Hearts and Meds?" and said the answer was that, "Girls are usually an awful nuisance in a lab, but Varsity would become horribly deadly without their stimulation somewhere on the campus. I'll admit it!"

B. A. R. Dignan, III Vic, said, "I think that the increasing proportion of women has tended to increase the men's enjoyment at class parties due to a wider range of selection, but whether the women enjoy it or not is another question. Our courses at the university lead through many diverse paths. We all have our own ideas of pleasure and how to obtain it, but if during our four, five or six years spent here we never learn how to behave in the presence of women how will we learn to mingle with our fellow men in after life?"

APPROVE CLASSICAL SUNDAY MUSICALES

One student, however, who refused to divulge his name, said that a lot of those present only go in order to take a girl. He also thought that movies and a jazz orchestra would be all right if you could only get away with it.

One fact noted by the "Varsity" was that several others interviewed had never been to a Sunday concert and some did not even know how to get tickets.

A bill is to be introduced in the Cuban legislature prohibiting the exhibition on the island of English talking pictures.

C—C

The enemy make a sudden attack after a short barrage. They have caught us napping. Grim figures loom out of the early morning mist as we struggle into our clothes. I am lost! My union suit has frozen as stiff as a board in the night. I cannot get into it. Bayonets gleam before my eyes. Raising it above my head I swing it about me with all my strength. Right and left they fall as I retreat, naked and unshamed. Back—back before their biting blades until I can go no farther. I have come to the edge of the ravine. Now I must surrender or jump to my death. Which shall it be?

All Knowledge, But Lets
It Through

"And you drop out of the slot-machine, shiny bits of intellectual bliss," was the fluttering future predicted for the graduates of a large college by Mr. Gerald Graham, III Trinity, at the intercollegiate debate held at St. Joseph's College last night. "A snob is one whose social ethics are founded on a firm financial basis went on Mr. Graham, "and is not endangered by the small college, as my honorable opponent will claim in a minute." He then depicted the sad fate of the freshman arriving, unknown in the chaos of first days at a large college, the proverbial outstretched helping hand holding a red and white tie.

This very attitude was taken up by Mr. Egbert Carsan, III Vic, leader of the negative, as the best thing for the new seeker of knowledge. "Forging his way to the Registrar's, he comes to the realization that he is a part of the university. It brings out his individualism." Mr. Carsan brought up the expected point of the small college being based on tradition, following (Continued on page 3)

PUBLIC OWNERSHIP THEME OF MEETING

Fabius Club Favoured by the Presence of Mrs.
Somerset

PLANS MADE FOR FUTURE

The first group meeting of the "Tuesday section" of the Fabius Club was held last evening at the Women's Union, Mr. R. O. Standish acting as chairman. The group was favoured by the presence of Mrs. Somerset, an associate member of the Fabian Society, London, England.

The subject discussed was Public Ownership, and diverse views were expressed on many phases of this question. One thing, however, was agreed upon, namely that a continued education, on a broad basis, of the whole population, was essential to the success of national ownership in any general way, this education to foster particularly more of the "Ancient Platonic Love of the State," as Mrs. Somerset said.

The group adjourned with a vote of thanks to Miss Kilpatrick, dean of the Women's Union, who was also present, for the use of the living rooms in the Union. Plans were also made for reception of certain documents from the English Fabian Society, which would prove valuable for future discussion.

ENJOYABLE DANCE HELD BY RESIDENCES

University of Toronto residences held a very enjoyable dance in Columbus Hall last evening. Colourful decorations, novelty prizes, and lucky number dances all contributed to the enjoyment of the crowd which joyously danced to the strains of the orchestra. Mrs. R. C. Hosie and Mrs. J. V. Stewart acted as hostesses of the evening.

Send Contributions For Literary Issue

Sketches, short stories, sonnets, carols, humorous features and verse, are requested for the Christmas issue of "The Varsity" to be published Monday, December 16. Awards will be given for the best work in each class by "The Varsity" and the Literary and Debates Committee, under the direction of P. E. Usher, B.A., C. W. Leslie, and N. A. Benson, M.A.

Prizes totalling $25 will be awarded as detailed in the issue of December 6.

Contributions must reach the News Offices in Hart House or in University College by 5.00 p.m. to-morrow, Thursday, December 12th.

The Christmas issue will be the last for this term.

MORAL DECADENCE NOT INFLUENCED

General Verdict of Students
Does Not Agree With Editorial

CENSORSHIP LAMENTED

"No," was the general verdict of undergraduates when asked if they considered the trend of the modern "cinema palace" a testimony to the moral decadence of the modern generation. The opinions expressed were based upon an editorial published in yesterday's "Varsity" entitled "Skatology."

In the editorial two recent theatre presentations were mentioned and the writer alluded to evidences of what he considered "lowness" and a general tone of immorality, asking if such "skatology" wasn't an indication of a general lowering of moral tone.

Commenting upon a suggestion in the editorial that it was better to whisper these "fast ones" behind the hand than to have to listen to them in public, H. B. Latham, II U.C., said, "There is no doubt but what such things have been whispered behind the hand for many years in the past; the (Continued on page 3)

VARSITY HOCKEYISTS ARE IN FINE SPIRITS

Senior Team Make Trip After Christmas to American Colleges

SAME TEAM AS LAST YEAR

"The seniors are in fine shape and are rarin' to go," said Brock McMurray, manager of the senior hockey team to "The Varsity" yesterday afternoon. "We will play our first league game on December 17th with Rangers, and we are just waiting to get the chance to score a win. After this game we play the Nationals on Dec. 20th. Both games will be played at the Mutual Street arena."

"All the players came out of last week's game O.K. and now that they have got that hockey out of their systems, they are all prepared to start the season with a win. We have practically the same team as last year with the exception of Ames in goal. Stewart, Hartley, and McMullen team up well together and they should score plenty of goals. Paul and Whitehead on defence give Varsity a stone wall of protection."

"After Christmas the team will take its annual trip to the American colleges. We hope to continue our past successes on this trip, which will take the team to Yale, Harvard, Syracuse and Boston."

MR. JOHN M. ELSON SPEAKS

First Time Such an Evening
Has Been Given at Toronto

Mr. John M. Elson, formerly editor of the Toronto Sunday World, and at present tutor to three classes in journalism and writing under the University of Toronto Extension Department, will give an illustrated talk on poets and authors of Canada from Haliburton (Sam Slick) down, in West Hall, University College, to-night at 8 p.m.

Mr. Elson is honorary president of the Toronto branch of the Canadian Authors' Association and immediate past National Treasurer of this association. He is widely known as the author of "The Scarlet Sash," an historical novel, and as a writer of short stories and magazine articles.

Mr. M. O. Hammond, widely known editorial man of the Globe, and himself an author of a couple of books, and Mr. Elson, have been collecting photos of authors and poets for a good many years. Some of these are very rare. Mr. Hammond has allowed the use of his photos which will be added to Mr. Elson's own collection. From these upwards of fifty lantern slides have been made which will be thrown on the screen.

For instance, Dr. Drummond Lampman and his early home, Sir Gilbert Parker, Dr. Charles G. D. Roberts, Dr. Bliss Carman, Arthur Stringer, Pauline Johnson, Mazo de la Roche, Dr. E. J. Pratt, Marshall Saunders, Wilson MacDonald and many others of distinction will be among those shown, with pictures of some of their birthplaces, where they wrote, and other things of interest.

This is the first time such an evening has been given here, for there is no such list of the kind in Canada. All students interested in literature, writing and journalism are welcome, as the whole thing has been arranged for them and is free.

Our credulous contemporary, the Utah Chronicle, tells the tale of a despondent freshman who informed the university druggist that he wanted to poison himself and was handed a package of insect powder.

In order to boost sales of 'Columbus', the University of Washington Monthly, a "kiss slip" is to be presented with each copy sold, and may be redeemed at the publication offices by a kiss from the ruby lips of one of the breath-taking beauties in the chorus of "Rio Rita", at present playing in Seattle.

University College Residences Broached For Women Undergraduates

University College women undergraduates have had hopes of a new building, and at last the Board of Governors have decided to allot a portion of the bequest of the late E. C. Whitney of Ottawa for the erection of three new residences at 81, 83 and 85 St. George Street.

Regarding the Students' Tour being run by the National Federation of Canadian University Students, opinion around the campus seemed to differ in the particulars.

Mr. Friedman, IV U.C. thought that the tours were "excellent for those that can afford them, but the member of the Hart House Sketch Committee qualified his statement with the rejoinder, "Fortunately we're not all a bunch of plutocrats. I think they are right in line with our interest in education," he continued. "Student tours should be of great value to the impressionable years in the life of a student. He gets no benefit from them in his youth or his later life. The associations have profound effect upon him in his youth when he is assimilating all sorts of knowledge than they would have if the tours were taken in later years."

"I feel that it is a very sensible idea," stated Mr. C. R. Tracy, IV U.C., editor of the U.C. Magazine. "Although it is liable to degenerate into the American idea of sight seeing. I think that travelling without guidance is useless."

STUDENT UNWORRIED BY EXAMINATIONS

Extra-Curricular Activities Are Not Thrown Over for Study

WORK DURING VACATION

Student opinion varied on the editorial "Dilemma" in "The Varsity" of yesterday.

"I am dropping outside activities to some extent," stated G. Wallingford, U.C. IV, "and getting down to study. But I certainly don't think every student should entirely cut himself off from other interests."

"Well," said Herb Moran, U.C. III, "I can keep up with myself without any worry and then win out in the overtime."

"It's very true—but it would come better in April," said Miss J. A. Campbell, Eng. and Hist. II, when interviewed. "I take things as they come—but I could be pressed for time if I let them worry me. I had intended to curtail my interests in favour of study, but how can you when Christmas is coming on!"

"Everybody is pressed for time. I've never seen anybody that wasn't!" was the trite remark of Mr. G. Spence, (Continued on page 4)

As the last Sunday of the Christmas vacation next Sunday, 15th December, will be Visitors' Day in Hart House when members may introduce visitors, including ladies, into the House between the hours of 2 and 4 p.m. Members will be asked to show their membership cards at the door.

The whole building will be open for inspection.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT UNDER FASCIST RULE

Educational System in Italy Explained by Professor Goggio

MUSICAL PROGRAMME

The second meeting of the Italian-Spanish Club was held at Wymilwood last evening at 8.15 p.m. There were about sixty members of the club and guests present. Miss French, president of the club, opened the meeting by calling for the minutes of the first meeting.

After the minutes were read and adopted, the president made the announcement that the Italian consul who was to be the special speaker of the evening was unable to be present as he had the influenza. As the consul was to give an illustrated lecture in Italian the club were very disappointed that he could not be present.

However, in his place, Professor Goggio took charge and after reading a letter from the consul he proceeded to give an address dealing with the educational system in Italy since 1715. He explained to the members of the club in Italian, how the educational system in Italy has greatly improved since 1915, and under the Fascist party. He went into detail to describe the system from the kindergartens, right up to the universities.

After this part of the programme, the club was entertained for some time by the charming singing of Mrs. Craigie, who was accompanied by Miss Clough. The selections were all rendered in Spanish and proved very (Continued on page 4)

"THE GIFT OF LIFE" SHOWN

Dr. Edna Guest Traces Process of Reproduction in Animals

"The idea of these lectures is to give tolerance towards all those about us," concluded Dr. Edna Guest after the viewing of the reel, "The Gift of Life," in the Victoria Alumni Hall yesterday. With this wider tolerance, she said, "We begin to understand what the ten talents were."

"You will soon be graduates," Dr. Guest addressed the audience in her introductory remarks. "Graduates will have to answer questions of all kinds with poise, calmness and assurance, and this lecture, one of the three health talks being given at Victoria this week, is carrying out the idea that Dr. Ford began in her lecture on Heredity; how to tell a child about the origin of life."

Mrs. Heygarth, from the Parliament Buildings, then showed the reel, which the Department of Health will loan, transportation free, for any educational meetings.

Reproductive processes were shown to be similar in all species, from the amoeba, a single-celled organism that grows in stagnant water and reproduces its kind by the division of the original cell, on through the interme- (Continued on page 3)

RIFLE ASSOCIATION CALLS FOR HELPERS

Lack of Experienced Men to Supervise the Tyros

DR. LUCAS GIVES OUTLINE

About 50 interested members of the Rifle Association met yesterday to discuss the situation which has developed recently necessitating the temporary closing of the ranges. The lack of experienced men willing to supervise the practicing of the tyros was found to be the cause of the activities coming to a standstill and steps were taken by Dr. G. H. Lucas, president of the association, to remedy this.

A direct call for volunteers was made and the required number of competent range officers were signed up directly. A committee was chosen from the members representing the different faculties who will meet shortly to arrange for the approaching matches and to complete the organization of systematic rifle practices.

Dr. Lucas, in a brief outline of the history of the association, told of its organization during the war and its subsequent resuming of activities on an independent basis supported by the interest and spirit of its officers and members. He stressed the point that it was purely an undergraduate organization and that regardless of faculty supervision. It was up to the student members to run it to their own satisfaction.

"The association this year is otherwise in good condition," he declared, "and with the addition of new members at the beginning of the next term there is no reason why this should not be a successful year. Next year, however, is expected to be even better with the material that is being developed at the ranges now."

Teams will be entered for the Inter- (Continued on page 3)

INNISFREE

It suddenly occurred to us, as editors of a college paper, some time ago, that we were extremely busy. And as we viewed the future, we saw little prospect of the pace ever slackening; we visualized the scene twenty, thirty years from now; forty—then what?

We dream, at times, of a cottage up near the Forks of the Credit, with clear waters running beneath, and elms drooping above. We sympathize with the editor of the "Columbia Spectator" who writes:

"Centuries ago, in a land far removed from Morningside, Buddha was confronted with a similar problem. He came, perplexed and troubled, to a great Bo-tree on the banks of the Ganges; and there he sat for a day and a night in quiet contemplation and achieved in this contemplation the perfect peace of mind.

"None of us are Buddhas and none of us has any desire to spend our college days in dreamy Buddhist contemplation; but once in a while we need to put a check upon an unnecessarily breakneck existence. Sometimes in the midst of our turmoil, even the most sophisticated among us have a vague yearning to lie and dream on the cool grass of a New England hilltop—or to stroll along a lonely stretch of ocean beach, with whitecaps on the water, and sea gulls sailing overhead. We would like to come, like Buddha, to a Bo-tree with leafy, spreading branches—a tree of leisure under which to rest for a while in quiet contemplation."

Excuse us while we dash away to a committee meeting.

PLAY UP, PLAY UP!

We have suffered much in our yet brief life from the popular conception of sport, which holds, as we all know, that the game is played only in order that the game may be played. The end-in-view does not exist, apparently.

A man is said to be a good sportsman if he gets trimmed continually, and still keeps on playing. By this logic, however, the good sportsman is made out to be a regular fool.

A good sportsman is also expected to congratulate his successful opponent with expressions of pleasure. In this event the sportsman is either a fool or a hypocrite, for he is a fool if he is glad the other man won, and a hypocrite if he is peeved and feigns pleasure.

Our conception of a sportsman is a man who plays a fair and honest game, and plays to the best of his ability. He is out to prove his superior skill, and to wallop his opponent. Any other definition is nothing more nor less than sentiment and houghery.

THE WORKING STUDENT

Strange times are these, when the salesman who shows one the latest and smartest in long-drawers, hose, kiddie-kars, canned fruit, windshield wipers and garters, is also the gentleman who sits next to one in Comparative Geology on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

The Christmas season is becoming more and more an excuse for the student whose finances are not of the strongest to add a sum to the budget by part-time employment. This has, unfortunately, a tendency to clash with the academic time-tables. Professors in certain courses have already been heard to complain about the number of absentees.

While it is never possible to condone neglect of academic work, it is surely a good sign when so many of the students are willing to work for themselves. And, incidentally, this extra-academic work is another sign that Toronto is becoming more and more American.

O Canada!

Editor,
"The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

Allow me to call your attention to a grave error in your editorial of last Wednesday's "Varsity".

In your last sentence, in speaking of creating a fund to bring "Oxford graduates out here to the Colonies", you evidently are unaware of the fact that Canada has not for quite some few years enjoyed(?) the status of a "colony", but has acquired instead that of "daughter in her mother's house and mistress in her own", as a full-fledged Dominion of the British Empire.

In England, among the general populace, the consensus of opinion seems to be that Canada still holds the rank and social prestige of a colony—to be

Art, Music and Drama

Dr. Moure's Recital

Yesterday afternoon an audience, considerably larger than usual, heard Dr. Moure play his third fortnightly recital.

The Corelli Suite in F., originally a violin number, is in form, the precursor of the modern Sonata. The prelude is in the classical style which was shortly to be developed so greatly by Bach. This is followed by a series of old-world dances. An Allemanda, Sarabande, Gavotte, and Gigue. Unfortunately they showed a marked tendency to become elephantine when much power is used, but they were very pleasing, and were well received. The Reinberger A minor Sonata is a very clever creation. With a fine Plainsong theme in the Tonus Peregrinus mode, the first movement is dignified and impressive. The fugue is particularly clever. Taking for his theme a descending chromatic scale, Rheinberger produces an excellent movement out of this apparently hopeless material.

The remainder of the programme anticipated the Christmas season. Noel by Dubois, uses an old Bretagne theme in a very lovely fashion and the number was beautifully done. An arrangement of Gounod's Nazareth and Hark, the Herald Angels Sing by an American composer, completed the program.

—R.A.M.C.E.

classed with Kenya and others. We, as Canadians, are still "Colonials" in every sense of the word—to be witheringly referred to, with our neighbours to the south—as Americans.

It would well behoove some of the millionaire graduates of Varsity, in their financial plenitude, to award scholarships to university graduates of Great Britain, Ireland and the other Dominions, for our university where they might gain some knowledge of their Canadian cousins while working in their third or fourth years toward a Toronto degree, not only in Arts, but in Engineering, Medicine and the other faculties.

I might also note that in the advertisement of the Federation of Canadian University Students—the Horse Guards at Whitehall, London, are very engagingly moved to Scotland. Aladdin and his lamp must have whisked the gaily uniformed "answer to a maiden's prayer", and his statuesque horse to bonny Scotland over night—to the great disgust of the American tourists and the camera-clicking fraternity.

Thanking you, I am,

Yours truly,

S. Armitage-Stanley,

"School" 2T3.

Dear Sir:

I wish to offer a few suggestions to the music committee regarding Sunday Evening Concerts. After attending these entertainments for four years I have become a complete wreck. May I ask if any of the committee men can honestly say that they have enjoyed a whole program trying to sit through the performance draped over a cruel, pitiless hardwood bench? Not even I, with my great love for music, can say that I have. I have developed a hollow chest, a stiff neck, and a curvature of the spine, not to mention other grievances, from trying to roost all through the entertainment on those abominable seats. If I attend many more I shall be obliged to tie my back to a broom handle and go about in a wheel chair. Sitting on the radiator tops is even worse: who can enjoy music and feel like a fried egg? In future why not tell the guests to bring blankets and cushions?

U.C. BASKETEERS BEAT SENIOR VIC AGAIN IN SEMI-FINAL 24-20

SPEAKING OF SPORT

U.C. Juniors meet St. Hilda's in the finals of the interfaculty basketball league, after defeating Senior Vic in two closely fought battles 25-26 and 24-20. The games next Thursday and Tuesday will decide whether U.C. is to retain the title won last year or not.

Swimmers of U.C. and Household Science are getting together to-morrow to make plans for a joint meet. If the turnout is large enough two competitive teams will be formed; otherwise the two faculties will join forces for the occasion.

The managers of the women's basketball and hockey teams will be announced at the end of the week. A complete financial report of the W.A.A. theatre night will also be completed.

Edith Blackwell of U.C. made 11 out of 20, second ranking score, in the foul shooting contest at the West End "Y" last Saturday. Willie Ann Luckett, who took first place in the contest last week, being one up on the U.C. shooter, fell down to a score of 7 this time. Another foul shooting competition will take place in connection with a track and field meet at the West End "Y" next Saturday evening. Hundred yard dashes for juniors, intermediates and seniors, are open to any girl in the city.

HOUSEHOLD SCIENCE MAY ORGANIZE MEET

Plans Will Be Discussed This Afternoon at Lillian Massey Tank

A meeting of all women in U.C. and in Household Science interested in swimming is to be held on Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Lillian Massey gym to discuss plans for a combined swimming meet. Household Science has never formed a separate swimming team before, but under the able direction of their curator, Margot McDonald, they intend to do so this year if enough enthusiasm is shown at this meeting. Practices for the meet, to be held about the third week in January, are to be arranged, so as to begin immediately after the Christmas holidays.

If Household Science decides to organize a separate swimming team, U.C. will have a hard time to uphold their standards of last year, as they will lose Margot McDonald. Both Mary Wyndow, this year's curator for U.C., and Betty Holton, of last year's team, remain to swim for U.C.

Both groups are looking for a good turnout of freshies to provide pep in competition in the proposed meet.

RED AND WHITE BEST

University College co-eds earned the right to enter the finals of the women's interfaculty basketball against St. Hilda's last night when they defeated Senior Victoria by a score of 25-21, winning the round 51-46. Just how exciting the game was may be shown by the fact that at half time U.C. were down ten points; that in the second half the U.C. defense was so airtight that they kept Vic from scoring a single field goal, while their team mates at the other end were running in 15 points.

The game was very rough, eighteen personals being handed out, nine to each team. One player was disqualified for four personals just before the final whistle, and several had three.

U.C. started off with a rush and had the score 7 to Vic's 3 in the first few minutes. Vic rallied strongly and soon took what seemed a commanding lead on shots by Helen Hilliard, who was shooting with the same ease from any part of the floor. U.C. could not get going, and things looked dark for them at half time, Vic being on the long end of a 20-10 score.

After half time U.C. started in slowly but surely to cut down Vic's lead, and they had the score 20-19 before Vic took a minute out. A moment after play was resumed, U.C. went into the lead, holding their slender advantage until Eleanor Sedgewick tied it up by sinking a nice free shot. The Red and White girls dropped in two field goals and then held the ball successfully till the whistle.

For U.C., Jean Allen on the defence, and Wilma Hazlett, forward, stood out particularly, while Norma Bateman and Helen Hilliard led Vic's attack. The team work on both sides was excellent at times. Vic's forward line being exceptionally fast, while U.C. forwards ran wild in the second half.

U.C. Juniors—Louise Crouch (13), Wilma Hazlett (10), forwards; Mary Lackie (2), side centre; Betty Thomas, jumping centre; Jean Allen, Lorraine Harvey, guards; Bessie Lowery, Muriel Atkin, Pat McLean, subs.

Vic—Helen Hilliard (15), Wilma Mahoney, forwards; Eleanor Sedgewick (6), side centre; Marie Lauder, jumping centre; Norma Bateman, Eleanor Taylor, guards; Helen Beal, Anne Storey, subs.

The meeting then took the form of a half hour of conversation in Italian and Spanish, during which refreshments were served.

On Wednesday there will be an exhibition bout between Fell and McCatty, two clever 125 lb. boxers. They are both masters of style, so this will be a treat for the fans. Banon in the flyweight and Rapsey in the 118 lb. division both win by default. Amongst the wrestlers, Greene, 118 lbs., and Mervynne, a light-heavy, will both win by default if no opponents show up to-day.

Bouts will consist of three two-minute rounds. Thursday's draw will be in to-morrow's "Varsity".

MORAL DECAOENCE NOT INFLUENCED

only difference is that now people are sensible enough to realize that they might as well bring these things out into the open. This is just a characteristic of our whole generation." He had not read "The Specialist" to which the writer referred yesterday as a particular type of literature enjoying wide circulation nowadays.

Regarding censorship and immorality, E. H. Arnold, IV U.C., said: "There is a greater tendency now than in the silent movie because if anything is cut the continuity of the picture is destroyed. Some of the things said in the theatres are more uncomfortable because of the presence of ladies where in a group of stags they might go over big." Mr. Arnold had read "The Specialist", but he refused to make any statements.

"The moral tone is not lowering," averred H. B. Clearhue, II Commerce and Finance. "We have reached a point higher than ever before. Things such as these are merely an expression of the frankness of the modern generation. People are now able to laugh openly at things which, though whispered behind the hand" before really were not harmful."

"I agree with the editorial," said C. E. Beacom, IV Vic. "I'll admit I haven't seen many of the shows, but those I have seen are justly criticized." "I don't believe it shows anything. I think they are as good as ever," interrupted a man in IV Pol. Sci., who would not give his name. "Shakespeare was just as bad as anything written now. Nine out of ten read 'All Quiet on the Western Front' for the dirt in it. The theatre has always been that way and probably always will. I suppose it is just giving people what they want. It is the same way with the press." This man, too, had "heard" of "The Specialist".

J. H. Merritt, IV U.C., took the point of view of the writer of the editorial, saying: "Such an editorial is a healthy sign of the change in policy of 'The Varsity' over that of last year. It is an improvement."

Another student, this one in III Eng. and Hist., who refused to be quoted only remarked as man to man: "Personally—I love vulgarity providing it is at all subtle." This man, too, had heard of "The Specialist", but he was afraid that it would not be 'subtle' enough to appeal to his sense of humour.

SMALL COLLEGE LIFE STAUNCHLY UPHELD

ing tradition, bound in and narrowed by it.

Miss Geraldine Maloney, Loretto, rose with the broad statement that evidently "her honorable opponent knew nothing of life in a small college." She proceeded to enlighten him bringing out the interest fostered by smaller groups, either academic, cultural or social. "Broadmindedness," she stated, "arrives at a point where there are no opinions, no convictions—the mind is a sieve, receiving all, but letting all pass through. You must have some standard."

"You are yourself, not your tradition," came back Miss Isabel Jordan, I U.C. "You have to face facts, find out for yourself." And her enthusiasm ran on: "In a large college is personal initiative, originality, and endless scope for both. You do not follow on the leading strings of a small college year party, with a man thrown at your head. There's just enough to go round. You're the last and so is he"—adding her preference to be chosen from a bird's-eye view across the campus.

The debate was thrown open to the house, revealing man's desire of more than a bird's-eye view in certain important choices. The speaking from the floor was most varied and interesting, including Egyptian syntax and the derivation of our popular word, dumb. The affirmative was nobly championed by Miss Louise McMillan, the negative by Mr. Vernon Kennedy. The vote was taken by the house, resulting in a complete vindication of the small college, the ayes winning by 63-15.

OPINIONS EXPRESSED ARE QUITE VARIED

Mr. A. Gordon Burns, who is director of the tour at the University of Toronto, thought that "students will not take the tour because it is being run by the N.F.C.U.S., but merely because it is a tour." Mr. Burns didn't think however, that many students knew what the N.F.C.U.S. was. "If things continue as they are the tour will be a success," continued Mr. Burns. He explained that the tour is merely organizing students in order to get a lower rate.

Mr. F. W. Burton, when asked if he did not think that the tours might relieve Canada of some of her Babbity during the summer time, told "The Varsity" that although he had not given the subject of tours much thought, "Possibly if some of the Students' Tours took the Babbity to the Yukon where some would have our scholars go, they would get snowed in and never come back."

Mr. Don Buchanan, editor of "Acta Victoriana", when asked if he thought there was any adverse criticism to the proposed tours, stated to "The Varsity", "I deplore the continuing of Canadian university spoon feeding methods during the summer months."

Finally, the atmosphere created by the Grate Hall is by no means helpful to the enjoyment of the average member. Now I ask you, how can any frequenter of the Hall, (who is at all sensitive to his surroundings), step into the room without subconsciously hearing the clatter of silverware, the crunch of apple cores and the slop of soup? How can you enjoy Chopin or Mozart with the death squeak of a weiner ringing in your ears? Or the slither of pearted spaghetti into voracious jaws? Or the beat of a squashed raisin? You might as well hold your concert in the locker room.

CORRESPONDENCE

a lover of music I beg to differ with our exacting friend Mr. Mortimer who objects so strenuously to the "mixed" concerts.

He has been most unjust to the women members of this university and those men who are good enough to afford them the opportunity of obtaining a sense of musical appreciation without which no education, however abstract or practical, is complete.

I was fortunate to obtain a ticket for last night's recital and although I did not have the pleasure of escorting a girl, yet a classmate and myself did occupy a position which commanded an excellent view of a large portion of the assembly and we certainly saw nothing to justify Mr. M's sweeping "deductions". The enthusiastic applause, and the call for an encore at the end of the recital, the large number of older people present, who were undoubtedly relatives of the students, and even the stifled coughs of those suffering from colds, were unrefutable evidence of the esteem which the great majority of those present held for the musicians.

Local Legal League Lights Lambast Lithesome Lookers

By N. J. DeWitt

By Special Correspondent: The world peace movement received great impetus last night when twenty of the brightest intellects in the university formed the Legal Nations Club.

"The object of this club is to foster world peace," began Miss Hetty Bang, who occupied the chair.

"I wanna put your picture in the paper," interrupted Mr. Skeehan.

Six feminine members of the club were seen modestly edging forward at this juncture.

"We shall be doing a great service to humanity in presenting a model assembly of the great Legal Nations of Geneva," continued the president. Delegates representing each country were chosen then.

At once a resolution was passed in favour of peace. It was further moved that copies of the resolution be sent as a warning to the foreign offices of U.S.S.R., U.S.A., Great Britain, France, and to "The Varsity".

Then Mr. Skeehan demanded, as representative of Bosnia, that his country be allowed a corridor to the sea.

The representative from Austria objected, claiming that to allow such a thing would only be the thin edge of the wedge. "First thing we know," he cried, "after they get their corridor, they will want linoleum in it, or maybe want it re-papered."

Miss Hester Payton, representing Ottawa, pointed out that she was under the impression that a corridor had to do with bull fighting, and further stated, that if there was a bull anywhere, she was prepared to shoot it. When corrected, she said: "Yes, of course, I may say that, viewing the circumstances, probably there is no doubt that Bosnia should or should not be allowed her corridor."

Miss Payton was heartily applauded for her forthright declaration, and she was awarded six months' diplomatic immunity.

The representative from Bosnia then asked Miss Payton for her picture in the interests of the world peace. "The best-looker here," he said.

In the ensuing melee your correspondent was badly gouged and bitten. After order was restored the president announced that Russia had declared war on China.

The meeting then moved that the name be changed to the Chinese Study Club. Carried.

Further enquiry among the undergraduates showed that a great number are working during the vacation. "Why, Simpson's is just teeming with Varsity girls!" one co-ed exclaimed.

A glimpse at the card room in Hart House showed the "Varsity" that the "sharps" were only faced with the dilemma of leading the proper card.

Professor Herman Oberth, a German scientist, is preparing a rocket which he expects to shoot into the middle of America.

Conceited males who are so arrogant as to say what they did seem to forget that, unfortunate as it may be, a mere woman has to take into account the fact that she will probably get married, and to accomplish that, has to create the effect of absolute brainlessness because that kind of woman seems to be the one who attracts masculine attention. (That is a general statement, but applies to you all.) No matter how intelligent you are, you have to tell the man who has spent 5 years in medicine and is only in his third year, "How wonderful you are!" in some respect or other, no matter if it means 7 more years in purgatory.

I may add that while I am an ardent suffragette, I am by no means a manipulator, and if the awful truth be known, I really think that men use what brains they have to more and more useful ends than women, (because they have to to earn a living), but I most strenuously object to such wholesale slander of the feminine sex when the only reason women appear such butterfies at college is because the men insist. Darn them.

FINANCIAL POLICY OF TORONTONENSIS GIVEN CRITICISM

Bill Passed Allows Men to Sit Wherever They Please in Library

REFUTES OWN MOTION

Charles Birge Says Pencil
Tapping Causes Pain and Discomfort

A private bill to allow men students to sit wherever they pleased in the Victoria College Library featured the meeting of the Students' Parliament of that college held last night in Alumni Hall. The bill was introduced by "the member from Jolliffe (E.B.)" in the absence of the "member from MacMillan".

The bill was seconded by Charles Birge, who alluded to a painful custom which pertains in the Victoria Library. When a male student speaks to or sits with any person on that side of the central aisle devoted to women a loud tapping "like heavy rain" at once ensues, created by the pencils of the gentlemen readers. The speaker referred to his own uncomfortable experience in his first year.

Some doubt was expressed as to the right of the parliament to pass such a motion, on the ground that it might conflict with the powers of the librarian and thus be ultra vires. The bill was passed, however, by a large majority.

The meeting opened with a discussion of the "Torontonsis" situation as outlined by "The Varsity", in which it was claimed that the students were not being given their money's worth. Considerable dissatisfaction was expressed by the house with the state of affairs. Later in the evening the editor of "The Varsity" outlined the claim that the students were receiving 19 cents, for each dollar they paid for the year book.

The first government bill was introduced by the Premier, Howe Martyn, providing for the expenditure of $24 on gowns for the Speaker and for the Clerk of the House. He stated that the expenditure, in his opinion, was absolutely unjustifiable, and that the gowns would probably be lost anyway. In spite of the fact that the Premier spoke against his own motion, the bill was carried.

At once the Premier chided the Opposition for not seizing an opportunity to run him out of office, a state of affairs which he hoped, for the sake of the Parliament, would speedily come to pass. Interest, he said, would lag if the government were never changed.

The Minister of Debates, the "member from Gibson", stated that he was unable to report progress in arrangements to stage a debate with Trinity because the government there had just been defeated.

Following the meeting, refreshments were served.

"THE GREAT ENIGMA"

The Oratorical Club of St. Michael's College met yesterday evening about the college rostrum. Mr. W. J. Ford vice-president, held down the chair in no uncertain manner. Several members were absent, due to illness, but speeches interesting and instructive, were delivered by the various speakers to the large, enthusiastic audience. Mr. B. Wyler orated at some length on the life of Pauline Johnson, our great Indian poetess. Several quotations from her works were very well received, especially that from "The Song that my Paddle Sings".

Mr. P. C. Warnick then spoke on "The Great Enigma", which, after some suspense turned out to be none other than that world-renowned dish, hash. The speech and its recipe for hash caused some merriment amongst the audience.

Mr. J. McBride, the next speaker, gave a history of Fort St. Marie, a subject which held all present engrossed. He enumerated many interesting (Continued on page 4)

GIRLS LEAO, BOYS FOLLOW

"A country never rises above the level of its womanhood," stated Dr. Margaret Patterson in her talk on the Women's Police Court, the third of a series of Health Talks given in Victoria College.

"The girls set the moral standard and where the girls lead the boys follow. The necessity of good behaviour on the part of educated girls was stressed, because not nearly as much can be expected of others who are less fortunate.

The Women's Court, which has been in existence for fourteen years, arose from the need of a place where women would not be subject to the attention of footloose men who consider a courtroom an entertaining place to spend a morning. Although the treatment by the officials in the men's court was very courteous, the women felt a reluctance to confide in one of the opposite sex.

HOWARD LINDSAY AUTHOR

Large Turnout for Places in Cast at Practice Yesterday

The singing and dancing comedy, "Whose It" to be presented in January next, promises to be of very high merit. This play is written by Howard Lindsay, who was the author of "Honey Boy", which pleased Hart House audiences last year. Last year's production was of very high quality, but this one promises to be better.

An encouraging number turned out on Wednesday afternoon to seek a place on the cast. Those who were in the dances show very great enthusiasm and lots of pep.

Mr. Lindsay told "The Varsity" that those in the production were keener about it than last year, due perhaps to the fact that they feel a surer response from the university than was hoped for last year, as it was the first production. So far as Mr. Lindsay could gather, the interest around the campus is high.

The production has a more continuous story and specific plot than "Honey Boy", and therefore in the (Continued on page 4)

Writing

OEOFE NOT SURPASSED

"It is very difficult to catch hold of this slippery thing, the novel, by the tail," declared Prof. Pelham Edgar, speaking before a meeting of the English Association of Toronto last night in the Junior Common Room of U.C. His subject was "Principles of Fiction" and his address was based on his coming book on that topic.

"There is no golden rule for producing fiction although there probably is a formula for cheap commonplace effects," he stated.

"One cause of the difficulty in taking an author's method as authentic," he found, "is the perpetual oscillation of fashion and taste of both authors and readers from generation to generation." This he illustrated by Dickens, Thackeray and other masters who fell from the height of popularity.

"One curious thing to note is that the narrative instinct is one of the most deeply rooted in the human race. The narrative of Defoe, the first novelist, will never, I believe, be surpassed." Dr. Edgar touched on many other problems of novel writing: pattern, subject matter, time representation, de- (Continued on page 3)

Strangways of the Telegram at the luncheon meeting of the University Press Club yesterday. "The use of the aeroplane in connection with newspaper work is one of the important new developments at the present time."

Mr. Strangways went on to explain that his own paper was making considerable use of the aeroplane in the gathering of news, and the speeding up of transportation of photographs and other matter of that sort. "The man who can fly, and take his own photographs," he continued, "is going to be the high priced man in the future."

Experience on the staff of "The Varsity" according to the speaker, is the best type of training for newspaper work later. Mr. Strangways is a former editor of "The Varsity" and has made considerable progress in newspaper work since his graduation a few years ago.

That newspaper work, in the news department, is essentially a young man's job, but the editorial end is best handled by men of more mature experience, was the speaker's opinion. A young man would be likely to get his paper into bad libel suits, whereas, with ten years more experience, he would not be likely to make mistakes of the same sort.

NATURALIST WILL SPEAK AIOEO BY SLIDES

Great Lover of Nature Has Slides and Coloured Views to Show

Dan MacCowan, Field Naturalist of Banff, is in such demand with his slides and coloured views that the Departments of Biology and Social Science have combined to arrange his lecture in Room 14 in the Biology Building this evening at five. Professor R. J. Diamond, president of the Toronto Field Naturalist Society, will chair the meeting.

Coming from Perthshire, Scotland, twenty years ago, Mr. MacCowan went immediately to the mountains, where, during his search for health he became interested in the haunts of the grizzly, the secret industry of the beaver, and in the diet of young eaglets. Climbing cliffs and following lakes, he spent days at a time in photographing the wild life in poses little seen by man. Now, as publicity for the Canadian Pacific Railway, he spends his summers lecturing to guests at the Banff Springs Hotel and the Chateau Lake Louise.

Contributions Asked For Literary Issue

All contributions for the next literary section of "The Varsity" which will be published with the Christmas issue, on Monday, December 16, must reach the judges by 5 p.m. to-day (Thursday), at either the News Office in Hart House or at the Women's Office in University College.

Awards totalling $25 will be made, including a prize of $3 for the best sketch or line drawing of a scene on the university campus, and the same for a sketch or line drawing of any scene.

NOT DISCOURAGED WOMEN WILL STAY

See Varsity as a Queer Place Without Their Presences

MEN ALWAYS OBJECTING

Women have come to Varsity and have come to stay in spite of the fact that the men object and would send them "back to the kitchen".

"Now after all," exclaimed Eileen Harrison, II Arts, when asked what she thought of man's latest egotistical attitude re women at the university, "wouldn't Varsity be a funny place without women. Men come to Varsity because women are there, and if the girls weren't educated, society would become degraded—the women would soon be in slavery."

"Men are always objecting to something, so we feel we're natural since they object to us here and at Hart House," replied Eleanor Godfrey, I Classics. "The last three times I was at a musicale I had to sit on a radiator on a doubly folded coat so I wouldn't burn up." In answer to why she went, she said, "because I was asked."

Margaret Thorpe, IV Meds, thinks "Women are as intellectual as men and since this is a provincial university women have every right to attend. The women go to musicales because of the company."

CHRISTMAS ESSAYS NOT VERY PROBABLE

Students Should Only Study
When Social Duties Are Lacking

DEPARTMENT AMIABLE

"I have not heard of any Christmas essays," said Miss Hahn, secretary at Baldwin House, when she was asked by "The Varsity" if the Department of History was considering the matter of essays to be written in the holidays. "Probably," continued Miss Hahn, "in view of the fact that summer essays were assigned, Christmas essays are expected. But I feel the Department is much too amiable to give essays at Christmas."

Miss Nora Doran thought that holiday essays were not at all desirable. Knowing the character of the Department of History, Miss Doran thought that there would be no danger in this regard.

"Time should be given to study only when more important social duties are lacking and when minor things do not require it."

Signs in the University Library requesting students to do their Christmas bookkeeping early have cast a reminder to students. Work should be done in some cases will be done.

DRAW FOR TO-OAY

Results Show Performers to Possess Outstanding Ability

The junior assault held last night at Hart House turned out to be one of the most successful affairs of its kind yet held. The events were evenly matched, many of them going overtime, well contested and run off in orderly fashion.

Perhaps the feature bout of the evening was the exhibition staged by McCatty and Fell. These youngsters displayed a good knowledge of footwork and intricacies of the ring.

In the 134 lb. wrestling class Merritt and Edwards battled 10 minutes without a fall. However, Merritt was given the decision due to his better knowledge of the sport.

The results of last night's events and to-day's draw follow:

In the boxing division Walsh (T.) defeated Hertle (S.P.S.); Murray (U.C.) defeated Huddle (T.) Hume (U.C.) and Keshin (M) defeated Kay (Vic) and Skelly (St. M.) respectively in the 147 lb. class. In the 160 lb. bouts Bain (T) defeated Elson (S.P.S.); Cameron (St. M.) defeated Little (U.C.) and Parsons (M) won by default. In the 175 lb. division Stuart (T) defeated Strachan (S.P.S.), and Eaton (S.P.S.) took McNutt (T) into camp.

In the 134 lb. wrestling bouts Mueller (G.S.) defeated Flett (F) and Merritt (U.C.) scored a win over Edwards (V). Collins (S) won his bout by default in the 134 lb. class. In the 158 class Cameron (M) defeated Shortley (U.C.).

In fencing circles several men have entered. The final bouts will be run off this afternoon between 4.30 and 6 o'clock. At present Moore of S. P.S. is leading. Wishart of U.C., however, is giving him a good race for first place.

PROFESSOR THINKS WOMEN SHOULD MAKE, PAY OATES

Special to "The Varsity"

A social revolution at Ohio Wesleyan might be the result if Professor L. A. Cramer of the sociology department were able to put into effect his conception of "dating" among men and women students of the university. "Why should the men do all the paying and the women get all the entertainment?" he asked. "The thing should be put on an equal basis and I don't see why it couldn't be done." According to Professor Cramer's view, women should ask the men for dates, and the women should pay for the entertainment. This is true especially when the women can afford to pay for dates and the men cannot. But then he is a sociology professor.

FEMALE PERSONS

There was a dinner held last evening in one of the women's residences of this university, to celebrate the fact that women have become "persons". This is only one of many such celebrations which have been held in Canada wherever women have felt their elevation to the public rostrum.

Women have veritably grasped this so-called "recognized status" with the joy of a child with a new toy, and rattled it raucously from coast to coast.

It has been a triumph, both for the Honorable N. A. Rowell, and for the five Alberta women, who refused to tend their knitting in any but true blue-stocking fashion. The impression created, however, to the layman is that this constitution of ours is a complicated set of indefinite definitions, with the blue ribbon handed to the man or "person" who twists the entangling verbiage of "law language" most adroitly.

From the first shock of the realization that a woman is now a "person", the next stage is the point where much jubilation and feasting must be held to honor the triumph.

But the decision of the Privy Council only grants to "females" the privilege of being considered persons. There is still the eligibility to the Senate to be fought for and after all the smoke has rolled away from a battlefield strewn with the remnants of precedence, there will still be the women to find who will have the ability, the training, the experience, and the desire to seek entrance to the Senate of Canada.

Let the Canadian university women of to-day gird their intellectual armour about them, have a few more chicken dinners, and prepare themselves to enlighten the senatorial males of the future with a highly intelligent brand of senatorial females.

VANITY OF VANITIES, ALL IS VANITY

The students of this university spend approximately eighty-three years in "primping", and adorning themselves for the attraction of the great god Vanity.

There are, in round figures, six thousand and six hundred students in attendance here. Let us suppose there are three thousand "co-eds", and three thousand six hundred "eds". To be very lenient, the average co-ed spends two hours a week getting ready for "dates", and two hours a week in general enlightenment for the public eye, making a total of four. Taking thirty-two weeks in the term we have computed the following statistics:

The co-eds of this university spend 16,000 days or 516 months or 43 years, each academic year in beautifying themselves. Verily, Venus, here dwell thy most devout disciples!

Computing the figures for the "eds", brings just as startling results. Allowing that a man spends three hours a week in the boudoir arts, the men of this university spend 14,400 days, 464 months, or approximately 40 years in draping their brows with the dewy olive branch or tying a tux tie.

We feel constrained to comment that these figures are appalling in an institution of learning, but we also feel that the undergraduates who read this editorial must desist from the immediate extreme of appearing for their next date in sackcloth and ashes. We trust that our advice will be taken as it is offered, with toleration and moderation.

Correspondence

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

Pans Editorial

Editor,
"The Varsity".

Dear Sir:
Your editorial of the 11th inst. expressed the sentiment that the chief end of sport is to win. Somehow I feel that we poor college students who valiantly struggle not to be last in our course ought to feel that sport is something less than a life or death affair.

Perhaps the writer of the editorial would sympathize with the action of a captain of a Japanese baseball team who committed suicide because his team was defeated. He says "a sportsman is a man who plays a fair and honest game and plays to the best of his ability", so far so good, then "he is out to prove his superior skill and to wallop his opponent." I feel that if one is so keen to win as all that, why stop at fair play? This writer reminds me of those who thought the use of gas wasn't "fair" in the war, and if you make a mock war out of sport, why "all's fair", you know.

Then since this champion of the do or die game feels that way about it, he must be dreadfully depressed when entering any athletic competition (like many of us entering an exam hall). He only has a fifty-fifty chance of winning! What a disgrace if he is beaten! Could he face his family, his girl and his schoolmates? Should he shoot himself? Or had he better protect his easily punctured self-respect and rationalize thus—"After all, my opponent got all the breaks, the referee was hopelessly against me"—and so far on into the night.

Evidently this gentleman cannot sympathize with the feelings of a man like Bobby Jones or Sir Thomas Lipton, or Lacoste, who after losing a hard contest or race to a man who displayed more skill and more endurance, feels a certain admiration, a warmth of heart towards his great-hearted victor. Of course this same gentleman would brand as a fool, a world-famous tennis player who deliberately double-faulted in order to compensate for an undeserved point awarded by a careless linesman. It cost him the match, but he gained more fame and credit than if he had won. To those who always search for sordid reasons, this quixotic action was prompted by a desire to become popular with the crowd. No doubt Sir Philip Sydney gave up his cup of water with an eye on posterity, and who knows that Regulus did not return to Carthage to see once more some unrecorded sweetheart?

Yours, etc.,

E.H.N.

P.S.—As far as I know the good Samaritan was never reimbursed for his trouble.

States Position

Editor,
"The Varsity".

Referring to the article on student tours, as printed in yesterday's issue of "The Varsity", I wish to deny certain statements that are imputed to me. I wish to assure you that I am heartily in accord with student tours and my statements which the reporter evidently misconstrued, expressed just such a feeling.

In answer to the query "What is your idea of student tours"? my exact words were, "excellent for those who can afford them. But unfortunately, we are not all plutocrats. I think they are right in line with university in-

The two weeks preceding Christmas, 1929, will go down in history as the period of the great Sunday Evening Concert Controversy. struction. These tours are of great value in the impressionable years of a student. He derives more benefit from them in his youth when his appreciation is stronger than in his later life. The associations have a profounder effect upon him in his student days when he is assimilating all sorts of knowledge than in later life when he has other interests to think of."

Will you kindly grant me these few lines so that any mistaken impressions that might have been gathered about my views in this matter may be cleared up?

VARSITY DEFEAT LIZZIES WINNING 4 EXHIBITION GAMES THIS WEEK

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Last night Varsity stepped right out and took the famous Lizzies into camp. The victory gives the Blue quintet four wins within one week, Broadview and West End succumbing on three occasions. Basketball fans have plenty to be enthused about. Coach McCutcheon has a squad of players who can play, suffer from no over-confidence, and fight hard every minute on the floor. In this case it seems that the intercollegiate title will remain here for the third successive year.

The Junior Assault this year is considered by many as the best in years. Yesterday most of the preliminaries were run off, while the remainder and the finals will be staged to-day. The fans saw plenty of action, with some excellent bouts, and an exhibition by McCatty and Fell on the card. Four bouts went the overtime route. Bain pulled a surprise when he got the decision over Elson in the extra round. Hume and Kay in the welterweight class, dished up a neat fray, but Hume proved the better in the end.

To-day's draw ought to pack the boxing gym to the rafters. And a little surprise for the fans—Jimmy Jackson and Murray Wilton are going to demonstrate the fine points of the fist and mit profession to the newcomers, and what a whale of a bout it will be.

BASKETBALL FINALS TO BE PLAYED TO-DAY

The basketball finals between U.C. juniors and St. Hilda's are to be played off Thursday at 8 p.m. in Hart House, and next Tuesday at 8 p.m. on the same court.

The defense for U.C. juniors seems steady, with J. Allan showing up well so far, and L. Crouch is expected to do some fine scoring for this team.

On the St. Hilda's line-up B. Symons is always good at scoring and I. Wright on the defense with good combination on the part of the whole team.

EMBRYO TEACHERS HOLD GYM PARTY

Final Game in Girls' League Won After Hard Battle by Close Score

CLOWNS ENTRANCE CROWD

Basketball was an outstanding feature of the gym party held last night by the Physical Education students at the Ontario College of Education. It was the final game of the O.C.E. league in which the team captained by Jessie Ramsden was victorious, 21-17.

A number of North Toronto Collegiate girls, clad in gay clown suits, did some clever tumbling stunts. Another feature was a dance given by eight Jarvis C.I. girls, which was followed by all learning the dance. The fun reached a merry climax when Eskimo pies were served to enthusiastic dancers.

VARSITY SENIORS TRIM ELIZABETHS

Basketball Fans Treated to Rare Exhibition of Combination

KEENLY CONTESTED

At Jarvis Collegiate Institute gymnasium last night the senior Varsity basketball team defeated the Elizabeth seniors by the score of 25-23. The game was fast, with both teams in good condition. Varsity used their subs as much as the regular team, and they proved themselves as good, in almost every case, as the regulars.

The Varsity five showed the results of their excellent training and often came through with a well-practiced combination to tally and startle their opponents with their speed. Occasionally, however, when Varsity lost the ball, the Lizzies displayed even more speed in the pivot and breakaway. In this department, Varsity was weak, but played better basketball with their short, snappy passes. Varsity was also slow in covering their men when not in possession, but the work of the forwards, Riggs, Sniderman and Newman, made up for the weakness. O'Leary, for Varsity, was the best man on the floor and plays center gracefully. His dashes down the floor often led his team to score. Sakler, on the defence, starred, and with Cook consistently forced their opponents to take long shots.

Varsity—Riggs, Sniderman, Newman, Sakler, Cook. Subs.—O'Leary, Davey, Currie, Wood, Collins.

Lizzies—Eisen, Pearson, Gallander, Mitchell, Mineovich. Subs.—Litowitz, Samuels, Starr, Howard.

JUNIOR PUCKSTERS WORKING HARD

Preparing for Hard Season in Big Four Circuit This Year

SENIORS READY FOR TOUR

Coach Frank Sullivan has been driving his junior hockeyists in preparation for their first game of the O.H.A. with Toronto Canoe Club on Friday night at the Arena Gardens. The blue squad has taken its defeat at the hands of the champion Marlboro crew to heart when they were eliminated from the S.P.A. series. They have been practicing seriously. The Varsity juniors are strong defensively, but the forward line lacks scoring punch. They are a light line that weakens under stiff body checks, and their back checking in the games to date has been poor.

The Blue and White are grouped in the Big Four circuit with Marlboros, T.C.C. and Parkdale C.C. Marlboros have lost a real star since Jackson signed a contract to play for the Maple Leafs. However, the Iron Dukes can always be depended upon to present a strong championship contender. The two canoe clubs are particularly strong this year and are sure to play a prominent part in the group before the winner is declared.

The Blue and White seniors are still smarting from the defeat they received at the hands of the Rangers in the S.P.A. According to accounts of the game, Varsity should have won, but over-confidence contributed their setback. If they forget that they are O.H.A. champions and play hockey, there is little doubt that they will emerge on top. They have the same team as they had last year with the exception of the goaler. Ames got the assignment for the Ranger game and his performance was below form. LeBarr is the alternative choice and he will give Ames a battle for the position. Their first league game is slated for December 17 with the Rangers and they hope to reverse the decision. Then they meet Nationals three days later. After Christmas Varsity plays Yale and Harvard on their United States tour.

Fencers Attention

Will the following please report at the fencing room to-night at 4.30, so that the remaining events may be run off:

Moore, Hallman, Tilbury, Wishart, Brown, Green, Mervynne.

INTERCOLLEGIATE PLAYERS BANQUETED AT HART HOUSE

Last night in Hart House the Soccer Club of the U. of T. held a banquet in honour of the intercollegiate champions. After the dinner Mr. W. H. Jackson, the president, introduced Professor E. A. Allcut, honorary vice-president, who addressed the club. He stated that soccer is the most universally played sport, and therefore thought that something should be done to create more enthusiasm for the game in this university.

At the conclusion of his address, Prof. Allcut made a presentation to Mr. Art Halliwell, who has been acting as coach for the team.

Twenty-one students at the University of Illinois were expelled recently as a result of the finding of liquor in the rooms of some of the students.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS CLUB'S PURPOSE EXPLAINED

"There is a lot of work to be done early next term. We want club members who will handle the dinners and entertainments. Others must prepare material for the assembly sessions," said Miss Betty Lang, president of the League of Nations Club, in explaining the purpose of last night's meeting, at which the executive will report on work that has been done to-ward the Model Assembly of the League, which will sit February 21st, 22nd, and 23rd.

A short meeting only is planned for to-night. Those desiring membership in the club, who cannot be at this meeting, are requested to send their names and addresses to the meeting.

CANADIAN POETS DESERVE RATING

Have Produced Works Worthy of Greatest English Writers

MR. ELSON ELUCIDATES

"After years of study, comparison and reflection, I have come to the conclusion that there are poems and passages of prose in Canadian literature worthy of a position beside the works of such poets as Wordsworth, Shelly, Keats and others," said Mr. John M. Elson, formerly editor of Toronto Sunday World and at present tutor in journalism in the University of Toronto Extension Department. Mr. Elson made this remark in his illustrated lecture on poets and authors of Canada in West Hall, University College, last evening.

Mr. Elson divided Canadian "literature" into two groups: Pre-Confederation and Post-Confederation. In the former he placed such men as Halliburton, who is said to have greatly influenced Dickens by his humorous articles, Major Richardson, and Oliver Goldsmith, the last being a nephew of the famous Goldsmith and a follower of him in style and material. To the Post-Confederation group belong most

High Heels Hinder Harmony of History Brogues Bring Balm To Book-lovers

By Jennie Farley

There's the nicest warm sort of murmur atmosphere here, and there are so many interesting feet going up and down. Oh, no, I'm in the Library! But really, I think there's nothing so conducive (is that used right?) to deep thought as the steady tramp of feet. My co-thinker here wears brogues. They're not so harmonious as high heels, but she's nervous, and marks each new idea or lack of same by a change in their location. They're on my side now.

However, I'm doing History. I love History. I always thought that "I would see before I die" what was between those pretty yellow covers. And I always had the greatest desire to know if King Canute set his throne on the sea shore and said, "Back, ye waves!" It would be so intellectual to quote at the next water polo match. Quotations are so intellectual. I used to know all the speeches in Shakespeare by heart,—the nice long ones you can say to a tune,—but I haven't had a chance to use them here. I really don't believe they appreciate the art of quoting at Varsity. Only last week, yes, it was when we were having supper, I said, "I would that my tongue could utter the thoughts that arise in me." But I guess they don't like Tennyson. Anyway I always intended going out to supper Thursday evenings.

Tramp-tramp-tramp. Someone must have gone to get that book I wanted. "There is a tide in the affairs of men . . ." Only I somehow always seem to arrive on a cross current. Oh well, perhaps there wasn't much in it, and I haven't read this one yet. But I did see just how that girl in mauve tosses her left curl back. It's so tantalizing. I must practice it to-night. 10 o'clock! At last! I thought I would never be able to leave this History. The work is so heavy and I never quit before time. But then "Time and the hour run through the roughest day."

of the established Canadian writers of to-day such as Sir Gilbert Parker, Pauline Johnson, Ralph Connor, Charles G. D. Roberts, etc.

Lantern slides were then shown of nearly all the prominent writers of Canada in the past as well as the present. "Some of these slides are very rare and will undoubtedly be valuable some day," Mr. Elson stated. Among those pictures particularly interesting were scenes of the boyhood homes of Thomas Moore, writer of "The Canadian Boat Song". This brought to a conclusion Mr. Elson's interesting lecture, which is the first of its kind to be delivered in Toronto.

incidents in the history of this famous settlement.

At the conclusion of the speeches, the meeting was thrown open to discussion. Comments, caustic and enlightening, were passed on the speeches delivered and hints were given as to how the speakers might improve their oratory.

A motion to hold a banquet was put before the house, but was shelved for the nonce.

The meeting broke up amid heated discussion on constitutional points.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS CLUB

The membership rolls of the League of Nations Club will be opened at tonight's meeting in the Women's Union at 7.30. Students wishing to take part in the Model Assembly next term should be at the Union to-night or send their names to the secretary, Mr. Earl Davidson, 11 Victoria.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

A final game of the series will be played between St. Hilda's and U.C. Juniors to-night at Hart House at 8 o'clock.

INTERMEDIATE HOCKEY PRACTICE

ALL intermediate hockey players are requested to be on hand to-day between 1 and 2 o'clock for practice. The usual place.

WOMEN'S PRESS CLUB

The last meeting of the Women's Press Club for this term, in the Common Room at the Union, this afternoon at 4.30. Miss Pearl McCarthy, women's editor of the Mail and Empire, will speak on Dramatics Reviewing. The Press Club expects every member to do her duty.

social, the record of every prisoner is carefully investigated so that all the help possible can be given, which will enable her to pursue a straight course. Thoughtlessness is at the root of many cases. No normal person starts out with the idea of becoming a delinquent. Often the wrong kind of recreation leads to "wreckation" the "wreck" being presented at police court.

Too much familiarity on first acquaintance, drinking, motoring with strangers and the telling of obscene stories frequently end in police court appearance.

There are times when crime is due to some mental disorder such as the permanence of some primitive instinct. Cases like these can often be cured by psychiatric treatment.

Mr. Mosher, who is instructor for the dances, said, "We are farther ahead with our dances after this first rehearsal than we were after three weeks of rehearsing last year. The girls show promise of a snappy production and the men will with a little training, bring the programme up to a very commendable level."

Coupled with the dancing hits are several song attractions. These, Mr. Lindsay feels, are better than last year's standard.

"We seldom get a 'Varsity' at the L.M.," Margaret Copp, IV Household Science said. "The men should have objected to us long ago, and since Hart House is their property we have no right there. I think that women go to the muscicles because it has a charm of getting inside the inaccessible."

Helen Radigan, IV St. Mike's, has not considered the question of women at the university, but believes that "Women have no right to go to Hart House. Some women go to the musical because of the man she's going with and some because of the enjoyment they get from the music. It depends on the woman."

JUNIOR ASSAULT FINALS STAGED REVEALING MUCH NEW MATERIAL

TRINITY WINS TITLE

Bain and Cameron Provide Feature Boxing Bout of Evening

Those who saw the finals of the Junior Assault last night, witnessed a fitting climax to one of the best events of this kind ever staged in the university. Every bout was closely contested and provided a real treat for the spectators. R. E. Diprose, the man largely responsible for the running of the assault, must be given great credit for the way he handled the affair.

The first boxing bout between Keshin of Meds, and Hume of U.C., in the 147 lb. class, was one of the features of the evening. The men were evenly matched and put up a great fight. An extra round was necessary before Keshin won on a close decision. In the 125 lb. class, Rapsey of Trinity, who won the 118 lb. by default, stepped up a notch and gave Huestis of Vic a stout argument before the heavier man was declared winner. Following this an exhibition bout was staged between Jimmy Jackson, intercollegiate welterweight champion and Murray Wilton of Trinity. Both men put up a clever showing of the fine points of the fist game. Wilton carried the fight to Jackson for two rounds and demonstrated the fact that he is a real glove artist. Walsh and Brooks, both of Trinity, were finalists in the 135 lb. class. This was a first class bout and went an extra round. Walsh got the decision by staging a rousing finish. The bout between Bain (Trinity) and Cameron (St. Mike's), was the best on a good card. Both men tore in from the start and kept it up for two rounds. (Continued on page 4)

"It is the only animal with a hobby," he continued, "a museum which he keeps adding to. He visits your lodge and takes a knife or spoon to add to his collection. But his morals are above reproach, for he brings back something to put where the other article lay—a stone or piece of stick."

LEAGUE OF NATIONS CLUB MEETS AT UNION

Discuss Proposed Programme for Model Assembly for Canada

SIR ROBERT TO SPEAK

At the meeting of the League of Nations Club held in the Women's Union last night, the proposed program for a Model Assembly to be called in February was read, and discussed. It was explained that Canada had never had an Assembly on a large scale, although the scheme had been successfully carried out at Oxford.

Sir Robert Falconer has promised to speak at the evening session at which several other prominent men will give addresses on the work of the League in the past year.

The Reverend Canon H. J. Cody, who preached the League sermon at Geneva in 1926, has consented to conduct a special service in St. Paul's Church on February 13.

Colonel Meredith, the General Secretary of the League of Nations Society of Canada, has complied with a request to act as Secretary-General of this Assembly.

Letters have been sent to Canadian universities, asking them to send delegates to this Model Assembly, which should hold its sessions on February 21st, 22nd and 23rd. Plans are being made for the entertainment of these out-of-town guests at several luncheons and a dance.

The problems to be studied are of international importance and will probably be presented at the next session of the League of Nations. A committee of experts is to be composed in Toronto for the purpose of drawing up a list of these subjects.

VIC 371 ELECTIONS

The most keenly contested elections ever held by the third year of Victoria College were held yesterday.

The final results of the poll are: President: Alan Dignan Vice-Pres.: Connie Stephens 2nd V.P.: Jerry Ferguson Secretary: Molly Cook Treasurer: Hugh Barrett

"Over two hundred students applied for employment until Christmas," said Mr. Ken Conn of the Alumni Association yesterday. "Of these, about a hundred undergraduates were referred. I suppose that they are working now, because we haven't heard from them since."

Students who were asked by "The Varsity" if job-holding interfered with their scholarly duties replied quickly in the negative. "I admit," said Michael Freeman, I.U.C., "that it prevents me from participating in extracurricular activities, which are certainly an essential part of college life, but my studies are not being neglected. The fact that one is working for a university education makes one appreciate it all the more. There is no feeling around."

DR. BOYO McLAY SPEAKS AT M. AND P. SOCIETY

John Laing Demonstrates the Use of Imaginative Quantities

The regular meeting of the M. and P. Society was held as usual in Room 43 of the Physics Building, Thursday afternoon. Miss Crossley was the hostess and the first year girls were responsible for the very excellent and welcome refreshments.

John Laing, IV year Maths, gave a talk on Plane Geometry in One Coordinate. He showed very prettily how by the use of imaginary quantities every point in a plane could be represented by a complex number and Cartesian co-ordinates transformed into Argand representations.

Dr. Boyd McLay, who is engaged in research on Spectroscopy, gave a very interesting, if slightly long, discussion of his work on the use of spectroscopy, or the study of spectra in the investigation of the structure of the atom. The atom is comprised of a central nucleus and planetary electrons. The electrons revolving in their normal elliptic orbits, emit no radiation, but when excited to unstable orbits the transitions give off energy.

"Buttercup" Holmes moved a vote of thanks to the speakers, in which the audience heartily concurred.

Charming Co-Eds Castigate Champus Cat Few Find Frolicking Feline Feature Funny

"The Cat isn't low, he's just boring," said Betty Lang, II U.C., when asked about the alleged immorality of the Champus Cat. "Personally, I think he's witty, but that applies only to certain of his outbursts," said Gwen McSweeney, III U.C. "A lot of the features, notably the feeble poetic struggle, should certainly be abolished."

"I think anyone who can be humorous for so many lines should be complimented, not criticized," stated another IIIrd year co-ed. 370 St. Mike's is all wet. Why not burlesque 'All Quiet on the Western Front' if the result is as interesting as this one is?"

Good Woman Increases Man's

DOUBLE CODE OF MORALS?

Police Court Appearances Are Due to Individual's Character

"I think there is a good deal in what Dr. Margaret Patterson says," stated Rev. F. J. Moore, chaplain of Hart House, in regard to her address to Victoria College students. Whether motoring with strangers ends up in court or not, it usually ends up in a mess of some kind.

"It is necessary for boys in company with girls to keep their heads and also for girls in company with boys to keep their heads. I am not prepared to say absolutely that the girls set the moral standards, but I do believe that they have a good deal to do with it."

"A good woman increases a man's self-respect, but one who is careless of her moral behaviour might easily deflect a man's moral standard."

"Girls set the moral standard to some extent," said K. Partridge, I Victoria College, "but not absolutely. Sometimes a fellow will do certain things because he thinks it is expected of him, but in general he is not content to merely follow the leadership of a girl."

"Whether or not pickups and undue familiarity lead to police court appearances depends entirely on the character of those involved. Some people know where to draw the line and others do not."

J. F. Brennan, I S.P.S., said, "I don't know; I haven't had any experience along those lines."

"The majority of men have their own standards of morals and do not just follow the leadership of girls," stated K. McDonnell, IV St. Mike's. "They do what they think they should do and not just what seems to be expected of them."

"However, if girls would not allow themselves to be picked up there would be no motoring with strangers and none of the consequent evils. In this respect the girls do set the moral standard and are themselves to blame for the results."

F. Mallon, III U.C., said, "I think the question is one that should not be asked and I do not wish to discuss it."

LIKENS JOURNALISM TO TROPICAL FEVER

Pearl McCarthy Addresses the Women's Press Club on "Interviewing"

ADVISES "TYPE" CLOTHING

"Journalism is just like malaria; once it gets into you, it sticks," Miss Pearl McCarthy warned the Women's Press Club yesterday afternoon. "No matter how bad it is, you don't want to leave. So never get in, unless you intend to stick at it. It never pays, but the game's worth the candle. You have the interest and thrill of the job, unless you're a half-baked stupid person, and then it's dull."

"Always dress according to your type," was the advice given by Miss McCarthy on "Interviewing". "If you look innocent, dress that way, even if your heart is as black as a coal. You will be taken seriously if you are a type. Personally, I wear black and two large rings—and you can make what you want of that."

"The height of weakness in journalism is to bring in the reporter. It quite often takes a long time to lead up to the subject of interest, but in your interview include none of the lead."

"It is a matter of ethics not to print some things said in an interview—but, only if you are asked to omit them before they are said."

"Never write while people are talking. Remember what they tell you, and carry everything in your head. Of course, to do that you must have a good night's sleep."

"Immaculately clean gloves are important. Also, have the person you are interviewing, comfortable. You can't very well ask a person who is all hot and uncomfortable about conditions in Mexico."

"Theatrical people realize that every night is a Waterloo for them—that they can't rest on their laurels. For that reason they are the easiest in the world to get along with in interviews, and do their best to make it easy for you." Miss McCarthy illustrated this with several examples from personal interviews.

Moralists who shout to high heaven that college students drink are right. One in every three drinks, according to statistics compiled at the University of Washington. But they dissipate with a milk bottle. The confirmed drinkers at Washington are on the water wagon or more accurately, the milk wagon. Anybody who doesn't know that college students are a separate species and a queer one at that, should know that spinach is a favorite food among collegians. Fish is said to be a brain food. Maybe so, anyway fish is a mainstay of the collegiate diet. Students do not like beans. Wheres'at old army spirit? And they do like pretzels with their milk—Ohio State Lantern.

Specifications Will Include Theological College, Library and Residences

GOTHIC IN ARCHITECTURE

Chapel and Another Residence
Will be Built at Date in Future

"The new Emmanuel College buildings will complete the quadrangle at Victoria University, with the main building in the centre," stated Dr. F. L. Barber, secretary of the plans committee of the new college, to "The Varsity" yesterday.

The plans committee has carried through plans and specifications for the theological building and the men's residence. The architecture will be collegiate gothic, the same as Hart House and Burwash Hall. When completed, the new Emmanuel College proper will adjoin the Victoria College library and extend southerly to about where the building at the corner of Queen's Park Crescent and Queen's Park Drive now stands. One important feature of the building will be the library, the use of which will be given over solely to theological students, and will be controlled by Victoria University library. Lecture rooms for all theological students and office for Emmanuel College professors will be contained in the building.

On the west half of the south end of the quadrangle will be built the administration building, which will extend from the gate to the main building. From the eastern side of the gate to Burwash Hall will be the theological students' residence accommodating sixty-four men. The administration building and the residence will be of about equal size.

The objective of the building campaign is $1,200,000, a part of which sum will be spent on Victoria work. (Continued on page 4)

FABIUS GROUP DISCUSSES 'PROS, CONS OF CAPITALISM'

Idle Rich Declared a Benefit to Society, Even as Labourer

"It should not be held against the 'idle rich' (in the real sense of the word) that he spends money on luxuries, but that he is unproductive," was a point brought up at the Fabius Group in the discussion on the paper given by Mr. A. Wilson on the "Pros and Cons of Capitalism."

It was, however, pointed out that, on the contrary, the "idle rich" stimulates production by spending money on luxuries, and thus provides much work for the masses, and circulates his wealth.

"Service to the state can replace capitalism as an incentive to labour. People to-day are not so selfish as those of the same class two hundred years ago, they are more humane in their treatment towards each other."

A greater incentive than material gain, in an ideal socialist state, would be an honour, such as for example, the order of merit; and if that were limited in number its effect would be all the greater. Under this ideal state labour would be managed almost under a proscription system.

Under the capitalist system of today, there seems to be a definite cleavage between the employer and the employee; this would, of course, be done away with under socialism.

ENTERPRISE

We live in a community which purports to be a model of the world. In our leisure time we are impelled to carry on many of the intellectual activities which fascinate men in the world. But, because we make our own community, are our own judges and because we are all without vast experience, we set ourselves a lower standard of excellence. The speeches which give a man place and renown in Hart House need not be so good as those which impress a more mature house of debate in government; many a poem is printed in a college magazine which would not pass muster in a world magazine; many an actor in undergraduate plays would be hissed off the professional or even good amateur boards; few committees and executives could approach in administrative ability the average board of directors. The university is a community in which to test faculties, when the competition is not too fierce, and where any man of reasonable intelligence who painstakingly pursues one goal may reasonably hope to gain it.

There is one faculty which the world in this generation worships, one faculty which can distinguish its possessor in almost any walk of life: that is enterprise. The faculty of enterprise sums up many powers: the power of leaving the beaten track and of thinking originally, even if not deeply; the power of executing the thought, of crystallizing a dream into facts; most of all, the power of beginning and of ending a task, which is at first only a phantom of the mind and which requires the co-operation of a number of people. In the university, to be enterprising, one must take the routine work of the day in his stride, leap over it, tread it out of the way; after he has seen to the necessary study and affairs which here take the place of earning a living, he must then force his mind to conceive new thoughts and plan their execution; must then fight the mental lethargy of a community which is in the main content with the daily round. He must be so in love with his idea that he can face alike examinations and ironic smiles, and be able to impart that enthusiasm to others. Yet evidence of this enterprise appears before us constantly. Every new activity, every undertaking off the track beaten down by the feet of previous generations, is eloquent of the enterprise of some one or two people. Look about you and you will see it to-day.

In the university, faculties are cautiously tested, which may be later developed, which may later grow to great stature. It is often said that the government of Canada to-day is the development of the U.C. Literary Society of a generation ago. Therefore, student and professor, note the undergraduate with enterprise. He may not be capable of deep thought, of great feeling, of sustained study; but these qualities are not always associated with worldly success. And the chances are he has the blessed combination of qualities which enable him to conceive an idea, to stamp it on the minds of others, and then to execute it. In all human probability the world will be forced to notice him.

French Society Play

Wednesday at the Women's Union the French Society of University College presented "La Poudre aux Yeux" by Labiche et Martin, to a capacity audience. This sparkling satire on the aristocratic pretensions of bourgeois families, portrays the efforts of two households to deceive each other as to their financial standing in the matter of the arrangements of the wedding dowry of their children. Each family seeks to impress the other and "peter la poudre aux yeux."

Mr. H. Peterson as Ratinois, "ancien confiseur", was at his best and got the utmost out of his role. Miss K. Stewart capably played the part of Mme. Ratinois, his pompous wife. M. Malingear, "Medecin sans clients", and his wife with the "grande dame" manner, were played by Mr. V. Wynburne and Miss Gwen Rupert. Miss Renee Nevever and Mr. B. Davidovitz formed the amorous pair and played their parts with the suitable and conventional restraint.

According to a well established Anglo-Saxon convention, no French comedy is complete without at least one snappy "femme de chambre". On Wednesday night there were two.

The unanimous opinion of qualified critics proclaimed the production as one of the best that has been staged by the French Society in recent years. E.D.

More Music!

The Editor,
"The Varsity".
Dear Sir:

Every lover of progress must view with delight the move inaugurated by our bright and optimistic daily for the modernization of our medieval soup-shop. But as it is obvious that one lone victrola would not be audible over the whole area of the somewhat uncompact apartment, would it not be well, in the interests of a virile culture suitable to this continent, to instal a series of phonographs, of as raucous a model as possible, say one to every table. Such a complement of machines, playing some stirring air in unison, would undoubtedly cause a more rapid and more rhythmic disappearance of victrolas. Or for a pretty and variegated effect, all the tunes could be different, or two selected tunes might be played by alternate instruments.

A further improvement, which would bring the chamber more into line with the tendencies of the present century, would be the erasure of the obscure circumscription from Milton, which, however useful as an eye-test to the solitary eater, demands for its full appraisal too great a strain on time and legs; and the substitution therefore of a cheery row of street-car ads, pleasing to the eye and stimulating to the mind, and a very common solace to loneliness.

Yours for modernism, SQUEEDUNK.

Coach Knute Roelke is said to have attributed the greater part of Notre Dame University's football success to the absence of co-eds and fraternities.

JUNIOR SCHOOL TEAM VARSITY JRS. MEET WINS ECKHARDT CUP RED RING PADDLERS

With S.P.S. Seniors by 4-2 Score

FISHER STARS FOR WINNERS

In the final game of the round to decide the interfaculty water polo championship, Junior School defeated Senior School last night in Hart House pool. In the first game of the round the outcome was a tie, 3-3, and last night the Juniors added four to that score and the Seniors added only two, to end the game 7-5 for the juniors. Junior School are thus interfaculty champions and hold the Eckhardt Cup, emblematic of the interfaculty championship.

The Seniors were handicapped by the absence through sickness of Ward, their goalie, but Boughton filled the position and made some beautiful saves. The juniors had a slight edge on the seniors in this department, where Crocker played an excellent game, allowing only two to pass him. The senior forward line had the advantage on the juniors and managed to keep the ball in the opposite end. It was by dint of the brilliant playing of Fisher, for the juniors, that they won the game. He was easily the best man in the water and was responsible for two of the juniors' scores. Craig, Towers and Hayhoe played well for the juniors. Hayhoe was always dangerous with his long, accurate shots. The junior school defence was a better working pair than the senior defence, and had a good deal more to do. Senior School defence was always baffled by the tricky headwork and quick breakaways by Fisher. For

EXPECT CHAMPIONSHIP

Varsity juniors will send the Little Big Four season off to a flying start to-night when they entangle with Toronto Canoe Club in the first game of the initial double header. With a host of useful talent fighting for the places, and a month's almost daily practice to develop it, the team management is confident of ringing up the first of a long series of successes.

"I can't see anything but a win," manager Les Bowles told "The Varsity" last night. He conceded that the group appears to be pretty evenly balanced, but was optimistic about the Blue and White's chances of hauling out a group championship, and very possibly going quite a bit farther toward the national finals.

The starting line-up to-night will be the same as that used in the S.P.A. series. The cool-headed Hunnisett will mind the twine, with Funston held in reserve. Smillie and Levinsky will crash 'em over on the defence, and Williamson, who has been showing good stuff of late, will lend a hand. The regular forward line of Brant, Hetherington and Bennett will be depended upon for the majority of the offensive work. Just which of the eager crew of relief men will get the call will not be known until game time. Cunningham has flashed some smooth hockey at recent practices, and seems to have a good chance.

Co-eds are used at Duquesne University, Pittsburgh, to signal the plays made by the rugby teams to the crowds in the stands.

Over twice as many persons as last year have paid to see football games at the University of Denver this fall.

the seniors, Alexander, Grant and Little were good on the forward line. On the whole the juniors had a slight edge on the play.

Seniors — Gibbs, Little, Boughton, Grant, Alexander, Hicks, Pierdon, Puddy.

Mythical All-Intercollegiate Team Picked from '29 Players

By George A. Morgan (Varsity Football Captain, 1929)

In the selection of any mythical rugby team one must endeavour to keep in mind five qualities which in the opinion of many critics constitute the attributes of the ideal football player,—viz: Determination, perseverance, co-ordination, brains and strength. Physical co-ordination, brains and strength undoubtedly enter into the make-up of the near-perfect player, but a manufactured lineman or half, will always remain an automaton.

QUEEN'S MAN AS CAPT. AND QUARTER

To "Ike" Sutton of Queen's, goes the call as quarter-back and incidentally as field leader. Although criticized, (and justly so), for his last-minute tactics in the Varsity-Queen's game, which enabled Varsity to turn seeming defeat into a last-second victory, Sutton, nevertheless, has in his four years of play led Queen's to two Intercollegiate Championships. Besides being a good general and field leader, he is a clever secondary line defence player, who has the uncanny ability of deciphering plays before they are actually completed. A consistent tackler, cool under fire, his errors in judgment are few and on attack is quick to sense weak points in the opposing line.

CARTER (Q) AND SINCLAIR (V) ON BACKFIELD

"Howie" Carter, sterling Queen's half, gets the call over Jack Sinclair, Varsity ace, as kicking half. Carter this year, as last, was Batstone's key-man and Queen's success is in no little way due to his ability to shoot high, lofty spirals deep into enemy territory, and his stiff arm has become an extra threat to be reckoned with. Sinclair, a brainier, trickier player than Carter, is chosen as Carter's running-mate, but due to an early season injury was unable to play during the first half of the campaign. The exhibition of back-field brilliancy served up by these two players in the Varsity-Queen's game of Nov. 9th, at Toronto, was a treat to watch. Both steady, reliable catches, whose ability to receive punts is matched by their ability to return them, plunge the line or skirt an end with equal abandon.

KEITH (V) AT CENTRE

To John Keith, capt.-elect of 1930, U. of T., must go the centre position. Few, if any, will disagree in this choice, as defensively Keith has few peers in Canadian rugby, while on attack he is a sure passer, a tackle much above the ordinary and possessed of sufficient spirit and fire to carry a team to a fighting pitch in a closely-contested struggle.

KELLY (V), BEAN (V) AT INSIDE

The inside wing berths must go to Joe Kelly and Wally Bean, both Blue stalwarts, not only because of their physical greatness, both tipping the scales at close to 190 lb. mark, but because of their determination and willingness to persevere. Four years of Intercollegiate experience has taught these two Blue and White gridmen correlation between mind and muscle. A tower of strength on defence, they are none the less brilliant on attack, seldom failing to make substantial gains when called upon.

WESTERN MAN AT MIDDLE

Gugino, 190 lb. Western University lineman, gets the call at one middle position, and here perhaps many will criticize my selection. But two years at Syracuse University as regular tackle seems to have given this Western U stalwart the necessary experience in plunging and interference tactics to make him the standout in the last four games played by his team. According to Coach Breen, Gugino's clever play was largely responsible for Western's fighting finish. A bullet-like plunger whose rapier thrusts proved a source of worry to opposing lines, and an American type of defensive charging aids greatly his task of securing a coveted place on the mythical all-Intercollegiate.

"Blurrp" Stuart of Queen's is picked to fill the remaining wing position, and here again we are fortunate in securing a type of player who, despite his great weight has the necessary football ability to make himself a welcome addition to any man's football team. A bear cat on defence, he is equally good on attack, and is one of few line plungers who, hurling himself relentlessly at the opposition, when sensing that his way is blocked, seldom failing to make ground for his team.

QUEEN'S SECURE BOTH END BERTHS

Gourley, capt.-elect of 1930 Queen's rugby team, and Britton, cap. of Queen's in 1928, have justly captured the end positions. Britton always recognized as one of the greatest tacklers in the game, is a heady player whose turn of speed makes him a constant threat to opposing halves. Britton is moved from flying wing, his natural position, to outside, as this season, due to his previous injury, his ball carrying duties have been somewhat limited. To Gourley, his team-mate, goes the other end position; fleet of foot, a deadly tackler, who seldom misses his man and possesses plenty of nerve and courage.

YOUNG (M), KENNEDY (W) AT FLYING WINGS

Using the dual backfield system which is much in vogue at the present time, Don Young (McGill), and Kennedy (Western), complete the all-star aggregation. Both strong fearless ball carriers and deadly tacklers, who are at the same time excellent outpost secondary line defensive players. Young, due to his ability to "diagnose" plays, has broken up or intercepted more end runs than any other Intercollegiate player. Both Young and Kennedy are exceptionally fast for big men, hard to pass and few end runs gain much yardage around their territory.

BATSTONE AC COACH

Harry Lee Batstone is my selection as coach. Backed up by years of playing experience, both in the Big Four with Argonauts, and on six Queen's Intercollegiate teams, Batstone, a quiet, unassuming type of individual, led Queen's to an Intercollegiate championship in his first year as coach. A former player who studies the disposition and temperament of every candidate, seeking out men with nerve and cheerfulness, who do not complain too readily of bumps, discouragements and bruises.

JUNIOR ASSAULT FINALS

In the third, Bain's superior science told and he was awarded the decision on a technical K.O. Eaton (S.P.S.), defeated Stewart (Trinity), in a slashing 175 lb. bout, which required an extra round. In the heavyweight final Witzel (Vic), after a slow start, defeated Baldwin of Meds. The winner used a nice straight left to good advantage.

Mueller (Trinity) won the 134 lb. wrestling class by defeating Merritt of U.C. The 158 lb. finals between Smith (S.P.S.) and Cameron (Meds) provided a clever exhibition. The former got the only fall of the bout to win out. Bannister (S.P.S.) got the judge's decision over Robertson (Meds) in the 123 lb. class. Barrow of Trinity and Green of St. Mike's provided some good grappling in the 118 lb. class. The former did not have much trouble in winning out. Mervynne, winner by default in the 174 lb. class, put on an exhibition with Tyson, intercollegiate champion at this weight. The more experienced Tyson managed to get the first and only fall in 4 minutes. Both men are smart grapplers. Willis (S.P.S.) beat Walker (U.C.) in the finals of the 145 lb. class. Brownlee of S.P.S. won a good bout from Kinnear of U.C. in the 112 lb. class.

The refereeing jobs were ably handled in the boxing by Dr. C. Gosage and Mr. Ted Buxton, and in the wrestling by Mr. Martin and Gord McKinney.

OCCUPATIONAL THERAPY FINDS NEW HOME IN U.C.

Room 52 Will Be Convenient for Students Taking Campus Lectures

"It looks like a back door to the Dean's residence," Miss Florence Wright, supervisor of Occupational Therapy smilingly remarked, as she endeavoured to tell the students of that course how to find their new headquarters. Until the present time the "home" of Occupational Therapy has been the third floor of the Social Service building.

Miss Wright feels that this move to Room 52, University College, is a wise one, and it is welcomed by the students as making for much more convenience in reaching various lecture rooms on the campus.

Second year students will have no classes in Room 52 until the new year, but first year students may become acquainted with it next week. The inquisitive "Varsity" reporter investigated yesterday and found it an interesting place, which possibly few students have been privileged to find, off the north end of the cloisters.

men's residences. Between $800,000 and $900,000 has already been pledged and at the present time the committee is asking for tenders. The approximate cost of the new buildings cannot at the present time be divulged.

Dr. Barber advised that the building of a chapel on the southwest corner of the quadrangle and of another residence on the Massey property would probably be made at some future date. They are not included in the present specifications.

FAMOUS NATURALIST LECTURES ON ANIMALS

a Studebaker and a Ford—and they don't despise the Ford," he added, illustrating by a picture of a huge black bear with its nose democratically inside the front window of a Lizzie, and apparently enjoying himself. "Black bears have large feet, but, in spite of them, are expert tree-climbers—and fall better than a boy. I saw one fall out of an 80 foot tree. It bounced and was gone on the bounce immediately. But a grizzly can't climb after youth. So, if you're chased by a grizzly, there is one thing to do—climb."

The most numerous animals in the Rockies are mountain sheep and goats, according to Mr. MacCowan. Many people seemed to confuse the two, and he mentioned an illustrious Toronto weekly that, under the picture of a mountain sheep, had the title, "Mountain Goat". "But the goat has no relative in any part of the world—and looks it," he said, showing a picture of one of the gawky animals. "You will notice that 'plus fours' are worn habitually," he added, pointing out the large masses of fur, growing on the upper part of the front legs.

Mr. MacCowan gave accounts of his extensive observation of beavers and said that when they go up-stream in the fall to cut and float down their logs, no matter how far the logs come, they all sink in the same spot. "No one yet has discovered how it is done—and it is certainly not accident."

He showed coloured views of picturesque Indian encampments, and members of that dignified race. In noting their method of carrying baggage lashed to two sticks attached to their horses, he pointed out that it was the only feasible method for the mountains—and they never have a blowout.

"The oldest library on earth is not in Ur of the Chaldees, but the Canadian Rockies," he said, giving as example of its contents the trilobite fossil, the oldest form of life.

He concluded with very beautiful pictures of the glaciers, lakes, waterfalls and cloud pictures of the mountain country.

Amazement and anger have been displayed at the University of Kansas over charges that Jim Bausch, stellar football player and basketball contender is ineligible due to professionalism. The foundations on which the charges are laid have not been made public.

Montreal with Pen and Pencil

One of the oldest, most picturesque and historic cities on this continent—the city of Montreal—has found a worthy biography in the work of Victor Morin and the well-known Canadian Academician Charles W. Simpson, who have between them produced, under the auspices of the Canadian Pacific Railway, a description in words and drawings bearing the above title. Written originally in French it has been rendered into English in a translation that conserves the original verve and atmosphere of the book. In forty pages of clear and readable type with fifteen full page reproductions of pictures that are in themselves works of art, the story of the city is told for the past three hundred years. Lay-out shows two contrasted and typical scenes: the famous church of Notre Dame, second largest on the continent; and Bonsecours market that resembles a scene taken from a city of Normandy.

By Bernita Miller

Sing, angels, sing, the Babe must go to sleep;
Sing, angels, sing, the Babe must go to sleep.

All glory, glory, to the Infant King.
Let all creation lift its voice and thrill
The vault of Heaven with praise. For He is come,
The hope of endless ages to fulfil.
All glory, glory, glory, to our King.

Sing soft, sing soft, He will not go to sleep;
Sing soft, sing soft, He will not go to sleep.

Let us press close to Him, and Him adore.
Night fills the vale, but here day lingers still,
For lo, He smiles! He lightly breathes on us,
And here 'tis warm! The night without is chill.
We will press close to Him and Him adore.

Oh hush, Oh hush! The Babe has fall'n asleep;
Oh hush, Oh hush! The Babe is fast asleep.

Old English Carol

By Andrew Allan

Three kings o'er Asia's burning sands
Did see a holy light,
And bore rich presents in their hands
On that first Christmas night.
The little candle brightly burns
And sheds its beams abroad,
As truly gives as spiced urns
An offering to our God.

Night lustily, good Christian folk,
Sing carols to the Lord,
For He this night hath sweetly spoke
Through His incarnate Word.

Poor shepherds on a hillside bleak
Did hear the angels sing;
To them the messenger did speak
And tell a wondrous thing.
But we can know this blessed Child,
Though Him we cannot see,
For we can prove His teachings mild
And serve Him faithfully.

With fir and holly deck the board,
The sacred song repeat;
A lusty heart is to the Lord
A likely thing and meet.

The Old House

By Arthur E. Barker

Within sight of the upper rapids, it stands, seeming to retire unto itself among the trees and shrubs which surround it. The music of the rapids is in its ears and the dull rumbling of the falls makes it vibrate as if in sympathy with an old friend. It stands upon one of the city's most exclusive streets and as the high-powered cars hum by, it seems to draw more and more into the shelter of the trees as if it were trying to shut out the modern city and turn its back upon its noise and bustle, seeking solace in the company of the rapids behind it. A wide lawn stretches down to the shore and even the bushes and flowers of the garden seem lulled by the soft sound, while Peter Pan, resting from his gambols, looks dreamily towards the tumbling waters, deep in reminis-cences. All is peace.

The white stone of the house has become gray with age; the paint upon the roof is wrinkling and the very shingles of the roof have acquired a

Tapestry

By Naomi St.G. Anglin

I love old tapestries on bare stone walls,
On which the pitying sunlight softly falls,
Mellowed with age and faint, they seem to me
Nothing but ghosts of things that used to be.

They are like dreams, like dreams that I have had,
Faded, forgotten, somehow faintly sad,
Shadowed and softened, dim in every line,
Worn-out and frayed like dreams—old dreams of mine.

Meeting

By John R. Thomas

Because you understood there was a silence
Held far above the glory of all nights,
And in the quiet there dawned magnificence
Of eyes that knew the furies of strange heights.
Your wayward hair curving in loveliness
Caught wayward rain stars in its darkling grace,
And I had gazed in close adoring holiness
Upon your lips, and cheeks, and sculptured face.

We knew Earth's peace who soared beyond this sphere
Beyond dim utterance of cold mortal breath
That upward fainting when the spirit near Sheer ecstasy soars far beyond this Life and Death.
And then you smiled and colour flamed Earth's tips
In laughter falling from proud laughing lips.

The Dreamer

By T. J. Wright

A slow spiral of smoke from the yellow bowl of a pipe ascends lazily upwards, like a princess from her golden bed, a princess swathed in flowing robes of grayish white. A thin, lanky boy, wrapped in a sombre gray bath-robe, reclines on a chair, head back, hair in wild disarray, eyes half closed, and watches the sluggish smoke
Strange pictures these, that the smoke makes for him. As he watches, the walls recede and dazzling visions appear in the billowing bundles of ghostly fumes.

Alas, poor dreamer, why must you always be painting your lovely visions in misty clouds of smoke? Why must you ever leave their execution to someone else, while you pursue your fancies in wreathing clouds of vapour?
Oh, they are beautiful dreams, of tall castles gilded with sunlight, castles that ever seem destined to crumble—one on the debris of the one before.
But always they rise again—these shimmering, scintillating castles of dreams—for the moment they are glorious, a fit home for happiness. Yet somehow they never stand—they crash before merciless reality, their lofty towers and battlements dissolve in the glare of materialism—and the dreamer has only memories and, perhaps, regrets. But, because he is a dreamer
—he forgets, and dreams again.

Where will they lead him—these shimmering, wavering longings? In dreams he travels o'er far mountains and distant plains—cross oceans and deserts in a misty caravan of tho'ts.
A winged galleon of desire—this is his treasure-ship. Her sails—white wings aloft—bear him on to the golden lands of romance.

The dreamer lives in a land of phantasmic thoughts, weird hopes, bizarre ambitions. He is a wanderer on a desert of loneliness, seeking ever the oasis of contentment—in that elusive someday of all his hopes, the someday of all his dreams, a someday that life will teach him, never exists.

So the tall boy dreams—and Time goes on; others will bring his visions to life, but he has his dreams and in them is happy.

Peace on Earth

By Lois Reynolds

Jesus has come to the earth to-night—
Reverently kneel before Him!
Heaven is shedding a hallowed light—
Come, let us all adore Him!
Peace on earth and goodwill toward men,
Jesus lives in the world again!

Lights twinkle brighter to-night in town,
Sweeter the church-bells ringing;
Deeper the snow like a drifted down,
Voices of children singing:
Peace on earth and goodwill toward men,
Jesus walks in the streets again!

Doors have been opened—both high and low,
Lives have been touched with laughter;
Fires have been kindled, and faces glow;
Memory will live long after.
Peace on earth and goodwill toward men,
Jesus dwells in our homes again!

Hearts have been touched by an unseen hand,
Thoughts on the Christ-Child centred;
Kindness is spreading through all the land,
Love and good cheer have entered:
Peace on earth and goodwill toward men,
Jesus reigns in our hearts again!

"A Baby Laughed"

By Joyce Plumpre

Into the crowded street ear, men and women pushed their way. It was rush hour and near Christmas. Bang!
Jerk! The car had started and the mob lurched violently to and fro. On other days, the crowd might have greeted the rough and tumble with a laugh, but these five o'clock travellers were weary and in no mood to be pushed and jostled.

"Say, who'er yer shovin'?" demanded a burly messenger boy.

"I don't know, and care less!" retorted a thin, round-shouldered girl, as she drew her fur coat about her and braced herself for further efforts.

"The Job"

By H. D. Sheppard

I feel ill, no, sick. The cold chills are starting to run up and down my spine and my skin is all goosey. My weight seems to be too much for my knees; somewhere inside me solid plumbing feels as if it were dissolving.
But duty spurs, and I push in through the entrance and am enveloped by the cold half-gloom.

There is a faint odour, sickly, terrible, detestable—an odour of death.
My gorge rises. In spite of the chill my head swims and I put out one hand to steady myself. The switch I press the button and the incandescent glare of electricity lights up the awful scene.

There they are, all swinging from the same beam in the little room, just as the Old Man said they would be, almost feel as if I had seen it before. Fifteen of them, hanging stark and stiff. Ugh! . . . and I have to take them down! . . . To take them down! Oh, . . . I To take down those damned, dead carcasses, and to carry them out. (What wouldn't I give for a breath of the fresh open air), and to pile them . . .

What was that? Listen! . . . A thud. . . something. . . oh, pshaw!
Just one of the horses pawing the ground outside. Lucky that I brought a good big sleigh. Those things will need it all . . . and a good big tarp to cover them and to tuck them in.
(Damn those horses! I wish they'd

The Princess

Quite a Nice Fairy Story

By A. E. F. Allen

Once upon a time there lived a princess in a far country. And she was quite young and very beautiful.
She used to run across the green lawn and play in the fine estate belonging to the king, her father. And, as she ran and played, the little iron stag and the seventeen bronze gnomes among the willows down by the brook used to have a funny, warm feeling down their metal spines.

Which was all very well, until one day she came to her governess and said: "I am tired of playing about this stupid old estate, and I want to go places and do things."

Now this was very surprising to the governess, who was not a person of much imagination, and she said: "Well, well! I'm sure I don't know what to say. Perhaps you'd better go and see his majesty about it."

So the princess ran into the palace, right past the royal private secretary —who was a dull old soul with a beard and a glass eye, and an excellent secretary—and burst in on her father when he was having a confidential conference with the wife of his latest lord.

"Tush! tush!" said the king, who was equal to any occasion.

"I am tired," said the princess, "of playing about this tiresome old place and I want to go away somewhere and see something interesting for a change."

Now the king was quite surprised at this sudden change in his sweet little princess; but he was a person of some intelligence and took it very calmly.

"Quite right," said he. "Where did you think of going?"

The princess wasn't prepared for this, because she really hadn't thought about details, and anyway she was bad in geography.

"I don't know," she said. Which was a singularly wise thing to say, because she didn't know.

"How would China suit you?" asked the king, opening a secret panel and letting the wife of his latest lord slip discreetly out.

"I don't think I'd like it," said the princess. "There are altogether too many Chinese there."

That was really quite a brilliant remark under the circumstances, and sounded almost like a quotation. But the king knew it wasn't, because he had attended to the princess's educa-

Winter Sketch

By Marjorie Beer

You were so splendidly young as you stood there laughing,
Softness of snow on your hair and snow on your cheek,
Wind-blown and wind-blushed and eyes all happy,
That I, locking, loved you and could not speak.

Christmas Three Times

By Leonard N. Edgeworth

(In memory of a soldier who died of wounds: written Christmas 1928)

Years gone. I'm still on my back, a thing to be shuddered at. People that come to look at me turn away, unable to do more than glance at my mutilated form—"God, how sorry I am", but their heads are turned away.
Christmas and I'm fed through a glass tube. Even Sister is glad when she can leave me.

Twelve years ago. Silent Hell around me—lying face upward over the barbed wire—too far gone to feel the sharp bars. No one to bring me in, —stretcher bearers have to rest— Almighty, how they are gnawing my tortured flesh from my bones! I wondered how the rats grew so big—gnawing, tearing, teeth like scalpels. Lord, my face—how sharp their teeth —how clammy their wet bodies.

Christmas. Just a "kid". Maw, don't it look great—and the long blue pants—maw, ain't this red tunic slick— Kin f have some brass button polish—Aw, mother, take my picture—teacher wants it back after parade—ma, don't f look dandy—the cap on the side of my head—just like the pictures in the history book— Maw, kin I, aw, please, maw.

The apex of the year draws on anew,
With jubilation its coming men still greet,
Feasting and gifts are present—such are meet
With chime of bells, a spirit to imbue
Of happy holiday. One finds but few,
'Mid those who throng the festive busy street,
Whose voices no glad greeting do repeat—
Unto old custom 'tis a something due.

In our swift progress on the path of time
Have we that spirit lost which made more real
To men of old, the fullness of Christ's birth?
Do still our hearts pulsate with joy sublime,
Can we as shepherds or as Magi feel
The glory of God's holy bond with Earth?

CROOKED LANE

If we had not already, in our first twenties, become somewhat disillusioned, we should be inclined to gape at the civic political scene. For a certain plan is under consideration which involves extensive and expensive change in down-town geography. One party sings hymns of praise to the scheme, and wallops the other side with extreme vigour. Their opponents retort with crusading glee, accuse the proponents of snide and underhand work, and shoot sophistry quite all over the news and editorial pages.

Yet both parties are united in prasing their own righteousness. And it is this that may puzzle the more trusting, because it is manifestly absurd for both sides to be right.

SANTA CLAUS

It becomes progressively more difficult for us to work up a real Christmas glow, for this festival is becoming more and more an opportunity for the sales manager to clear out the shelves, and write enough profit on his books to carry him over the lean months. No effort is made to conceal this fact.

We may be wrong, but it is our private belief that Christmas is not found in shop windows and in magazine advertisements and in sales sheets. And we are hurt when we note the increasing tendency to look for Christmas in such places.

THE LITERARY SUPPLEMENT

As usual, "The Varsity" presents a literary supplement with its special Christmas issue. Announcements as to prize-winners are made elsewhere. The editors are gratified to note the quantity of material which was turned in for the supplement, which is surely an indication of the interest of the student body in "The Varsity" and in literary effort. We thank all our contributors, successful, and unsuccessful, for having submitted their work for publication.

AVE ATQUE VALE

"The Varsity" will next appear on Thursday, January 9th. From that time on the Editor-in-Chief will be Mr. Lou Golden, at present Associate Editor. Those who know the incoming editor can assure the readers that he is eminently qualified for this position.

The entire staff of "The Varsity" unites in wishing the entire university, staff and students, the best wishes of the season, and trusts that the readers of "The Varsity" have enjoyed the paper as much as the staff has enjoyed working for it.

THE PRINCESS

tion himself and all her books had been extremely dull.

"Well, you might try Canada," said the king.

"All right," said the princess, who had never heard of Canada, but thought it had a cute name.

The king rang a bell for his private secretary, who appeared almost instantly because he had been listening at the keyhole.

"Have the servants pack the princess's things," said the king. "She is going to Canada."

So the princess's things were packed and she went to Canada.

She had a letter of introduction to all the best families in Rosedale, so she got on rather well right from the very beginning. She used to go to balls and parties and then go to a funny place to eat afterwards. In this funny place you grabbed a tray and utensils wrapped up in a paper napkin, then you wandered around with your tray until you found something to eat, and then you paid some money, and then you sat down at a table if you could find one. The princess thought this rather silly and not very civilized, but she realized that it was the thing to do, so she did it.

She found it quite hard at first to get used to the long, fluffy gowns she had to wear at night. The things she had been wearing ever since she could remember were distinctly less bother. "This silly dress which trails in the mud and this stupid wrap which I have to hold about me as if I had a pain somewhere, doesn't suit me at all," she said to herself. She had a good deal of difficulty in walking properly, but she soon noticed that the other women had just as much difficulty and looked quite as ridiculous, so she did not mind.

She used to stay out quite as late as half past one sometimes. This was quite naughty and thrilling. She always slept until noon next day.

One night she went to a horse show. It wasn't very interesting, because she didn't like horses and the place had a funny smell. But she realized that it was the done thing, so she did it.

And she met a nice young man. He wasn't very intelligent, but he had a nice voice and a nice smile and never said anything to shock anyone. He talked about Canada's unsaturated resources and built bridges and things. She told him she liked him, and that he had a nice voice and did lovely things. She wanted to tell him he had a cute moustache, too. But she thought it might sound too intimate, so she didn't.

One day the nice young man said: "I love you. Will you marry me?" And she said: "All right. Only, you'll have to ask father." So they went back to the princess's own country to ask father.

The king looked the nice young man over thoughtfully. But he was really rather relieved, because you never know about daughters.

"Yes," he said, "that'll be all right." "Because," as he said to his private secretary afterwards, "the beauty of this young man is that you can take him into any drawing room without any fear as to the outcome."

So the princess and the nice young man were married. And they would have lived happily ever after if it hadn't been for the fact that the nice young man insisted on undressing in the dark.

NO SECOND-HAND GOODS

"These are very nice ones, miss," said the clerk, "satio bloomers." "Oh! No," said the sweet young thing. "I want some that have not been used before."

New Year's Eve

By Lois Reynolds

The embers on the hearth were growing cold,
The humble hillside hut was dark and chill;
And at the window watching as of old Silent and alone she lingered still—
She whose final page was almost done,
For nothing more remained for life to tell;
And on her wrinkled face the starlight shone,
Lighting it with memory's magic spell.

She saw without the landscape deep and white,
The creeping shadows sloping down the hill;
And far below the town lights twinkling bright,
Told that the people there were watching still.
Then through her reverie came soft and low
A melancholy sigh—the wind's last breath;
And when the bells rang out across the snow
She only heard the solemn toll of death.

Bethlehem

By S. H. Deudney

Of music's oldest sweetest strains
Pass over all,
And me enthral
With sounds that soothe my larger pains;
Sing me the song of Bethlehem!

From rich tradition's wealth of lore,
From legends old
Told and retold,
Call me this story I implore:
Tell me the tale of Bethlehem!

Deny me all the golden sights
Of Art divine,—
So may be mine
A bliss outlasting its delights:
Paint me the scene of Bethlehem!

"Satisfied"

By Catherine Stone

It was a winter evening and the room was dimly lit. The room was small, but luxurious, with its book-lined walls, and deep chairs, but one forgot its luxury in its absolute comfort.

The one lamp shone on the figure of a young girl, almost lying in one of the chairs, her feet up on a stool in front of her. Her head was bent over a book and a plate of apples and cores lay on the desk beside her. By the lamplight one could hardly distinguish her features, but her hair was a soft brown with just a glint of red in it. Ah, she moves!

She sighs, pushes her book slightly away, and looks into the heart of the crackling fire. Now we can see her face. Would she be fifteen? Possibly; but on second one would say nearer nineteen. Her blue eyes are wistful, girlish, but there is a firmness about her mouth and chin which betoken a more mature determination. As she gazes into the fire she wonders why things never happen in real life as they do in books: why the girls in stories always have at least one, if not a dozen, faithful lovers, ready to upset the world for her and marvelously intense in their obedience to her slightest wish, while real girls...

Then suddenly the corner of her mouth twitches, and she chuckles. Her snub nose wrinkles and as the chuckle dies away her eyes twinkle more and more, dispelling her wistful appearance and showing mischievous independence. With a final chuckle, she returns to her book, quite content for the heroine of the story to have the mooning swains hanging around like faithful dogs, perpetually underfoot.

A Nursery Crime

By Gaspard McGuffey

Who killed Jake Dobbin
Capone's valet?
"I," said the 'Rat'
"With my little gat,
I bumped him off in the alley."

"I done the deed
And den I lay doggo.
If you wanna know why
Go'n ask the head guy
That planned for the job in Chicago."

Who witnessed the crime?
Then a maiden spoke,
"I had a date
With the victim for eight
And I saw him croak."

"I saw the flash
And a bullet bored him
But I feared the police
And I held my peace
As I walked slowly toward him."

And who stole his watch
As he lay in the grass?
"I," said the dip,
"But the thing was a gyp;
The pawnbroker said it was brass."

"I hocked his pants
And his coat and his vest
For nearly a buck.
Now wasn't it luck,
That he was so decently dressed?"

Who snitched to the cops
That the deed was done?
"Why, that's my religion,"
Replied the stool pigeon,
"I told them just for fun."

So the Rat was condemned
In the court one morning.
But he did not budge
As the aged judge
Gave him ten years and a warning.

"I had something loose in my ear last night."
"Gosh, did you get her telephone number?"

Dream

By R. L. H.

One little cloud upon the sky,
So small it scarcely seems to marr
But makes more bright
The arching blue above.—
I wonder, should it grow,
And wandering over wood and stream,
Stay above this pleasant bank
Which is my home, and cast
Its slight cool shadow over me,
And gather round it from the darkening east
Its fellows, 'till the coolness chills
And from the bosom of it storm
Flashes its lightnings, rolls its thunders
And pours its frigid rains
Upon my head. What then?

Dost thou forget old blessings, O, my soul?
Would not the memory sweet
Of limpid skies and vital suns
Softly raise their shelter over thee?
These things and youth no hand
Shall tear from thee; they are a part
Of that eternal gift that Life bestows.

And so, awakening
And lifting up my head,—
Behold! the cloud is gone,
Vanished within the depth of azure,
Like a random thought passing
From me and leaving

Surprises!

By Evelyn Crow

"Lots of snow for this Christmas, Miss Constance," the ruddy-faced postman called out.

"This looks like a letter from your niece."

Miss Constance Miller's thin, eager hands grasped the precious envelope. "Won't you come in and get warm?" "No thanks—too much mail to deliver to-day."

Miss Constance shut the door and hurried from the cold hallway to the warmth of the shabby, but homey sitting room. Grandfather Miller was smoking in a somewhat decrepit arm-chair. Putting down his pipe, he asked:

"Any word from Sally?"

"Yes, I'll read it through quickly and tell you what she says."

Grandfather stirred impatiently. "Next Friday night we will have her home again," he murmured.

Suddenly, Miss Constance's eyes smarted. Rubbing them, she moved toward the lamp and re-read these words:

"Awfully sorry, Auntie, but I can't possibly get away on Friday. I won't be able to make it until the late train next Tuesday, but then it will be rather exciting to get home on Christmas Eve, won't it?"

ders she said sternly to herself: "Snap out of it!"

"I made pancakes for you," said Miss Constance, her cheeks flushed with excitement, as Sally sat down late Christmas Eve for her first holiday home meal.

"That's awfully sweet of you—I love them so," Sally answered giving her aunt a little hug.

"Aunt, your cooking and residence meals can't be compared."

"Don't you think we are spoiled by getting just what we like to eat at home, Grandfather?"

Stroking his beard, grandfather replied a little gruffly: "If that is the case, it is too bad that you were not having more meals at home. We expected you Friday night, Sally."

Aunt Constance hastened to interrupt.

"Now, now, don't scold the child—"

Sally noticed the little questioning look in her aunt's eyes—and as for grandfather, just try and side-step his inquiry!

Impulsively she jumped up from her chair and ran over to her grandfather. With an air of great importance she whispered loudly in his ear:

"I had a good reason for coming home late—but it is a tremendous secret—and it concerns just you and aunt."

Grandfather was only partly pacified, so Sally patted his head.

"Do you remember all the times when I was a wee thing you used to say, 'Just wait till Christmas morning and see what you will see!'"

"I hope, dear, you haven't been studying too hard and extravagant too, in the rush at the end of the term," Miss Constance said a little anxiously.

"It's different being extravagant with money one earns one's self for gifts for one's own family," thought Sally, but she answered aloud:

"Surprises aren't due till Christmas morning."

Bruce Bursary

The Registrar of the University will be glad to receive applications on or before January 15th for the Robert Bruce Bursary of the value of $100.00, to be awarded to a student registered in any year in the Faculty of Arts or in the First Year in the Faculty of Medicine. Information regarding this Bursary may be found on p. 74 of the current Arts calendar.

Christmas Dinner

Those undergraduates who live so far from home that they cannot return for any part of the Christmas vacation, are reminded that they are cordially invited to the Warden's Christmas dinner on Monday evening, 23rd December. They should put their names on the list in the Warden's office as soon as possible.

Romanticism

By H. A. Wallace

An evening showered with laughter,
When Night in her veil of romance,
A saffron moon and a dreamy tune,
Drifting from a nearby dance.

A cushioned bench in the shadows
Of elm trees on the shore
Where the water laps in saucy slaps
Fighting its endless war.

This was a scene of our love, my sweet,
A love interwoven with bliss,
But the web we made soon weakened and frayed,
Until it ended like this.

Oh, if we had just remembered then,
Love wears such divers faces,—
He's always a moon or a dreamy tune
In dark, secluded places.

WOMEN'S UNION PARTY- TO BE HELD TO-MORROW

All U. C. Women Are Urged to Attend This Annual Celebration

"And all U.C. women will be as welcome as a cheque from home," said Miss Barber, dietitian at the Union, when asked by "The Varsity" about the forthcoming Christmas party. This year the party is to be held at the Union, on Tuesday, Dec. 17th, at eight o'clock. Miss Kilpatrick will be the hostess for the evening.

At the Union the Christmas party has become an institution, "than which there is no better". The form of entertainment will follow along the same lines as in previous years: a charming nativity play which is under the direction of Mrs. M. W. Wallace; a chorus; carol singing in which all and sundry join, and last but not least, scrumptious refreshments.

ECONOMIC CONDITION OF INDIA DISCUSSED

Peasant is a Basic Factor in Economic Development Says Mr. Poussette

COMMERCE CLUB MEETING

"India is coming to the realization that the peasant is a basic factor in the economic development of the country," H. R. Poussette, Canadian Trade Commissioner for India, declared in his address to the Commerce Club on Friday afternoon.

"The desire for education is another thing helping India," said the speaker. He also named co-operation as a factor of the greatest importance in her economic life. "There are some ninety thousand co-operative societies with a membership of about three and a half millions, which may be regarded as a favourable sign."

In the early part of his lecture, Mr. Poussette gave a few facts concerning Canada's trade with India. "Canada's major exports to India are automobiles and automobile tires and accessories," he stated.

He then proceeded to describe India's economic condition. "It is a poor country," he said. He then gave several reasons for this poverty.

"Ignorance is one of the chief reasons of India's poverty. Seventy-five per cent of the people are farmers. Agriculture is its most important industry but the Indian is ignorant of modern methods of cultivation. For centuries the land has been starved."

"Nearly every one in India is in debt," Mr. Poussette continued. "The native likes to impress his friends and make a show by giving his daughter a bang-up wedding for which it is common to spend a half a year's income. He has no reserve, so, on occasion, he must take recourse to a money-lender." Mr. Poussette said it is estimated that there are forty thousand money lenders in one province.

Two other conditions the speaker attributed as causes for the indigence of the country were unsanitary conditions of living and the religious tenet which forbids the killing of millions of useless cattle.

EMPLOYEES' ANNUAL PARTY IS HELD IN HART HOUSE

Popular Barber is President of Association for This Year

The University of Toronto Employees Association held their annual party in Hart House on Friday evening. The association consists for the most part of those who are on the staff of Mr. Le Pan, Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds, and also of those who are employed in various other departments of the university. The Board of Stewards, the Athletic Directorate, and the House and Hall Committees gave their willing consent for this party to be held in Hart House as they considered there was no body of persons in the university who had a greater right to this privilege. This year Mr. Wilson, well-known to members of Hart House as the head barber, is president of the association, and he presided during the proceedings. Mr. Morrison, head accountant in Hart House, is secretary, and Messrs. Connor, Claringbold, Tipping, Cargill, Newlands, Goodward and Rigler are the other members of the committee.

Euchre was played in the East Common Room, dancing took place in the big gymnasium and supper was served in the Great Hall, when Sir Robert Falconer, Mr. Le Pan and the Warden said a few words.

Vesper Service

A good time and place to forget exams and remember Christmas will be Wednesday from 5-6 at Knox College Chapel where the S.C.A. are holding a Vesper Service to which everyone is invited. F. J. Moore will lead the service and Dr. Richard Roberts, an old friend of the students, will talk. It is hoped that the carol-singers from U.C. will lead in the singing, and there is to be plenty of opportunity for everyone to sing many of the old Christmas songs.

This promises to be just the kind of hour when exams and shopping can be forgotten and Christmas really anticipated.

Two boon companions were on their way homeward from a Christmas Eve party. They had dined and wine and were quite jovial. They came to a postal box. "Pardon me, old top," said one. "I must try this machine." He dropped a dime in the slot. Then gazing at the city hall clock, said in horrified tones, "Migaud, I've lost twelve pounds since yesterday."

Thieving of overcoats and other small articles from Hart House and university buildings, has been definitely brought to an end, in the opinion of officials in charge of the affair.

On Friday last Thomas Bellmore of 33 Alexander Street, and William Brown of 261 Church Street, were each sentenced to three months definite sentence in jail.

thieves goes to Chief D'Arcy of the university police," said Detective Johns of the city police force in an interview with "The Varsity" last evening.

The conviction of these men, it is believed by authorities, will definitely end the epidemic of thefts which has given university officials cause for concern for some time past.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The Blue and White basketball squad will close their brief pre-season jaunt with a game at Colgate University to-night. Friday evening the locals bowed to the snappy University of Buffalo five and on the following evening again took it on the chin at Rochester. These defeats cannot be taken seriously. Varsity carry but few subs and in these exhibition games the opposing coaches generally use two or three complete squads against the invaders. Then three games in four nights is a heavy schedule for any man's team. Varsity will gain much good from this tour and it will be reflected in the team play and speed they will be able to flash in the intercollegiate series.

The Varsity juniors opened the Big Four junior O.H.A. group in fine style with a victory over Toronto Canoe Club. Marlboros and Parkdale Canoe Club tied in the second game. Thus we find the Blue and White leading the group at this early date and it will take a mighty good collection of hockeyists to head them.

The University of Toronto senior sextet will again make their annual trip across the border. Games will be played with Harvard, Yale and Dartmouth. These series of games provide the Blue with plenty of tough opposition which puts them in great shape for the O.H.A. season. Each year finds the calibre of U.S. college hockey improving and right now many of the teams rank with the leading Canadian amateur outfits. It is to be hoped that in the near future some of these American teams will display their wares in Toronto.

The water polo racket is getting into the headlines properly. Broadview Y water polo players are alleged to have accused the Varsity plungers of roughness, etc., during the last city league polo game. Varsity and Broadview will likely meet in a sudden death game in Central Y pool. The nature of the rough treatment has not been definitely ascertained. It is suspected, however, that it may include such offenses as biting an opponent's toes, etc., while under water. Although the Blue and White have several pool sharks in their line-up it is not thought that any of the locals would use such reprehensible tactics.

CANOE CLUB TRIMMED BY VARSITY JUNIORS

Rochester and Buffalo Both Defeat Varsity in Out-of-town Basketball Games

PLAYS COLGATE TO-DAY

The Varsity juniors vanquished Toronto Canoe Club 3-1 in the first game of the O.H.A. Junior Big Four schedule at the Arena Garden Friday night. Throughout, Varsity displayed better combination and a greater knowledge of the elements of hockey.

Varsity outclassed T.C.C. in their methods of handling the puck, especially when in front of their opponents' goal. At times the Varsity combination was brilliant. T.C.C. always worked hard and played good hockey, but lacked an organization that would be an effective goal-getter. When McNichol made a pretty pass to Cunningham in the first period the latter tallied and in the same period Smille earned a goal when he made a lone dash to the defence line and placed a beautiful shot in the T.C.C. nets. T.C.C. were rather disheartened by the score at the end of the first period.

In the second period Varsity kept urging steadily, but over-anxiety to score made the forwards lose sight of the advantages of combination. In a scrimmage in front of the Varsity goal, Leviashin, attempting to send the puck to the corner, batted it into the Varsity goal. It was the only tally of the evening for T.C.C. The forward line determined to make up for the blunder and executed a good play that resulted in Cunningham's score when he received a pass from Brant. The second period ended 3-1 for Varsity.

In the third period T.C.C., inspired with the enthusiasm gained from the lucky break, pressed hard and out-skated Varsity, but combination and lone rushes alike melted before the Varsity defence. In the final stanza Leviashin's rushes were dangerous and when the bell rang it ended a rather heated battle.

FINAL SCORE 3-1

Special to "The Varsity"

Rochester, N.Y., Dec. 15—The University of Toronto basketball team was defeated by University of Buffalo 37-19 on Friday night and by University of Rochester 28-22 on Saturday night. The game Friday night was played on the large court of the Elmwood Music Hall. Toronto seemed lost on this large area and tired badly against the two complete teams which alternately took the floor for Buffalo.

Buffalo has a fast team which is very strong offensively, and defensively they checked the Toronto five very closely.

Newman and Currie were the high lights in the Varsity scoring whilst Sakler played a strong game defensively. The Buffalo team has the strongest team which has represented it in years.

On Saturday the team was strengthened by the appearance of Horton and appeared dead on their feet during the first half, apparently suffering from the hard game of the night before. The score at half time was 19-5 in favour of Rochester. In the second half Toronto clearly outplayed Rochester, outscoring them by 17-9.

Horton was the high scorer for Varsity, whilst Kincaid was the Rochester star. Currie played a strong game defensively until forced out of the game in the closing moments with four personal fouls.

The team plays Colgate University

Anon the earl bade his men
To fetch an ancient oak
That grew in a gruesome haunted glen
Where spiteful spirits spoke.

But each o' the varlets quaked and quailed
And beard with knocking knee
A warning that the west wind wailed,
"O woodmen, spare that tree!"

But forth they fared befogged with ale
To bring this yule log home
Till by the oak in the dreadful dale
They met a gnasty gnome.

He sneered and snarled and snorted out,
"Hear, woodmen, spare that oak!"
But one o' the knaves whose heart was stout
Said, "Watch this blighter croak!"

They let the tree fall on his head
Then all jumped on his stomach
And left him lying, awfully dead
Upon a little hummock.

They dragged the mighty oaken trunk
Back to the castle hall
But all the guests were ghastly drunk
And saw it scarce at all.

They set it on the hearth dogs there
And listened to the bark,
As tongues of flame began to flare,
When someone whispered "Hark!"

With a roar that shook the castle dome
The yule log cleft in twain
And from its centre leaped the gnome
Alive and well again.

And lo, the guests cringe back in fear
Their very blood congeals
As the gnome roars out with evil leer,
"Hast fed the Christmas seals?"

Variety of Thoughts Expressed Regarding Prevalence of Christmas Joy

ANNUAL TIE CREMATION

"Yes, my Christmas spirit came with my Christmas cheque—but it went with the same," said Miss Helen Clements, II U.C., when questioned by "The Varsity" regarding the prevalence of Christmas spirit among undergraduates.

Mr. Paul Gardner IV U.C., announces: "My soaring spirit rises above such misfortunes as exams and bad weather at this time of year. Cold weather and snow are great things for Christmas spirit."

And thus Mr. Rogers Colgrove, I Vic: "I'm not as much infected as I thought I would be. My studies seem to prevent it, but I think there is quite a bit of Christmas spirit among undergrads on the whole."

One man, who refused to divulge his name, said that he held an annual cremation in the back-yard for the brilliant ties bestowed on him by his fond aunts.

Pensive Pondering On Present Problem Produces Profound Personal Peace

By H. D. Price

Now is the season for buying salve to anoint holly scratches and poison joy from the pseudo mistletoe that the local purveyors and fruitery establishments rent out at terrific prices. And to be seasoned one must get the heart warmed up and expanding until one feels that the purse has expanded too. Then one rushes out to buy tokens of affection for all the friends and relatives to cheer them in this season of fun and festivity, joy and frolic, etc.

A few suggestions would not be out of place at this point in the program:

For Auntie May—That beautiful volume of economics that you have been longing for for years. She could not possibly use it and would be delighted to lend it to you. After recurring lendings stretching over long periods, she will doubtless forget it is hers and you can have it permanently.

For Brother Jim—This has to be certainly thought out. Take this example for instance. Suppose this brother Jim does not care for skating. In fact, suppose he has a broken ankle or is a chronic invalid, or had lost a leg in the war (any of those conditions will do). The thing is easy then. Give him skates. Those dandy new speeders that you couldn't afford, but the expanded heart and purse of the Yuletide season has made a perfect excuse for extravagance. Skis would be all right, too.

For Sister Alice—This is not so difficult as the case of brother Jim. Alice, of course, would not care for a new pipe (though you never can be dead sure). Now a nice new pipe would be an excellent thing for sister Alice. Or you could invest in a new tux shirt, the new kind that you really want dreadfully. Then when you are going to a dance, rush out into the hall at the last moment and declare in desperate and appealing accents that you haven't got a clean tux shirt to your name, and what the hell are you going to do, and Doris will be waiting, and she will be mad, etc. (You can practice the desperate and appealing accents from now till Christmas, and can supply another name for Doris as the case may be). Sister Alice won't have any particular use for this tux shirt of hers, and will offer it most willingly.

Modern granddaughter—But Grandmother, in your days the girls used to set their caps for men!

Grandmother—Well, dearie, maybe so, but certainly not their knee-caps.

For Mother and Father—Now of course something grand must be done by the family. Perhaps a year's subscription to your favourite magazine or a carton of cigarettes that your father doesn't smoke would look after the old man. For mother a nice memo pad with the dates of your birthday and other such occasion embossed beautifully, is a very sweet and useful (to you) gift.

For the Girl Friend—(Doris) or as the case may be. If she doesn't smoke give her an initialed cigarette case. The twined initials are always fairly obscure and that wouldn't make very much difference after all. Borrow it often and she will give it to you for being such a sweet boy.

For the Boy Chum—Now this is a hard one. The same tactics are employed in the case of Brother Jim will have to be observed, but with a little more tact. After all, your brother can say what he pleases about you in the bosom of the family and get it off his chest. However, the boy friend might become very peeved and sever all connections. So it behooves you to be careful. Now if he has a car, you could buy him something essential like a carburetor. Then you can always throw that up to him when you want to borrow it from him. "Say," you can protest, "if it weren't for that carburetor (or something equally essential) you wouldn't be running the car at all. What about it, bow about it, etc." This is good. We feel that our suggestion here is perfect. We did it last year and it worked swell. In fact people thought the car was ours until we had an accident.

This is enough Christmas presents anyway. Of course if there is anything else you want particularly, you can always remember some relative who used to keep you while the family was away in the summer time, or else some friend who is a good egg after all it is said and done, and you can remember them too, at this season.

The best and easiest way, though, if you haven't much money, and can't think of anything you particularly want, and are in your fourth year, is to give them all your grad picture. Merry Christmas.

Botanical and Forestry Conditions in China Proves an Interesting Topic

Dr. H. D. Brown of the Department of Botany, addressed a meeting of the Foresters' Club on "Botanical and Forestry Conditions in China".

The speaker had spent five years as an instructor in biology in the University of West China, and told of the difficulties of teaching biology in the Chinese language.

He presented China's economic situation and her problems in regard to forest and agricultural lands. His remarks were graphically illustrated with coloured slides.

Bamboo, it appears, is one of the most important of products. Dr. Brown could think of no article in whose composition bamboo was not a part. "Everything from B.V.D.'s to fishing rods is made of bamboo," he declared. The usual refreshments concluded the meeting.

Another Epidemic?

An outbreak of scarlet fever in Knox College is the latest report which came to "The Varsity" late last night from a reliable source.

On Saturday morning a first year medical student residing in West House who was ill, was removed to the Isolation Hospital, the medical officers pronouncing the case as scarlet fever. It is understood that the case is a very mild one.

Dr. Eakin, principal of Knox College, could not be reached last evening by "The Varsity", in an attempt to get fuller details of the case.

O.C.E. FORMAL DANCE

Easy chairs and chesterfields, Xmas decorations, including green hangings at the windows, and the strains of an orchestra, transformed the gym of the Ontario College of Education into a cheery ball room for the formal dance held Friday night.

Those who received were Dean Pakenham and Mrs. Pakenham, Professor Jones, honorary president of the year and Mrs. Jones, as well as Ted Stubbs, the president, and Eleanor Walker, vice-president. The presence of a large number of professors and their wives lent distinction to this occasion.

The cafeteria became a cosy place for supper, lighted by the red candles on the trays, made still more festive with sprigs of holly. Paperknives were the useful favours for the guests.

"A BABY LAUGHS"

The car jolted to a stop and once more each member of the group struggled in self-preservation. Some stood their ground sullenly, shifting their most angular parcel to the side from which the onslaught came; others followed the path of least resistance and mercilessly flung their weight upon their unfortunate neighbours. Angry expostulations gave evidence of the frayed nerves of these people who were thus grimly preparing for the joys of Christmas.

A little woman, with tired eyes, whose white hair showed in wisps beneath her hat, edged down the car towards a vacant place. Before she arrived, the girl in the fur coat had taken it. With a sigh, the little woman stretched for the handrail that was barely within her reach. A man leaned heavily against her, causing her to drop her parcels—he did not offer to pick them up, but cursed to himself, seemingly unaware of her existence. The stale air of the car seemed charged with irritation and ill-will.

Again the car moved on. Then above the rumble and grind came a gurgle of baby laughter and a clear voice crying, "Look, Mummy, look! The sweet-tar behind is tatching us!"

Several heads were raised from newspapers and the little woman, standing on tip-toe, peered in the direction of the voice. A three-year-old boy, in a scarlet cap and jersey, was kneeling on the rear seat, tensely watching the trolley immediately behind. Then as the distance between the two cars widened, there came a long, vibrant "Ooooooh" of disappointment, followed by a breathless silence while the cars kept pace with each other. Another stop. A small white-mitten hand waved a shy greeting to the car behind. Then came peal on peal of laughter and the small figure danced upon the seat, banging the window with a mittened fist and shouting gleefully.

"He waved to me, Mummy, the sweet-tar man waved to me! He'll tatch us this time!"

The little woman glanced involuntarily at the man standing beside her. His eyes twinkled in reply, then both looked away hastily, as if ashamed of their intimacy. The girl in the fur coat leaned forward, pursed her lips and made little clucking noises to attract the child's attention, only to find her gesture intercepted and mimicked by the irrepressible messenger boy.

Again came the ringing, treble laughter. Taut bodies seemed to relax, and down the car, from face to face, there flashed a half-reluctant smile.

All at once, a man sprang from his seat as if suddenly conscious of something that he had forgotten. Stretching through the crowd, he touched the little woman on the shoulder, "Won't you take my seat, Madame?" he asked. She stole a last glance at the baby who was still gesticulating joyfully towards the friendly motor-man, then she smiled up at the man who had spoken and gratefully accepted his courtesy.

Realism in Nature

By Edward Parsons

The poet in this book is always talking
Of little birdies with their blithesome lay—
While I still curse the type of bird whose squawking
Awakes me sharp at four a.m. each day.

He speaks of lips like to the buds of roses;
A woman's mouth upturned to meet a kiss,
And yet he never mentions halitosis—
I guess he never even heard of this.

But I suppose some writer journalistic,
Some half-wit, likely henpecked by his wife,
Will eulogize, and call him realistic,
And hail the man as writing true to life!

Lectures!

By S. Gampel

"Patience," he said, and pointed to the clock,
"A little while and soon we shall be done."
They listened in the heat to hear him talk,
And hot it was, and drowsy every one
That sat in varnished seat, and tried to shun
His work; while torpid students languidly gazed,
Out through the casement at the hidden sun,
Asleep behind some cloud, and while they gazed,
The others gently snored, and hummed, and buzzed, as dazed.

The sluggish air made not the slightest stir:
So drowsy was the room and filled with sleep.
Some dreaming youth, with tranced lips did murmur
Senseless things, and on the wall, in slumber deep,
Leaned the long window-pole, and fast asleep,
Lay the volumes of ancient, weary lore,
Lying on their dusty sides, like tired sheep.
On inert hinges, heat-overcome, the door
Hung still, and quiet lay the dust, asleep on the floor.

keep quiet). Gosh! If one of them fell out on the road! Boy, wouldn't the Old Man be sore! Why in hell couldn't he have sent somebody else. Just had to pick on me because I was the youngest hand on the staff and because I had been out this way and knew the place. Oh, well. Have to get used to it sometime, I suppose. Can't say that I'm crazy about the process though.

I hope that nobody whom I know will see me logging them out. Faugh! This is a job for an undertaker. What did I eat that heavy dinner for . . . Well, they have to come out of here. Come on, now. Whose first boys?

Geel! That one with the red hair! There's an awful looking specimen. I'm going to wrap something around him before he comes down. And that one with the short black hair . . . sleek . . . a good-looker, I'll bet, when he was travelling under his own steam. Well, down they come . . . oh damn, DAMN IT! He's cold as a frozen fish—phiff and stiff! I'll have to wrap all of them before I carry them out.

Whew! This bird is heavy. Why couldn't the Old Man have sent someone with me? I suppose that he thinks this job will break me in. Punk! There ye be, me hearty, an' noo we'll just gang out tae th' wee sled.

Well, that's that. Here we are all tucked in nice and rarin' to go. Gid, —whoa! Have to turn off those blasted lights. Confound it! Where did I put those keys? Oh, yes, . . . .

Here we are back again. Gosh, what a place! Bet I'll see this room for a couple of nights. Well, I'm not going to clean up that mess on the floor. I've done my stuff. Somebody else can fix that up. Mustn't keep them waiting though—and let's get . . . out . . . of . . . here! Brll!

Gidap, Bill! C'mon there Maud! Snap into it now! Boy, isn't that air good! What's that you say? Well, for the love of Pete! You thought that I was a young clerk from the butcher shop getting a few sides of beef out of the cold-storage plant? Haw! Haw! Gidap, Maud! Nope, I only wish that I were. I'm a rocky mounted policeman in one of the thrilling, realistic passages of that great (though unpublished) western detective story, "Fifteen Buckets of Blood, or The Mormon Widow's Revenge."

THE OLD HOUSE

venerable appearance; the grass is springing up between the stones of the walks and the wooden steps sag to one side as if they feel that relaxation is their due. Yet the atmosphere of dilapidation is entirely lacking. Instead, an air of respectable antiquity pervades the place. Such was the picture which met my eye, and as I passed up the walk, an impulse moved me to take off my hat.

As I entered the hall the feeling was intensified, and as I closed the massive door, I seemed to shut out the clatter of the tourist town and my mind slipped back through the years. The voice of the rapids and the deep obligato of the falls floated up to me and seemed to grow in force and volume till it filled the place. I walked through the old house as in a dream, peopling it with the men and women of yester-year, whose pictures looked down at me from the walls. I passed from the hall into the drawing room and gazed at the faded colours of the carpet, the aged upholstery, the queer forms of the furniture, and the very mustiness of the air seemed to close around me and to wrap me in a blanket of dreams. Robinson Crusoe and Man Friday looked out at me from the fire screen and their cold stare made me realize how out of place I was. At the far end of the room stood the piano, and as I gazed at its mellow woodwork and at its yellowing keys, I thought of the fingers that must have played upon it and the ears that listened to it, when this room was new, when the carpet rejoiced in its bright colours and a blazing fire leaped behind Robinson Crusoe and Friday. I seemed to hear a phantom melody, but it was only the drone of the rapids and the soft rumble of the falls.

So it was throughout the house, in the library with its rows and rows of musty volumes, in the bedrooms, even in the attic, where the filmy webs of spiders spread over everything and hung from the ceiling reflecting in countless colours the rays of light. When I had made my way back to the hall, I turned at the door for a last glimpse of that old, romantic place; for a last breath of that musty air, and to listen again to the music of the rapids, and, as I opened the door, the clamour of the city seemed to burst in upon me, the sunlight dazzled me, and the sound of the rapids was almost obscured by the noise of nearby Falls Street.

I made my way down the walk and turned to look once more at the old house. It seemed to have drawn back even more into the protecting shade of the shrubbery, and I passed on, leaving the old place to his memories and Peter Pan to his reminiscences, with the music of the rapids and the dull rumbling of the falls still ringing in my ears.

classes, since, for example, certain literature is required to be read in various courses which is not fit to be read even in classes of one sex only, let alone mixed classes, and which when it is read embarrasses the professor and both the men and the women; and if the "don" skips the passage, there is the embarrassing admission of its impropriety. I might say that the university above mentioned was originally for men only, then became co-educational, and then again, reverted to being one for men alone, therefore, other colleges, even ones here in U. of T., could do likewise if they chose; it is never too late.

dull or impossible? At that university before mentioned, at dance-time, the men invited outside girls from the college town itself, or girls from their home towns, or brought down girls from the various women's colleges like Mt. Holyoke or Vassar. Surely Toronto is large enough to supply sufficient girls from outside the university for dances without having to rely on co-eds!

But the statement that women should be educated separately from men does not say that they should not be educated in the same city or even in the same university, for why not have a separate women's college, with its own faculty and its own lectures, in the U. of T. among the ranks of the present Arts colleges?—separate in the manner of the men's Hart House?

This subject could be more fully discussed if space and time permitted. These are merely some ideas aroused by the above mentioned article, and if others can advance other ideas or oppose these, let them.

If, Mr. Editor, you see fit to publish this letter, I thank you for your space.

SUBDUE RANGERS 7-2 TO RING UP THIRD STRAIGHT

Blue and White Take Strong Grip on Top Rung of Group

WHOLE VARSITY TEAM STAR

Harley, Paul, Stewart, McMullen Share Scoring in Decisive Victory

Varsity seniors had little trouble in downing Rangers last night in a Senior O. H. A. fixture at the local arena. The final score was 7-2 and the blue team thus takes a firmer grip on first place in the group, having won three games and lost none. The game was slow at times and the result was never in doubt.

Varsity forced the play in the first period right from the face-off. After four minutes of play Harley notched the first goal when he took Whitehead's pass right in front of an open net. Two minutes later Paul carried the puck the length of the ice, and passed it to Stewart, who rifled one past Ross for Varsity's second goal. Play was slow in this period. Rangers lacked team work on their attacks, usually being stopped at the Varsity defence. The blue forward line swarmed around Ross in the Ranger nets and gave him several close calls.

Ed. Wilkey's boys opened up in the second stanza and gave the blue team plenty of opposition. Two minutes after the face-off Morse hooked the puck at the Varsity blue line and fired a fast one at Ames. The puck hit the "T" netminder's stick and hopped into the net. This goal put life into the game and both teams got down to business. With nine minutes to go McMullen scored on a nice three-man rush, Stewart getting the assist. Four minutes later the Varsity captain again counted when he slammed home a rebound from Marshall's shot. This goal clinched the game. Stewart gave the crowd an exhibition of stick-handling when he held the puck for about a minute at centre ice against the whole Ranger forward line. The locals were a man short at the time.

The third period opened with some wild combination by both sides. With Stewart in the penalty box and four (Continued on page 3)

OPPOSE LIGHTING MEMORIAL TOWER

Col. A. D. LePan Not in Favour of Illuminating Clock in Tower

WOULD MAR ITS SOLEMNITY

"To illuminate the clock in the memorial tower would interfere with its beauty and solemnity," stated Col. A. D. LePan yesterday. "It would be necessary to erect the apparatus on the walls. The tower was intended as a solemn memorial and the erection of contraptions over the clock would certainly mar this solemnity.

"After six o'clock, the university, with the exception of Hart House, is dead," he continued. "The necessity of an illuminated tower, therefore, is not very great. Personally, I don't think we should try to advertise the tower with electric lights."

Warden J. B. Bickersteth declined to make any comment on the question, stating that the tower was not under his supervision.

SPECIAL CONVOCATION CONFIRMS HONORARY DEGREE ON GEN. SMUTS

Empire Statesman Calls U of T. "Great University of Canada"

IMPRESSED BY HART HOUSE

Degree of Doctor of Laws Was Given in Absentia in 1921

By signing the Roll of Honour, graduates at a special Convocation on January 3rd last, General Jan Christian Smuts, former Premier of South Africa, confirmed the degree of Doctor of Laws which was bestowed upon him "in absentia" by the University of Toronto in 1921.

The President, in introducing General Smuts, reminded his listeners that General Smuts had received high academic honours at Stellenbosch, and at Cambridge, and was thus well qualified to receive an honorary degree from this university.

"Even in your youth," remarked General Smuts in the course of his address, "you are magnificent. I wonder what your maturity will be like?"

"This is the last occasion," he said, "on which I shall have the honour of addressing the Canadian people on this visit. But I wish to take this occasion to say, and to express through you to the people of Canada, how deeply I feel honoured with the reception I have had. I will carry back to South Africa, Mr. President, not alone that message you have entrusted to me for the universities of my country (that message I shall deliver), but I shall carry back to all of our people, and especially to that small section to which I belong, the deep sympathy and affection which Canada has for us. ### CIGARETTE STARTS HART HOUSE FIRE

Ignites Pile of Loose Paper in Store-room Waste Basket

PUT OUT WITH NO DAMAGE

Fire broke out in Hart House last evening, although few of the students in the building were aware that anything was amiss. The blaze began in a store-room opposite the billiard room, in a basket of waste paper. The resulting fire was quickly extinguished. No damage was done beyond the scorching of the wall, and very little excitement was caused. A carelessly thrown cigarette butt was the cause, officials of the House believe.

GIFT SHOP PROCEEDS PURCHASE CANOLESTICKS

Enterprising Co-ed Sells on Commission for Christmas Money

Two stately wrought-iron candlesticks for the stage in the auditorium of the Women's Union have been purchased with the proceeds of the gift-shop, donated by a thoughtful friend, and conducted in the Union before Christmas. It has not yet been decided what the rest of the profits, which amounted to ninety-six dollars, will be used for.

One ambitious student obtained her Christmas funds by taking charge of the gift-shop on a commission. There are still a few university plaques which may be obtained by inquiry at the Women's Union.

ROBERT BRUCE BURSARY LIST CLOSES ON JAN. 15

The Robert Bruce Bursary of the value of $100, is awarded annually to a student registered in any year of the Faculty of Arts or in the First Year in the Faculty of Medicine. The regulations governing the award of this Bursary may be found on page 74 of the calendar of the Faculty of Arts.

Applications for this Bursary shall be filed with the Registrar of the university on or before January 15th.

GRADUATES ENJOY FESTIVE REUNION

Dance Till Three A.M. Amongst Scenic Effects of New Year's Ball

DOLPHINET DIVING DISPLAY

The big gym was never more beautiful than when decked for the Graduates' Ball by the master hand of Arthur Lismer, A.R.C.A. Polar bears, Esquimos, seals and gigantic pelicans, all done in the most fantastic fashion by the brush of the same artist, danced on the walls, and seemed to reflect the joyous spirit of the occasion as the graduate members of Hart House with their ladies welcomed the New Year. An ever changing program of light effects depicted the long, dim polar night with a hint of the flashing northern lights.

Three times the galleries were packed to witness the swimming and diving display of the Toronto Dolphinets, whose silvery swimming suits glistened in the glare of the spot light while the waves reflected the coloured lighting of the pool.

At the mystic hour the curtains in the big gym parted and revealed a white-clad ringer who tolled the count of twelve. Through the low hung polar sky of blue and white a shower of snowballs poured down upon the happy throng, and all joined in an old time snow fight.

Few left before the three o'clock home waits. Stone-painted walls enclosed the open quadrangle entrance, making the ground floor a great circle for the promenade. Everyone wandered at will, meeting old friends, many of whom had come from distant cities for this great annual reunion.

College Humor Rates Toronto Degree Highest on Continent

The University of Toronto is dealt with in an article by Morley Callaghan in the current issue of College Humor. He gently chides us for trying to catch something of the old world manner, and urges the development of a Canadian or at least an American atmosphere.

Among other things, he accuses local students of being lavish tea drinkers, and lauds Hart House library as a comfortable place in which to sleep. He does not regard drinking as a problem here; at any rate, he believes that there is less of it than under prohibition.

A large number of Arts students will approve of at least one item. Mr. Callaghan is of the opinion that the Pass Arts course is a good one to take,

REFERENCE ROOM OPEN FOR HONOUR ENGLISH STUDIES

Will be Available to Honour Students and to Graduates

NEED SEMINAR EQUIPMENT

New Room Will be Furnished With Popular English References

"A special reference and study room for honour English students and graduates is to be opened in a few days in the seminar room upstairs in the University Library," stated Miss M. L. Newton, head of the circulation department. "Plans have been under way for the past few days and duplicate copies of most of the popular reference books in English courses have been transferred to the shelves in that room," she added.

"The establishment of this reference study room has two purposes," said Professor Davis, the proposer of the experiment, "firstly, to provide English students with a reference library; and secondly, to slightly relieve the congestion at the main delivery desk and in the stacks."

Professor Davis jokingly suggested that the donation of seminar equipment by a wealthy graduate would be very acceptable, a thing which has been done on three occasions for Harvard.

BROWNING TOPIC M'LAY LECTURE

McMaster Dean on Seasonable Poem — "Christmas Eve"

SETS FORTH THREE CREEDS

Professor McLay pointed out that Browning employed both the mystic and the artistic in this poem. Browning also brought out the spiritual in his vivid descriptions and voiced the attitude of his time. It is to be noted that this poem is not without interest in the religious discussions of the present day.

In this poem Browning advances the question of reason, but his ideas reflect a feeling of conservatism. "Christmas Eve", though a dramatic monologue, reveals in the essential Browning's real belief in the divinity (Continued on page 4)

Five Toronto Undergraduates Travel to Isle aux Cerfs

HEAR DR. C. F. ANDREWS

The annual meeting of the North American Student Council has just been held at Ile aux Cerfs, a small island in the Richelieu River, thirty miles from Montreal. The membership was largely comprised of Student Movement secretaries but the undergraduate representation made an invaluable contribution also. University of Toronto was represented by Dorothy Beatty and Beth Foster of U.C., Marjorie Beer and Lawrence May of Victoria College, Harry Dodgson of Emmanuel College, and Mr. F. J. Moore, S.C.M. Men's Secretary. Mr. C. F. Andrews, close companion of Gandhi, shared much of his experiences in India, as did Mrs. Induk Kun of her native Korea. Discussion was held concerning the meeting of the World Student Christian Federation, which takes place in the United States next year. The need of a world-view and of a new and certain solution of the race-problem was simply and forcefully made clear by these leaders.

Nor was the conference one of discussion only. The afternoons were free for tobogganing, skating on the river, and skiing, while around the cheery fire within the old manor house afternoon tea was served and informal talk engaged in. In such ways, the American and Canadian students were able to become well acquainted and to better appreciate each other's viewpoint.

The jolly ride to the train in an open sleigh over the Richelieu River, guided by a typical French-Canadian habitant in furry coat and cap, to the accompaniment of French-Canadian folk-songs, was only one of the many never-to-be-forgotten incidents of the conference.

STILL CONSIDER FIRST YEAR PASS

Committee Have Not Finished Deliberations on Subject

ADJOURNED UNTIL MONDAY

"The committee to decide on the question of abolishing the first year of the pass course has not yet finished its deliberations," said Dean A. T. DeLury, in an interview with "The Varsity" last evening following a meeting of the committee, which adjourned until next Monday.

"There will be nothing made public at any rate," said Dean DeLury who is chairman of the committee. "The committee merely makes a recommendation to the council of the Faculty of Arts, which may or may not accept its findings, and members of the committee cannot, therefore, speak publicly on the matter."

VARSITY ROWING CLUB WILL MOVE TO NEW QUARTERS

Humber River Project a Boon to Aquatic Life of University

R. HOME SMITH GIVES SITE

New Club Will House Oarsmen For Summer Training Season

The year has started off the right way for those in Toronto rowing circles, due to the acceptance of the Humber River regatta scheme by the city council. Varsity oarsmen have been waiting for this news for a long time, and are now commencing training for the races which will be held there in the summer. Mr. Home Smith has donated an ideal location to the Varsity Rowing Club for its new clubhouse. Plans are not fully completed, but it is expected that all graduates and undergraduates of the university will be eligible for membership. Such a club will be new to the university, and to Toronto, due to the excellent facilities for all aquatic sports, and will also fill a long-felt want in the social life of the university.

Varsity oarsmen will be quartered at the club in the summer training season, and this, together with the acquisition of some new rowing equipment, should help to put Varsity farther in the lead than ever at the coming Canadian regatta.

The Rowing Club annual dinner is being held on Thursday, Jan. 16th at Hart House, and all men 150 lbs. or over who are interested in rowing, or would like to learn the sport, are asked to get in touch with any of the men on the crews, or leave their names in the Athletic Office, in order to obtain their complimentary tickets to the dinner. Many prominent men interested in rowing, as well as all Varsity old colours, will be present, and the evening should prove very beneficial to those interested in Varsity rowing.

"BY-LAW LAID LOW"

Toronto is a very fortunate city in regard to its newspapers. The four dailies are all over the 100,000 mark in circulation and the keenness of competition forces them to give the public a good sheet. But during an election campaign they do their best to tear down the confidence that they have tried to build up for eleven months of the year. The last election campaign illustrates this contention quite well.

Those students who remained in the city during the municipal election campaign were treated to a sight that they will not for a long time see equalled. The campaign in itself was as keen and as strenuous as we would like to see, but the feature that could not but nauseate the decent voter was the dog-fight put on by the newspapers, particularly the evening ones.

There was probably more misrepresentation and downright unfairness in one issue in the month of December than would appear in any half year of ordinary active existence. Streamers were daily run about "lies again spiked", and "crazy insinuations rouse fury", with the most vindictive members of the staff of each paper getting the highest amount of praise.

There were very few meetings reported correctly and the Evening Wemp always found its candidate cheered, while the Daily McBride could see only merits in their man; in fact both were certain to be elected and all the voters at each meeting cried, "You're elected sure".

There was no attempt at being fair to either man. One paper would delight in shovelling huge masses of mud upon a candidate, while the other found that a pail of whitewash was the only thing that was needed. Strong campaigning on the editorial pages if fair, would not be objected to by anyone, and yet the papers forgot their own and ancient rule about news stories being that and nothing else.

Yet people often wonder why there is such a poor calibre of man standing for office. And strange to say these same newspapers that deplore the fact that few men of intelligence and broad vision will stand for election do all in their power to discourage a man with a sense of fair play.

Toronto is a university city that has within its borders men of distinction in many fields, of thought, commerce, medicine and law, and yet how many of these have we in the council? In all fairness, can anyone blame the cultured and intelligent man for staying away from nomination booths as if they were plague infested?

It is absolutely necessary that the best brains of the community should contribute towards its government and they never will, until those very papers that urge good men to run for office treat them like human beings when their names are presented.

Toronto must get over its small town ideas. Whether a pink-covered newspaper can swing more votes than a white-covered paper is of no moment. Their work is to present news and advise, if they desire to do so in their editorial columns, and not to make themselves political bosses over the people and run slates and say you must vote for this one and not for that one. It is not our job to preach to old newspapermen on what they should or should not do, but we are simply saying what anyone of them would say for the other eleven months of the year when there are no by-laws to put over or snow under and there are no spites to work off on candidates.

CHAMPUS CAT

That strained, serious look you see on the faces of all the seniors is the result of the usual New Year's resolutions. In acute cases it may last until next Wednesday.

We see by the papers that Chicago has laid off 473 policemen. Did they mean laid off or laid out?

Another Chicago diversion apparently.

A new invention on the automobile does away with the driver and makes it obey the spoken word. Long-suffering husbands may now be used for radiator ornaments, while the better half directs manoeuvres from the back seat.

Right here before it is too late, we wish to draw the reader's attention to the high moral tone of the Cat this year.

In answer to our correspondent Ethelbald B.—There is no truth in the rumour that the works of Dr. Chic Sale will be included in the list of prescribed texts for O.C.E. next year.

Returning to the subject of moral tone, we still feel the sting of our castigation at the end of the term.

Speaking of spinach reminds us of Aunt Fanny, who is returning to the feline fold as our chief assistant for the coming semester. Aunt Fanny, it will be remembered, was the motherly soul who wrote such dainty and daring tit-bits for the column last year.

A prize of eighteen shekels will be awarded to anyone under the age of consent who can figure out a proper interpretation for the new Cat.

Gaspard McGuffey.

MINNESOTA MEN PLAYED AT POKER

Now Fifteen Students Are Faced With Expulsion for Gambling

PROFESSOR STOPS PARTY

Special to "The Varsity"
Minneapolis, Minn.—More than 15 students in the College of Engineering and Architecture at the University of Minnesota face possible expulsion and other severe disciplinary measures following a raid staged by the dean of the college on a poker party which was in progress in a drawing laboratory on the second floor of the Main Engineering building.

Though no action has yet been taken by Ora M. Leland, dean of the college, at least one of the students has been called to the dean's office for questioning. During the course of the interview Dean Leland is said to have asserted that he "wanted to make an example" of the poker players.

Members of various engineering classes admitted that poker playing had been going on in the drawing laboratory since the beginning of the fall quarter. At the time of the dean's raid more than 15 engineering students were congregated in the laboratory.

Several were eating lunch while seven or eight of the group were engaged in a poker game. "It was just a friendly little penny ante," one student stated.

On entering the room Dean Leland took names of all students whether they were gambling or merely eating their lunch.

Included in the group were a number of students prominent on the engineering campus. At least one star Minnesota athlete and letterman was apprehended. The name of a student who had merely come into the laboratory to ask for a match was also secured.

Dean Leland yesterday refused to affirm or deny the report that the men had been apprehended. He would not say whether any disciplinary measures would be taken.

The apprehension of students playing cards in the engineering laboratories was not new in the history of the College of Engineering and Architecture. Though gambling had died out during the last year, students in the college declared that poker games were common things during past years.

Two laboratories near the one raided by Dean Leland had been closed to

SENIORS TRIM RANGERS 7-2; THREE VARSITY TEAMS LEAD GROUPS

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Now that the Christmas and New Year's festivities have passed into history the followers of the various Blue and White teams will be able to give their undivided attention to the feats of their favourites.

In the pre-holiday season the Blue basketballers took it on the chin three straight at Buffalo, Rochester and Colgate. But that doesn't mean much as far as the Intercollegiate is concerned.

The water polo team distinguished itself by losing the City Water Polo League play-off after having canned the opposition during the schedule of games. In justice to the pool sharks, it must be remembered that the team was not at full strength in the final game, Bob Armstrong, the regular centre and scoring ace, being among those missing.

Varsity won their only start in the International Water Polo League, taking Penn A.C. into camp here. The locals play their second game in this series at Montreal on Saturday, meeting the M.A.A.A. squad.

Coach "Red" Porter's senior sextet are going nicely. The blueshirts won their first two O.H.A. games and then took three out of four against Harvard, Yale and Dartmouth. Last night they continued their good work, defeating Rangers at the Varsity Arena to head the O.H.A. senior A group with three wins and no losses.

Varsity juniors are at the top of the Big Four section and are travelling too fast for their opponents. The Blue and White are practically sure of a place in the group play-off and should go on to a win. Varsity have the best junior outfit that has worn the university colours in some years, and it will take a real team to head them off from O.H.A. honours.

The intermediates are also keeping up the pace with a mark in the right column and all clear across the sheet. The seconds haven't cut much ice in this series in the past few years, but this season it may be a different story.

SUBDUED RANGERS TO TAKE THIRD SUCCESSIVE WIN

minutes of the period gone, Adams grabbed a loose puck in a scramble in front of the Varsity net and shoved it past Ames for Rangers' second counter. However, just half a minute later, Paul staged a solo rush and scored on a hard shot, from the wing. With six minutes of the frame gone, Bill Stewart settled the issue with the nicest play of the game. Starting from his own goal he stickhandled his way through the whole Ranger team to score from close in. Just to make sure, Harley netted the final counter a minute later on a pass from Paul.

As usual no particular player stood out on the Varsity squad. Collectively they played their customary smooth game and showed little bad effects from their recent strenuous U.S. trip.

For Rangers, Johnny Hamilton, Morse and Ross showed to good advantage.

Varsity—Goal, Ames; defence, Whitehead and Paul; centre, Bill Stewart; wings, McMullen and Harley; alternates, Murray, Marshall and Bell.

Rangers—Goal, Ross; defence, Ayres and Stewart; centre, Hamilton; wings, Morse and Adams; alternates, Forrester, Yates and Hayman.

VARSITY WOMEN RE-ENTER SENIOR TORONTO SERIES

Won City Championship When in League Last Time Five Years Ago

OPEN SCHEDULE JAN. 15

All Games Will Be Played at Varsity Arena in Double Header

The Varsity women's senior hockey team has entered the City League for the first time since 1925. Since then Varsity has played only home and home games with Queen's, in the intercollegiate series.

The Varsity team won the Toronto Hockey League title in 1925 and then went through to the Ontario championships. It is not known yet whether Varsity will enter the play-offs with the winner of the Ottawa group, in the event of winning the city title.

There are four teams in the Toronto League this year, Varsity, Aura Lee, Toronto Ladies and Pats. The Pats team won the championship last year and hope to repeat, but is handicapped by the loss of its star player, Bobby Rosenfeld.

These games are all to be played in the Varsity Arena at 7 p.m. making a double header with the men's Major Commercial League. The schedule:

Wednesday, Jan. 15, Varsity vs. Aura Lee.

Wednesday, Jan. 22, Toronto Ladies vs. Pats.

Wednesday, Jan. 29, Pats vs. Varsity.

Wednesday, Feb. 5, Aura Lee vs. Toronto Ladies.

Saturday, Feb. 8, Toronto Ladies vs. Varsity.

Wednesday, Feb. 12, Pats vs. Aura Lee.

Saturday, Feb. 15, Varsity vs. Pats.

Wednesday, Feb. 19, Aura Lee vs. Varsity.

LOSE BUT SINGLE GAME IN STATES

Blue Seniors Drop Close Game to Yale Team of 18 Players

SCORE 23 GOALS ON TRIP

Although the Blue and White seniors were unsuccessful in making a clean sweep of their games on their recent U.S. trip, they put up an excellent showing considering the fact that they had to play four games in a week. It is not surprising then that the leg-weary Varsity sextet were used up in their final encounter by Yale, which boasted a line-up of 18 fresh players.

The Blues started the tour right by downing Harvard at New York by a 3 to 2 count. Their next game took place at Boston with Dartmouth as opponents. Varsity had little difficulty in winning this game, piling up an 11 to 3 advantage before the final whistle blew. In the return game with Harvard, also played at Boston, the Blue and White made it more decisive than in the first encounter, winning by a 6 to 2 margin. The final game in which Varsity was nosed out by Yale 3 to 2, was a close hard-fought encounter. The winning goal scored by the Elis was a long shot which LeBarb could have saved easily had he not been slightly dazed from a blow to the head, shortly before. Over 10,000 spectators filed into Madison Square Garden for this contest. Comparing the goals for and against will be seen the fine effort which the Blue and White representatives made. They had a total of 23 goals for and only 9 against.

It would be impossible to single out any player in particular on the Blue squad as the stars of the team. Different players were most effective in different games.

Bruce Paul was the leading goal-getter on the Varsity team, followed by Mel Harley. The former, with Whitehead, formed a solid, hard-bumping defence. Stewart played a good game at centre and Captain Jimmy McMullen at left wing played smooth hockey. Among the alternates young Freddie Murray caught the attention of the Americans by his tenacious checking propensities. Both LeBarb and Ames, who alternated in goal, turned in great performances.

The Varsity squad was composed of Coach "Red" Porter, Manager Brock McMurray, and the following players: Ames, LeBarb, Whitehead, Paul, McMullen, Harley, Stewart, Murray, Marshall, Dewar and Bell.

A letter sent to Athens, Georgia, ordering 10 tickets for the Georgia-Tech game was mis-sent to Athens, Greece.

Take Strong Position at Head of Big Four Junior Grouping

SMILLIE SCORES TWO GOALS

Varsity's representatives in the Big Four League decisively scuttled the craft manned by the Toronto Canoe Club in an interesting match played on Tuesday evening at the Varsity rink. The final score was 3-1.

The game, played before a fair crowd, was featured by the work of the sturdy Varsity defense. Not content with breaching up the enemies' attempts to score, they decided to do a little scoring on their own account.

Smillie got the first two; Levinsky the other. Robertson, T.C.C. defense man, bagged their lone marker.

Twelve minutes of the first period had been accounted for when Smillie's shot from the blue line rolled into the net. This agitated the "seamen", with the result that they dominated the play for the rest of the period. However, the period ended, Varsity ahead 1-0.

T.C.C. kept up their offensive tactics in the second period with the result that Robertson scored on a rebound after laying a fast one on Hunnisett's pads.

In the third period Varsity took the lead again when Smillie, faking a pass to Hetherington, went right ahead and registered. At this time Levinsky and Robertson were in the penalty box.

Levinsky salted the fixture away after carrying the disc from one blue line to the other and was allowed to remain unchecked for a moment. He took advantage of the opportunity and the score was Varsity 3-1.

Varsity—Goal, Hunnisett; defence, Levinsky and Smillie; centre, Brant; wings, Hetherington and Bennett; alternates, Crerar, Cunningham, Williamson and Funston.

Toronto C.C.—Goal, House; defence, Robertson and Rouleau; centre, Grant; wings, London and McManus; alternates, Brown, McNeill, Davidson and Neale.

Fifty-nine students were suspended from the University of Oklahoma during the month of November for the violation of university rules.

HART HOUSE THEATRE

Whosit, a musical comedy which is booked to appear at Hart House Theatre the week of January 13th, was written, words, lyrics and music, by R. Howard Lindsay, who may be remembered as the librettist and producer of Honeyboy, presented at the same theatre last year.

The libretto contains a plot, well-knit and interestingly worked out, which plays considerably more part in the production as a whole than is customary in the general run of musical comedy. It deals with the effort of Prince Whosit of Whositania to regain his kingdom—lost to the revolutionary party—by gun-running, under the guise of taking an American musical comedy company to play in his native city. This naturally lends itself to smart dialogue and amusing situations, of which opportunity the author has taken every advantage. The lyrics are notably free from the mawkish sentimentality so prevalent in musical comedy and are more reminiscent of the verses written by some of the English writers than anything else. It may be of interest to jaded theatre-goers to know that there is not a waltz in the whole production.

The work of an undergraduate of the University of Toronto, Whosit has an almost entirely student cast, while the chorus of sixteen co-eds and eight men is as peppy and colourful as would be expected of a group of undergraduates. (adv.)

BROWNING IS SUBJECT OF PROF. MCCLAY'S LECTURE

of Christ," said Professor McLay in conclusion.

At the meeting of the English Association in the Junior Common Room on Wednesday evening, Dean McLay of McMaster University gave a very interesting address on Browning's "Christmas Eve". Professor McLay expressed the wish that he would revive the memories of this great poem in the minds of his audience.

The dramatic monologue, Christmas Eve, sets forth three creeds from which to choose. The speaker of the poem passes from a scene of simple belief in a crude chapel to an impressive portrayal of faith in St. Peter's, at Rome, thence to an intellectual discussion of religion and back to the chapel.

FAMOUS RUSSIAN PIANIST PLAYS FOR STUDENTS

Nicolas Medtner, who plays for the students in the Conservatory Concert Hall on Thursday evening, is recognized by the public and musical critics alike as one of the greatest composers of the age, ranking on an equally high plane with Rachmaninoff. Indeed, by some critics he is placed on an even higher plane.

Ernest Newman, the well-known London critic, says that his music "is as stark and strong as Brahms at his best; there is never a superfluous note in a chord; it is sinewy, athletic, and, for its weight, amazingly flexible." His keen instinct for rhythm and harmony, his unconscious and tremendous power to create, pervades all he plays and all he composes.

Medtner's efforts have thrilled the society of Moscow, Petrograd, Prague, Paris, London and Liverpool. All who have had the pleasure of listening to his genius at once place him in the front rank of the greatest composers of the age. Since his arrival in America, he has played with practically all of the great orchestras, his first recital being with the Philadelphia Symphony in New York City.

R. L. Burnap, whose appointment as Vice-President in Charge of Traffic, Canadian National Railways, is announced. Mr. Burnap has been associated with the various lines which now comprise the Canadian National System during the whole of his railroad career of 36 years.

The Table Round

Considerable comment, both pro and con, has been aroused by the presentation in Toronto of Eugene O'Neill's profound drama "Strange Interlude". Some have been struck by its apparent nastiness, while others have marvelled at it, perhaps because they could not understand it.

"Strange Interlude" is not a pleasant play. But it is an intensely interesting play and reveals the dramatic power of the author. In technique it is daring. It reveals human nature as pitiful in its weakness, yet it does not encourage the idea that life is useless. And it has passages of sheer poetic beauty.

The Toronto critic who declared that local theatre-goers would continue to prefer British plays was as unfair as he was evasive in his criticism. No play that holds the attention for four and a half hours as does "Strange Interlude", can be dismissed so summarily.

BOXERS AND WRESTLERS RESUME DAILY PRACTICES

prospects having been brought to light by the junior assault. Coach Martin is very enthusiastic over this year's squad, but says that there is a lack of good wrestlers in the heavy classes. Bannister, Mueller, Merritt, Willis, Cameron and Mervynne are pre-eminent amongst the junior wrestlers and will again be seen in action in February.

There are plenty of boxers on hand and some of the newcomers show excellent form. Many experienced men are back with the squad, so this branch of the club is in high standing. As in the wrestling division, there is a lack of men for the heavy classes, while at the other extreme, in the 112 and 118 lb. classes, there is very little new material. The weights in between are strong, and the weak divisions should soon be strengthened now that the exams are finished. Walsh, Brook, Keshin, Hume, Bain, Elson, Cameron, Eaton, Stewart and Strachan seem to be the best in the novice class.

With the senior assault less than a month away, the coaches urge all boxers and wrestlers who have not yet reported to do so at once.

MINNESOTA MEN PLAYED POKER

students last year because they refused to obey numerous exhortations of the dean to stop gambling.

Describing the raid, one student said, "There was just the usual after-lunch crowd in the drawing room. Several of us were eating our lunches while some of the others were lounging about. A group of half a dozen or more were playing poker. When the dean came in there was a great scramble for the money on the table. A fellow had just won a pot worth three dollars or more, but hadn't had time to draw it in. In the confusion he only got about 15 cents. The dean told us to stop and took our names. Afterwards he called at least one man in for questioning."

The University of Kansas joined a growing family of schools having no football captain when the athletic board decided last night that the 1930 Jayhawkers shall elect an honorary captain at the close of the season and shall be led in each football game by a temporary captain appointed by the coach just prior to the starting whistle.

CONVOCATION CONFIRMS HONORARY DEGREE

shall take back that message of good fellow-feeling and Empire comradeship from Canada to South Africa."

General Smuts pointed out that the University of Toronto was the first of the universities of the empire, outside of South Africa, to present to him an honorary degree and that he had long wished to have the opportunity to personally express his gratitude.

"I am proud to be associated with an establishment of this kind," he said, "This, the great university of Canada, that has left an indelible mark on the history of this country, and that is destined to play a tremendous part in the wisdom, statesmanship and scholarship to come. I wish my University of Toronto all success."

He said that he had visited the university during the morning and had been much impressed by Hart House and by the memorial tower.

Hart House embodied an idea he had long felt should exist in connection with a university, and he believed it was a precedent which ought to be followed, and would be, by other universities. He contended that such an institution created a feeling of brotherhood, an esprit de corps, that bore much fruit.

General Smuts closed by saying that it is to the universities that we look for leadership. "For this leadership," he concluded, "you will have to train your men and women who are not merely intellectually distinguished, but who will have that personality, that sense of human guidance, and those qualities of wisdom which will direct this nation in its march toward the future."

Premier Ferguson then spoke and thanked General Smuts for his address.

THREE BALDWIN DONS ABSENT ON BUSINESS AND LECTURE WORK

Professor Urwick in England
Delivers Important
Address

ECONOMIST IN OTTAWA

Quebec Sees Gilbert Jackson
Until His Return on Saturday

The staff of Baldwin House has been lacking three of its members for some time. These are Professors C. J. Urwick, Gilbert Jackson and H. R. Kemp.

Yesterday in London, England, Professor Urwick, head of the Department of Political Science, delivered the Second Loch Memorial lecture under the auspices of the London Charity Organization. The subject of the lecture was "Reciprocity in social life and action". Professor Urwick has been absent from Baldwin House since Dec. 5, and expects to return about January 20. He will make efforts to establish an exchange of students and workers between the University of Toronto and the Universities of the British Isles. It will be recalled that Professor Urwick has already brought out several English students to Canada to study social conditions here.

Professor Kemp, Department of Political Economy, is in Ottawa on business. "The Varsity" learned from the secretary of Baldwin House yesterday, and is expected to return Monday. Professor Jackson will resume his lectures next week. He has been to Montreal and Quebec and will return Saturday.

MUSEUM IS DISCUSSED AT BIOLOGICAL CLUB

Exhibition and Research Join as Prime Functions of Institution

CLUB CONSULTANT SOON

A Consultat will be held by the Biological Club, the third week of February, in the Biological Building. This was moved and adopted by the club last night.

The speakers of the evening were then introduced by the president, Mr. W. E. Ricker.

Professor J. R. Dymond spoke on the work and aim of the museum. The uppermost purpose of the museum is the exhibition function which has grown in America. The next function is that of research, which is passed on to the public through publication, lectures and exhibitions. Specimens, objects of nature do not lie, they are stored up for all time. These specimens are stored up in order to promote the study of theoretical biology.

Mr. Snyder spoke on Taxidermy. He carefully explained the processes involved in mounting mammals and birds for exhibition.

Mr. T. B. Kurata gave an illustrated talk on the casting of reptiles. Before the coming of Mr. Kurata the Royal Ontario Museum had no collection of fish casts. The present collection, which numbers over 300 casts and 225 specimens, which is systematically arranged, is due to Mr. M. Logier and Mr. Kurata. It compares favourably with any collection on this continent.

CHRISTMAS BANQUET OUTSTANDING EVENT

CANADIAN SINGERS CAROL

"I think that there is no question about this gathering being the most outstanding and most interesting of all the various banquets that take place in Great Hall during the academic year," said J. B. Bickersteth, Warden of Hart House, speaking at the annual Christmas dinner tendered to out-of-town students, which was held this year on the Monday preceding Christmas Day.

Mr. Bickersteth went on to speak of the diversity of peoples represented at this unique meeting, mentioning the fact that 87 students represented Canada, most being from the west, and Quebec the only province not represented. There were also three from Newfoundland. The British Isles were well represented by a total of 19, and the United States by five. Six students came from Japan, two from China and British West Indies, and one each from Holland, Denmark, Russia, Armenia, Hong Kong and Australia.

Following the banquet and the short addresses given by the Warden and Sir Robert Falconer, President of the University, the Canadian Singers, conducted by Mr. Campbell McInnes, entertained with some traditional carols and folk songs, which, to judge by the applause and encores, were the most popular part of the programme.

As each left the Great Hall the Warden presented a framed etching of the south east door of Hart House, very attractively done by Mrs. Cochran, wife of C. N. Cochran, associate professor of Ancient History.

ADULTERATED NEWS OAMNEO BY EDITOR

Morgantown, W. V.—At a recent conference of journalists held here Mr. Marlen E. Pew, a well known editor and publisher in the United States, delivered an address denouncing the great amount of unauthoritative news printed in the American press.

"Adulterated news, untruth or half-truth, presented in columns where people have a right to look for dependable, authenticated, sifted facts," said Mr. Pew, "strikes like a poisoned dart at the delicate tissue of intellect with incalculable harm."

SMALL COLLEGE DOOM SEEN IN ISOLATION BY GOTHAM SAVANT

New York College Head Claims Independent Entity Disappearing

FAILS IN MODERN WORLD

Unit in the Large University is Ideal Now He Declares

Special to "The Varsity"
New York, N.Y.—Small colleges independent of universities are on the decline and eventually will disappear entirely, according to Dr. Bernard Iddings Bell, warden of St. Stephen's College, which is now a part of Columbia University, in his annual report to President Butler. Dr. Bell declares that St. Stephen's is working toward the ideal institution, which he says is "the small college with the university mind".

"There is one insuperable difficulty which makes disastrously hard the successful administration this day and age of an independent small college," he continues. "That is the isolation, the academic and intellectual isolation of the teaching staff."

"The key to the whole problem is the scholar to whose influence the undergraduate is exposed. Now in a small independent college the teacher of, let us say, biology, lives academically isolated. He has departmental contact with few if any persons who are leaders in research or advanced instruction in his field."

Dr. Bell declares that St. Stephen's is supplementing the work of Columbia College as a part of the university. "We are located in the country, far from the hurly-burly of the metropolis," he says, "but near enough for the real and not merely paper faculty contacts with the rest of the university."

"In and through this country college the university has set itself to find out exactly what is involved in creating and conducting 'a small, country, personalized undergraduate college entirely within the university'. Such an institution has never existed in this country. While others have been projecting plans of a similar sort, Columbia has now an actual beginning, an existent experiment, to be observed, studied, criticized, and adequately supported."

LATE ARRIVAL FINES SELDOM RETURNED HERE

Board Holds Illness Exempts but Distant Students Should Leave Early

"The penalties for late registration are not returned except for very good reasons," said Mr. A. E. Fennel, acting registrar yesterday. "Students who live at a great distance from Toronto are expected to leave home early enough to arrive here on time. Only in case of illness or other circumstances beyond their control are they entitled to exemption from penalties."

"Every appeal against the paying of penalties is considered by a board," he concluded.

NEW CHANCELLOR EN ROUTE

Plans for the installation of Dr. E. W. Wallace as Chancellor of Victoria College are being completed today. The date set for the installation is the 31st of this month. Dr. Wallace is now on his way from China and is expected in Toronto on Wednesday.

'Varsity' Gets Feature From Laura's Return

"The Varsity" has been fortunate in arranging for a series of letters written by Lovely Laura Louise. Those who were at the university last year acclaimed the letters of the young lady as the best feature of the paper. It is not likely that the students will be disappointed in them this year.

It is indeed unfortunate that Lovely Laura has failed her year after the wonderful time she had last year, but she is not downhearted and is in town looking for a position. "The Varsity" will run her letters every Friday on the back page.

'CAN'T DODGE FEES' SIMCOE SYSTEM SAYS

Lists Posted As Reminder of Possible Penalty in May

FEW OTHER INNOUCEMENTS

Are all fees paid at the University of Toronto? Can one get away with not paying them? How, if at all, is one penalized for failure to do so? In fact, what about that lengthy list of recalcitrants appearing outside the Registrar's Office in University College?

According to H. J. Bolitho, Fees Clerk at Simcoe Hall, everyone pays their fees at Toronto. The only inducement offered outside of the monetary penalties is the prospect of being refused permission to write the final examinations.

The list in University College Mr. Bolitho explained was made up mostly of students who had failed to pay some of the minor fees owing to ignorance, because they forgot or because they did not find it convenient to pay them in the fall. "The students usually take it as a favour that we remind them by these lists. In every first year anyway there is a certain number who don't understand what fees they must pay, and instead of letting them come to the examination time without paying them we let them know," he said.

USUAL 'HOWLER' CROP FROM INFORMATION TEST

Students

Special to "The Varsity"
Dallas, Texas.—"William B. Shearer was accused of murdering his wife."

"Mussolini of Spain has been the cause of much disturbance in that country."

"Ramsay MacDonald has just come over from Ireland to serve in the cabinet."

These were some of the answers given to a general information test given members of the sophomore Journalism class of Southern Methodist University recently by A. F. Hennings, head of the department.

Four of the class did not know who Benito Mussolini was; eighteen had never heard of William Shearer; eight did not know Major Waddy Tate's preference for "hot dogs"; and only one had never heard of Harry Sinclair.

The questions in the test were: Identity: Harry F. Sinclair, William Shearer, Ramsay MacDonald, Gustav Stresemann and Benito Mussolini. What is Waddy Tate's favorite dish? Where did the convicts mutiny this (Continued on page 4)

ADDITION TO HART HOUSE LOOMS AS YEAR'S PLANS NEAR COMPLETION

Attention!

All night editors and assistants, together with reporters who have not yet taken night duty, are requested to meet the Managing Editor at 5.00 p.m. on Monday in the News Office.

VARSITY RINK SHOWS IMPROVED SERVICES

Greater Accommodation Provided and Free Checking with Admission

THEFTS ELIMINATED

Several improvements in service at the Varsity rink are announced by the manager, Mr. Ross Workman.

The two former check rooms have been replaced by twenty, thus making it possible for the handling of 2,200 overcoats and 3,200 pairs of boots. This extra checking service is without charge, the plan being that as patrons enter the rink, coats are checked, and on leaving to go on the ice boots are checked. Several coats were reported stolen last year, but so far this year, under the new system, no coats have been stolen.

The admission price has been raised it is announced by the management, from twenty-five cents to thirty cents, with proportionate increases in the price of season tickets. However, there is no charge for checking.

The 48th Highlanders' band has been secured for the season. They will play every evening and Saturday afternoon in the new big band area. Also there has been an increase in the size of the refreshment booth so as to more efficiently take care of the crowds.

"We feel that it is students of the university who are most affected by our new plan," said Mr. Workman, the manager of the rink. "We can ensure safety for all coats by our new system of checking, thus eliminating the danger of theft."

NOTED RUSSIAN PIANIST THRILLS TORONTO HOUSE

Composer-Pianist Plays Here
Before Going to Yale and New York

One of the greatest living Russian pianists, Nicolai Razlovitch Medtner, was heard by students last night in the concert hall of the Toronto Conservatory of Music. Special student rates prevailed for the recital, which was instigated by Dr. Ernest MacMillan, principal of the Conservatory, and sponsored by the Senior Students' Club. Original compositions of Medtner, who has often been called the "Russian Brahms", formed the whole programme.

The audience filled the concert hall to capacity. Growing enthusiasm reached a climax with the spontaneous rising of the audience at the end of the final group.

Medtner was born in Moscow fifty years ago, and is one of the chief exponents in Russia of the traditional classic tendency. Many claim he is as great a pianist as Rachmaninoff, but his interest seems to lie chiefly in his compositions.

Next week Medtner goes to New York, and while in the States he will play at Yale.

Eastward Expansion Immediate if Governors Approve Proposition

PART OF BIG SCHEME

Increased Facilities Urgent
Due to Success of Venture

Hart House will be enlarged during the coming summer. As the first step in the scheme of greater expansion, a considerable addition to the house will be built, designed to increase the present overtaxed accommodation.

The proposed plans, already drafted by Mr. Gilley, the Comptroller, and his assistant, Mr. Cowan, involve expansion from the present boundaries of the house towards Queen's Park. The north and south yards will be taken in and it is possible that the wall of the servery may be carried a few feet eastward. This will involve almost complete reorganization of the present layout of the servery, dishwashing arrangement, bakery, women's rest rooms, offices, staff dining rooms and elevators.

This plan, it is expected, will be but the beginning of a much greater scheme of expansion. It will be pushed ahead as soon as passed by the Board of Governors of this university at their next meeting. It is anticipated that within the next decade the walls of Hart House will be pushed eastward, practically to the boundaries of Queen's Park, in which case more general accommodation would be provided than are at present possible. But in the meantime this is impossible as the cost is prohibitive. The present proposed scheme will not hinder the larger plan of expansion.

This decision was reached by the committees and Board of Stewards at Hart House after a careful consideration of existing conditions.

At present 1,400 to 1,500 meals are served daily in Hart House with about 900 served for lunch alone. The present servery, built to serve only 300 men, has had to function under the disadvantage of totally inadequate facilities and space for any such numbers. It has been impossible to avoid line-ups with the ever-increasing numbers of students desiring to make use of the Great Hall. It was in view of these conditions that officials in charge decided that enlargement was necessary.

"The very success of the house has created the problems which the Hall Committee and officials in charge have had to cope with," said Mr. J. B. Bickersteth, Warden of Hart House, last evening.

"Hart House has already become too small for the numbers who make use of it," he stated.

Actual costs of the undertaking, which will be pushed ahead immediately at the close of the university term, have not as yet been divulged by officials in charge.

U.C. TEA CLUB

The Thursday Tea Club of University College entertained for the first time in the new year yesterday afternoon in the Croft Chapter House of the college. The tea was in charge of the departments of Modern History, Political Science, Law, World History and Anthropology. Mrs. C. T. Curry, Mrs. Chester Martin, and Mrs. W. P. M. Kennedy greeted the guests on their arrival. Mrs. E. J. Urwick, who was to have been one of the hostesses, has not returned from England. The number of students who attended the tea was small due to the inclemencies of the weather.

SO THIS IS TORONTO

The University of Toronto has had its portrait drawn, a full-length portrait by one who is himself a graduate of St. Michael's College, Morley Callaghan. The result, which is on exhibition in the February issue of "College Humor", will no doubt be viewed with considerable critical interest by the subject of the portrait. Whether or not the picture is judged true to life, at least, we are sure, it will not be considered flattering.

Our first impression, gathered from the captions under the really good illustrations that accompany the article, was that we were being laughed at. "Convocation Hall at this tea-drinking Canadian university" is one of them, and "University College is less solemn than the denominational colleges". The charge of an immoderate consumption of tea is repeated in the article itself, and Trinity College should be shocked to learn that the responsibility for the pernicious habit is laid at their door. Says Mr. Callaghan, "Whether or not they drink more tea at this particular university than any place else on earth, I do not know. But they drink a lot of tea. Tea for every occasion. Those delightfully intimate professorial teas to bring the professor in closer touch with his pupils, teas to celebrate something or other, tea for the dance, tea for a talk, tea for two, tea just for cake or buns and fun." Shades of S.P.S.! We look in vain for mention of your rum and your forty beers.

A similar impression is given by the description of male dress. "The Toronto man usually goes in for something English, or if he is very daring sartorially, he succumbs to the Cambridge influence at the university and wears very loose and unpressed trousers, a sack coat of a quite different shade, and a very heavy cumbersome pair of boots." We would be interested to know how many men at the university consider that they answer to this description. We must admit that, apart from a few absent-minded professors, we have noticed so few men wearing coats and trousers of different shades that when we did we always suspected the matching part of being away at the cleaners. As for the co-eds, they are described as most restrained and modestly dressed, but possessing more exuberance and self-reliance than the men. They too, it is alleged, enjoy tea.

In some cases, we think, the university must have changed since the writer's acquaintance with it, or else he is being unusually careful to avoid exaggeration. He says, for instance, "There are at least three or four international fraternities", whereas, without going into statistics, it is generally known that the number of internationals alone is nearer thirty, and increasing all the time.

Nor can we endorse the statement that "there is too steady a determination to catch something of the old-world manner at the university." Reflections of this old-world manner have naturally been carried into certain circles, but they are no more characteristic of the main trend of the university, which is nothing if not Canadian, than the Memorial Tower is characteristic of the rest of the heterogeneous architecture of the campus.

Likewise, we think, the Conservatism of the university is a little overdone. It is mentioned repeatedly, and summed up, "The University of Toronto is very Conservative, which is only to be expected from its location in Toronto". It is taking rather a lot for granted, we think, to assume that a university which is primarily provincial, with dominion-wide tendencies, should take its character from the city in which it is located, remembering especially that not long ago it voted that city "intolerant".

We were gratified, but not surprised, to find mention of the fact that the degrees of the University of Toronto are worth as much as any on the continent. We have been aware of that for some time.

Art and Drama

"Whosit"

Mr. R. Howard Lindsay will uncoil his latest musical offering on the stage of Hart House Theatre Monday night. Mr. Lindsay's new musical comedy, "Whosit", promises to eclipse the same undergraduate producer's opus of last year. The glorification of the Canadian co-ed is one of Mr. Lindsay's avowed intentions in this production, for which he himself has turned Noel Coward to write the book, the music, and the lyrics. Likewise he has directed the show personally, has supervised the staging, and takes one of the leading roles. This looks like one of the season's "naturals". —A.

"Wizard of Oz"

The Hart House Christmas production, "The Wizard of Oz", which took place during the holidays, was—if one is to believe the cognoscenti—a distinct success. The offering was planned for children, and box office receipts would seem to show that children liked it. Doubtless, so did their parents.

Miss Pearl Grey headed a cast which included Miss Margaret Wilson, Mr. F. J. Mallett, Mr. Munro Grier, Mr. Everard Nash, Mr. Leslie Floyd, and Mr. Murray Bonnycastle. The production was under the able direction of Mr. Edgar Stone. —A.

CHAMPUS CAT

THE ARCHBISHOP OF MIMICO

By R. E. Noltes

It was not without some misgiving that I knocked at the door of the Archbishop of Mimico's apartment, for I had heard that he was an exceedingly difficult man to approach.

However, any fears that I had entertained were quickly allayed as the door opened and I was confronted by the pleasantly bloated features of the Archbishop—thats along with the Archbishop himself.

A kind face, a genial face, with a serene air of dignity and the expression of a bored mastiff was the impression I received as he gazed inquiringly at me. The lion-like head was well set on slight Gothic shoulders that grew into a great pear-shaped body, and terminated in a set of magnificent feet.

The mouth opened. "Hello," he boomed, (an apt greeting I thought), "not a newspaperman, I hope, are you?"

"I am supposed to be," I answered, closely studying his expressive feet. "Well, come in and close the door; I hate publicity," he cried cordially, "I suppose you wish to interview me?"

Soon we were seated and chatting pleasantly on a variety of topics. He answered my queries calmly and quietly until I mentioned goldfish, at which juncture he began talking rapidly and with great excitement about his favourite hobby.

"They need a castle for the centre of their bowl," he cried at length, "and I am going to buy them one tomorrow!" Carried away by his enthusiasm, he gave me a hearty thump on the back that sent my false teeth flying out of my mouth to the floor.

In a moment the great man was on his knees beside me hunting among the papers and rubbish on the rug. "I will never forgive myself if we do not find them," he cried bitterly. And I knew that he spoke from the bottom of his heart. Small wonder that this magnanimous man has risen to his present high position.

The Archbishop entered into the spirit of the search and shuffled about on his hands and knees, grunting and looking for all the world like a grizzly bear nosing for beetles.

Suddenly he pounced on my upper set with a honk of triumph. "Here we are," he shouted, "now let's find the lowers!"

"Your reverence," I began. "Call me Archie," he interposed. "Archie, then, I am afraid that I will have to (Continued on page 3)

BLUE SENIORS PLAY NATIONALS IN IMPORTANT GAME TO-MORROW

'FLEAS' PROMISE STIFF CONTEST IN RETURN TILT

Means Undisputed Leadership of Group if Blue and White Wins

TEAM ON EDGE

Get Call to Triumph on Punch and Their Superior Team-Play

To-morrow night "Red" Porter's Varsity hockey squad clashes with "Red" Foster's Nationals in a senior O.H.A. fixture. This game will have an important bearing on the group standing and both teams are confident of coming through with a victory. On form shown to date Varsity get the call to win. They defeated the "Sea Fleas" 2 to 1 in their last encounter and have two decisions over the Rangers by scores of 7 to 0 and 7 to 2, without losing a game. The recent successful U.S. trip has apparently put the team right on edge, as shown by Wednesday night's victory over Rangers. The regular forward line of Stewart at centre and McMullen and Harley on the wings is working well together. They have speed to burn plus a real scoring punch. Nor is the team weakened when the second string trio of Bell, Murray and Marshall is on the ice. Whitehead and Paul team up nicely on the defence, and in addition can always be counted on for some spectacular rushing. Paul especially is a first-class goal-getter. Le Barr, who was injured in the Yale game, will get the goaltending assignment if he has sufficiently recovered. If not, Ames will guard the twine. In either case the light won't flash very often behind the Varsity nets.

The "Sea Fleas" are an "up-and-coming" outfit and may prove a stumbling block to the Blue hopes. They are a colourful aggregation of stars, lacking only perfect teamwork to become a first class hockey machine. The coaching duties are in the hands of Harry "Red" Foster, who also takes a turn on the defence. Among the hockey luminaries on the Nationals' roster are "Stuffy" Mueller, one-time Olympic goaleer, Charlie Delahay, who was also a member of the Grads; "Wiener" Lough, Marty Nugent, Gordie Beal, Eddie Convey and others.

This game should be a close fight from start to finish and will furnish a real treat for the fans.

be going, as I have another appointment. I will call back for the lowers another day; in the meantime the uppers are of no use to me so I want you to put them in your goldfish bowl and use them for a castle until you get one."

The Archbishop choked with emotion. Words failed him completely. It was touching to watch the tears of gratitude streaming down his face and into the goldfish bowl.

And thus I left him with the fishes with joy in my heart, knowing that I had met a great man and had done a kindly deed.

Gaspard McGuffey.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The Varsity-Nationals game at the Arena to-morrow night is causing considerable stir in local amateur hockey circles. The Blue defeated the "Sea Fleas" in the first meeting by a score of 2-1 and have downed Rangers twice. Nationals have a win over Rangers and are second to Varsity in the group standing. To-morrow's game will be an important one for both teams. If Nationals can take Varsity it will put them on an even footing with the Blue in the matter of games lost and will indicate that they will be a serious threat for the O.H.A. title.

The Queen's senior sextet will open their season to-morrow night by entertaining Rangers, the "winless wonders", on Kingston ice. The Tricolour appears to have a smarter aggregation than last year and may cause a lot of trouble to the Toronto contenders.

Last year "Red" Porter's men breezed through the O.H.A. looking like a championship outfit all the way. The play-offs found the going a little tougher but the Blue reached the eastern finals only to go down to defeat before the Quebec champions. In the latter games Varsity seemed to be showing the effects of too much hockey, and in addition their team-play and combination were not up to the mark. A year's experience as a team will be bound to show its effect in the welding of a hockey machine. The Blue's effort against Rangers Wednesday night was featured by neat passing and it is worth noting that each of the regular forwards got two goals.

Nationals present a marked contrast to U. of T. The former are a collection of smart performers who have played but three games together. There is no doubt of the high calibre of the individual players, but it remains to be seen whether they will be made into a unit working in unison.

To-morrow night's game should be witnessed by the largest crowd to attend a senior O.H.A. game in some time. The senior series has suffered a bad slump owing to the many mediocre performances in the past few years. This season may be the start of something better.

The Blue and White water polo team will be facing tough opposition in Montreal Saturday. M.A.A.A. defeated Penn A.C. in Montreal 9-3 and Varsity won against Penn here by a 5-2 score.

Commencing next week the B. W. and F. Club are going to stage a series of practice bouts at 5.45 on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. The boxers and wrestlers will put on a couple of bouts each evening. The candidates for the intercollegiate team will put on their stuff under the eagle eye of the coaches. Competition for places is particularly keen this year. These sessions in the boxing and wrestling rooms will be well worth attending.

Varsity's entry in the Toronto Women's Senior Hockey League is hailed with delight and will provide the team with much needed competition before the intercollegiate series with Queen's. Coach Bill Dewar has some good material from which to choose and the Blue and White has a real chance to take the city title.

All three feminine intercollegiate championships — hockey, tennis and basketball — now rest at Varsity. This is indeed an enviable record and is a worthy mark to shoot at.

Honour students at Northwestern University will be allowed to have an unlimited amount of cuts for the coming year. The honour students will include any student that has not made less than two grade points in each subject their previous year.

Gary Cooper, well known movie star of Hollywood, Calif., will be one of the judges for the beauty contest conducted by the Sunflower of Kansas State Teachers' College. Nine-teen co-eds have entered the contest.

WATER POLO TEAM FACES M. A. A. A. IN EASTERN TANK

Eve of Tussle Sees Blue Eager to Justify Fans' Opinion

INTERNATIONAL FIXTURE

Exhibition Swimming Provides "Curtain - Raiser" in Montreal

University of Toronto international water polo team had a light workout yesterday afternoon in preparation for their game on Saturday evening with Montreal A.A.A. The game will be played in the Peel Street pool in Montreal.

The team showed yesterday that the confidence of the fans is well founded. They looked to be at the top of their form and should continue their winning ways.

Ayres, Sinclair and Spence were full of pep and Coach Frans Lorenzen had to warn them not to over-exert themselves. "The team is doing as well as may be expected," was all F. Lorenzen had to say to "The Varsity".

Before the playing of the game there will be a game played by Montreal City League teams, also some exhibition swimming put on by the Westmount and Mount Royal High Schools.

Varsity will carry the same players as played here with Penn A.C. They are: Ayers, Spence, Armstrong, Glass, Sinclair, Graham, Alexander. Frans Lorenzen and C. Shortt, secretary, will accompany the team. Standing of the league to date follows:

	Won	Lost	Points
N. Y. A. C.	2	0	4
U. of T.	1	0	2
M. A. A. A.	1	2	2
Penn. A. C.	1	3	2

VARSITY JUNIORS ENCOUNTER DUKES

Sitting Pretty Atop Group and Mean to Keep Clean Record

POWERFUL DEFENCE

The Varsity junior hockeyists are sitting pretty on top of the Big Four Group in the O.H.A. with four wins and no losses. To-night they meet the Marlboros down at Andy Taylor's ice palace, Mutual Street, and should increase their winning streak. The last time these two teams contested matters, the Blue and White nosed out the Iron Dukes by a single goal. But the Canadian champions didn't look so good against the Parkdale Paddlers last Tuesday evening at the U. of T. arena and went down to defeat. Gamble and Pringle appear the best of the lot, and both are defence men. The forward line didn't show up.

However, the same may be said of the Varsity sextet. Alec Levinsky and Don Smillie are the big cogs in the Blue machine and accounted for all the goals in the win over T.C.C. Coach Frank Sullivan has at last got his forward line checking back like fiends. The regular line of Brant at centre and Hetherington and Bennet on the wings are a hard working trio and are due to show up more prominently on the score sheet. Williamson, who was originally a defenceman, has been moved up to the forward berth and his size and aggressiveness should add punch to the offensive. Cunningham showed up to advantage in Tuesday's game and is a valuable relief man to have along. Parkdale and Toronto Canoe Clubs hook up in the other game of the double header and the lads will be treated to two excellent exhibitions of the winter pastime by four good junior aggregations.

Chaffey Junior college women have been conducting a shoe shining contest. This contest is held to raise funds for the association.

CO-ED JOTTINGS

Bill Dewar, IV Dentistry, has again been appointed coach of the intercollegiate women's hockey team. Mr. Dewar piloted Varsity to the championship last year.

Marion Forward, Victoria '28, mentor of last year's intercollegiate basketball title-holders, has also been re-appointed.

The hockey team will hold its first practice to-morrow in the Varsity Arena from 11-12, and the first basketball workout will likely be on Tuesday.

INTERFACULTY HOCKEY

The following practice hours have been allotted. A meeting of the faculty representatives will be held in the Athletic Office on Monday at 5 p.m. to elect a committee of management. All representatives are urged to attend on time. If O.C.E. intends to enter a team will its manager communicate with the Athletic Office immediately:

week? What kind of law is in force at Borger?

"I think," said Professor Henning, "that the answers here are about what the average student would give to a similar set of questions. I think that if the same set of questions was submitted to twenty-five students picked at random, the results would be about the same.

"The average student confines his reading to the sport page, the society columns and the comics, anyhow," he added.

Some other amusing answers to this test were:

"William B. Shearer is an admiral of the U.S. navy who has been accused by congress of the misappropriation of funds."

"William B. Shearer is a western banker who has created some excitement with his transactions with New York bankers."

"William B. Shearer is a movie director."

Lovely Laura Louise Laments Current Student Crop Stunted

By L. L.

Royal York,
Friday, Jan. 10, 1930.

Dear Betty:

It's simply gorgeous to be back at Varsity again. That is, of course, not exactly at Varsity, but in the environment. This week in town is heavenly. It's so explicable the thrills it gives me to see the old crowd again and to see the same old campus in the same old place, even though there's snow everywhere on it. Sends me into a perfect ecstasy of remembrance. Honestly, my dear, the tears simply flowed in ribbons.

Of course there are some changes. You know what our French teacher said about "lempers fudgiting". For one thing the college men are simply boys, that is the new ones. I'm sure that I saw some in their first long pants. You'd never think of even going out with such children. In my first year I was a more sophisticated cat.

You remember that wonderful English professor that I just adored last year, the one that plucked me in the finals, well I saw him on Tuesday, no it was on Wednesday, and he hasn't changed a bit. Same suit and same hat. He recognized me and smiled and had the nerve to ask me what I was doing since I graduated. . . . the brute! I know perfectly well, that if he and the other two professors hadn't allowed personal prejudices to exist, I'd have been able to come back and skate at the Arena at a reduced rate when ever I wanted to,

"William B. Shearer is a governmental employee, was accused of violating the eighteenth amendment."

"William B. Shearer holds a very high position in the navy."

"William B. Shearer is the small Colorado banker who caused a rift of excitement by outsmarting New York bankers out of some $500,000."

Some of the answers in regard to the questions regarding MacDonald were:

"Ramsay MacDonald is an Irish statesman in the English cabinet."

"Ramsay MacDonald is the English prime minister to Scotland."

"Ramsay MacDonald was an important railroad man, I think, or a statesman of some kind."

not to mention all the football and hockey games free. Just wait, and when I get the novel published that I am going to write next summer, if I have time, I'll tell him how little his course helped me to become actually intellectually famous.

I saw all last years crowd. They haven't changed a bit. Jimmy took me to a show last night. He's awfully serious this year. But I think it must be a New Years Resolution, because on Christmas eve he hadn't revolved the serious way. Why you know that after he and the boys came downstairs they were simply terrible and Jimmy set fire to Uncle "Peter's" whiskers when he was playing at Santa Clause, to see if they were real or not. Fortunately they came off quickly and no one minded but Uncle. Of course it was a frightful disillusionment to the children. Then he climbed the Christmas tree to see if there were any nuts, because he was, he said, a squirrel.

I've got to roll a life-saver now. Papa will be coming in soon and he's so old-fashioned. He says that girls that smoke show what kind of homes they come from and I don't want to disturb his foundations, the pet.

So with all my love,

Sincerely,
Laura Louise.

P.S. I really wrote to tell you that I may be staying in the city. Actually. Won't it be marvellous if I really and truly do get a job. I'm so thrilled at the very idea. L.L.

Arthur R. Warnock, dean of men at Penn State, praises the undergraduates for their decline on the "rah rah" stuff, extreme styles in clothing, and their movie and comic wise cracks. The dean also thinks that the percentage of men entering fraternities are fewer and that there is no danger of new chapters being formed.

A vigorous campaign to "boost K.U." has been undertaken throughout the State of Kansas, according to the University Daily Kansan. Window displays, lantern lectures, and pamphlets are being used in an attempt to popularize the State University, and county clubs are lending their assistance.

Escaping Winter at Victoria

Early in the new year, and following an eight-day Yuletide Festival at the Empress Hotel, the same hostelry will be the scene under Canadian Pacific Railway auspices of a Sea Music Festival, January 15-18, at which British and Canadian sea chanteys will be featured. Among the more outstanding will be the ballad operas, "The Order of Good Cheer", incorporating old French sea songs of the period of Champlain; "Bound for the Rio Grande", an opera filled with many favorite sea chanteys; and a fisherfolk play written by Ethel Bassin, "At A Lewis Fishing." Fine voices, first-class choirs, some of them from the United States, others native, and excellent instrumental effects will all be in evidence under the musical direction of Harold Eustace Key. Lay-out shows scenes from "Bound for the Rio Grande," "Fishwives Dancing," and "The Order of Good Cheer." Following the sea music festival, there will be staged in February the Victoria mid-winter golf tournament at Colwood Park, with a special trophy presented by E. W. Beatty, chairman and president of the Railway, which was first held with such success last year and attracted a fine entry list. Victoria, where grass is green and flowers bloom the year round, will thus again prove its title to be considered the Riviera of Canada with a mild climate making it a pleasant rest resort in winter.

Passing of Wycliffe Principal Robs Toronto of Great Leader

Rev. T. R. O'Meara
Dies of Long Illness

FUNERAL TO-DAY

University President
Extols Deceased

After an illness lasting some months, the result of a world tour to graduates of Wycliffe College, Rev. T. R. O'Meara, Principal of Wycliffe College, died from a sudden heart attack on Friday afternoon last, in his residence at the college.

Returning from his world tour in September, Dr. O'Meara found it necessary to leave his official duties to Dr. W. E. Taylor, acting principal, in order to attempt the regaining of the strength which he had lost in strengthening the position of the Church in foreign lands.

Principal O'Meara was a noted educationist and a great leader in the Anglican communion. He was born in Georgetown in 1864, the son of the late Canon F. A. O'Meara. After attending Port Hope High School, Dr. O'Meara took his degree from the University of Toronto and graduated in the theological course of Wycliffe College in 1887. He was ordained that year by the late Bishop Sweatman, and became assistant curate of St. Philip's under the present Bishop of Toronto.

The late Principal of Wycliffe College was 14 years at Trinity Church, King street east, first as assistant rector and later as rector following the death of Canon Sanson.

Dr. O'Meara was appointed Principal of Wycliffe College in 1906, and he has held the positions of Commissary of the Diocese of MacKenzie River, President of the Church of England Deaconess and Missionary Training House, and he was long connected with the Upper Canada Bible Society.

He was also a member of the Board of Governors of Haverall College and a member of the governing body of Ridley College.

From the time of his graduation Dr. O'Meara has served Wycliffe College (Continued on page 4)

NEW GROUPS TO MEET

At the Menorah Discussion Group on Saturday afternoon at the home of Miss R. Neverin, Mr. S. Goldhar outlined the programme for the coming year.

The next Discussion Group will be on February 1st and Mr. Victor A. Kramer, Harvard, '18, will be the speaker. Dr. David Pinsky, the famous playwright, and Dr. Isaacs of Harvard, will speak at future Menorah groups. An open meeting will be held one week before the tea, on Sunday, Jan. 26.

On Feb. 22, the McGill debaters will meet Menorah at Toronto, and like last year, the evening will be planned as a debate and dance.

On Mar. 18, "Welcome Stranger," a four-act play by A. Hoffman, will be put on at Hart House. The cast will be chosen this week by Mr. Goldhar, who is to direct it.

In order to mark the tenth year of its publication the board of editors have decided to prepare and publish an author and subject index to the ten volumes.

Do Cats Have Fleas?

Hutton House is at present debating the weighty question, "Do Cats Have Fleas?"

The other night a new resident "Puss", whose only guarantee of a pedigree was the word of her Italian god-father was initiated by the girls of Hutton House at a pyjama party. Puss showed his good intentions by fervently embracing each resident in turn. A gay time was had by all.

The next day, co-eds of other houses were surprised by the queer antics of the Hutton House co-eds, who went about shrugging their shoulders, and otherwise behaving as no young ladies should. A clue to the mystery was provided by the question, "Is Keating's the best Insect Powder?"

MARK ANTHONY SIOE ISSUE

Helen's Chief Fault Was Her Inspiration for Novelist

"Resolved that Cleopatra was a greater source for ill than Helen of Troy." This was the subject of an impromptu debate held by the Trinity Literary Society at their meeting in Trinity House common rooms Friday evening. R. L. Seaborn, 3T2, was the speaker in the chair.

"Cleopatra set out to win power and riches and all that goes with it, whereas Helen of Troy was an unwitting accomplice to a deed," declared Harvey Little, '31, leader of the government which upheld the affirmative.

In defence of Cleopatra, T. P. Crosshwaite, '30, first debater for the opposition, said, "Cleopatra was doing what she thought was good for her country. Mark Anthony was only a side issue."

"The main fault with Helen of Troy," he continued, "was that she inspired John Erskine to write a book, Helen was out for her own enjoyment and of no use to posterity." Shakespeare's "Anthony and Cleopatra" was an example of that lady's good influence, he cited.

Gilbert Murrell-Wright, in speaking second for the affirmative, estimated that "Helen of Troy had little influence except on a few men, but Cleopatra's widespread influence started the downfall of the Roman Empire."

DR. BRANDES SPEAKS ABOUT PAPUAN TRIP

Lecturer in Convocation Hall Describes Travels by Seaplane

NATIVES FEAR BIRO-MEN

"New Guinea, though discovered only 17 years after Columbus discovered America, is about the only part of the world not yet completely explored." This is only one of the startling statements with which Dr. E. H. Brandes entertained his audience in Convocation Hall last Saturday evening.

The subject of his lecture was "Into Primeval Papua by Seaplane". Dr. Brandes had been sent out to New Guinea by the United States Department of Agriculture and had used a seaplane as the easiest and fastest means of covering this great island.

New Guinea is the second largest island in the world. If one tip were placed at the Virginia capes, the other would stretch far into Manitoba. All varieties of sugar-cane, some of them unknown, grow there wild, and it was these Dr. Brandes was searching for. A blight has struck the cane plantations of the gulf states and he was searching for varieties that could withstand the disease.

The seaplane used was one that had been ordered from the Canadian air service, which obligingly relinquished its claim so that Dr. Brandes could have the plane immediately and catch a tramp steamer sailing directly to Sydney. The plane proved invaluable (Continued on page 4)

Professor Says Chicago Gives Greater Opportunity for His Work

Professor W. A. Irwin of the Department of Oriental Languages, University of Toronto, has received an appointment to the faculty of the University of Chicago.

Mr. Irwin, who is at present Associate Professor of Oriental Languages at Toronto, will occupy the chair of Professor of Old Testament Language and Literature at Chicago.

Speaking to "The Varsity" on the subject of his departure, Professor Irwin said: "I leave Toronto with much regret and shall carry with me many pleasant memories. My associations here have been most cordial and have furnished no cause for me to leave Toronto. Naturally enough financial reasons have entered into my decision to leave, but they were not the deciding factor. I felt that the University of Chicago offered me greater opportunity for research, for teaching and for influence among my students generally."

Asked whether he intended to remain in the United States and become a citizen of that country, Dr. Irwin replied: "If I find that I desire to remain in the States permanently, I shall most certainly become a citizen. While I have a great desire to remain a British subject, I feel that it would be a mean insult to remain permanent."

GAMBLING IS ABSENT HERE SAY OFFICIALS

Head of University Residence Has Never Heard of Such a Thing

NOT SERIOUS AT TRINITY

"I have never heard of any such thing going on around the university residences," said A. T. Laidlaw, head of the university residences, concerning the question of gambling which is prevalent in the University of Minnesota according to the article printed in Thursday's issue of "The Varsity".

"Gambling is prohibited, but card playing is not, that would be ridiculous," he continued. "Years ago there was some gambling here, but I doubt if there is any done now. Officially, I've known of none."

Colonel LePan, superintendent of grounds and buildings, stated, "As far as I know there isn't any gambling in the university. I think we would know if there were any. No," he concluded, "in this case I think we can give the boys a clean sheet."

Gambling is not a serious problem in Trinity House, Mr. Kingston, dean of the residence, told "The Varsity". "We have a rule prohibiting gambling in the house and if caught the culprit would be punished," he said.

"Would the student be expelled?" asked "The Varsity". "That would depend on the seriousness of the offense," replied Mr. Kingston, "he would certainly be punished. Fortunately," he concluded, "we are not troubled with this problem in our residence."

BOOY-CHECKING PROMINENT

Nationals Leading Most of Way
Varsity Combinations
Avert Victory

(By Larry Dawson, Sports Editor)

Bill Stewart's goal on Paul's rebound with only 10 seconds to play in the last period and Varsity trailing 2-1 sent the Varsity-Nationals game Saturday night into thirty minutes overtime to a 2-2 deadlock after ninety minutes of brilliant hockey.

The game was a sparkling exhibition of hockey at its best, both teams setting a withering pace for the greater part of the game. In the overtime the effect of the strenuous schedule the players of both teams have endured lately began to show itself, the play slowing up slightly.

The fast-skating Blue forward trio, McMullen, Stewart and Harley, gave a great display, breaking like a streak and combining well. Mueller and Lebar, the rival net-minders, put on a great exhibition of goal-tending, which was one of the bright features of the game. Body-checking played a prominent part, both sides handing out the bumps freely. Defensively Nugent and McKay had an edge on Paul and Whitehead. Paul's rushing pet a real punch into the Varsity attack, the tall rearguard man having an assist on both the Varsity counters. Billy Bell, who relieved at centre and right wing, played well, his checking breaking up many of the Sea Flea rushes in the later stages of the game.

Mueller, Convey, Collins, Kane and Lough were the pick of the redshifts. Mueller was at the top of his form and was almost unbeatable. Collins, Convey and Kane worked nicely, but have yet to develop the machine-like passing of the Varsity forwards. Lough, who took his turn at centre, checked effectively, breaking fast on the attack.

From the initial face-off both squads stepped on the gas and into each other. (Continued on page 3)

CHILDREN'S THEATRE GIVES PERFORMANCES

University Settlement Gives Children Opportunity for Acting

DANCING CLASSES ALSO

The Little Theatre for Children, started at the University Settlement during the fall term, added zest to Christmas activities both in the Settlement neighbourhood and in university circles. Four performances of Red Riding Hood's Wood, Bo-Peep and Boy Blue, The King's Breakfast by A. A. Milne, a fable of The Giddy and the Ant, and a Christmas number, The Wonder Child showed such finish on the part of the young actors, that the idea of "playing make-believe" will be continued in further dramatic tuition. The performance will be repeated on February 15th.

The Concert Hall at the Settlement which students helped to furnish with their tag day funds, gives an opportunity for more than mere acting. Unusual lighting effects and scenery painted by members of the Art Students' League add to the artistic effect, while rhythmic and dancing classes are preparing the children for specialized stage production.

BOTANY BUILDING TO BE ERECTED SOON

Location Uncertain Till Plans for University Avenue
Extension Known

OLD BUILDING DAMAGED

Preliminary plans for a new Botany Building for the University of Toronto are being drawn, Premier Ferguson announced Friday following a conference with Sir Robert Falconer, president of the university, and two of the governors, Canon H. J. Cody and T. A. Russell.

The decision as to the location of the new building was being delayed, said the Prime Minister, until it was known definitely what the city planned to do with University Avenue.

He was unable to say what size the new building would be. A front elevation would be prepared forthwith however, by Col. A. V. LePan, university superintendent of buildings.

At present the Botany Department of the university is located in a remodelled house at 11 Queen's Park at the corner of Grosvenor. St. These quarters have been outgrown as well as being damaged by fire during the Christmas holidays.

INTER-UNIVERSITY TEAMS DEBATE HERE NEXT WEEK

"Tyranny of Convention" Will be Subject Under Discussion

"That this House is of the opinion that the tyranny of convention is to be deplored" is the subject of the inter-university debate to be held at the University of Toronto on Thursday, Jan. 23. Two representatives, one from the University of Montreal and one from Bishop's College, Lennoxville, who are making a debating tour of all the universities west of Montreal, will oppose two from this university.

The debaters who are to oppose the visitors will be named this week.

Sunday Evening Concert

Both of the guest artists who sang last night at the Hart House Concert are well known in musical circles in the Old Country. Miss Joan Elwes, the soprano, comes from a family of known talent, while Mr. Clive Carey, baritone, has toured this continent with the "Beggars' Opera".

Traditional old English ballads, sung by Mr. Carey, proved the most popular feature of the evening, and "O Sally My Dear" required an encore. Mr. Carey gave as an extra number the well-known song of the fabulous ram at Derby Fair.

Miss Elwes gave as a special encore a rendition of John Masfield's "Christmas Eve at Sea", set to music. At the conclusion of the programme the two guests gave a duet. Mr. Carey played the accompaniment for Miss Elwes and himself.

WHY NO MUSIC CRITIC?

This city has its share of pigmy-minded people. That is, of course, not unusual, but Toronto is indeed unique in having such a large number of them in what is called the musician class. Amongst some, in a profession where the mind should be broad and wholesome, where the important things of life should count, we find the crassest of materialism, the most ignoble of desires to have only the false and gaudy shoved to the fore. Truth, without which there can be no beauty, counts for nothing. Thick, sickening praise only can be fed them, eulogies and loud applause are the prime factors, honesty of criticism must be cast out and stamped upon. Unless all bow down and worship at their feet of clay, they make threats, they cry that they have been insulted, that their artistic souls are being sacrificed.

We have not come to these conclusions in a day, but experience has shown us that for a great number, honesty of criticism is not desirable. "The Varsity" has found that is no longer has need of a music critic, for honest criticisms signed by the critic to enforce the fact that the opinions are his and not necessarily the opinions of the whole university, are not wanted. Some musicians forget that other people have opinions on their work and that criticisms are written not to fill their well-thumbed scrap books, but for the benefit of the readers of the newspaper. A true artist is something else than a craftsman, something else than a seeker after empty phrases and smooth words.

The attitude of this column has always been to encourage the finest things at the university, to help further the more vital phases of student life. It is for that reason and not because we fear the empty threats of pseudo-artists that we have discontinued the office of music critic and taken the "Music" out of a stock heading that has stood for years under the name of "Art, Music and Drama".

One of the more worthwhile endeavours of Hart House under J. B. Bickersteth, the warden, has been to encourage the appreciation of music at the university. For many years there have been Sunday evening concerts to which both men and women of this centre of learning are invited. What has been more important, every Friday afternoon there have been little intimate recitals by some of the younger musicians in Toronto. Those pleasant hours have been the first means of encouraging the appreciation of music in the breasts of many undergraduates. It is to foster a work of that kind that we do not defy the ravings of some of the well-known but non-artistic musicians and continue the critical column.

We have not yet learned to back down because we have had threats for daring to suggest that we did not like the programme or preferred the rendering of one thing and not that of another. The empty ravings of sugar seekers mean nothing to us, but the roots which feed the delicate flowers of music at the university we refuse to disturb. Squabbling with some of the musicians who come to Hart House over an honest music column may hurt that tender growth and for that reason we give way.

As a result the undergraduate daily will publish bare news stories of musical events at the university. Those who have received sincere commendation will no longer get it, those who deserve the opposite will also receive the cold news item. It is most unfortunate, but the step must be taken; music criticism can no longer be a part of the student paper.

THE PASSING OF DR. O'MEARA

A rock upon whose strength Wycliffe College grew, was removed on Friday evening when the Rev. Canon Thomas Robert O'Meara, D.D., LL.D., passed away. Dr. O'Meara was a man of kindly disposition and great earnestness. The troubles of the individual students were his troubles, their trials were his trials. The position that the college has to-day is due to his tireless energies spent in its behalf.

Probably no one has ever better succeeded in combining a capacity for control and discipline with the utmost personal friendliness. Faithfulness and sympathy marked every phase and attitude

CHAMPUS CAT

Last night at the concert, Miss Viola Noyes played on the bass viol. It was a bass viol, viol programme in every respect.

C—C

A very bright young man who is above criticism (he says so himself) accompanied her on the velocipede.

C—C

Certain of the higher minded were sure that a few low moral notes were struck. D flat, probably. This is, however, sharp criticism.

C—C

They protested in the interests of better music, but it was explained that the notes were in the score.

C—C

This is a heck of a note, we remarked, (when we heard about the score), what do you think this is, a hockey game?

C—C

We note that our editor no longer devotes any space to musical criticism, but will merely offer news reports. We trust he will publish the score in the first line, as in sport write-ups.

C—C

It cannot be denied that knowledge of music in this university is at a very low ebb. Sort of tide down, one might say.

C—C

Is there anyone who has not heard of the co-ed who believes that Beethoven wrote a certain "Moonshine Sonata"?

C—C

We suppose that one naturally dances a hootchy-kootchy to a Moonshine Sonata.

C—C

However, sonata very logical inference.

C—C

We like to think of Jack London's story of the Johnstown flood. The water from the bursted dams engulfed a house, and an old man subsequently went floating down the river on a table, while his son accompanied him on a Steinway piano.

FIRST SOD FOR EMMANUEL COLLEGE BUILDING TURNED

Impatient Undergrads Perform Ceremony After Midnight

The first sod of the new Emmanuel College building has been turned. The inscription, "Emmanuel College Building Excavation. No Fishing," stands boldly emblazoned upon an improvised piling which fences in a few upturned sods upon the site of the proposed building.

The ceremony was performed following a midnight meeting last Friday evening in West House, Emmanuel College residence. The occasion was the last evening in which West House will be used as a residence, since it is to be shortly demolished to make way for the new Emmanuel College building to be erected.

The meeting was attended by residents and a few invited faculty representatives. At the close of the meeting the first sod of the new building was officially turned.

EXAMINATION PAPERS LOST

Miss Irene M. Biss, lecturer in Economics, while in New York on her vacation, had her suitcase stolen. In the suitcase were all the papers written by the first year economics class at the Christmas term examination. She is not going to set another examination, but will base the term mark for the class on the essays written during the term.

of his life and work. If necessity compelled him to criticize or to take disciplinary action in some phase of College life, it was bravely undertaken with an obvious cost and personal suffering.

His death is not only a loss to the college, but a great loss to his church. The place left empty by his death is indeed a large one.

NEW MUSICAL COMEDY BY TORONTO STUDENT

fully staged in Hart House last year. This year, besides writing the book, Mr. Lindsay has also written the music and lyrics for the production which will have a cast of about fifty men and women with an ensemble of 16 young ladies and a singing chorus of eight men, all university students. The young writer cannot play a note on the piano and he composes all his tunes, picking them out on his guitar—needless to say, he has no degrees in music. As for his lyrics, "I compose them in my cerebellum," jokingly explained the producer.

The dances, as last year, have been conceived by the Mosher studios of dancing. "Some especially noted dance numbers have been introduced this year," said Mr. Lindsay, "of which one is a flashlight dance. The dances are full of light and shadow, including both classical and jazz numbers."

Mr. Lindsay is registered in University College in the second year of the course in Philosophy, English and History. Asked how long he had been doing work of this sort, he replied: "I have been interested in it ever since I can remember, and I hope to continue." Mr. Lindsay has played minor roles in Hart House Theatre productions from time to time and plays one of the four leading roles in his own play.

Describing his show, he said: "I am trying to get away from sentimentality entirely except where I am satirizing it. Needless to say there are no 'Mammy songs' in the production." The fourth scene of the play, of which there are five, ends with a song, "Beneath My Smiling Exterior", a travesty on "Laugh, Clown, Laugh." The costumes, which have been designed by the producers, exemplify the modernistic trend in art and are very cleverly made in brightly contrasting shades of oilcloth.

The wives of several members of the faculty of Victoria College entertained the third year students at tea Friday afternoon at Wymilwood.

Yesterday's Sunday afternoon tea at Newman Club was in charge of the students of St. Joseph's College. Miss Eileen Harrison received.

VARSITY AND NATIONALS PLAY THIRTY MINUTES OVERTIME 2-2

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The Varsity-Nationals game was all that it was expected to be, and then some. No one who was present Saturday night is likely to be absent the next time these teams meet. Those who stayed away without good reason were just plain "fish".

Pre-game odds were 4-1 on the Blue.

That now famous Paul-Stewart goal which knotted the count is in just about the same class as Sinclair's winning last-second hoof against Queen's.

With but a few days of rest after their American trip, Varsity played Rangers on Wednesday and then Saturday played ninety minutes of gruelling hockey. To-day they board the flyer to play Queen's in Kingston to-night. If Queen's can't beat the Blues in this game the prospects of a Trielour title are extremely remote. If Varsity win they will be entitled to rank as an iron-man team. However, it won't create any surprise if to-night's Blue line-up is somewhat changed.

Varsity juniors lost their first O.H.A. game to Marlboros Friday. The juniors' forward line hasn't scored a goal in the last two games. A big shake-up is needed. No team can get far playing like that. On their present form the Varsity defence trio, Hunnisett in goal, Smillie and Levinsky on defence, backing up the West Toronto juniors forward line, would just about romp through to the Canadian finals.

The default of Young Rangers from the Senior A series leaves Varsity, Queen's and Nationals. Rangers were some way removed from being a team of senior calibre. Rangers would probably have been operated at a financial loss and in addition the display of hockey dished up by this team didn't add any prestige to the senior series.

In a swimming meet at Montreal Saturday, Monroe Bourne, swimming in a 60 foot tank, lowered Johnny Goss' record for 300 yards free style from 3.38 3-5 to 3.21 3-5. Seventeen seconds clipped off is some going.

MARLBOROS GRAB WIN FROM BLUE JUNIORS

Effective Back-Checking Ties Up Blue Forwards for Low Score

ONLY TWO PENALTIES

Marlboros pulled out an unexpected win last Friday night at the Arena Gardens when they defeated Varsity juniors 2 to 1. The Blue and White had not lost a game until then and the Dukes had not won one, so the result was quite a surprise to the Varsity supporters.

The effective back-checking of the Marlboro clan kept the Blue forwards off the score sheet all evening. Varsity's lone counter came after 10 minutes of play in the final stanza from the stick of Alex Levinsky after the latter had executed a beautiful individual play. Levinsky, a former Duke, was Varsity's best bet, and kept the Blues in the hunt right to the finish by his fine playing.

Marlboros scored once in the first frame and again shortly after the final period had begun. Both goals were tallied by Bob Gamble, stellar Duke defence man. In the final five minutes the Blue and White, needing only one goal to tie the score, threw

VARSITY POLO TEAM LOSES IN MONTREAL

Two Early Goals Give Margin to M. A. A. A., and Settle Game

VARSITY NOT IN FORM

Special to "The Varsity" by T. A. Fleming, Staff Reporter.

Montreal, Jan. 11.—The Varsity water polo team dropped a hard-fought game to M.A.A.A. on Saturday night in the latter's net. The final score of 7 to 5 partly indicates how close the struggle was.

The Montrealers, defending the shallow end, started off with a rush and ran in two goals right after the face-off, Allan notching both. Varsity, unused to the small tank, could not hit their stride. Their passing and shooting was off the mark at times. On the other hand the red and black were heaving the ball with deadly accuracy, using the tip shot. Successive shots by Gilday, Allan and Thwaites gave them a commanding lead of 5 goals. A few seconds before half-time, however, Varsity got their first on a nice shot by Alexander. Cornforth in the Montreal nets played a sensational game in this period.

After the intermission the Blue team showed a return to form and had a big edge on the play. Armstrong opened the scoring for them, but Allan came right back and scored after some nice passing. Varsity opened up on the offensive then and Graham netted a nice one from centre. Alexander got another soon after and when Spence raised the Blue's total to five it was anybody's game. Play became fast and furious then as Varsity made desperate attacks to grab the equalizer but the M.A.A.A. defensive play, plus the good work of Cornforth in goal, staved them off. Just before the final whistle Allan scored his fifth, making it 7-5 in M.A.A.A.'s favour.

There was no individual star on the Varsity squad, although the good work of Harvey Graham deserves mention. After a slow start the team found itself just too late to pull the game out of the fire. The Montrealers presented a fast, well-drilled outfit, with Cornforth and Allan the stars of the game.

Varsity—Goal, Ayres; defence, Sinclair and Graham; rover, Spence; centre, Armstrong; forwards, Alexander and Glass.

M.A.A.A.—Goal, Cornforth; defence, Rodgers and Light; rover, Morwood; centre, Gilday; forwards, Thwaites and Allan.

Referee—P. Gravell.

BLUE SENIORS MEET QUEEN'S AGGREGATION

Have Not Yet Lost a Game in Their Very Strenuous Schedule

BLUES SHOULD WIN TITLE

To-night the Blue and White meet Queen's in their first O.H.A. game at the Jock Hartly Arena in Kingston. Queen's and Kingston again have combined this year to put a strong senior sextet on the ice. Judging from last year's encounters, Varsity should be extended to the limit to win.

Varsity have had an exceptionally strenuous schedule this season. The Blues played four games in a week on their annual American invasion, and two O.H.A. games this past week. The team has as yet not completely recovered from injuries at the hands of Yale, and on top of that they were forced to play 90 minutes of hockey in a tie game with the Sea Fleas on Saturday night. However, the good condition of the players stands them in good stead, and Varsity should outskate the fast Kingstonians.

The O.H.A. champs have yet to lose a game this season. The smooth-working forward line, together with the strong defence, has proved a com-

BLUE INTERMEDIATES WIN EASY STRUGGLE

Varsity Seconds Snow Markham Under for Second Straight

TIE FOR FIRST PLACE

Varsity's intermediate puck-chasers invaded Markham Friday night and snowed the locals under to the tune of 6 to 1. The Blue and White were all over their opponents and would have piled up a record score had it not been for the stellar playing of the Markham goalie. This marks the second straight victory for the Blue seconds, placing them in a tie for first place with Bradford, whom they play Wednesday night on the latter's ice.

After the first period Markham were never in the hunt. The score stood at one love at the beginning of the second stanza, but from then on the seconds held their opponents scoreless, while themselves tallying three counters in the second period and two in the final frame.

Pereyma was the Blues' leading marksman with three bullseyes to his credit, while Leak, Ferguson and Statham each scored one. Rog Clute, the Varsity centre, played a stellar game all evening, and was unfortunate not to break into the scoring column.

Varsity—Goal, McCartney; defence, Graham and Malcolm; centre, Clute; wings, Leak, Statham; alternates, Ferguson, Pereyma, Conn.

VARSITY SENIORS TIE IN OVERTIME TUSSLE

McMullen and Whitehead nearly beat Mueller, then Beal and Lough came back on a combination play. Whitehead narrowly averting a score by clearing a loose puck in front of the net. Convey beat the Varsity defence only to have Lebar make a flashy save. Then Paul grabbed the puck near his own goal, carried it to Nationals' defence, and slipped a neat pass to Harley, who beat Mueller with a beautiful drive to register the first counter after fifteen minutes of play. Nationals pressed hard and had tough luck on several occasions. With a few minutes of the period remaining the game slowed up a little for the first time. Nationals had the margin in the opening session, although unable to beat Lebar.

The second period was scoreless. Varsity showed even more speed and had the edge. Neither team could flash the light although several good chances were missed. Harley and McMullen worked right in, but Mueller made a great save. Paul and Whitehead pulled a fast sally and made it close. A scramble in front of the Blue net put Lebar in a tight spot, but Varsity again cleared.

The third period produced some of the best hockey of the night. After seven minutes of play Convey tied the score with a neat bit of work. Three minutes later Beal put Nationals in the lead, scoring on a lovely combination play. The pace became terrific with Varsity trying to even up matters against Nationals' stubborn defence. The time was slipping by and the crowd began to throng the exits.

The timekeeper signalled one minute to go. With Nationals a man short, Varsity were swarming around the Sea Fleas' goal and the Redskins were shooting the puck up the ice at every opportunity. Paul was playing back alone on the defence, and Nationals shot the puck up the ice. Paul seemed too exhausted to even intercept it, and the disc went in the corner of the net where he went after it, and started slowly up the ice with the crowd expecting the bell to ring at any moment. Paul stumbled through a tangled mass of players and slapped the puck at Mueller, who blocked it. Stewart scooped up the rebound and scored. The puck was faced off and the per-combination unbeatable in senior ranks. With the Rangers dropping out of the senior loop, three top-notch teams remain to fight it out for the title, and with a little rest Varsity should demonstrate their superiority in the race.

HOW INTIMATE A THING

A GLOVE CAN BE

Just a pair of gloves lying on a table; but what a wealth of meaning they can convey. Are they old and soiled with a careless, slovenly look about them, or are they neat, stylish, and good to look upon?

The men who wear Birkdale gloves realize these subtle things and have acted accordingly. Perhaps you need a pair of gloves yourself, if so, buy Birkdale and let them speak for you.

The three overtime periods found the going a little slower. Both teams again missed almost sure goals, McMullen beating the defence once, being tripped going in. McMullen's great playing featured the overtime. The last ten-minute extra period found both teams almost exhausted and apparently satisfied with a tie score.

ly in any land and not become a citizen of that land. I have lost most of my bigotries concerning the American people, that I had prior to my first visit to the States during the late war. It would not be too great a hardship to become naturalized even if one did have to live in the great city of Chicago. Contrary to the usual reports, there are still some very fine people in Chicago."

The appointment to the staff is not Professor Irwin's first connection with the University of Chicago, for when he enters upon his duties there next midsummer, he will be serving his second alma mater.

He was graduated in arts from Victoria College in 1912. After doing graduate work here he had intended to enter the ministry, and with this end in view, was graduated in Theology from the University of Chicago. While engaged in his studies at Chicago, he made the decision to forsake pastoral for academic work, and came in 1919 to Toronto to accept an appointment to the Oriental Languages department. Later he obtained his Doctor of Philosophy from Chicago, and received an appointment to the staff for the summer session of 1929.

Dr. Irwin will remain at Toronto for the remainder of the session to complete his eleventh year with the university, and will enter the Oriental Languages department at Chicago at the beginning of the summer quarter of 1930.

continuously in financial, teaching or administrative work. From the date of his marriage in 1889 until his appointment as principal in 1906, he was the college's financial secretary.

Sir Robert Falconer, President of the University, spoke very highly of Dr. O'Meara, having known him well ever since he came to Toronto.

"He was a gentleman in every sense of the word and a very fine character," said Sir Robert.

The body will lie in state in Wycliffe College Church this morning, and a private service will be held there at 1.30 for the family and staff and students of the college. At 2.30 a public service will be held at St. Paul's church, after which interment will take place at Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

Oh! To Climb to Lofty Heights! Oh! To Plumb the Slimy Depths!

By A. E. F. Allan

Now the New Year revising old Desires,
The thoughtful Soul to Solitude retires . . . . .

Alas! I grow older, O! my Saki!
And the Hand of bitter Experience lies heavy upon me. Would that I might undo the Follies of the Past Year! But, since I cannot, it doth behoove me, thy Omar, to take Thought for the Future. Folly upon Folly have I wrought, and there is much the Moving Finger hath writ I fain would retrace. For there is no Folly that cannot be Out-Follied and Nothing Writ that cannot be more Rotten.

Thou, O! Saki! Companion of my Youth! knowest indeed the Desires of my Heart—and how I would excel in This and That and climb to Lofty Heights and plumb the Slimy Depths. But, alas! it seems I am but a Dim Bulb without distinction for Good or Ill. O! how I long to be a Bold Bad Intellectual! or a Fraternity Man!

When Cloisters are dank and dripping of a darksome Night do I wander forlorn, revolving in my Mind much that seemeth of magic import. But when the Sun hath struck the Sultan's Turret with a Shaft of Light, the Much doth stand revealed as of as little Value as the Christmas Present you tried to exchange. And this is the End of much fair Fancy. The Worldly Hope I set my Heart upon turns Ashes. The Apple of my Eye turns Applesauce.

Here are we gathered from the Four Corners of the Earth to Sow the Seed of Wisdom; here do we plod in ceaseless Round. And it's all pretty silly. Why do we not retire to the Shade of some Bong Tree? And carve our Initials in the Sap. And give the Bong Tree the Benefit of our Fatuity. And if we must have our Book of Verse, make it a little one. But make the Jug of Wine one of Noble Proportions. Why do we muck about Here in the Slush when we might be dozing through a Tropic Afternoon?

Let us go! For all Here is Cold and Futile. But thou—O! my Saki! —art Pretty Hot Stuff!

and they trusted their lives and equipment to it with perfect confidence which proved not unwarranted.

The moving pictures with which Dr. Brandes accompanied his lecture were intensely interesting. The various races of the island, some of which had never been seen before, were seen flying in terror at the approach of the plane, only to approach timidly later to proffer propitiating gifts to the birdmen. They were mostly cannibals and head-hunters, and considered very dangerous.

After the return voyage over the Pacific the party flew across the continent to Washington and safely delivered 176 varieties of sugar-cane to the Pathological Department there, for experimental purposes.

A vote of thanks to the speaker was moved by Dean J. P. McMurrich, of the School of Graduate Studies.

REV. R. P. BOWLES TO BE TENDERED FAREWELL BANQUET

New Chancellor Will Be Inaugurated by Senate
January 31st

PUBLIC CEREMONY

The thirty-first of this month will see the inauguration of Rev. Edward Wilson Wallace, M.A., D.D., as Chancellor of Victoria University and mark the retirement of Chancellor Rev. Richard Pinch Bowles, M.A., D.D., LL.D., who has served in this capacity since 1913.

On Thursday, January 30th, a complimentary dinner is to be tendered to the retiring Chancellor, Rev. R. P. Bowles.

On Friday evening, January 31st, the inauguration ceremony will take place. It will be preceded by a morning chapel service for the staff and students at 10.00 a.m.

About one hundred delegates from Canadian and United States universities have been invited to attend the ceremony. Between 11.00 and 1.00 p.m. these delegates will register at Victoria College and at 1.30 p.m. they will be the guests of the Board of Regents at luncheon in Burwash Hall.

A reception in honour of the Chancellor-elect and Mrs. Wallace is to be held between the hours of 4.00 and 6.00 p.m. in the main building, Victoria University.

At 8.00 p.m. the Senate, delegates and invited guests will assemble in Simcoe Hall and then proceed to Convocation Hall, where the inauguration of the new Chancellor will take place. The inauguration in Convocation Hall will be open to the general public.

FOREIGN PROFESSORS WILL LECTURE HERE

Oslo, Göttingen, Wisconsin and the Mellon Institute Are Represented

THEORETICAL PHYSICS

The following series of lectures on Theoretical Physics will be given in the Physical Laboratory, University of Toronto:

1. Professor J. H. VanVleck, of the University of Wisconsin—A course of fifteen lectures, one each day, on Wave Mechanics will be given, commencing at 5 o'clock on Monday, January 20.
2. Professor Otto Oldenberg, of Göttingen, will deliver three lectures on January 22, 23 and 24. The subjects to be treated are: (1) On the relation between band spectra and dissociation energy; (2) On elementary processes involving the co-operation of two energy quanta; (3) On active nitrogen.
3. Professor Svein Roseland, of the University of Oslo will lecture on January 23 and 24 on: (1) Stellar Hydrodynamics; the Variable Star Problem; (2) Atomic Theory and the Interpretation of Stellar Spectra.

4. Dr. E. S. Akeley, recently a student under Professor Einstein, will deliver three lectures between February 4 and 8, dealing with recent work by Lanczos and Fraenkel, on the relation of the Dirac and Maxwell theories.
5. Dr. A. E. Ruark, of the Mellon Institute, Pittsburgh, will give a course of three lectures on the Physics of Atomic Nuclei, and one lecture on the Applications of Radio-activity to Geology, between February 10 and 15.

MISS ROWELL RESIGNS AS SECRETARY OF S.C.M.

Many Activities Are Planned Including Student Tag
Day

The Student Christian Movement feels keenly the loss of Miss Mary Rowell, who has resigned her position as secretary of the S.C.M. However, the office is being capably filled by Miss Molly Simpson, IV St. Hilda's. Miss Simpson was one of the representatives at the North American Students' Council at Ile aux Cers.

Many activities for the new term are already planned. From January 20-24 the annual study course on the Old Testament is being taken by Dr. Thomas, at Wymilwood from 5-6.

In February is the International Students' Tag Day, part of the International Week. Also in February are the noon day talks at the Women's Union, announcements of which will be made later.

Miss Simpson is taking the position temporarily, only working part time, as she is graduating this year in Household Economics. She will be in the S.C.M. office in the Household Science Building every day from 12-2 and from 4-6.

CAMPUS PERIODICAL CEASES ACTIVITIES

Apathetic Reception Said to be Reason for Sudden Suspension

NO LACK OF MONEY

"The Privateer", the weekly magazine which started out with a circulation of over twelve hundred, has suddenly been suspended. After publishing nine issues, the editors have decided to cease printing it as a regular publication.

"There will be other issues before the end of the year, but the exact date has not yet been determined," stated Mr. Gilbert Murrell-Wright, the managing editor. "Paul Gardner, Dorothy James, Jocelyn Moore and Harry Elliott have been placed in charge of the next issue, which will be entirely different from any previously published."

When "The Varsity" inquired why the magazine was to be discontinued, Mr. Murrell-Wright was rather vague. "The Privateer" is being discontinued not so much through lack of financial support as through a lack of interest on the part of a majority of the student body in a publication which evidently seemed unworthy of support. However," he later said, "there are some sixteen other college magazines dependent on the financial support of college circles."

"The Varsity" was also informed that there was on hand enough material for three more issues. However, in only one of three literary contests were there sufficient competitors to warrant giving a prize.

In concluding his remarks the managing editor of "The Privateer" said: "In view of the added attention which the S.A.C., the editor of "The Varsity" and the editor of the University of Toronto Monthly are devoting to the encouragement of literary activity in the university, there does not seem to be the same need for a purely literary magazine. As almost all the editors are busy in other university activities and have already seriously jeopardized their academic standing, it has been considered advisable to cease regular publication."

PROMINENT CITIZENS AGREE TO TAKE PART IN MODEL ASSEMBLY

Canon Cody Will Repeat His Geneva Sermon in St. Paul's

WIDE REPRESENTATION

K. Y. Wang, Chief Inspector to America of Chinese Nationalists
Will be Present

The Model Assembly of the League of Nations Club of the University of Toronto is to take place on February 21, 22 and 23. The executive has made untiring efforts to make this assembly a real success and in so doing they have approached some of America's leading men to put it across.

Sir Herbert Ames, former Chairman of the Finance Committee of the League of Nations, has expressed his willingness to attend. He is one of the foremost financial men of the world, and delivered an address at this university two years ago.

Sir Robert Falconer will give an address and Dr. Salem G. Bland will speak at the luncheon. Colonel Meredith, Secretary-General of the League of Nations Society of Canada, will be the Secretary-General of this assembly.

All the universities of Canada and many of the leading ones of the United States have been invited to send delegates. These delegates will be assigned to represent the different countries of the present League.

An interesting feature will be the representation of China under the leadership of Mr. K. Y. Wang, who is the Chief Inspector to America of the Chinese Nationalist party.

On Sunday, February 23, Canon Cody will preach in his own church, the same sermon that he gave before the League at Geneva in 1926.

FIRST YEAR COURSES BOTHER PROFESSORS

American Historical Society
Meets at Duke University at Durham, N. C.

TORONTO REPRESENTED

Professor G. W. Brown of the Department of Modern History, represented the University of Toronto at the annual meeting of the American Historical Society in Durham, North Carolina, the seat of Duke University.

Professors from all over the United States and Canada attended the conference of the American Historical Society. One session devoted to their methods of teaching history in the first year was especially interesting. Three papers were given by Professors from Columbia, Pennsylvania and Ohio State University in regard to their methods of handling students in the introductory courses. On account of the unwieldy number of students entering their universities since the war, this has become quite a problem. Evidently, it is becoming more and more popular in the American colleges to give a preliminary course in history in the first year. The first year student of such a course in world history would doubtless stagger one of our freshmen by the array of facts at his command. However, Professor Brown considers it a bad principle, since it stresses acquisition of information, rather than training the student to form and express his own opinions.

N.F.C.U.S. Debate

"Resolved that this House deplores the tyranny of convention," will be the subject of the debate to be held under the auspices of the Toronto branch of the National Federation of Canadian University Students on January 23rd. Toronto will support the affirmative of the debate, while McGill University will support the negative. T. V. Kennedy of St. Michael's College and J. C. Clough of Trinity, will represent the University of Toronto.

It is hoped by those in charge that it will be possible to make use of Trinity College library for the debate, although this is not certain yet. The debate will be in the open parliamentary style, with four speakers from the paper, the House being then open to discussion from the floor.

WYCLIFFE PRINCIPAL INTERRED YESTERDAY

Students and Staff Attend
While Church Observes
Last Rites

OR. COOY IN CHARGE

At 1.30 yesterday a private funeral service was held at Wycliffe College chapel for the relatives of the late Dr. T. R. O'Meara, Principal of Wycliffe. The students and staff of the college were in attendance, the service being taken by Professor B. W. Horan, Dean of residence, Dr. W. E. Taylor, Acting-principal, Dr. C. V. Pilcher and Dr. Dyson Hague.

Following this short service, the students proceeded before the hearse to St. Paul's Church, where the public service was held at 2.30. Throughout the impressive and solemn ceremony the impression of victory was stressed. Rev. Dr. Cody took charge, assisted by Right Reverend the Lord Bishop of Toronto, and Rev. R. A. Armstrong. Representatives were present from almost every faculty and college and many other outside organizations, and the large church was filled with a capacity congregation.

The cortege then proceeded to Mount Pleasant cemetery where the interment was held.

OIL INDUSTRY REVIEWED FOR ENGINEERING SOCIETY

Refining Processes and By-Products Described by Company Official

"The United States is the biggest producer of oil to-day," stated Mr. W. A. P. Shorman of the British American Oil Co., in an illustrated address on the "Oil Industry", before the Engineering Society in the Mining Building yesterday afternoon.

He showed how the oil industry affects the world in general, and illustrated his talk by maps and daily average charts. Pennsylvania leads in the number of barrels produced annually. Vera Cruz is another prolific source of oil.

The process was shown, by means of charts, how crude oil is transformed into gasoline, naphtha, kerosene, cracking stock, lubricating oils, heavy tube oil, wax and benzene. Pictures of oil plants and of gushers were also thrown onto the screen.

Queen's Triumph Over Varsity In Close Fought Hockey Battle

NATIONAL FEDERATION ARRANGES STUDENT TOUR

Mrs. A. Gordon Burns Has Been Appointed Official Chaperone

STEAMSHIP "MINNEDOSA"

"The special student tour is arranged and directed by the universities of Canada through the National Federation of Canadian University Students, in conjunction with the Canadian Pacific," said Mr. A. Gordon Burns, when interviewed by "The Varsity".

"It is intended to be a tour of strictly university people, open to both men and women, and will not include any outsiders whatsoever. An experienced leader will have charge of the tour and there will be in addition, a chaperone, Mrs. A. Gordon Burns of Toronto, appointed by the National Federation of Canadian University Students. Whenever possible the members of the tour will be met by students of the centres through which they are passing, and an opportunity will thus be afforded of coming into contact with phases of European life not within reach of the ordinary traveller.

"The itinerary has been arranged to make a special appeal to students, and the travelling accommodation on both sea and land has been planned with this motive in view. A very reasonable sum will cover the expenses, and Scotland, England, Holland, Belgium and France will comprise the itinerary. The ocean passage will be made on the Canadian Pacific steamships, leaving Montreal on the "Minnedosa", Saturday, June 21st, and returning to Quebec about August 3rd, on the "Empress of France". No effort has been spared in order to make the tour as complete and attractive as possible and the accommodation and itinerary have not been sacrificed in any way because of the low rate."

HART HOUSE LIBRARY BUYS NEW VOLUMES

Majority of Missing Books Have Been Returned to the Shelves

SOME STILL MISSING

A number of new books are now on the shelves of Hart House library, and many books that were removed from the shelves last spring by irresponsible students have been returned, according to B. D. Beamish, Curator of Hart House library.

There are about twenty-two books still missing. These are mostly fiction of the more readable type. An interesting fact which Mr. Beamish pointed out was that one of this number was a dictionary which some aspiring student has appropriated.

Twelve books ordered before Christmas are now on the new book shelf.

At the last meeting of the Library Committee, about twenty-five new books were ordered and although Mr. Beamish did not give the titles of any of them, he stated that they were mostly all non-fiction.

Counting the number of books that were returned last October, the list of restored books totals approximately twenty-five. The greater part of these are text books, which would be useful around examination time.

Varsity Just Misses Tying Score in Last Moments of the Game

FAST AND FURIOUS HOCKEY

Paul Played Clever Game for Blue and White at Defense

Kingston, Jan. 13.—In a hockey battle that was exciting and hectic all the way, Queen's banded University of Toronto their first defeat in the O.H.A. senior race to-night when they won by 1 to 0, scoring the only goal of the game after 52 minutes of play. Brilliant goaltending by Art Quinn, which at times bordered on the spectacular, thwarted the attempts of the visiting team to tie the count in the last seven minutes when they set up a terrific pace and shoved five men on to the attacking line in a furious but vain attempt to find the net.

The Blue and White were minus one of their stars, Harley, and while they missed him, Marshall, who took his place, turned in a fine performance. But the visitors found that all the speed they could muster was matched by the Tricolour, while the close and hard-checking of the locals played havoc with the U. of T. attempts at combination. With Reid playing an improved game on the wing, and the rest of the Tricolour players battling for all they were worth, being backed by the wonderful work in the net of Quinn, the locals fought on even terms until the third period was well under way. Reid and Lee then started from their own blue line and, after a series of short passes, Lee wormed his way through the defense and then skated in fast while Ames made a desperate attempt to stop him. Lee crashed the puck over the prone body of the goaler for the counter that won the game.

After that goal "Red" Porter's men tried everything at their command, and had five men on the forward line. Queen's, in the last three minutes were shooting the puck up the ice and the opposing players were racing in madly only to be balked by Quinn, though there was an element of luck which stopped them from tying the score when Quinn stopped Whitehead's shot, and the puck lay on the Queen's goal line with no one near to shove it in and Quinn lying on the ice three feet away. After that U. of T.'s shots were all taken care of, and just as the game ended Lawlor broke away and scored, but the counter was called back for offside, simultaneously with the end of the game.

The locals richly deserved their

BOOK TOWER FOR LIBRARY

New Addition Will Facilitate Book Handling Says
Librarian

A book tower will be added to the present university library building. "Plans are now being prepared by the superintendent's office for the new wing," said W. S. Wallace, the university librarian in a press interview. "We hope to use the principle of the book tower as in the New York University library which, when completed, will be one of the finest on the continent."

The new library addition will be on the sky-scraper principle, applied to library architecture. "Books can be handled much faster vertically," explained Prof. Wallace. "The book tower dominating the library will leave the ground floor free for reading rooms, work rooms and offices."

DAEDALUS, OR, WHITHER INDUSTRY.

Five years ago two major industries were in blissful ignorance of the future, and were satisfied that the best possible in their branch of production had been achieved. But, at that very time, scientists in the laboratories of a telephone company were working on the problem of the reproduction of the entire range of sound by artificial means. They succeeded, and the phonograph, and subsequently, the moving picture industries, were revolutionized. Similarly, at one time, paint manufacturers considered that the future held no risks, when the head of the research department of one of the large motor industries called them together. "We want a paint that will dry instantly," he said. "It can't be done," replied the manufacturers, "and we ought to know; we've been in the paint business all our lives." The research head dismissed them; "I don't want to know what I can't do," he said, "I want to know what I can do!" He proceeded to set some of his bright young college graduates on the problem, and before long they had discovered a celluloid product that dried so rapidly that their job became a matter of slowing up the hardening. And, as we know, the methods and materials of painting have changed considerably in the past few years.

Competition in industry, between rivals in one country, and between the combined industries of competitive nations, is becoming more and more a question of turning out a better product, and not so much one of erecting trade and tariff barriers. To succeed, one must be prepared to sell a better, a newer, and a more attractive product. And to do so, the manufacturer must go to the scientist, the university man, who can delve into the realms of mechanics and test-tubes, and can find therein something that has not been found before.

Much is being done in Canada, and in this university, to promote the interests of industrial research. The Research Foundation, recently opened with a considerable shout, partially modelled after the U.S. Bureau of Standards, and partially after the Mellon Institute of Research, at Pittsburgh, should do a great deal for Canadian industries. And according to a bulletin issued last summer, there were 315 major problems in research, not all of them industrial, under investigation last year at this university, which has already acquired an enviable reputation for such activity.

These are encouraging omens. The future of this country undoubtedly rests with our industries, and the success of industries, in this day and age, is founded upon research. The workers all come from universities. What university is better equipped than our own to supply the need for smart young men who have not yet learned what cannot be done, but only know that there is much to be done and propose to do it?

However, it is doubtful if Canadian manufacturers fully realize the possibilities of scientific research. When they discover themselves outsold by a foreign competitor, they are like as not to screech for a higher tariff, the protective barrier for weakling industries, rather than employ a group of research workers to better their product. One finds at American universities, special suites of offices set aside for the use of the employment officers of large industries, who, on special days, interview the graduating classes in certain faculties. The bulletin boards of college papers in such institutions bear notices, almost every day, announcing the arrival of some representative looking for men. We hope some day, to publish some such information in our own columns.

Does a gold mine wish a cheaper method of refining ore? Does a cheese manufacturer desire a more potent culture? Does a druggist wish a purer product? The University of Toronto can supply men who will solve the problem.

Art and Drama

"Whosit"

"Whosit", the undergraduate musical comedy which opened last night at Hart House Theatre, is all Howard Lindsay. Mr. Lindsay is everywhere—and nearly everything—and the audience dotes on him.

For the first night of an amateur production, last night's performance was notably suave. The chorus did some bad things, but I suppose choruses will on their first nights. Canadian co-eds in process of being glorified have reason to feel apprehensive. But, 'twill pass—'twill pass.

There are two or three good tunes. Really good. And they don't sound like echoes from the last ten seasons. We'll be hearing them places. Mr. Lindsay would have done us a favour by having the names of them inscribed somewhere on the programme. (And while we're at it . . . he should see about the spotlight. It not only flickers, but it does things to the make-up.)

There is no doubt as to who is the star of the show. Not content with having written the music, the lyrics, and the book, Mr. Lindsay has romped off with the acting honours. I'm not sure that he doesn't sneak off with the singing honours too—although Yvonne Miller does demonstrate her known ability to put a song across; and there is a good quartette at the beginning of the second act.

The story concerns itself, but never very strenuously, with the successful attempt of Prince Whosit to recover the throne of Whositania. The idea is one of sophisticated playfulness, an idea which shows itself to much better advantage in the lyrics.

See this show. It's going to be discussed at teas and dinner-parties. And see if you don't think Mr. Lindsay merits the plaudits he will get.

—A. E. F. A.

ALL QUIET ON THE FERNET FRONT (Conclusion)

Do you remember the end of the last chapter where I stood at the edge of the ravine mowing down the enemy with my frozen union suit? Well, I am still there. Savagely wielding this terrible weapon I deal death and destruction to all who come within its fire sweep. But I am outnumbered; I weary under the strain and my underwear begins to melt in the heat of the conflict.

C—C

Then with a renewed vigour born of desperation I utter a last savage and unlady-like yell, turn and push myself over the bank and toboggan down the ravine on my stiffened underwear. How the cool wind rushing by my temples soothes my aching head! I guide my leaping steed at an ever-increasing pace past the rotting stumps and dead bodies with a song of relief and triumph. I think of Dinkelsplink as I ride.

C—C

I gather myself up at the bottom and laugh at baffled pursuers. Their answer is to peevishly fire some shots through my thigh. I laugh a deep, hoarse laugh, and go on; it might have been worse. I look at my mutilated union suit that Dinkelsplink made for me with such loving care. It is in ribbons, my laughter becomes choked with sobs. Ah, Love! Shall we ever meet again? Shall we ever walk once more through her father's potato fields and cherish the potato bugs together?

C—C

It cannot last, this dreadful carnage. They say that it will soon be over and we shall get peace. The enemy have run out of bayonets and we have run out of pants. I don't get the con-

With the Theatres

UPTOWN

"Sunny Side Up" is such a good title for a show that it seems rather too bad to have wasted it on the Gaynor-Farrell opus which the Uptown—God and the Great Unpolluted alone know why—is holding over for a second week. Still, hundreds of undergrads will doubtless enthuse over it. That's what makes the lot of a reviewer a hard one. Anyway, there is a good shot of an east side yegg learning to laugh. —A.E.F.A.

SHEA'S

"The Love Doctor" is the phonograph version of "The Boomerang". It's a sweet old play which you probably don't remember. You were too young at the time. So was I. But the film, though slight, is smooth and diverting. The cast, headed by Richard Dix and June Collyer, know what it's about and does things as they ought to be done. You won't mind the vaudeville, unless you're one of those fastidious people. —A.E.F.A.

VARSITY DEFEATED BY QUEEN'S IN FAST GAME AT KINGSTON

SCHOOL SENIORS WIN FIRST GAME

Opening of Sifton Cup Series Shows Schools as Possible Champions

VICTORIA OUTCLASSED

S.P.S. seniors defeated Victoria seniors 24 to 9 in the opening game of the interfaculty basketball schedule at Hart House yesterday for the Sifton Cup. School outclassed Vic even though playing without the services of Earl Davey, the Varsity senior star. Even at this early date it is not too premature to predict that the team that ousts S.P.S. will be right in the running for the basketball honours. They have a strong team of experienced basketballers.

The score at half time was 16 to 1 for the ultimate winners and School commenced the second frame with their substitutes. Vic found the going more to their liking, but could not overcome the big lead. Hutcheon stood out for the winners, notching 14 of his team's 24 points. He was ably assisted on the forward line by Mercer, Tilton, Vaughan and Perkins were the best for the Scarlet and Gold.

Senior S.P.S.—Forwards, Hutcheon (14), Mercer; centre, Pasternak (1); defence, Ireland, White (5); subs, Whitton, Helper, Lake, Sherman, (1), Wilson (2).

Senior Vic—Forwards, Bowles (1), Vaughan (2); centre, Devitt; defence, Perkins, Searle; subs, Barry, Berry, Lautenslager (2), Cowie, Tilton (4).

Referee—A. C. Cochrane.

VARSITY HOCKEYISTS FACE PARKDALE TEAM

Stiff Opposition Looked for From Canoe Club Aggregation

VARSITY DEFENSE STRONG

The "T" junior hockeyists face an acid test to-night when they tackle the hard-bumping Parkdale crew at the downtown arena. In the last meeting between these teams the locals emerged on the long end of the score after a struggle in which twenty-six penalties were handed out, and they expect to repeat their win to-night. However, it will be far from a walk-away as P.C.C. are a close-checking outfit who believe in going after the man rather than the puck.

Varsity needs this game to hold their place at the top of the heap, although they are practically certain of a play-off berth. So far this season the forwards have not done much in the scoring line, and in the last two games have failed to register a goal. This state of affairs will have to be remedied if the team expects to get very far. However, the front-line men are out to lose the jinx to-night and if they do succeed in shaking themselves out of the slump the game should go as another "T" victory.

Meanwhile the Levinsky-Smillie-Hunnisset combination behind the blue line will look after the P.C.C. attackers, handing out bump for bump. The greenshirts will find it hard to get past this trio. They have been the mainstays of the team all season. In addition the local "Big Train" and his partner on the defense have been doing most of the sharpshooting to date, and will probably notch a few more to-night.

The regular Varsity lineup will start in the game, which will be the first in the usual popular Big Four double-header, starting at 7.30.

VICTORIA BEATS TRINITY IN OPENING BALL GAME

Pitchers Show Good Form; King and Summerhayes Best at Bat

In a snappy four inning struggle Victoria defeated Trinity in baseball yesterday afternoon at Hart House by a score of 12-5.

It was a real pitchers' battle, with Garton of Vic a little the superior of Stewart. For the first two innings the score remained a tie at 4-4. Then Vic broke loose, running up six runs before Trinity could stop the rampage. This proved fatal to Trinity. In the third they failed to score.

In the fourth Vic added two and Trinity one. The two pitchers were the outstanding players, with King of Vic and Summerhayes of Trinity handling the bats to the best advantage. Line-ups:

Victoria—C. King, J. Hart, J. Clarke, G. Beavers, A. Brant, B. Ostrander, J. Garton, J. Arnp, J. Coles. Trinity—Summerhayes, Nichols, Stewart, Hovey, Sommers, Little, O'Flynn, Perrin, Bell.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Varsity juniors will have their hands full to-night when they take on Parkdale Canoe Club in a game for the Big Four leadership. The juniors have been going poorly of late and their scoring punch has been conspicuous by its absence. To-night's game may go a long way toward deciding which team will finish first and will greatly aid in securing a place in the group play-off.

* * *

Varsity intermediates are speeding along with two victories in a pair of starts. The Blue seconds have defeated McMaster and Markham, but have yet to meet Bradford, who are tied with Varsity in the group standing. The intermediates have not been anything to get excited about for some time, and this year's team is a marked improvement. The intermediates are also entered in the Intermediate Intercollegiate League and should win the title again this year.

* * *

The Boxing, Wrestling and Fencing Club initiated its tri-weekly practice bouts yesterday. In the wrestling Mervynne (174) took on Cameron and then Campbell in sessions of five minutes each. Walker and Willis at 147 pounds, put on a good bout featured by the showing of Willis, who gave the veteran Walker plenty of opposition. In the boxing, Bain and Wilton at 160 pounds, went through several fast rounds. Honours were about even with both men a little short on condition. Walsh, Wall and Steele showed up well in bouts with Ted Buxton, the pro.

* * *

The New York Athletic Club's International Waterpolo team will play Varsity here on Friday evening. Keeping in mind the fact that a considerable number were unable to gain admittance to the Penn A.C.-Varsity game at Hart House last month, it would be advisable to get tickets early. Waterpolo is going over big this year, and next season prospects are that it will be even better.

* * *

Next year's league will likely include in addition to Varsity, Penn A.C., New York A.C., and M.A.A.A., the following clubs which have applied for admission: Pittsburgh A.C., New York Central Y, Cleveland A.C., Detroit Yacht Club and the well-known Illinois A.C. of Chicago.

* * *

Every girl who wishes to try for a place on the intercollegiate basketball team should be out at every practice. There is enough good material around college this year that there will be no place on the team for those who can find time to attend only an occasional practice, and that goes for everyone.

* * *

It is very discouraging for a coach to find only a turnout of eight at her first practice, besides which it shows either a strange lack of enthusiasm or a remarkable degree of over-confidence.

* * *

Norma Bateman, brilliant Victoria athlete, is deserting intercollegiate hockey. This is good news for the cagettes, but she will leave a gap on the hockey team which will not be easily filled. Miss Bateman is a star defence player and even though there are lots of good guards, it is going to be mighty hard to keep her from making a regular position.

* * *

Everyone regrets that Bea Symons, St. Hilda's star forward, is not going to play basketball this year. She was good last year and his improved this year if anything.

CO-ED JOTTINGS

The eight feminine basketball enthusiasts who turned out to the first basketball practice last night were put through a stiff workout by Coach Marion Forward.

Owing to the small turnout there was no scrimmaging and the workout was largely conditioning.

Eleanor Sedgewick was the only member of last year's team to appear. Frances Dale, Loretto McGarry, Isabel Wright, Margot Thompson, Sally Ballard, Jean Hall and Alice Grant completed the squad.

The next practice will be Thursday, Feb. 16, at U.T.S. from 6-7.

The first Newman Club tea-dance of the new year was held Saturday afternoon. The girls of Loretto College were in charge and Catharine Smyth, representing the executive of Newman Club, received.

Tues, Feb. 11—St. Mike's vs. O.C.E.
Fri, Feb. 21—Jr. S.P.S. vs. St. Mike's
Thurs, Mar. 6—O.C.E. vs. Jr. S.P.S.

In evening clothes really correct style can be attained only by unerring good taste. What not to do is quite as important as what should be done.

Long experience has taught Pascoes what models to select and what not to select. As a result, a gentleman can wear Pascoes evening clothes with distinction—anywhere.

Your Future

WHATEVER your plans for the years ahead, you will find success surprisingly dependent on Thrift.

For Thrift means more than saving money—it is tied to, embraces in fact, and enforces many of the other virtues and essentials to success.

ALL STUDENT TOUR

planned by
THE NATIONAL FEDERATION OF CANADIAN UNIVERSITY
STUDENTS

Extensive—including five countries-- yet inexpensive

An exceptional opportunity for Canadian university students to make a tour of Scotland, England, Holland, Belgium and France at a very reasonable cost will be offered next summer through the efforts of the National Federation of Canadian University Students. The ocean passages will be made on the Canadian Pacific Steamships, leaving Montreal on the "Minnedosa", Saturday, June 21st, and returning to Quebec about August 3rd on the "Empress of France".

The National Federation of Canadian University Students has planned this Tour without any idea of profit or surplus, and as a result, the price quoted of $424.25 has been based on an absolute minimum of necessary overhead including only such expenses as publicity and travelling expenses of a leader and chaperone. No effort has, however, been spared in order to make the Tour as complete and attractive as possible and the accommodation and itinerary has not been sacrificed in any way because of the low rate.

It is intended that it will be a Tour of strictly university people, open to both men and women, and as such will have a distinct personality and character found in no other Tour. Whenever possible the members of the Tour will be met by students of the centres through which they are passing, and an opportunity will thus be afforded of coming into contact with phases of European life not within reach of the ordinary traveller.

An experienced leader will have charge of the Tour and there will be in addition, a chaperone, Mrs. A. Gordon Burns of Toronto, appointed by the National Federation of Canadian University Students.

For some considerable time there has been a definite feeling among undergraduates that there should be organized a Tour which would be definitely a Students' Tour and would not have included in its members any outsiders. With this in view the National Federation of Canadian University Students were urged to take up the idea which has finally become crystallized in the present Tour.

All indications point to the fact that the Tour will be a complete success, as inquiries are coming in from everywhere in the Dominion. As choice of berths will be allotted in order of receipt of applications, it is suggested that immediate action should be taken.

All applications must be made before April 30th, 1930, and should be sent to either the local N.F.C.U.S. or Council office of each university, or direct to A. Gordon Burns, B.A., Travel Secretary, Hart House, University of Toronto. (adv.)

Student Verse

TO A LOVER OF OMAR KHAYYAM

'Tis vain to hope to trace once more the trail
Of foam-flecked green stretched far behind the stern
Of this lone ship, swept on before the gale
That roars resistlessly; and none discerns
The dim far shore of Being whence we came
Or any island haven 'mid the waste
Of dark gray waves, where driven snow and rain
Drop down into their self-oblivious place.
But surely o'er the sky's inverted bowl
And in the wind that blows us o'er the sea
There reigns the power and purpose of the Whole,
The Love for each that evermore shall be;
And old Khayyam knew but this cloud-wrapped dawn
Of still-increasing life where love lives on.

They want us to fight and yet we have no good food. Soldiers must eat. They give the English bully beef and vegetable compounds. How can we stand against them on a diet of rat consomme and horse a la king?

C—C

Day by day the rats become bolder and more vicious. The regimental band is out of commission because there are nests of them in the drum and sousaphone. Even as I march there are three of them asleep in my knapsack. They have eaten my dinner.

C—C

Soon they will die of indigestion and it will be my turn. Ugh, and likewise phooey!

They say that there will be an armistice and that it will come soon. I shall see Dinkelsplink again! We shall be married and I shall get her father's money. Ah, it is a beautiful thought! She will knit some more union suits, some big ones and some little ones, that is if she attends to her knitting.

C—C

I can see the golden sunsets over the meadows. I can hear the sweet song of the schnitzenstunzter, and smell the fragrant breath of the stables in springtime. All shall be happiness, peace and love.

C—C

They found me dead on the fifteenth of October. I was lying downward in the mud. When they rolled me over they saw on my face an expression of calmness and peace. ### SUBJECT OF DEBATE IMPERIAL QUESTION PROMISES FIREWORKS

Imperialists and Nationalists to Stage Forensic Contest at Hart House

EMINENT MEN INVITED

Motion Will Be Moved By Former Editor of
"The Varsity"

A topic of highly controversial nature, and one that has been much in the editorial spotlight in recent days, promises to supply fireworks of a brilliant nature at the approaching Hart House debate. Guest speakers of national prominence as well as leading university speakers will debate the subject of Canadian nationalism. The wording of the question has been officially announced as follows: "That this house would view with pleasure the termination of existing imperial ties between Canada and the United Kingdom."

Foremost among the outside men who have accepted the invitation of the Debates Committee to take part, is the name of John S. Ewart, K.C., of Ottawa, leading Canadian authority on constitutional questions, historian, and leader of Canadian nationalism thought, who will support the motion. Another guest will be the Rev. F. O. Ward-Whare, chaplain of the Orange Order, and noted imperialist, who will appear on the opposite side of the house. A third honorary visitor will be a former speaker of the Cambridge Union.

It is expected that the motion will be moved by Mr. N. J. DeWitt, former editor of "The Varsity", and that the first speaker for the opposition will be Mr. B. D. Beamish of University College. Mr. Earl Lautenslager, of Victoria College, will speak third, and Mr. Harry Elliott of University College, fourth.

Undergraduates are particularly urged to speak from the floor of the house. Those wishing to do so will assist the work of the Debates Committee if they will hand their names in at the Warden's Office in Hart House before five o'clock of the day of the debate. Any member of the house, however, is at liberty to speak.

The debate will take place in the Debates Room of Hart House, Wednesday evening, January 26th, at eight o'clock.

U. OF T. MONTHLY PLANS POLICY OF BETTERMENT

Hope to Make Magazine Appeal to Undergraduates as well as Alumni

"We hope to make the 'University of Toronto Monthly' a magazine of greater interest among general readers, including the students about the campus," said Mr. Kenneth B. Conn, the editor. This magazine is published by the Alumni Federation of Toronto, primarily for graduates, but it has been felt that undergraduates should be interested in it also.

Carrying out this policy, a number of members of the faculty were asked to contribute to a literary supplement. The January issue contains articles on varied topics by Professor S. A. B. Mercer, Professor G. E. Jackson, Professor Emeritus W. S. Milner, Professor R. S. Knox and Professor H. A. Innis.

"If this new venture is successful," Mr. Conn pointed out, "the literary supplement will be included in every second issue. The next one will appear in March."

LEADER NAMED FOR TEAM TO DEBATE AT TORONTO

N.F.C.U.S. Select H. Faubert
Leader of Team Here
January 23rd

The National Federation of Canadian University Students have named Henri Faubert, a senior med at the University of Montreal as leader of the team which will debate at Toronto January 23rd against the resolution, "Resolved that this house deprecates the tyranny of convention". He will be supported by John T. Rennie, B.A., of Bishop's College.

Opposing the resolution will be T. V. Kennedy of St. Michael's College, and J. C. Clough of Trinity, both of whom have had considerable debating experience at Hart House.

The leader of the visiting team debated against the western universities' team which was on tour last season. An active member of the University of Montreal musical association, he has earned his way playing the violin with a Montreal orchestra.

John Rennie graduated in '29 from Bishop's College. In addition to debating against the western team last year, he represented his college against Loyola College, the University of Ottawa and the Maritime team in 1928.

URGES AGGRESSION IN BATTLE WITH SIN

Grand-daughter of Gen. Booth Addresses Members of Christian Union

TOURING CANADA AND U.S.

"We do not look for numbers for numbers' sake alone, but we hope that more and more students will become interested in the work which this group is beginning," said Miss Demarest, a grand-daughter of General Booth, the former leader of the Salvation Army, at the T.I.C.C.U. meeting in Wymilwood yesterday afternoon.

Choosing as her subject "Christian life as a Holy Warfare", the speaker warned the group of the danger of underestimating the forms of evil which are present in the world. Personal freedom, good leadership, discipline, willingness to persevere, and an absolute faith in the cause, were the essentials required to overcome these forms, she said.

"We cannot have a divided heart, all other things must take the place in our lives second to that we give to the advancement of the word of God," she stated. "The trouble with most Christians is that they are always on the defensive; they never aggress on the enemy's territory." The power of prayer as a means of communication with God was strongly stressed.

Mrs. Demarest, who is making an evangelistic tour of Canada and the United States, mentioned several interesting experiences she had had in the past at her meetings. At the conclusion of the address the president thanked Mrs. Demarest on behalf of the members present, for a very interesting talk.

PRESS CLUB

J. F. B. Livesay, general manager of the Canadian Press, will be the guest of the University Press Club at their next luncheon on Thursday at 1 o'clock in the north common room of Hart House. Mr. Livesay will be prepared to answer questions and will tell something about the early days of the Canadian Press.

FACULTY LACKS MORAL SUPPORT ACADEMIC FREEDOM NOT GUARDED BY UNIVERSITY, CLAIMS IRWIN

Professor of Oriental Languages Issues Signed Statement To "The Varsity," Deploing Ruinous Caution of Institution

SAYS UNIVERSITY MILDEWED WITH DISCRETION

The following statement was given to "The Varsity" by W. A. Irwin, M.A., D.B., Ph.D., associate professor of Oriental Languages, when approached concerning an interview published by "The Evening Telegram" in reference to lack of moral support of the professors. For the sake of the best interests of the university we are pleased to publish this statement verbatim.

The editor has asked me to explain a statement of mine in a recently published interview in a down-town paper to the effect that the university is failing in moral support of the staff. The campus is, beyond question, the proper place for discussion of such intimately university concerns, and it seems expedient that my exposition should appear over my own name, rather than the more usual route of another interview.

I must first stress this, that nothing which I say is to be interpreted as meaning that I am leaving the staff in indignation over treatment received. My relations with the staff and with the executive officers with whom I have had personal contact have been of a cordial character such as I should be sorry to see impaired. Indeed, properly understood, my action now—with its entailed risk of considerable unpleasantness for myself—should be recognized as proof of my loyalty and interest. It would be much the more comfortable course to say nothing: the attitude of the "sore-head" would probably be, Let the whole place go hang; Thank Heaven I'm through with that crowd!

A university exists solely for the discovery and dissemination of truth. The function of its executive organization then is nothing else than to provide and guard jealously conditions in which their purpose may be served; it must not alone find proper quarters in which the work may be done, it must as well, facilitate their enterprise by adequate economic provision, and, still more vital, it must guard jealously this quest and teaching of truth from interference by outside party or influence of whatever sort whose pet interests may be endangered by fearless teaching. Briefly, the function of the executive is to stand as a wall between the staff and the public and ensure academic freedom. Now, this responsibility is always difficult, and in a state institution, is of peculiar delicacy; for the public as a whole, ignorant of the supremacy and absolute character of truth, is prone to argue that he who pays the piper may call the tune, or more specifically, why should the tax-payers' money be spent in promulgation of views which the tax-payer deprecates? Difficult as it is, however, this responsibility must be efficiently discharged or the university slips back to the status of a third-rate institution of ex-parte propaganda.

W. A. Irwin, M.A., D.B., Ph.D.

Of the department of Oriental Languages, whose statement appears in "The Varsity" concerning lack of moral support of the faculty.

MAOAME DE KRESZ ASSISTS QUARTETTE IN CONCERT

A sympathetic reception was accorded to the Conservatory String Quartet in the Concert Hall of the Toronto Conservatory of Music last night. Norah Drewett de Kresz, a pianist of wide reputation through her appearance with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra and other engagements, was the assisting artist.

"The Pixy Ring", a descriptive suite by Waldo Warner, was much applauded. It afforded an interesting contrast with the opening number of Schumann's Quartet in A minor, which exemplifies Schumann's original treatment of this form.

Norah Drewett de Kresz joined in the Quartet for piano and strings by Faure. This concluded the third concert of the series. Student tickets are available for the remaining concerts, of which the next will be on February 11th.

Scholarships
Certificates of attendance in connection with the payment of the second instalment of University of Toronto Scholarships (Matriculation and Faculty of Arts, not including College Scholarships) may be obtained at the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall.

ADVERTISING PAYS GO GET 'ER STUDENT

"Harold" Keeps Quiet When
Pried for Information Regarding Purpose of Ad

WANTED TO ENJOY A DATE

When interviewed by "The Varsity" to-day "Harold" declined to give any reason for his inserting his advertisement in yesterday's issue.

The advertisement which ran as follows:

caused much discussion on the campus. At time of press, 12 "serious" replies had been received by the fortunate youth. Harold declined to divulge any further information beyond the fact that he was serious in the matter and expected all replies to be such.

"What was your purpose in advertising," Harold was asked.

"Well," he answered, "I really wanted to enjoy a date before I leave college and advertising seemed the only way to meet a girl that I would enjoy being with."

"Have you received any pictures as you requested?"

"I have nothing for publication," ended Harold as he finished stuffing his pockets with "special delivery" mail and whistling a tune happily sauntered out of the office.

ft certainly pays to advertise.

UNIVERSITY HEAD SITS ON COMMISSION

Sir Robert Falconer One of Five Deciding Disputes Between U.S. and Paraguay

U.S. ASKS HIM TO SERVE

Ottawa, Ont. — Disputes between Paraguay and the United States from now on will depend for their settlement upon an international commission, one member of which is Sir Robert Falconer, according to an announcement made yesterday at the United States legation. The international commission is set up under the treaty for the advance of peace which was signed by the United States and Paraguay in 1914.

The commission is comprised of five members, one from each of the two countries, one member from a third country chosen by both governments, and a fifth selected by agreement between the two countries.

Sir Robert Falconer is one of a number of Canadians who have been honored by the United States in being asked to serve on similar commissions between the United States and other countries. Chief Justice F. A. Anglin, Hon. Senator Raoul Dandurand and John W. Dafoe of Winnipeg, are among those who have served on such bodies.

HOLD LIVELY DEBATE ON VEXED QUESTIONS AT U.C. LIT. MEETING

Motions to Provide Increase in Fee Receives First Reading

T. A. REED GIVES LECTURE

Gives Outline of Historical Development of University

University College Literary and Athletic Society last night held its most successful and most stormy session of the year, when the first reading was given a motion amending the constitution to provide an increase of one dollar in the compulsory fee of the society.

The motion was moved by N. H. Shaw and provided for an increase from two to three dollars in the yearly fee of the society. The additional dollar so collected then to be turned over to the treasurers of the various years in lieu of the year fees. It was pointed out by the supporters of the motion that this compulsory fee of one dollar would eliminate the voluntary year card fee of two dollars, and insure support for various year functions.

Opposers of the motion pointed out in quite an enthusiastic manner, that this process would shift the burden from the minority who did want and did attend year functions, to the majority who seemingly, at any rate, had no interest in these functions.

Good-natured bantering was mixed with fiery oratory when the house was thrown into committee after prolonged debate. The motion was put to vote and carried 54-6, some members not voting.

Another motion abolishing the office of S.A.C. Representative and imposing his duties on the year president, was also adopted.

The meeting was called to order with the President, A. J. Stringer in the chair, in the absence because of illness, of the Honorary President, G. O. Smith.

After the reading of the minutes by the secretary, D. B. Murray, the motion was moved by T. S. Brownlee, seconded by L. M. Gelber that: "This society recommend to the S.A.C. that an additional fee of $1.00 per year be levied for subscription to the University of Toronto Monthly. A lively discussion followed pro and con. Herb Bell, president of the fourth year, thought that the money might better be devoted toward bettering the status of "The Varsity", a purely undergraduate undertaking, rather than in supporting the Monthly, an Alumni project.

The motion when put to vote, was decisively defeated.

BOARD ANNOUNCES STAFF APPOINTMENTS

The following appointments to the staff of the University of Toronto for the rest of the session, 1929-30, are announced by the Board of Governors.

C. K. Chalker, demonstrator, was appointed in the mechanics of matter in the Department of Civil Engineering; Dr. H. Irvine, Dr. S. M. Kennedy and Dr. R. S. McLean were made faculty members in the Faculty of Dentistry. Dr. Cecil Rae was made junior demonstrator in the Department of Oto-Laryngology; Miss Helen Boyd was appointed assistant in the Laboratory of Bacteriology. D. A. Dunning was made research assistant in Anatomy.

FACULTY MUST BE SUPPORTED

We publish on the front page of "The Varsity" to-day a statement by Dr. W. A. Irwin which reveals a shocking state of affairs at the largest university in the Dominion. Every one of the statements made by the professor of Oriental Languages is, without a doubt true, and calls for an immediate answer from the governing body of the university. Time for an investigation into the seeming political control of the university and the lack of support of some of our best men in all fields of thought has come.

It is almost incredible that conditions such as exist should be present in a university with the standing of Toronto. A university never was meant to be an institution that turns out standardized products, and as long as the professorial staff is lacking the support of an all-powerful Board of Governors, the provincial university might as well be a rolling-mill that turns out smug, self-satisfied money-grabbers.

Whenever a professor makes any statements that some voters in the province object to, there is an immediate shout of "quiet, quiet". How can a member of the faculty be the leader of the students and instil in them some capacity for thinking for themselves if they be hindered by lack of support when most necessary?

There are many cases that we can quote where professors have been put in a precarious position by insufficient backing by university authorities. At present a professor is in a worse position than a farm hand or factory worker. Any factory employee is free in his spare hours to think and speak as he likes so long as he keeps within the law. But a professor seems to have no right to speak his thoughts, even though they may be backed by sound scholarship. Lack of adequate support, which means lack of sufficient protection, amounts almost to suppression; for the professor, if protection and support are taken from him, is unable to stand against what may often be a hostile public.

We do not blame the professors for keeping quiet when they find that they have not the required support, for if they, moved by earnest and solid arguments, are answered only by abuse, and lack adequate backing, it may mean uncomfortable surroundings and consequent relinquishing of their posts. A lost post means, bluntly, no bread and butter. Then in most cases the member of the faculty has a family for whom he must provide.

It is only fair that the Board of Governors give the utmost support to their staff. If the man is not well grounded enough, he should not be on the staff and if he is on the staff he should be backed to the limit. A favourable governing body at the university will mean complete freedom for the scholar, and complete freedom for him means a decent opportunity of contributing something of real value to his students.

A university should be the strongest force in the forming of the opinion of the nation. Any university that must follow the public opinion instead of leading it, has no right to that name. We cannot imagine any of the great English universities forcing their professors to put a damper on their expression, which means curtailing their scholarship, nor can we think of that happening in any of the better universities across the line.

An investigation into what looks like abuse of the rights of the teaching staff that have been theirs from time immemorial, must be instituted, and the quicker the better. To ignore the facts means their confirmation, and an open investigation and reform of what appear to be serious shortcomings, is the only thing that will save some of the best scholars for the university.

Reform of existing conditions must come at once; waiting is harmful. By all means take away the bogey of an all-powerful board which is not academic in its make-up and therefore, with a few exceptions, unqualified to have complete control of an institution that has stood for over a century for the principles of truth and scholarship.

Art and Drama

Sketch Room

The work of G. A. Reid which is now, along with that of Mrs. Reid, on exhibition in the Sketch Room, should be of great interest to all lovers of art. Mr. Reid, who has only recently resigned from the principalship of the Ontario College of Art, after many years of office, has been associated with a number of Canadian painters who have achieved varying successes in their work, and from the point of view of comparison it will be interesting to observe the extent to which their art was influenced by him.

We must consider, of course, that Mr. Reid is a pioneer in the field of Canadian art, who has been painting consistently and with unchanging style for years, entirely uninfluenced by the modern trend which strives for self-expression rather than for the expression of nature. Without a shadow of doubt, however, those artists who received any part of their training in the environment of the O.C.A., must have had a little difficulty before they eventually succeeded in the expression of their individuality.

The delightful landscapes peculiarly Canadian with their vistas of tapering spruce and pines, graceful beech and ash trees, have an air of reality characteristic of the old school. He endeavoured with success to produce soft, harmonious tonal effects and in almost all his work the decorative element is quite prominent.

In his autumn scenes tonal effect is particularly pleasing; a close association and intermingling of the primaries conveys an impression of the season in all its splendour of harmony and colour. In one very interesting landscape we see tall, majestic spruces outlined against rugged green hills beneath a late afternoon sky, and in the foreground a bit of still water dark with the reflection of trees and shrubbery. Rivers and lakes in all their moods he has depicted with almost painstaking care. Blues, greens and reddish browns make him particularly happy and serve as a means of his best expression.

Mrs. Reid seems to delight in catching the moods of the day and her scenes range from dawn to sunset. "She is essentially a student of nature, and her expression of sky and clouds is particularly interesting. Her rivers and trees, perhaps, lack the vastness attained by Mr. Reid, but her expression of still water with reflection of sun, moon and trees is just as happy. In her colour effects, the absence of glaring tones is quite noticeable. Her scene of a log mill is typically Canadian and evinces a slight departure from the conservatism of Mr. Reid in the introduction of a figure which she does in one other, a beach scene. She shows that beauty can be found in the ramshackle building which serves as a mill, and in the struggle for existence which man must maintain, in the figure of a man steering logs down the river.

Music Committee Writes

The Editor,
"The Varsity".

Dear Sir:—

As the editorial in your issue of 13th January announcing the discontinuance of musical criticism in "The Varsity" shows that there has been unfortunately a misunderstanding as to the position taken by the Music Committee of Hart House, we are writing this letter at the request of the committee in order to make their position clear. It is in fact a very simple one, namely, that when musicians come to Hart House as guests they should be treated with the courtesy that guests would receive in one's own house and that, therefore, no unfavourable comment should be made in any respect with regard to their performances.

This principle was laid down by the committee in a resolution passed as long ago as January, 1924, and subsequent consideration of it from time to time has always led to its confirmation. The point involved seems to this committee to be the honour and dignity of Hart House, and the student body in their capacity of hosts which we feel is further endangered by your unfortunate attack upon some of the musicians of this city in your editorial.

We wish to add that this committee regrets that all musical criticism in the columns of "The Varsity" should cease as we can hardly believe that there is not sufficient scope for this apart from those occasions upon which professional musicians appear as guests of this House and without remuneration.

Yours truly,

H. J. DAVIS,

Chairman.

ALFRED H. SELLERS,

Secretary.

Hart House Music Committee.

Editorial Note—It seems indeed very strange that after an editorial written to help music at the university appears in the student paper that the Music Committee should turn about and take a good slap at the journal that is trying to help them. But what is more important is the fact that the letter states that in 1924 a regulation was laid down concerning no criticism of the musicians at Hart House as a matter of courtesy. Nothing was said to "The Varsity" this year as long as the criticisms were favourable, and when a letter was written (Continued on page 4)

GAME TO DECIDE INTERMEDIATE TIE

Blue and White Team Enter Contest Favourites After Last Week's Showing

FACE HEAVY SCHEDULE

The Blue and White intermediate hockey team invades Bradford to-night and engages the latter in what should be a real tussle. Both teams are tied at the head of the group with two victories and no defeats, and Coach Bill Dewar's boys expect to be resting at the top of the heap after to-night's contest.

After the convincing way in which the seconds downed Markham last week it appears the Blues will be very hard to keep from copping the group title. A number of last year's regulars are back and playing better than ever. Graham, Leak, Statham and Clute are all displaying their best form. Pereyma, the ex-St. Mike's junior, is probably the best of the new men on the squad, scoring three goals in the game against Markham.

The seconds play in the intercollegiate group as well as in the O.H.A. and will be playing very frequently when the intercollegiate race commences on February 6.

S.P.S. FINO NEW BOXMAN FAIL TO DEFEAT SR. MEDS

Browsers, New Pitcher for the Schoolmen, Holds Doctors to 2-1 Score

Dentistry defeated senior School of Practical Science yesterday afternoon in an interfaculty baseball game by the score of 2 to 1. The game was in doubt till the last inning when the Dents scored two runs to win. Singles by Mahaffey, and Holden close on the heels of Conn's two-bagger, netted Dents two runs.

Browsers, the pitcher for S.P.S., was unearched just before the game and proved a decided find, but his team-mates could not manufacture enough runs to win. In fact Browsers was the only one to score for School. Mason for Dents was especially effective, netting eight strike-outs.

Sr. Dents—Campbell, Ruddell, Conn, Armstrong, Mason, Mahaffey, Golden, Baechus, Hough.

Sr. S.P.S.—Edmunds, Lee, Moeser, Reid, Graham, Ward, Watson, Gladman, Browsers.

WOMEN'S HOCKEY TEAM OPEN IN CITY LEAGUE

Varsity women's senior hockey team goes into action to-night at 7 p.m. when it takes on the Aura Lee sextette at Varsity Arena in the opening game of the City League.

The blue and white girls have only had two workouts so far this season, so of course the line-up to-night will only be a temporary choice. Helen Hilliard, Fran Crooks, Adele Statten, three of last year's regulars, will be sure to start. Marina Bateman, last

VARSLITY LOSES LEAD IN O.H.A. GROUP

Juniors Topple from Top Place as Parkdale Notices Out
2-1 Victory

FORWARD LINE WEAK

Varsity juniors dropped out of the top position in the Big Four junior O.H.A. group when they lost to Parkdale, 2 to 1 last night. The game was a close-checking, battling affair, and both teams played some ragged hockey at times. The "T" forward line continued to show a glaring weakness in the scoring end and failed to register a goal.

Play was slow in the first period, with both front lines checking back all the way. After fourteen minutes of hard going, Levinsky, Bennett and Hetherington staged a combination rush. Bennett took a pass, shoved the puck in front of the net and Levinsky got his stick on it and shot it past Carey for his team's first and only counter.

In the second frame the teams continued the hard checking. Parkdale succeeded in getting right in on Hunnisett after five minutes of play, and Hall slammed home a rebound to tie the score. Hall, Hetherington and Cunningham hooked up in a little five battle later and all three were benched. When Hall returned Varsity were at a serious disadvantage. Good work by Brant and Hunnisett averted a score, however. The latter featured with some sensational stops.

Going into the final cant with the score tied, both teams opened up a bit on the attack and gave the goalies several close calls. Scott Bowman and Levinsky continued to stage a bumping duel, with the honours about even. Finally, with but a minute to play Corson took a pass in front of the net and scored the winning tally for P.C.C.

The blues made many desperate attempts to even the score, but the greenshirts presented a packed defence and stood them off till the bell rang.

For Varsity Alex Levinsky was the outstanding player, with Hunnisett next in line. Smillie was always dangerous whenever he took the puck up the ice.

Scott Bowman, the "bad man" of the game, showed up well for P.C.C. Kelson and Carey were also prominent.

Varsity—Goal, Hunnisett; defences, Levinsky and Smillie; centre, Brant; wings, Hetherington and Bennett; alternates, Cunningham, Hendry and McNichol.

Parkdale—Goal, Carey defence, S. Bowman and R. Bowman; centre, Oliver; wings, Corson and Hall; alternates, Gitson, Johnson and Bridgen.

SEVEN SQUADS ENTER WOMEN'S HOCKEY LEAGUE

With Season About to Start Adverse Weather Conditions
Postpone Practices

Seven teams will compete in the Women's Interfaculty Hockey League this season: University College and Victoria College each entering two teams, and three other sextets from St. Hilda's, Household Science and Meds. On account of the unfavourable weather conditions, there have been no practices so far. If possible the games will commence towards the end of next week. The schedule has not been drawn up yet, but is to be announced soon. Since the Arena is not available, the teams have to depend on outside ice.

St. Hilda's won the championship last year, and if they can retain the cup, it will be their third interfaculty title this year as they have already taken the basketball and tennis honors.

year's centre player, will not be playing, as she is giving all her time to basketball this season. The line-up for to-night's game will be: Adele Statten, Frances Crooks, Helen Hilliard, Dorothy James, Dorothy Starr, Joyce Muirhead, Margot Thompson, Bea Symons, Agnes Banstons, Helen McKinley, V. Lunley.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Varsity hockey teams have found the going pretty tough lately. The Blue seniors lost their first O.H.A. game to Queen's in Kingston on Monday night and dropped into second place behind the Tricolour. The latter have yet to face Nationals, who will certainly make matters hot for the present leaders.

Last night Varsity juniors lost their second straight game and also the Big Four group leadership to Parkdale Canoe Club. For the third consecutive game the forward line failed to ring up a tally. In these three games the Blue and White have dented the net but five times, Levinsky getting three and Smillie two.

Varsity intermediates, who are tied with Bradford in their section, play Bradford to-night. If the Blue seconds take the rap it will be the third night in a row that university sextets have dropped from first place to second.

The McGill puckchasers will invade Toronto Saturday to play Varsity in the first of home and home games for the intercollegiate championship. The Montrealers have a stronger outfit than last season when Varsity easily defeated them on the round. But Red Porter's men have also improved and there is every indication that the cup will remain at Varsity where it has been located for the last ten years.

The New York A.C. water polo team which plays Varsity here Friday night will present about the fastest swimming team seen here. Practically every player is a champion in some class. At present New York is leading the International League and will provide the toughest kind of opposition.

The boxers, wrestlers and fencers have a goodly number of men working out each night. The various aspirants for places are showing plenty of pep and some of the "oldtimers" will have some trouble making the team.

Foul shots are going to be one of the most important factors in the girls' basketball games this year. If a player is fouled in the act of shooting for the basket, she gets two free throws from the line the same as in boys' rules, so many a game will be won or lost on ability to shoot fouls.

This factor has not been stressed sufficiently at college and accordingly the girls are notoriously weak in this department of the game and even their best efforts along this line have been nothing to brag about. In a foul shot contest held at Hart House before Christmas the best score made was nine out of twenty tries, which, of course, is not even average, as any good forward should consistently sink three out of five.

HOLD LIVELY DEBATE AT U.C. LIT. MEETING

L. M. Gelber, literary director, announced the next debate at the meeting on Feb. 18th between the first and second year teams. Medals for the individual members of the winning team and the interyear debating trophy will be awarded at this meeting.

At the February meeting the Maurice Cody Memorial Prize of $30, will be awarded to the man showing the most ability in public speaking, and interest in college activities.

A new prize of $25, the gift of Professor G. O. Smith, the conditions to be announced later, will also be awarded.

Walter Arnold, social director, moved the adoption of a report showing an operating surplus, from the U.C. Follies. He also announced the Arts Ball for Friday, January 24th.

Reports of various year presidents followed, after which the chairman called upon T. A. Reed, who delivered an illustrated lecture on "The Last 100 years".

Mr. Reed made it plain that he was addressing the meeting as a fellow student. "For, after all, I am still a student. A student still studying my favourite topic, Toronto. My address must consist of merely rambling notes, with pictures that I have gathered here and there in the following of my hobby. While a great deal of the subject will be taken up with the university, Toronto, or York as it will be called, must necessarily supply the background."

The speaker read a clipping from an old country newspaper dated 1760, wherein was expressed the desire that "in the land of Erie and Ontario an institution will arise that will reclaim this territory from the wilderness." "Prophetic, isn't it?" asked the speaker, "that these people who knew nothing of Erie or Ontario should think of an institution of learning such as we now have?"

"But it was a long time after this that anything in the school line took form. In 1779 we find one Warren Baldwin coming to York. He was the predecessor of that famous family, whose descendants still live among us. Baldwin was a doctor and lawyer. The story is told of him of how in the midst of a legal battle, his services as doctor were required and he asked to have court adjourned until four o'clock, at which time he came back into court, announced to his lordship that the male population of York was increased by one, and then proceeded to plead and eventually win his case. In 1803 this versatile man announced that he would teach classics in his school, the fees for the session being eight guineas. The further stipulation was made that a cord of wood must be brought with each boy who attended the school."

"By 1807 education had so far progressed that York could boast four grammar schools and such distinguished teachers as Rev. Orville Stewart, the first rector of St. James Cathedral. "By 1816, we have in contrast to the little red school house, a blue one. This palatial home of learning was raised at the instigation of Dr. John Strachan, and was painted blue and trimmed in white. It would be interesting to learn if this school, the first institute of education undertaken by the government in any large way, is the cause of our attachment to the Blue and White."

"By 1826 Strachan had induced the king to grant a charter for the founding of an institution of higher learning to be called King's College, and the grant of 500,000 acres of land was made. It was at this time that Sir John Colborne came out as Governor-General, and he had more interest in preparatory schools, with a result that Upper Canada College received the government support."

After this interruption, the site of King's College was decided upon. In the territory between Lot St. (now Queen) and Bloor St., a road now called University Avenue was laid out. Another entrance, from the east, was afforded from Yonge St. by the street we now know as College St. In a position north of the intersection of these streets, and where the Parliament Buildings now stand, King's College was built. The approach to this building was by the doubly wide University Avenue, an avenue lined with trees. "It is a pity that the far-sighted planning of the men of this day could not have been continued in our own day," said Mr. Reed.

"But King's College building was soon taken over by the government, and the college life moved to the old parliament buildings on Front Street. From there it eventually shifted to the campus we now know."

In the course of his remarks, Mr. Reed made mention of a four corners famous in Toronto history. This was due to the buildings of Upper Canada College between Simcoe and John and forming one corner. This was Education. On another was the old parliament buildings—Legislation. Where St. Andrew's Church now stands there stood formerly an old church—Salvation. On the fourth corner stood a saloon—Damnation.

Mr. Reed's other pictures showed the building of University College, the disastrous fire 40 years ago, the development of the campus, the building of Hart House, the building where the Medical Faculty was begun, and where the Literary and Athletic Society first saw the light of day, the old U.C. gym, 1866 and 1911, and other buildings about the campus, past and present.

"In one of the old buildings, Moss Hall, of which there are no pictures," said Mr. Reed, "The Varsity" was born in 1888. A fire-place, (a picture of which I now show you), in Moss Hall, was inscribed with the initials of famous contributors. Among them, "M.H."—Maurice Hutton, "D.W."—Sir David Wilson and many others. A motto over the right pillar is interesting inasmuch as it is indecipherable according to Professor Smith. He thought that "Soe et tuum," if pronounced fast enough, might mean the rallying cry of "The Varsity,"—sock it to 'em."

At the conclusion of Mr. Reed's lecture, the opinion was expressed that the lecture should be re-given for the benefit of the university, inasmuch as the topic and the materials handled were of immense interest to all college students.

FANS ENTHUSIASTIC OVER TRI-WEEKLY B.W.F. BOUTS

The Monday, Wednesday and Friday bouts put on by the B. W. and F. Club are not only being well attended by the fans, but are arousing keen interest amongst the battlers. These events take place in the boxing and wrestling rooms at 5.40 on these nights and are intended to give practice to the newer men who are matched against the more experienced fighters in their class. This is a novelty at the U. of T., but the results show that the experiment is an unqualified success. Last day two senior men were roughly handled and forced to extend themselves to the utmost to avoid defeat when Wilton met Bain in boxing and Max Walker tied with Willis in a wrestling match. To-night a number of fast bouts have been arranged and on Friday two Varsity champs will be seen in action. Today's draw:

WRESTLING
158 lbs.—W. R. Cameron vs. D. Smith; Magwood vs. Shortly.
112 lbs.—Kincner vs. Barrow.

BOXING
118 lbs.—Huestis vs. Rapsey.

How Quickly Will You Become a Business Executive?

Are you prepared for business?

Do you know enough about Finance, Management, Production and Distribution to QUICKLY develop into an executive in the business world; or will you, after leaving college, drift along for years in the "school of hard knocks" and possibly never achieve the business success you desire?

In just nine months you CAN prepare!

Babson Institute offers you exactly the kind of training you will need most when you are out of college and on your own. Here you may receive a practical and thorough training under the direction of business experts. Here you will learn business fundamentals and, what is more important, you will gain the necessary experience in the practical application of those fundamentals.

Students at Babson Institute keep regular office hours. They dictate reports, take part in conferences, and the basic "how" and "why" of business. Babson Institute is a place for work, not play; for the kind of "brass-tacks" training every ambitious young man wants! The instruction is intensive—no wasted time on trifles or useless theories.

Aloysius Likes New Home Better
Writes Maw and Paw, Tells All

By C. L. Coburn

Ginity House,
 Jan. 13, 1929,
 I mean 1930.

Dear Maw and Paw:

Well, I got back here all right after the Xmas hols, and I just thought I'd better write and let you know I got back here all right. I got myself moved over here into Ginity House because I didn't like it over in that other place, so I got myself moved over here. That other place I was in, I didn't like it. They weren't a very high class of boys living there, and every time I told my friends where I lived they said, "Oh, you don't mean the reformatory? Haw! Haw!" They shouldn't give a place a name like a reformatory. As Aunt Fanny would say, you can't reformatory anyway. No, Maw, Aunt Fanny ain't a real aunt, it's only a guy.

That place I was at was a real funny place, though, they done the darn fooliest things. There's four separate houses, and some of them would keep on coming over from one house and fighting the guys in another and breaking bannisters and such. I never saw much sense to it myself. I guess I'm different from the rest. A year ago I heard they took a guy and douses water on him and chased him all over in his underwear because they didn't like something he'd done. I guess they meant well.

This house I'm staying at now's a real swell burg. It's about ten stories high. I heard a guy say it was so high so they could get close to heaven in this life anyway, but that seemed silly to me. They do a lot of silly things down here. Somebody said they didn't do nothing but drink tea over in this house, but it smells more like beer to me. An' when they go in to eat, they wear great big black bibs down their backs, but not in front. They say it looks dignified, but I guess I must see things different from the rest.

You know I told you about Hart House when I was home, how we all had to pay ten dollars for it, and they had a big library to sleep in, and billiard-rooms and a barber-shop and a place to eat and everything. That reminds me of a meal I had here the other day. They give us soup and lettuce and pie—that's all—just soup and lettuce and pie, and some milk and bread and butter. Well anyway, what I was going to say, they're going to build it bigger. Yeh, they're going to build it right over into Queen's Park, and put up another tower and a big new eating-hall and a lot more. Somebody told me they was going to put in an extra swimming pool for masquerades and everything. I read all about it in the Varsity, a funny sort of paper they get out here. It's a funny sort of paper, they never tell things right, they always exaggerate them up a bit. You never know what to believe. You can always trust me to tell you what is right, though, because I ask everybody till I find out. They tried awful hard to get me to write for them on the Varsity, but I wouldn't do it. I don't think they're a nice bunch of people.

Well, I guess that's all for now.
 Yours truly,
 Aloysius.

to the Music Committee towards the end of the first term, that exhibited anger at being criticised adversely, then it was again resurrected. The notice "The Varsity" received about criticism in the paper came after the abjection by musicians attending Hart House and not before.

thority: the university would assume no responsibility. I have been maligned from end to end of the province; the university investigated and was satisfied that I was entirely in the right, but to all intents and purposes they said to me, Sink or Swim; that's your affair, not ours!

So this is what I mean by a lack of "moral support"—not that I was personally concerned in the matter: had mine been the only case it would have been of minor significance. The crux of the situation is rather that I have reason to believe it typical. And, probably, this is of minor importance, but at least, it is the point of issue here. In one case, at least, this impairment of academic liberty weighed very heavily in a decision to leave Toronto for another school where, there is good reason to believe, the administration gives strong encouragement to the staff.

ISSUES STATEMENT

First, then, Dr. Meek's episode, which is so recent as to require no recounting.

Now, then, here is the case of a man who, through years of effective work on our staff has demonstrated to the full not alone his scholarship, but his integrity. Yet there arose circumstances where he was subjected to physical abuse, public misrepresentation and scurrility and treatment by a judicial body that is simply incredible in this ostensibly enlightened city. Now surely any reasonable interpretation of the responsibility of the university in the incident is that they should have found effective occasion and means to say, "Hands off! We know this man, and can vouch for his character: what you do against him, you do to us and we shall act accordingly."

The only legitimate escape from such a course would be if the attack on Dr. Meek were too petty to notice. But the university did notice it! And then took no action.

The other case was my own, if I may be pardoned the personality. It is of value here as illustrating a slightly different side of the problem: the question of scholarly activity and its dangers. Some little time ago I read a paper before a departmental society, which, when reported in the press, roused a small tempest in a teapot among certain ill-informed elements of the public. My paper was utterly innocuous, a routine bit of scholarly investigation. I have since published it in extens and those competent to judge have so commented upon its non-combustible character. However, the uproar presently occasioned university cognizance: some zealous souls, I understand, wrote in protest to the university, and as well, to the Minister of Education, mirabile dictu! Why he? What has he to do with the internal affairs of university activity? I was called in for consultation: the correct thing to do, the university must know the facts. And I was treated with entire courtesy. The statement which I presented was, I was assured, accepted as entirely satisfactory but—and here is the point of the story—I was informed that in publishing the statement I would do so on my au-

TORONTO HOCKEYISTS VICTORIOUS IN CLOSE GAME WITH BRADFORD

Toronto Team Shows Up Well
With Leck and Graham Scoring

FIRST BLUE TEAM TO WIN

Bradford Rooters Enthusiastic, and Take Defeat Well,
Turran Starring

U. of T. intermediates trounced Bradford 3-1 in a closely fought game last night. They are the first blue team to escape from the jinx which seems to have followed Varsity teams of late. Bradford rooters were wildly enthusiastic, but took defeat well.

The first period was marked by even play and score, the teams coming out with one goal each. After five minutes of play Red Statham made a nice individual effort for the first counter of the game. Turran, Bradford centre and star player, equalized on a pass from C. Evans three minutes before the period ended.

Toronto got the only goal of the second period on a beautiful shot by Bill Leck just after the game got under way again. Play in this period was dominated by the blue team who seemed to find their feet on the small ice in this session.

"Whitey" Graham made it three for Varsity on a lone rush just after a disputed goal had been disallowed by the referee. The game was over a few minutes later and the few Varsity supporters finished up with a vigorous "Toronto".

The team showed up well as a whole and McCartney in goal turned in a star exhibition with many fine saves. Graham and Clute were standouts also. For the home team Turran was in a class by himself and received nice support from C. Evans and Belfry.

GIRLS ARE IN FAVOUR OF DUTCH DATE HABIT

New Jersey Co-eds Claim it is Cure for Gold-Digging
Propensities

GIRLS MAY ASK MEN

New Brunswick, N.J.—"Gold-digging" was heartily condemned here today by college girls, who declared themselves in favour of that last straw in the maintenance of a single standard—the "Dutch Treat." Teams officially representing the senior and junior classes of the New Jersey College for Women debated the question, "Resolved, that all college dates be Dutch treats." The judges and the student audience were overwhelmingly for the affirmative, as upheld by the seniors.

"Dutch treat" was defined by the affirmative simply as a "fifty-fifty proposition" and "date" as "one of those not so rare occasion of a frivolous nature when the man thinks

Correction

Due to an inadvertent error "The Varsity" printed the date of the next Hart House debate as Wednesday, Jan. 26, instead of Wednesday, Jan. 22, when the debate will take place.

HAROLD RECEIVES PLEASING REPLIES

Brandishes Handkerchief So
Mabel Will Meet Him in Rotunda

TOO MANY MABELS TURN UP

"Harold:

"If you are tall, meet me at noon Wednesday in the rotunda, University College. Carry a white handkerchief in your hand so that I will know you."

This letter will explain the strange sight of young gentlemen waving white handkerchiefs at shy co-eds in the U.C. rotunda. The above letter, one of the many received yesterday by "Harold", fortunately, or rather unfortunately, appeared in an edition of a downtown paper. The result was that more than one youth decided to profit by the advertisement of the nervous college youth. So forthwith white handkerchiefs were purchased and shown in the sanctum sanctorum designated. Rumour has it that more than one "Harold" and "Mabel" were present. Harold was located, and when questioned by "The Varsity", admitted that he was very pleased with his plan.

"I am sure that I will be able to find my choice although I may find it necessary to go into conference with a committee appointed for that purpose."

"Were you successful in meeting Mabel to-day?"

"No, unfortunately no, but I would appreciate it if she would write me again and designate another rendezvous. Also if the young blonde who wore a red hat and a black coat during the 'rush on the rotunda' would write, I can assure a reply."

Among the many letters received was one from the spokesman of a group of girls at a well known girls' residence, and offered a few pictures as a proof of good faith.

BIOLOGY PROFESSOR IS ASKED TO RESIGN FOR BIBLE CRITICISM

Baptist Ministerial Student Objects to Skeptical Talk About Noah's Ark

CLAIMS HE IS CHRISTIAN

Biological Experience Proved no Variety of Whale Can Swallow Man

Special to "The Varsity"
Birmingham, Ala., Jan. 9. (I.P.)—When Lee Gallman, a ministerial student at Howard college a Baptist institution here, objected to remarks about the Bible made in a chapel talk by Dr. Horace Calvin Day, professor of biology, Day's resignation was asked by President John C. Dawson.

In his talk on the subject, "Be Skeptical," Dr. Day told the students, "We should not give a too literal translation to the Bible."

"There are some people so ignorant that they still believe Noah crowded two of each species of animals into the ark during the flood. How could he have got all those animals into the ark?"

"During my years of biological experience I have studied two kinds of whale and found it impossible for either of them to swallow a man whole, and, anyway, no man can live inside a whale. These references seem illogical, but God is logical." (Continued on page 4)

INTERESTING TALK GIVEN AT CLASSICAL

Professor Illiffe Illustrates Discussion on Early Greek Vases

UNIT IS HUMAN FIGURE

Last evening at the home of Professor J. Satterley, Professor J. H. Illiffe, lecturer in archaeology, at a meeting of the U.C. Classical Association, gave an illustrated discussion of the Greek vase from the earliest beginnings of Greek history through the golden age. One of the more pronounced types of design was the, geometric introduced about 1000 B.C. by the union of Doric plus native influence. At this time the human figure was merely a mathematical unit in the design.

The history of the art of Greece around 500 B.C. is the story of the Oriental invasions. During this period, the face in outline is a characteristic. The slides showed illustrations of vases and toilet table accessories. In connection with these figures, the professor pointed out that the so-called classical profile is merely a convention and not a fact.

The Attic period excelled in both the black figure and the red. The one was produced by depicting the figures in black paint and leaving the background in natural red clay. The other was the result of filling in the background in black and leaving the figures the red colour of the natural clay.

Most scenes represented revuls as the vases were used on occasions of revelry. Two designs, one an outline representing Hector drawn at the wheels of Achilles' chariot, the other Priam, seeking to ransom the body of Hector from Achilles, Professor Illiffe considered ranked with the pictures of the masters.

WARD POLITICS CRAZY PRESIDENT DECIDES RE PURCHASED VOTES

But Macdonald-Cartier Club was not Approached in This Affair

PRICE IS DOUBTFUL

President of Liberal Club Says
Fifty Cents a Vote Far Too Cheap

"Ward politics in Toronto are crazy," said "Bill" Finlayson, president of the Macdonald-Cartier Club, when interviewed regarding the letter in "The Varsity" charging that partisan scrutineers had hired students to vote for their candidates in the recent spectacular elections of the Ward 4 Conservative Association.

"I have heard that representatives of the cliques visited the residences in search of supporters, but I really can't say anything definite about it. The Macdonald-Cartier Club itself was in no way approached, and had nothing to do with the affair. Of course, in a city like Toronto, the presidency of a ward association usually means nomination for parliament. This may explain the reported price of two dollars per vote."

When informed of Mr. Grove's statement to the Mail and Empire that "fifty cents apiece would pack them in" Mr. Finlayson remarked, "Personally, I wouldn't have anything to do with that kind of business, and I don't believe that many other students would."

Mr. Grover, who is prominent in conservative circles, is quoted in the morning papers as saying that "a number of students are members of the association, but there is a very small student vote polled."

"Fifty cents a vote is far too cheap," laughingly declared A. E. Allin, president of the University of Toronto Liberal Club. "Most of the students find their financial resources pretty well depleted before Christmas, so one can't" (Continued on page 4)

DR. ERNEST THOMAS LECTURES STUDENTS

Topic Will be the Message of the Hebrew Prophets Applied to Us

GREAT SOCIAL WORKER

"Dr. Ernest Thomas is a great social worker for the United Church of Canada," said Rev. Moore, when interviewed by "The Varsity" regarding Dr. Thomas, who will lecture this week to the students.

"For many years Dr. Thomas has been with the Student Christian Movement," continued Rev. Moore, "and is one of the most successful senior leaders. He has an amazingly wide knowledge and a firm grasp of ethical, religious and social questions."

"He will not only lecture, but he will have study groups in which, I presume," stated Rev. Moore, "he will first try to discover the religious and social message of the Hebrew Prophets, and what its application is to social and religious conditions of our own times."

"He is extraordinarily fresh in his treatment of anything he undertakes," said Rev. Moore, "and is very apt in his handling of questions in discussion. He travels all over Canada leading similar study and discussion groups."

Faculty Do Not Receive Support of Governors, Declares Will

PROFESSOR PEARSON IS SENT TO LONDON

Popular Football Coach Goes as Secretary to Canadian Delegates

WILL ATTEND CONFERENCE

Ottawa has sent Lester B. Pearson, former professor at Baldwin House, to London as one of the secretaries of the Canadian delegates. Mr. Pearson occupied the position of first secretary in the department of external affairs at Ottawa. He will be in the attendance of Colonel Ralston, Minister of National Defense. Mr. Pearson was more popularly known as "Mike" when he coached the O.R.F.U. football team while at the university. He was professor of history for four years, leaving in 1928 for his position in the diplomatic staff.

Mr. Pearson set sail from Halifax on January 10th, with Mrs. Pearson (Marion Moody) who is a graduate of Victoria College.

In all probability Mr. Pearson will remain over in London and will be in attendance at the conference on International Law, which will meet in The Hague in March, under the auspices of the League of Nations.

FABIAN CLUB ATTITUDE ENTIRELY SOCIALISTIC

So Says President of Club in Announcing Plans for New Year

"There is nothing much to tell about the plans of the Fabian Club. Our policy is just the same as it was last year," said Mary Dewey.

Walter Bilbrough, president of the club informed "The Varsity" that "Mr. James Simpson, head of the labour unit in Toronto, was to speak at their next meeting on the question of unemployment in Canada." He went on to say that "the Fabian Club was the only group on the campus where the main idea was not just a meeting, but that every undergraduate had to take part in the discussions, on previously prepared subjects. Their attitude has been entirely socialistic. They have been doing very good work, and have shown a keen interest in the labour movement."

Professor of French Agrees With Dr. Irwin's Statement as to Ruinous Caution

PUBLIC DICTATES POLICY

Principal Emeritus Hutton
Thinks Governors' Attitude
Should be Neutral

"The Board of Governors of this university certainly does not give the members of the faculty the moral wall of support, protecting it from the opinions of the general public that it should," said Professor J. S. Will, of the department of French in an interview with "The Varsity" last evening.

"I would certainly say that this university is mildewed with discretion and obsessed with a ruinous caution as Professor Irwin has pointed out," stated Professor Will, with reference to the signed statement appearing in "The Varsity" yesterday.

"Professors certainly have no such weight in moulding the force of public opinion as they had several years ago. The history of the last few years has conclusively shown that the university yields all along the line to the weight of public opinion. The opinions of the great public are accepted rather than those of our own professors. This has been due to an implied or stated administrative policy on the part of our university, the administrators in this case being our Board of Governors. The opinion of the public certainly dictates the policy of our university."

When asked for an opinion regarding the case of Professor Meek, Professor Will stated that he did not know what more the university could have done in this instance.

"The most the Governors can be expected to do is to take a neutral stand," said former Principal Maurice Hutton, when questioned by "The Varsity" regarding cases such as those cited by Professor Irwin.

He did not feel that the Board of Governors could be expected to back up the various opinions of six hundred professors. But he did feel that (Continued on page 4)

"PIRATE OF PENZANCE" TO BE PRODUCED BY VICTORIA

Twenty Seats Sold at a Time and Offer Received to Present Play Outside

"Pirates of Penzance", the Gilbert and Sullivan opera which the Victoria College Music Club is presenting at Hart House next week, is already causing a phenomenal rush at the box office.

For every performance blocks of seats have been sold to parties of anywhere from 20 up. The Victoria College freshmen are entertaining the senior girls on Thursday night, and the Normal School has bought out the entire theatre for Tuesday, which necessitated a performance more than originally planned and consequently the elimination of a dress rehearsal. Excepting about 90 tickets for the Saturday matinee, practically all are sold, but hopeful people are still lining up for more.

The club received a fine offer to present the opera outside the university, but has decided to refuse.

George Beavers, the president, and Miss Jean Evans, the vice-president, attribute great credit to Mr. Crawford, their leader, who is directing, and also the management of an exceptionally fine executive. With a club membership double that of last year, they have been working since the last week of September, and feel confident of the success of the presentation.

OUR HOMELESS WOMEN

When we heard that substantial additions were being made to Hart House, and then again when we heard that building operations were about to be extended to the University Library, we felt like saying as Carlyle said to the British Legislature, "You have eight-and-twenty laws on your statute books for the protection of partridges, and not one for the protection of women and children." The chief difference (for we do not intend to compare the men of this university to partridges) is that Carlyle's protest got something done immediately, whereas the women of this university have long ago given up expecting the "powers that be" to exhibit any indecent haste in doing things on their behalf. That is why, with truly sublime optimism, they have set about raising a building fund for themselves by operating one-cent filling stations for fountain pens.

We are glad to see that Hart House has justified its existence to the extent where considerable additions to it are deemed necessary, and glad that those additions could be obtained, but we could not help feeling that this was only further illustration of the necessity and practicability of a similar building for women. In spite of what the different colleges, and the women themselves have done to try to make up the deficiency, the fact remains that the women of this university, as such, are homeless.

This homelessness is painfully apparent in the case of the women of new courses like Occupational Therapy, since they do not belong to any college. Outside of their work, they have scarcely any connection with the life of the university, and have had, in one case, to make use of an empty cellar in University College, as the centre of all their activities.

The same lack of adequate accommodation explains the fact that the faculty of Household Science, for example, is at present looking for a suitable place to hold their annual dance. It also explains why the women's baseball teams of different colleges sometimes have to go as far as St. Alban's church to hold a practice. It may even help to explain the appalling number of women who meet and chat in the rotunda of University College, to the great impediment of traffic.

There is nothing new about all this. The women of this university have realized the serious handicap they are under for some time, and every now and then have tried to do something about it, but being a patient race, it looks as if they would have to wait until everything else that needs building around the university is built. Yet even they must sometimes feel moved to ask, with the Psalmist, (and a late professor of Latin waiting for a translation), "How long, O Lord, how long?"

"THOU SHALT NOT"

Our old friends the censors have gone to bat again. Providing the public with what is good for them or, more accurately, shielding the public from what is not good for them has agitated the human mind ever since the dawn of civilization.

Toronto has a considerable reputation for the acumen and vigilance of its dramatic censors. And it seems that the noble work is to be continued with unrelaxed zeal. We are still to be shielded from anything that might be considered as prurient or objectionable on the stage and screen.

Doubtless the secluded life has its advantages and the hot home growth is the most luxuriant. But there is much to be said for the plant that is exposed to the vagaries of climate and survives uncontaminated by exterior influences.

The conflict between those who would abolish all censorship and those who would extend it to every phase of existence is age-old. And the predominance of one group or the other will determine the character of the censorship in any locality.

Human nature is human nature. No matter how strict the censorship those whose minds incline to unpleasant things will always find the wherewithal to gratify their tastes. And that is why censorship is the seemingly unprofitable task that it is.

Art and Drama

Players Guild

"The Sisters' Tragedy", a one-act drama by Richard Hughes, gripped the audience at the Players' Guild yesterday afternoon. "Gripped", I believe, is the word. It gripped because it possessed a theme calculated to grip; because the playwright had made the most of his material; and because two members of the cast were unusually excellent.

Mr. Victor Wynbourne, who directed, displayed an element of showmanship rare at the Guild in picking a play which held the devotees of the drama till close on the dinner hour.

The old problem—"Is it right to kill a helpless sufferer to effect a 'merciful' release and save from hopelessness and drudgery the lives of others?"—is revived. Due largely to the splendid work of Miss Ruth Halden-by as Lowrie, the sensitive youngest sister, who dreams she kills, the production has punch. Miss Haldenby did a fine piece of characterization, and her emotional scene at the end did queer things to the spinal column. As the deaf, dumb, and blind invalid, Mr. Hamilton Miller ran a close second for the acting honours.

That the play flagged woefully in spots was due largely to the uneven performances of some of the other people in the cast. A tendency to "shuffle", a lack of repose, and a losing of value in lines does not help either the suspense or the smoothness of a production. Miss Jocelyn Moore played Philippa, the oldest sister; Miss Margaret Donald, Charlotte, the second sister; and Mr. Paul Gardner, John, Charlotte's fiancé.

The Table Round

Shrieks and Crashes

"Shrieks and Crashes" is not just another war book. It deals with the experiences of a portion of the Canadian corps at the front during 1917. The author, not long ago a Ph.D. student at the University of Toronto, W. B. Kerr, is now assistant professor of history at the University of Buffalo.

It is, in fact, not fiction. While it lacks literary finish and polished phrase, it is a clear, simple, and understandable account of one man's experiences in the war. Without attempting the stark and often sordid realism, and the gruesome detail which characterizes so many books on this type, "Shrieks and Crashes" nevertheless makes a distinct and favourable impression.

Mr. Kerr tells his story directly, and unostentatiously, and sticks closely to the main subject. It is the product of a mind not distorted, warped or embittered by war experience, and is a sane and readable account of war as it looked through the eyes of a "back private".

There is no attempt either to glorify war or to stress the unpleasant aspects of life at the front, declares the author in his preface. And he adheres faithfully to his avowed intention. Without casting a romantic glow over the war, Mr. Kerr has succeeded in introducing some attractive descriptions. He shows that even in that turmoil of death and destruction, men could still turn their thoughts to the world without.

"Shrieks and Crashes", despite its stirring title, makes its appeal without resort to sensationalism. And that perhaps is the highest praise that one could give to a book to-day.

The Detective Story

Something should be done about the detective novel. Things have reached a pretty pass when an unknown can sell a book, provided the wrapper depicts a corpse, a revolver or blood-stains, or hints at violence and sudden death. At its best, the detective story makes a definite contribution to the literature of fiction. But at its worst—and alas, how often is it at its worst—it is the veriest trash.

Typical of the sort of thing that is coming off the press these days is "The Master Mystery", by one A. J. Small. The author apparently does not credit his readers with any intelligence whatever. At any rate, he asks them to swallow pages of wildly incredible nonsense. A vengeful Italian, an impecunious peer, a bankrupt but resourceful hero, and a eretin are among the characters that he introduces. Unfortunately, the events that are interwoven about their lives are of such a nature that by no stretch of the imagination can they be regarded as living beings.

We admit that the book has its interest. But that interest is largely confined to seeing what further flights of inventiveness the author is going to try and carry his readers. The idea of any man existing for several weeks on the roof of a large house which is populated and guarded without by a small army of detectives is too ridiculous to be tenable for an instant.

The public, with its well-known voracious appetite, will doubtless continue to absorb and call for more such stuff. The vogue for the crime novel shows no sign of abating. But taste is a fickle thing, and in another decade, men may be decrying the maudlin literature which was so popular a few years earlier.

P.E.U.

We are soon to be presented with a new, high-powered, concentrated food. No Horae, it is a biscuit. It is to be filled with all varieties of vitamins and simply lousy with wheat germ.

C-C

In case you do not know what a vitamin is, it is the sex appeal of a spinach.

C-C

Now what could be sweeter than a jolly anti-rachitic cookie with a delectable dish of tea among friends at our tea-drinking university?

C-C

And think how the coming of the cookie will revolutionize eating at Hot House. No longer will it be necessary to delicately balance diets with soup, peach pie, catsup and apples. All that we shall need for a perfect meal will be five biscuits and a cup of tea.

C-C

The system of serving can be completely changed. The removal of soup from the menu will eliminate the risk of scalded thumbs, stained vests and soaking coat sleeves.

C-C

Instead of passing the soup down the line, the freshman at the head of the table can be supplied with a deck of vitamin crackers, shuffle, and deal five around over the bare table.

C-C

The rationing of tea is not so simple a problem. One efficiency expert of our acquaintance has suggested that this popular beverage be poured into two long troughs, one at each side of the table, and each man supplied with a straw. The weakness of this plan is, of course, quite obvious. Even the best of straws become plugged with tea leaves.

C-C

With the advent of the biscuit a great many members of the old school are hoping to see the return of the grand old aristocratic custom of dunking.

C-C

It is a problem whether or not the crackers should be rectangular or elliptical in shape. A great many people have voiced the opinion that a biscuit should be made with definite corners and sharp edges as it prevents one from swallowing it whole. Others say that the corners are bitten off first anyway, with an elliptically shaped cookie as a result. And some again, enjoy the corner of a biscuit more than any other portion. It is a question not to be taken lightly, but deserving serious consideration. May we hear some opinions of the undergraduates on the subject? Please forward your letters to the Shetland islands where we are going for safety's sake.

VARSITY INTERMEDIATES LEAD GROUP DEFEATING BRADFORD 3-1

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Tickets for the New York Athletic Club-Varsity water polo game at Hart House to-morrow night are going rapidly. The smart display given when Penn A.C. played here helped to establish the International Water Polo League on a firm foundation at the university. Indications are that the seating capacity of the plunge will be taxed to the limit. After the game there will be the usual "music".

Saturday afternoon at the Varsity Arena McGill will open the Intercollegiate hockey series against Varsity. Ralph St. Germaine, the gridiron's "galloping ghost" will make the plays at centre ice for the Redmen. St. Germaine returns to the Intercollegiate games after a year's absence. Two seasons ago he was regarded as one of the most effective players in college hockey.

The McGill team played a somewhat rugged style of hockey last year. Those who witnessed the game here last season will remember the "free-for-all" which enlivened the afternoon's performance considerably.

It seems quite likely that next year Queen's and the University of Montreal will return to the Intercollegiate fold. At present the Intercollegiate hockey league consisting of only two teams, Varsity and McGill, is not eligible to send a winner into the play-offs for the Allan Cup. A league must have at least three teams in order to qualify its winner. The return of Queen's and Montreal to the fold will be a good thing for Intercollegiate hockey in particular and Canadian hockey in general.

To-morrow night Queen's play Nationals. If the Sea Fleas win it will tangle up the Senior A series with the three teams on an even basis in games won and lost. The Varsity and Nationals tie-game will be replayed if it effects the final standing.

Varsity intermediates lead their group by virtue of their 3-1 win at Bradford last night. The intermediates have won three straight games.

Varsity juniors meet Toronto Canoe Club at the Varsity Arena to-morrow night. The Red Ringers are pressing the Blue for second place and the locals need a win. The Varsity forward line are reaching the "scoreless wonders" class, failing to cage the puck in their last three games.

Switching teams is becoming quite fashionable among the feminine athletes this season. Norma Bateman gave up intercollegiate hockey to play basketball, and now we have Bea Symons, who played on the Varsity senior cage team as a substitute forward, devoting herself to hockey. Miss Symons came to college from B.S.S., and was outstanding in both games. She should be a valuable member of the hockey team. Honor Tett, who was unable to play intercollegiate basketball last fall owing to an operation for appendicitis, which she underwent late in the summer, will be turning out with the intercollegiate again this season and she will be a real asset to the Blue and White. Miss Tett has an excellent basketball record. She came to Varsity last year from Queen's, where she spent her first two years. She made a regular position on the Queen's senior team in her first year, thus winning her colours as a fresher. Last year she transferred to Varsity, going into third year Household Science. She was successful in making the senior intercollegiate team here last season as a guard, and in winning her "T". Miss Tett did excellent work in the game with Western at Montreal, but she was disqualified for four personals in the game with Queen's, her old teammates, early in the second half.

12,000 TONS OF COAL USED AT UNIVERSITY

Plant Begins Operation in September and Last Until June

29 BUILDINGS HEATED

"The consumption of coal in the central heating plant, which serves no fewer than 29 of the university buildings, is approximately 12,000 tons during the year," Col. A. G. LePan, University superintendent told "The Varsity" yesterday. "The plant is in operation from the middle of September to the first of June," he said. "The coal used is entirely what is known as bituminous slack."

Such widely separated buildings as Victoria College and Sincere Hall are heated by the plant, which, according to Col. LePan, has proven completely satisfactory since its installation in 1911. Trinity, however, has its own heating plant, as have most of the smaller buildings which have been taken over temporarily by the university. These include Queen's Hall, Baldwin House and the Law Building on St. George Street.

The superintendent stated that little trouble had been experienced from coal shortages or strikes in past years. "We have never been compelled to shut down," he said humorously. Col. LePan added that the plant had been found much more effective and economical than the former system of heating.

U.C. DEFEATS TRINITY IN BASKETBALL GAME

Maney Starred for U.C., Moore and Ingram Scored for Trinity

U.C. WON IN LAST 5 MINUTES

University College senior cage team nosed out the Trinity quintet 22 to 20 in yesterday's intercollegiate game at Hart House. The Trinity squad put up a warm battle throughout the game and extended the U.C. five to the limit. In the dying moments of the game Trinity held a lead of 2 points. Wib Mayor, stalwart U.C. defence man, came through with two sensational long shots from back of centre.

Maney was the individual star for the winners with 10 points to his credit. Sullivan was responsible for 5 of U.C.'s total. Moore and Ingram divided the scoring honours for Trinity with 6 points each.

U.C. Seniors—Forwards, Sullivan (5), Foyer (1); centre, Maney (10); defence, Hodgson, Keith; subs, Garden, Stringer, Jermyn.

Trinity—Forwards, Moore (6), Ingram (6); centre, Stewart (2); defence, Armstrong, Rapsey (2); subs, Chapple, Scott, Berwick (4).

Ray Ruddy, Amateur Champion, to Give Swimming Exhibition

Water polo fans who think they have seen some fast and smooth-working aggregation will be bound to get a surprise when they lay eyes on the New York A.C. squad. Just glance over the following dope:

NEW YORK A.C.
Ray Ruddy, centre forward
Steve Ruddy, r. forward
John Connel, forward
Ted Curran, right back
Joe Farley, centre back
John Coltus, goal
Paul Wacker, Hal Vollner, subs.
Steve Ruddy, capt. former holder of world's record 220 yds. breast stroke, member of the Olympic American champion 1920-1-2. Metropolitan champion for 6 years.

Ted Connel, former holder 220 yds. free style, 150 yds. Metropolitan and national champion 1915-16-17. Defeated the great Duke Kahanamoku in 1916. Member of the Olympic team in 1924.

Hal Vollner, former holder of the world's record for 220 and 100 yds. Member of the 1920 and 1924 Olympics. National and Metropolitan 1914-15-16.

Leo Giebel, former national and Metropolitan champion. Olympic member, 1924.

Joe Farley, former college champion. Member Olympic team 1928.

John Curran, former junior city champion.

Ray Ruddy is U.S. amateur long distance champion, any distance.

As an extra feature to the game, Roy Ruddy will give an exhibition of swimming, and will attempt to break the 440 yd. record of 4:09 held by Walter Spence of the Penn A.C. team.

Employment

Each year the Geological Survey, Department of Mines, Ottawa, employs about 100 university students for work on field parties during the summer. In order to be eligible for appointment to positions as Student Assistants with the Geological Survey, applicants must be men of good physique and must have completed second year work in one of the special Departments of Geology, Mining Engineering or Civil Engineering in a Canadian university or mining school, or have taken courses in some other institution necessary to give them a standing equivalent to that required by Canadian universities or mining schools. Only applicants who are studying with the object of becoming professional Geologists, Mining Engineers or Civil Engineers, will be considered for appointment.

FEMALE HOCKEYISTS GO DOWN TO DEFEAT

First Game in City Series Brings Defeat to Varsity

PLAY EVENLY DIVIDED

The Varsity women's intercollegiate hockey team was defeated by Aura Lee in the game last night, the score being 4-0. This was the first game of the city series and neither team had had much practice. The Aura Lee girls had a slight edge over Varsity all the time, especially in their shooting, although the play was pretty evenly divided all through. Three of the goals were scored in about five minutes of play when Aura Lee made a last spurt and the Varsity girls' lack of condition showed up.

Fran Crooks was not up to her usual game, although she was still quite evidently Varsity's star player. The general opinion seemed to be that with more practice and a bit more team-play the Varsity team would be better than ever this year.

Varsity—Goal, Helen McKinley; defence, Fran Crooks and Adele Statton; centre, Joyee Muirhead; wings, Helen Hilliard and Dot James; subs, Dot Starr, Margot Thompson, Bea Symons and Agnes Vanstone.

Aura Lee—Goal, Braden; defence, Buckley and Wattam; centre, Allan; wings, Minett and Barr; sub, Grant.

YOUTH IS UNCHANGED DOWN THE CENTURIES

St. Mike's Oratorical Club Weekly Meeting Decides on the Matter

R. F. ANDREWS PRESIDENT

Four students gave addresses at the weekly meeting of St. Michael's Oratorical Club held last night in the college.

"Youth is fundamentally the same to-day at heart as it was in the 15th, 16th and preceding centuries," declared J. J. Austin, '30, in his address on "The work done by the present reformatory system in England." Mr. Austin continued by pointing out the advantages of the system for delinquents. "Financially the reformatory system is a success," he stated.

B. G. Collins, the next speaker, said in his talk, "The wheat problem." "The Wheat Pool is right in its attack that there is a necessity for wheat in Canada. It would be fatal for the Pool to boost wheat to artificial prices. Canada has the supply and the demand for wheat."

"The socialistic farmers do not go back to first principles," stated K. McDonald, '30, in his address on "Social Reformers." "They agree on the evil, but not on the good."

"When things go wrong people think we need a practical man, but what is needed is a non-practical man," he continued. "It is necessary to seek the cause, rather than waste time on the result." Mr. McDonald also remarked that "men are more interesting in a crowd than women who are ugly and out of place in the same circumstances."

W. H. Ford, '33, concluded the program by an impromptu speech on "Advertising." He pointed out the various methods of sign advertising and also referred to the good advertising of "The Varsity" with its rousing editorials.

The present freshman class of Dartmouth College is the youngest in the school's history. It averages 17.86 years. The youngest student of the class is 15 years old and the oldest is 24 years old.

Application forms may be obtained from the Professor of Geology, or upon writing to the Director of Geological Survey, Department of Mines, Ottawa, Ontario.

twice before selecting his necktie and the girl adds an extra dab of powder to her nose."

The arguments which won the day for the college boys' pocketbook are:

Most college boys are supported by their fathers, as are college girls. While the fathers of boys may be luckier than the fathers of girls, they are not necessarily wealthier. Girls are therefore economically as able to pay for dates as men.

The Dutch treat habit eliminates gold digging among college girls who can earn money as well as men if they set their mind to it, but who usually pick the easier course.

The Dutch treat is wise from a moral standpoint; it causes mutual respect and enables a girl to be herself with a man instead of using a "line" to show her gratitude. It makes it possible for a girl to ask a man for a date without embarrassment.

The negative team attempted to present the masculine viewpoint and pleaded for the present convention on the grounds of precedent, the fact that men are able to earn money more easily than girls, and, finally, that "chivalry is not yet dead and the Dutch treat is an insult to manly dignity."

Music Critic Launched in Space But Quickly Finds a Landing Place

By A. E. F. Allan

Mr. St. John Haire, eminent music and dramatic critic of The Weekly Sullivan, scratched the end of his nose in a semi-detached manner.

"No," he said, "I do not feel that the state of the musical world of Intolerance has reached that point where one might safely say that it was in a condition about which one might perhaps be tempted to remark that it was perhaps what one might term, if the language, is not too strong, that it was in such a condition."

"Would you say, Mr. Haire," we hazarded, "that local musicians are sensitive to criticism?"

"Well," rejoined the great St. John boldly, sucking a programme, "my experience with musicians has always been that they are people of a great deal of that which it takes to make people what one would expect people of their sort to be."

"Nevertheless," we pressed, "don't you think that intelligent criticism is good for both musician and audience?"

"I think that there can probably be no serious doubt that there ought to be a good deal in the theory that things of this kind go far to do for music what a similar sort of thing would possibly do for the drama," declared Our Most Popular Critic.

"What is your candid opinion, Mr. Haire," we panted, "of the present heated discussion on the state of music at the university?"

"There can be absolutely no doubt

Dr. Day, only 27 years of age, was given his Ph.D. degree from Leland Stanford University in 1928.

In a statement issued with his resignation, Dr. Day said, "I am as much a Christian as anybody. It is merely a difference in interpretation. It is just the old fundamentalist versus the modernist fight."

He revealed that he is not a member of any church, but that he "goes occasionally to a minister regarding spiritual things."

HISTORY OF CANADIAN PRESS TOLD AT PRESS CLUB LUNCHEON

General Manager Talks About Early Growth of News
Association

EMPLOY UNIVERSITY MEN

Reactionary Editor Qualifies
Only for Board of Governors

"The Canadian Press is even more important than the railway in the national life of the people," said Mr. J. F. B. Livesay, general manager of the Canadian Press, at the University Press Club luncheon in Hart House yesterday.

Mentioning some of the obstacles which the Canadian Press had had to meet in achieving this importance, Mr. Livesay described an old-fashioned newspaper editor of Halifax, N.S., who still publishes a paper in which all the type is hand-set, as he refuses to adopt any such "modern inventions" as linotype machines. The gentleman also refuses to celebrate Dominion Day, but gives his staff a holiday the day after. "We opposed Confederation in 1868," he is reported to have said, "and we oppose it yet."

"The only modern position for which the editor of this paper would qualify," said Mr. Livesay, "would be as a member of the governing board of this university."

To achieve this has taken many years. Mr. Livesay traced the development of the Canadian Press from its earliest founding, which was the result of anti-feeling towards the rail-

NON-SMOKING SIGNS ARE USUALLY OBEYED

Lower Rate of Insurance Gained by Regulation Says
Librarian

BUILDINGS NOT FIREPROOF

Do students in the University of Toronto disregard non-smoking signs? The consensus of opinion is that they do not.

Professor W. S. Wallace, university librarian said: "We have practically no trouble with the students in regard to the rule, and no unpleasantness whatever in enforcing it."

"The regulation is imposed upon us by the insurance people. Part of the library is fire-proof, but part is not, and in order to get a low rate of insurance, we must enforce the rule against smoking."

When asked if smoking were allowed within the outer doors, Professor Wallace replied: "Strictly speaking it is not. But the matter is not one over which I have any control, it being under the jurisdiction of the superintendent of grounds and buildings."

The superintendent, Colonel A. D. LePan, corroborated the librarian's statement. "We have no difficulty with the students in this regard," he said. "They seem pretty willing to co-operate. We have to enforce the rule because of fire laws."

Archib, chief caretaker of University College, also loyally supported the students. "The boys all obey the non-smoking rule in University College," he stated. "They are very thoughtful, and if occasionally one does become forgetful, you just have to look at him and he stops smoking immediately."

"The regulation is necessitated by fire laws. University College is a very old building, and could not be rebuilt in a day if fire once got hold of it."

Warden Has Etchings

The Warden hopes that those undergraduates who had to leave early on the night of the Christmas dinner in the Great Hall and therefore did not receive his small gift would call at his office as soon as possible when he will be glad to give them the etching.

CONSUMPTION OF TEA AT VERY LOW LEVEL

So Avers Manager of Hart House Great Hall in Interview

MILK ORUNK THE MOST

"Tea is not served in Hart House on account of any demand, but because of a need," stated Mr. Gunn, manager of the Great Hall, to "The Varsity" yesterday. Mr. Gunn explained that although he thought that milk is preferable, it is the aim of Hart House to please. The need does not seem to be of great magnitude, however. Of the total consumption of liquids in the various dining rooms in Hart House, tea only comprises 8.82 per cent.

When asked by "The Varsity" if he did not think that our leaning was slightly American when it is noted that second to milk comes coffee with 28.42 per cent, Mr. Gunn thought that it was. "But when it comes to making tea the Americans are slightly doubtful," he added.

"The Varsity" asked the manager of the Great Hall if he thought that the company of co-eds seemed to inspire a desire for tea. He thought that it was a matter of personal taste.

Possibly the fact that milk is placed on the tables is the reason why it comprises 61.76 per cent of liquids consumed, suggested Mr. Gunn. However, he did not think that there was either a demand or need for other beverages. Mr. Gunn did not think that there was a boogie trade in tea going on, to satisfy the fastidious demand which was brought to light on the suggestion of a humorous contemporary.

M'GILL HOCKEYISTS TO OPPOSE VARSITY IN GAME TO-MORROW

Strong Aggregation Will Be Expected from Montreal

BLUE AT FULL STRENGTH

St. Germain to Play at Centre for Red and White
Sextette

The two-team intercollegiate senior group opens to-morrow afternoon when the Blue and White lock horns with McGill's senior sextet at the Varsity Arena at 2.15 p.m.

The schedule which the Varsity puck-chasers have been forced to undergo for the last few weeks has been strenuous to say the least. The brief breathing-spell which the Blues have enjoyed since last Monday's game with Queen's ought to make a world of difference to the play of the Varsity team.

The Blue and White will be opposed by a strong Red aggregation led by Ralph St. Germain, colourful McGill all-round athlete. St. Germain will be seen at centre and Farquarson and Robertson will likely flank him on the wings. The Red and White boast a strong defence composed of veterans. Powers will be in the nets with McTeer and McGillivray in front of him.

The Blue and White will present

MR. F. NOEL PALMER TO LEAD GROUPS

Open to All University of Toronto Students Interested in Bible

Mr. F. Noel Palmer, whose name is rapidly becoming known on the campus as that of a most fascinating and vigorous speaker, has at the request of the committee of the Intercollegiate Christian Union, consented to lead, during the remainder of the term, a Bible Study group for university students. In these groups, which will meet every alternate Sunday, he will follow a definite course of study covering a period of some weeks. The first meeting will be held this coming Sunday afternoon (Jan. 19) in Wyndwood from 3.30 to 4.30, when Mr. Palmer will announce his plan of study for the rest of the year. This group is open to all university students and those who come will not go away disappointed.

HAROLD DISAPPOINTS FEMININE ADMIRERS AT FAMOUS ROTUNDA

Glove With Placard Proves Misleading to Co-eds

JEALOUSY UPREARS HEAD

Harold Lolls in Hart House Billiard Parlour in Serenity

And again Harold! Seeing a dense crowd of co-eds congregated at the entrance to University College rotunda, the reporter hurried eagerly forward, in his nostrils the delicious scent of news. And he was not disappointed.

In spite of having no Murads to fight, the aforementioned female undergraduates were striving desperately to appear nonchalant, and of course succeeded in looking very silly. They all possessed that indefinable air of anticipation worn by those who are expectantly awaiting something (or someone).

Now it is very unlikely that all these unclaimed blessings would have stood in practically the same spot for no reason at all, covertly eyeing each other like cats on a back fence. As it happened, there was a reason. Attached to a spike on the wall was a man's glove extended in hearty greeting, and above a placard bearing in bold letters the legend, "Meet Harold."

Magic words, but no Harold. That much-sought-after youth, when approached on the subject, replied with his customary charming diffidence and with a shy smile that would win the heart of any maid, that he really had not hung up the sign and didn't know who had.

"Most assuredly it pays to advertise," resumed Harold when interviewed yesterday. "I shall attend the water polo game Friday evening in order to give them all a fair chance. I shall also attend the dance later."

As a means of identification, he has decided to wear a red chrysanthemum on his lapel. "I only hope that all the young ladies who have written me will come up and speak to me. It will also be a chance for the other young co-eds who are too timid to have written as yet to 'look him over.'"

CHANGES PROPOSED FOR BARBER SHOP

Proposed changes in the Hart House barber shop will be decided on immediately, according to Mr. J. F. McCullough of the House Committee and a member of the Board of Stewards.

"The House Committee at their last meeting decided to ask the Board of Stewards for mirrors in order to see the effect the hair cut has on the back of the head. This reform has been long overdue," said Mr. McCullough.

"The question is whether men need beauty parlour mirrors to view their prettily cut locks."

"I think it's a darn good idea, although I haven't missed it until mentioned by 'The Varsity,'" said L. Zwis, J.T.3, U.C.

"They will only add to the expense of the barber shop. We never get many men who are so vain as to want to see the back of their heads. In fact, ninety per cent of the men would consider it a silly idea if we proposed showing them the back and sides of their heads," said Mr. Wilson, of the barber shop.

Mr. Beckett, also of the barber shop, stated that there are too many mirrors there now.

ARTIST DISCUSSES CANADIAN PAINTERS

American Artists Portray Family Groups More Says

A. Lismer

LEON KROLL EXAMPLE

"Canadian painters emphasize landscapes and trees, while the Americans are more interested in presenting typical American family groups," said Mr. Arthur Lismer, speaking to his S.C.M. 'Art Group' at the Art Gallery yesterday afternoon. In going on to speak of the work of Leon Kroll, a modern American artist whose work is attracting much attention, he pointed out that the artist does not merely paint pretty pictures, but that there is a well thought out design in all his work. His pictures have a proper background for the people in them and give a feeling of space and distance.

Mr. Lismer also considered a group of English, French and Canadian landscapes, and pointed out how each is typical of its own country.

ASSEMBLY SESSIONS HAVE SEVEN TOPICS

League of Nations Club Holds Discussions in February

Reports on seven topics are being prepared by the League of Nations Club committees for discussion in the Model Assembly sessions February 21st and 22nd.

These reports on: amendments to the covenant, codification of international law, reorganization of the Permanent Court, economic union of Europe, disarmament, opium and health, minorities, admission of Russia and Turkey, labour, and communications, will be mailed to delegates by February 1st.

Delegates will be given topics and the countries they are to represent at the general meeting Thursday at the Women's Union. Attend this meeting or name your choice in a note to the club's box at the Sincove Hall Post Office.

WILL COME TO TORONTO

Long Distance Call Verifies the Address Given in Letter

The mystic spell of high romance to which distance is no barrier appears in one of the most unusual cases which has been brought to notice. Falling in love with a picture, a fair face beckoning him on, George Hornberger of New York, an unknown young man, has sent an epistle asking one of the fair members of the chorus now playing in "Whosit" at Hart House theatre to meet him. The letter which the young lady decided last evening to release for publication to "The Varsity" appears as follows:

Hotel Pennsylvania, New York,
January 10th, 1930.

Toronto, Ontario.

Dear Miss Hunter:—

I know the following to be a very unusual request, but want you to understand that it is only way to make our meeting possible.

Lucky me, to have seen your picture in the Toronto Star last Tuesday. I will tell you at a later date how I happened to see this paper, and you, that is if you are interested.

I expect to be in Toronto at the Royal York Hotel, the latter part of this month for a week or ten days, and while there, want you to have lunch with me some day, or dinner. I would like very much to see & talk to you in person. Who knows? We may become good friends.

For your information, I am not much to look at, as the enclosed clipping will show, but I do feel as tho you will like me.

Please write me by return mail care of this hotel in New York City, room No. 388, that will be O. K. to phone (Continued on page 2)

VOLTAIRE CHAMPIONS CAUSE OF OPPRESSED

Commenced Best Writings
When Imprisoned in Bastille

INFLUENCE WIDESPREAD

"Voltaire despised Shakespeare as a barbarian with flashes of genius," said Professor W. J. McAndrew of the Department of French, University College, in his interesting lecture on Voltaire on Thursday in West Hall, U.C.

Voltaire's devouring ambition was to become a man of letters and his first works showed signs of philosophic thought. When imprisoned in the Bastille, the symbol of despotism, he began many of his best writings. When in exile in England, he gained success due to his inexhaustible curiosity, his power of adaptability and his manner of extracting information, combined with a linguistic ability and an unrivalled capacity for observation. England appreciated him and gave him free rein to his genius.

Following this he became a friend of Frederick the Great and when about sixty years of age began his most successful period. He tried to combat superstition, ignorance and intolerance and yet found time to urge a new dictionary and to be the champion of the oppressed. In 1746 he returned to Paris where at last he received for a short time his due glory.

Although Voltaire's grave is unknown his influence is widespread.

SANCTION THE LIBRARY ADDITION

The announcement of increased facilities in the University Library will be welcomed by most students. For a long time overcrowding has been the most pressing problem there, and expansion is the only solution that will bring permanent relief.

The Board of Governors will likely sanction the proposed addition, so that a start can be made immediately. The library is—or should be—the centre for the work of the arts students especially. There ought to be no hesitation in providing better opportunities there. Lectures have their place in every course, but they should not be the beginning and end of the work. Rather they should be the stimulus to advanced study, which can only be carried on in the library.

The need of more seminars for specialized study is pressing. The increased facilities in the English seminar form a welcome step in that direction. We suggest more adequate provision for students in the pass arts course who have hitherto, with few exceptions, been denied the privilege of using the stacks or the seminar. The contemplated addition ought to allow them a place for advanced study.

Complaints have been made as to the delay in securing books from the desk. While the expansion may help to obviate this, the provision of more and better equipped special study rooms will go further to eliminate congestion.

It is a serious handicap to try and pursue advanced study in the main reading rooms where books cannot be secured directly. Those who are working on some specialized problem require every advantage possible. Concentration is vital to progress of thought and development of an adequate critical faculty, and it can only be achieved where the desired books are on hand and can be got with a minimum of trouble.

Professor and student alike will welcome the proposed improvements. The library has now a quarter of a million books and it is absurd that there should be insufficient space for them. Every year the library is being used more, and books are accumulating. The plans should be rushed to completion as quickly as possible.

Correspondence

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

Well?

The Editor,
"The Varsity".

Dear Sir:—
As I glanced through the Tuesday issue of "The Varsity", it amazed me greatly that I should find poor English in the column headed, "With the Theatres".

It seemed to me at the time that the person "A.E.F.A.", who seems to have the ability to criticize most excellently, should pay special attention to his diction, which, when open to criticism, is a thing singularly inappropriate in such a critical review.

For the edification of A.E.F.A., which is apparently necessary, I will refer to the phrase, "will doubtless enshrine over it".

Probably such an error is due to the amount of work A.E.F.A. seems to be doing. A.E.F.A. is everywhere—and nearly everything—in "Art and Drama", and "With the Theatres".

Thanking you for your space,
Yours, etc.,

By the way, I have been invited to attend the annual K of C dance in Toronto at the K of C hall next week, Jan 17th. You could be there and I would have some one give me an introduction to sweet little you. Please advise me which is most interesting, or both, and if you can make dance I will make an effort to be in Toronto on the 17th.

Looking forward with pleasure to your letter and our meeting.

Sincerely,
George L. Hornberger.

P.S. Wish you would wire me your OK at once and have letter follow.

Miss Hunter assured "The Varsity" that the letter was genuine. "I even went to the trouble of phoning New York over a private wire and learned positively that there is a man of that name staying at the Hotel Pennsylvania," she said.

The inimitable Gaspard was supposed to make Pussy purr to-night, but has sustained a serious injury, which may prevent his public appearance—it never was much to boast of—for some time.

C—C

The well of inspiration having run dry, we refilled the flowing fountain pen and dug into ancient files, resurrecting the magnum opus of one "Juc," who composed what we consider absolutely the dumbest poem we have ever read:

A Collich girl stude on a railroad (R.R.) track,

The train was coming fast,
The train got offa the railroad (R.R.) track,

To let the girl go past.

C—C

Reports from Gaspard's bedside state that at least seventeen stitches must be taken to close the gaping wound, and that he will be unable to bend over for some time. The patient is said to be suffering from delirium.

C—C

Presumably of the type commonly known as tremens.

C—C

we have decided to learn hwiw to use the tykegrit? As yo? may see, we are adopyinh the ouch system.

C—C

We regret to state that the typewriter is no longer in working order.

C—C

A final bulletin from Gaspard's home informs us that his injury is incurable, and drastic steps must be taken to insure his return to public life. An emergency fund will probably be organized to buy him a new pair of pants altogether.

C—C

We hereby announce that this issue of "The Varsity" will be a good one. The whole brains of the entire staff have gone into its making, and we have enough lead left over for two more issues.

C—C

For the benefit of those who have been silly enough to read this far, we are now signing off at exactly 107½ a.m. Good night everybody, this is Canada's beerie station.

NEW YORK WATERPOLO TEAM PLAY BLUE AT HART HOUSE TONIGHT

American Champions

GOHAMITES ARRIVE FOR SEAL STRUGGLE

Were All-American Water Polo Champions Last Season

TORONTO SEPTET STRONG

The U. of T. water polo team have a royal chance to put themselves in the top position in the International League when they meet the New York A.C. septette in Hart House pool tonight. The Gothamites are leading the race at present with two victories and no defeats and a win for the locals will give them a tie for first place.

The Blue and White will have to travel some, however, if they want to lower the colours of the N.Y.A.C. outfit. Besides presenting a line-up that looks like a list of champion swimmers, the visitors are old hands at water polo, having won the All-American championship last year. Despite the big reputation of the team from Manhattan, however, the U. of T. squad are confident of the result. They have been hard at work under the able direction of Fran Lorenzen and should be right on their game tonight. A slight change in the line-up will be made which is expected to strengthen the team considerably. Harvey Graham will be moved up to the forward line where he will team up with Armstrong and Alexander. Graham is a sure shot and first-class passer and should add greatly to the offensive strength of the forwards. Captain George Spence will take Graham's place on the defence, and paired with Sinclair, will make a strong rear-guard. His place at rover will be filled by George Glass from the front line. Ayres will, as usual, look after the net minding assignment.

New York A.C. water polo team, U.S. champions, undefeated in the International Water Polo League, who are expected to extend Varsity to the limit here to-night. The team from left to right are: Top Row—Bud Cattus, goal; John Curran, defence; Joe Ruddy, manager; Ted Conn, forward; Leo Giebel, defence. Front Row—Joe Farley, defence; Steve Ruddy, captain and forward; Hal Vollner, forward. Ray Ruddy, not in the picture, will start in the place of Vollner and the latter will be used as a substitute.

Varsity Juniors DETERMINED TO WIN

Blue and White Must Win to be in Play-off Position

Stung by two successive reverses after a brilliant run of victories in the early stages of the campaign, Varsity's junior O.H.A. hockey team will swing into the Toronto Canoe Club sextette to-night determined to restore lost prestige and resume their position as logical contenders for the Little Big Four title. Faced with the knowledge that they must win to stay in the playoff position, the student pucksters are determined to do so, and to make the victory decisive.

Should their red-ringed opponents administer a trimming to-night, Varsity will gravitate to third place in the loop, no matter what the outcome of the second game may be. On the other hand, a win will ensure a temporary stranglehold on the second rung of the ladder, and a win for the long-overdue Marlboros in their night-cap affair with Parkdales would catapult the student representatives back into top place. With so much at stake, the game promises red hot action.

Pre-game comment places the responsibility squarely on the scoring ability of the Varsity forward line.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

In addition to the swimming display at the half time period of to-night's Varsity-New York A.C. game, a "person", who has been obtaining a considerable amount of publicity of late will give an "aquatic" display. This promises to be an event which will keep the "boys" on their toes.

To-morrow afternoon McGill and Varsity hook up in the Intercollegiate hockey series. The Blue and White will have had a five day rest and should be in good shape for this game. The Varsity forward line will have a good edge in speed over the Redmen. McMullen, Harley and Stewart are one of the fastest skating trios in hockey and of late their playing has been a treat to watch. McMullen, the flashy left winger and captain, has been playing fine hockey this year and Stewart and Harley are keeping up the pace.

The junior sextet need a win in to-night's game with T.C.C. If Parkdale beat Marlboros the former will be hard to head off from first place.

How about the juniors' forward line getting a goal or so this evening? When the blue and white put the substitutes on in the dying moments of the women's intercity hockey fixture Wednesday night, Aura Lee scored two quick goals to win the game by a 4-0 score.

Of course Varsity has only had two practices and so have hardly had much chance to develop much combination play yet, but they will need to do some real hard work before they take on Pats, last year's title holders.

Coach Marion Forward had a turnout of 20 at the second basketball practice last night, but there are still some players who have not been out yet. The intercollegiate tournament takes place at Western at the end of February so there is no time to be lost.

There is going to be an intermediate team again this year, which will be entered in the City Basketball League with Margaret Eaton, Varsity Grads and Varsity Seniors.

Last year the intermediates had a most successful season. They defeated the Varsity Grads in one game and took the senior team, last year's intercollegiate champions, into camp by a one point margin.

roads, upon which the newspapers were then dependent for news service. In 1907, a number of western newspapers formed a Western Associated Press. For four years a fight was carried on with the C.P.R. The association finally won out, and by 1917 with the aid of a $50,000 annual grant from the Dominion government, one organization made up of newspapers all over the country was formed. In 1924 the Canadian Press was deprived of the government grant, when reports quite displeasing to the labour ministry were made on a coal strike in Cape Breton Island.

Mr. Livesay gave a comprehensive survey of the Canadian Press and its activities at the present time. Its relations with the Associated Press were pointed out. The Associated Press, although an uncoloured and unbiased institution, did often overstep the mark during the war with mild propaganda.

The speaker outlined the future of the Canadian Press, when cable service will be established to Tokio and Indian cities, and more scope will be given for interpretative news along cultural economics. As to the staff appointments, Mr. Livesay told of the system of employing new men, either university graduates or self-educated messenger boys.

Lovely Laura Louise Lonely Would Welcome Wonderful Winner

By L. L. L.

Aunt Hester's January 17th.

Dear Betty:

I'm absolutely cyanosed (Medical phraseology, Ed.), you'd be too if you were completely unmoved as I am. Papa went home, I left the York and moved to Aunt's and I can't get a job. Its simply awful. I thought it would be gorgeous to be a business woman and I can't even qualify as a working-girl. I've been as popular in offices as a crocodile in Hart House tank. Honestly, I'm afraid I'll have to give up my career and get me a refrigerator, radio and rent-payer and the way I feel he won't have to be an Apollyon (Ed. note. L.L. evidently means Apollo.) either.

Aunt Hester would turn the tide in the Bay of Fundy. She insists that I'm up by nine o'clock every morning. Isn't that awful? Honestly and truly I'm beginning to believe that she was one of those Arab slave drivers, who made the Indians pick cotton bales at the point of the sword. She's always asking me questions. Yesterday she asked me what an hypothesis was. Luckily I remembered my zoology and told her it was a cross between a rhinoceros and an hippopotamus. I don't believe that she accepts evolution because she said that if that's what they taught at university, I might as well have stayed home as Mama's little helper.

I am so sorry Betty to tell you all my woes, but I do need some consolation. I'm completely unmanned, none of the boys know where I live yet. But when they do it will be a great help and will take my mind of my troubles.

So in deepest sorrow and dismay

Your dearest friend

Laura Louise.

P.S. This is the Ad. I put in the paper. It should get results. Wanted by a young body of very pleasing looks and very charming and understanding personality, a position of trust and financial advancement wherein the aforesaid may use her exceptional executive ability and understanding of men to produce the best results. Answer immediately, but not in the evening as I will likely be out. All communications strictly confidential. Box 123—L.L.

McGILL HOCKEYISTS TO OPPOSE VARSITY

The line-up that has represented them all season. Ames or Lebbarr in goal, Whitehead and Paul on the defence, and McMullen, Stewart and Harley on the attacking division composed the regular squad, with Murray, Marshall, Bell and Dewar as alternates. It is 16 years since McGill has won the intercollegiate title and the odds will be heavily against them to score a win to-morrow, but this year's team appears to have a better chance than the majority of the Red and White sextets of the past.

The scheduled basketball game between O.C.E. and St. Mike's that was to take place yesterday was postponed because the men of O.C.E. are trying military exams at the Armouries and were unable to attend.

Speaker's Vote Defeats Government In Hotly Contested Trinity Debate

Emancipation of Woman Upheld After Vigorous Argument on Friday Night

ST. HILDA'S REPRESENTED

Women Charged with Lowering Intellectual Standards of the World

By the vote of H. H. Clarke, the Speaker of the House, the government of Trinity College Literary Institute was defeated Friday night, on its motion: "Resolved, that this house views with alarm the emancipation of women."

The debate was enlivened by the presence of the ladies of St. Hilda's College, who expressed with great vigour and ability their views on this pertinent subject. Charges and counter charges were repeatedly hurled across the floor during the course of a debate which produced more intensity of feeling and more enthusiasm than has been shown for some time in Trinity debates.

"Woman is largely responsible for the lowering of our intellectual standards," said H. D. Baker, first speaker for the government. He asserted that the entrance of large numbers of women into our universities had impaired the ability of those institutions to impart knowledge. The emancipated woman, in Mr. Baker's opinion, considered the ability to smoke a cigarette more important than knowing how to cook a good dinner. She was "an intellectual female, devoid of all charm" who, once she lost her youth, would become "the most discontented person the world has ever known."

"While man supposed woman to be fully occupied in the nursery, she stepped into parliament," claimed E. A. Brooks, speaking against the motion. He maintained that our superfluous female population would no longer occupy itself with matchmaking and such matters, but would play a man's part in the world.

Miss K. L. McMillan, supporting the motion, claimed that man was naturally a very lazy animal. She acc-

DR. GORDON STRESSES DIET AS ASSURANCE OF HEALTH

Health Is Essential for Beauty and Is Said to Produce "It"

"Everyone, nowadays, is interested in diet, whether it be eighteen-day or otherwise," said Dr. Edith Gordon, when approached on the subject of co-ed health. Dr. Gordon laid great stress on diet as an assurance of health. To this end, she has erected a poster in the Women's Union to catch the eye of the passerby,—a poster enumerating foods bristling with vitamins including milk, eggs, carrots, spinach, celery and a multitude of other wholesome vim-dispensers.

"Health is the necessary basis of beauty; it is productive of a good disposition and an attractive personality, popularly known as 'it,'" affirmed Dr. Gordon. "A person radiating perfect health always invites a second look and perfect health is attained only when all the tissues of the body,—that is muscles, skin, nerves, etc.—are being provided for through the medium of well balanced meals."

"The aim of meal-planning is to present the most healthful and appetizing assortment at the minimum of expense," declared Miss M. Nickell, dietitian at Queen's Hall. "Often foods may be very nutritious and yet not very appetizing; and again, foods may be very appetizing and not very nourishing."

Sir William Mulock

Chief Justice of Ontario, and Chancellor of the University of Toronto, who celebrated his 86th birthday yesterday. A distinguished undergraduate, graduate, statesman and sportsman, Sir William's life has been colourful and full of achievements. Despite his 86 years Sir William still is hale and hearty and takes an active interest in university affairs. At the last Spring Convocation he conferred 1,400 degrees on successful students.

NEW METHODS USED IN SOUNDING OCEAN

Third Year Student Outlines Scientific Work in Air and Ocean

DDN SPEAKS ON CIRCLE

"At the bottom of the ocean, if we express pressure in terms of quantity of water, we would have enough to give 685 Russians a bath a day, 100 kilometres up in the air would give you a shower a day, and, in the upper atmosphere, only enough to wash behind your ears!" declared W. D. Patterson, third year student, before the Mathematical and Physical Society on Thursday afternoon, when speaking on "Sounding the Ocean and the Atmosphere."

Various methods of sounding the ocean were described, from the "fathom line" of our ancestors to the more modern methods by which sound is reflected at an angle from the bottom of the ocean and the depth deduced. Knowledge of the "world of waters" was also obtained through divers and submarines, although their field is limited because of their inability to stand great pressure.

Exploration of the upper atmosphere was attended with its dangers, when using aeroplanes, by lightning or by hail or ice on the wings; and limited in its field, as were the submarines by the inability to withstand the lack of pressure at great heights. As a result, much of the work has been done through sending up kites and balloons with self-recording instruments.

The speaker affirmed that northern lights were used in deciding the composition of the air—at heights which might not be reached by other means. He concluded his address with the description of a rocket which, when fired, his German inventor hoped would land in America.

Professor Burke, a graduate of Toronto, who has this year returned from the Sorbonne as lecturer in mathematics, described the efforts which have been made on the age-old problem of squaring the circle. "The so-called solutions are usually the work of the

ONTARIO MINISTER DESCRIBES ROMANCE OF EARLIEST DAYS

Jesuits and Trading Company Were Pioneers in Province Says W. J. Hon. Finlayson

FUTURE LIES IN NORTH

Debt to England and France Paid in Full During War Declares Speaker

In an interesting talk on "Romance and adventure in Ontario," the Hon. W. J. Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forests and Northern Development, outlined to the Newman Club last night the early development of the Jesuit mission and the Hudson's Bay Company—two of the most colossal romances in the history of pioneering.

Mr. Finlayson mentioned that people are accustomed to look upon the history and civilization of Ontario as coming from the east and south—down the St. Lawrence and the Niagara. This, said the minister, was not the case. "It is from the north that our history comes and there lies our future."

He then described the great adventures of the group of French missionaries of the Jesuit order, who, coming out to Canada early in the seventeenth century, founded the great mission of St. Marie in the country of the Huron Indians. Here was built a hospital, a school, a church, and many conveniences for entertaining 3,000 Indians at one time. The mission was finally abandoned as the Hurons left their country before the advancing Iroquois tribes from the south at the time that the mission came to an end they had on hand supplies enough to last for two years, which shows the great scale on which the project was carried out. "We must admire the heroism, the adventure, and the fixity of purpose of those who conducted the order," said Mr. Finlayson.

The next great romance in the history of Ontario, which also took place in the north country, was the pioneering work of the Hudson's Bay Company, beginning 20 years after the abandonment of the St. Marie mission. In 1670 Charles II granted the Hudson's Bay Charter which was the beginning of the greatest business adventure ever made. The minister pointed out the great powers given by the charter which included the power of discovering territory, operating a land company, mining company, game company, and the power to carry on war and to administer justice. "No company in the world has ever equalled the record of the Hudson's Bay Company," said Mr. Finlayson. "The company has pro-

SCIENCE PRIZE AWARDED FORMER TORONTO STUDENT

Arthur Jeffery Dempster, a former student in Mathematics and Physics at the University of Toronto, has been awarded the prize of one thousand dollars offered annually by the American Association for the Advancement of Science to the author of some outstanding contribution to scientific research.

After completing his work here with Professor J. C. McLennan, Dr. Dempster went to Munich and studied under Professor Wien. There he received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy.

The work for which Dr. Dempster was awarded the prize was a final demonstration of the theory of matter as being composed of vibrating particles.

After a year of intensive research in the laboratories of the Hospital for Sick Children, and the Dept. of Paediatrics, a group of doctors have succeeded in giving to the public a biscuit which contains all the vitamins and minerals necessary for growth. The initial purpose of the biscuit was to find a better food for children and infants and it has been found that in its perfection its benefits also apply to adults.

Vitamins whose formula is unknown are absolutely necessary for the absorption and utilization of food. There are six known vitamins: A, B, B<sub>2</sub>, C, D, and E. D is the sunshine vitamin and the wheat germ has the highest known concentration of vitamin E.

The biscuit, which is being manufactured by a Canadian firm, and will be on the market after February the first, contains whole wheat, wheat germ, butter, yeast, bone salts, iron and copper. In the trial baking it was found that although all the vitamins were present in the raw materials they were destroyed by cooking at the usual temperature used for baking. Further

OLD SITE VISITED BY MEN OF TRINITY

Present Undergraduates Are Shown Historic Building on Queen West

TALES OF 70 YEARS HEARD

The halls of the old Trinity College building in Queen Street W. rang once more to the tread of Trinity men and re-echoed again to the yells and songs of the college on Saturday afternoon when about seventy-five of the present undergraduates visited the scene of over seventy years of the history of their college.

The ghosts of former days which lurked in the cold, dusty corners of "Paradise Alley", the "Goose-neck", the "Brewery", and other well-known corridors, were brought to life by H. H. Clark of '25, who was in charge of the party. The stirring escapades of former students, the eccentricities of professors who are now immortalized in college songs, the talks of great battles between "Eastern" and "Western" and of traditional Trinity events were all recounted by Mr. Clark.

Present residents of Trinity House became very thankful for the steam heat of that building when they entered the rooms of former students which were heated solely by coal-burning fireplaces. Carved in the mantel pieces of those fireplaces, were the names of men who have since become famed throughout Canada.

After visits to the old library which was the only room in the old college to possess electric lighting and to such famous spots as "The Usury", as the Bursar's office was then called, the men assembled in Convocation Hall, where a singsong was held before the return to new Trinity College buildings.

WYCLIFFE DEBATERS FAVOUR LONG SKIRTS

Warlike Mode Being Replaced by More Feminine Attire

GOVERNMENT DEFEATED

The topic, "Resolved that this house deplores the recent lengthening of women's skirts", was energetically discussed in a debate between third and fourth divisions, held in Wycliffe College on Friday evening last.

A. Hart-Davies, for the government, stressed in his opening remarks, the enthralling interest of the subject from the viewpoint both of ladies and of gentlemen. "Full many an ankle," he touchingly remarked, "will be born to blush unseen if the new fashion comes into vogue." He quoted Addison to strengthen his argument.

Rev. A. J. Jackson, M.A., speaking for the opposition, stated that the abnormal situation caused by the war, had hastened the upward trend of the skirt. That situation had now passed and woman was returning to characteristically feminine attire once more. He was disposed to believe that the great wave of immodesty that was sweeping the country was in some way connected with the short skirt.

T. R. Millman, second speaker for the government, expounded an intimate knowledge of fashion journals, and current feminine opinion on the subject under debate. He quoted Plato, Sir Thomas Moore, Wordsworth, Kipling and Stephen Leacock as being favourably disposed toward the short skirt, and deplored the fact that like the voice of the turtle, the swish of the skirt was heard once more in our land. In an impassioned peroration he impeached the offending garment on numerous counts.

H. R. Perkins, last opposition speaker, failed to find any arguments to refute, and contented himself with the ingenuitous repetition of lines from his favourite poet Horace: "O Tempora, O Mores." Roger Babson, he said, felt the same as he.

A. Hart-Davies, in his rebuttal, annihilated the arguments of the opposition, but in spite of this fact the judges Dr. Kennedy, Dr. Coulthard and Mr. A. C. French pronounced in favour of the opposition.

MEDICAL WOMEN ENTERTAIN MEMBERS OF THE FACULTY

The annual Nabob Tea given by the Medical Women's Undergraduate Association, was held in Argyll House on Saturday, Jan. 18.

The tea is given for the doctors, professors and demonstrators in the Faculty of Medicine, and for the women doctors in the city. The guests were received by Lady Falconer, Dr. Curtin, Miss Margaret Patterson, president of the M.W.U.A., and Miss Reba Willets, vice-president of the M.W.U.A.

Many of the doctors availed themselves of the opportunity of meeting the students to whom they lectured. The girls of the fourth and fifth years served and tea and coffee were poured by Mrs. Duncan Graham, Mrs. Shenstone, Mrs. Cameron and Dr. Edna Guest.

Varsity Keenly Felt Absence of Stellar Defence and Wing Men

POORLY PLAYED GAME

McMullen and Dewar Starred for Varsity: St. Germain for McGill

McGill University's smart hockey team came within an ace of defeating Varsity Saturday afternoon in the first game for the senior intercollegiate title. In the day's play the Blue and White were lucky to hold the Redmen to a 2-2 draw. Judging by the fine exhibition served up by the visitors, Varsity will have a mighty tough time taking the return game in Montreal and retaining the intercollegiate title, which they have held for the past 18 years. The absence of Bruce Paul, stellar defence man was keenly felt and Freddie Murray, effective little wing man, was also on the missing list. It was expected that the locals would have no trouble in downing the hapless Red and White sextet and the result of the game came as a big surprise to the Varsity supporters.

The game started off in slow fashion with the majority of the Blue and White team just going through the motions. In the first period neither team was able to bulge the twine. The Red and White started the second stanza with the proverbial McGill, Gillivray, fast skating McGill defence player, glided through the Blue team and scored just one minute after the opening bell. Five minutes later St. Germain raced down the left boards and let go a terrific drive to put McGill two goals up. Then the Blues came to life with a vengeance and made things hum for the Montrealers. Varsity were rewarded before the period closed when Whitehead scored on Dewar's rebound.

The third period was not as fast as the preceding one, but the Blues kept up a steady offensive and kept peppering away at Powers in the McGill nets. Varsity got the equalizer when Harley scored on a pass out from be-

NEW YORK CHAMPIONS PROVIDE FAST GAME

Visiting Team Demonstrate Why They Lead All Opposition

SECURED EARLY LEAD

In the fastest water polo game played in Toronto this season the flashy New York Athletic Club's septet defeated Varsity 6-3 at Hart House Friday night. The American champions plainly demonstrated why they are leading the International Water Polo League outclassing all opposition. New York's speed and team-play was nothing short of sensational. Long passes shot with terrific speed from the New York defence up to the Varsity goal where a waiting forward slipped into the Blue net, accounted for most of the N.Y. tallies. New York have this play down to a science and it kept Varsity going at top speed trying to break it up.

New York scored from the initial face-off, with Steve Ruddy shooting the goal. Ted Cann sunk another to put the visitors two up. Varsity seemed unable to get going, but with less than a minute to go Bob Armstrong, Varsity centre, got Varsity's first counter. New York came right back

OUR INACTIVE PARTIES

To get into power, and when once there, to remain in that position as long as possible, is the only thing that seems to count in federal political life. A plan of constructive work that can be carried out through the years does not matter. Holding the reins of office and keeping the other fellow on the opposition benches is of greatest moment. Neither of the large parties seem to have any plan of construction, but only old and knotted political planks to keep the voter appeased. The Liberal party is quite satisfied to let matters slide along while the Conservatives have nothing to offer the constituents except a wealthy, highly-shined gentleman from Dalhousie, who once wore a ten-gallon hat.

Gone is the young deputy minister of labour who was anxious for reform. Gone is the brilliant young man who bristled with ideas and longed to smash the chamber of reactionaries on Parliament Hill. Instead the country is being led, or, we should rather say wheeled, toward keeping the Liberals in power and having both Quebec and the West voting the same way. With the thinning of hair has come the desire for easy life and the senate is found to be not such a bad body at that and certainly has its uses when a bill is passed to appease one part of the country and killed in the senate to placate another section of the Dominion.

Even the question of the tariff, concerning which some editorial writers still punish their typewriters, is dead. Both parties have no use for the question and if to-morrow R. B. Bennett were to take office the wall of protection would remain exactly the same as under the supposed low tariff Liberals. Nothing has been accomplished by the party in power, while those who desire to take their places have nothing to offer. A change will come only when the people become tired of a King and desire a Bennett.

Instead of an active government and an active opposition which should be looking ahead and drawing closer this youthful country we have groups of politicians who find the fruits of office hard to relinquish or greatly to be desired, as the case may be. No attempt is being made to deal with the real and pressing problems that must be solved. They are being pushed aside and the policy of waiting, and acting only when absolutely compelled to act, and then in the most superficial and cautious manner, seems to be the one in favour.

The greatest of problems lie before the country and both parties refuse to commit themselves on anything that looks as if it were to involve action. The question of immigration is of tremendous importance and yet nothing is being done. Does Canada want immigrants or has it enough population? Are Eastern-Europeans wanted or are only people of the British Isles welcomed? Should newcomers to the country be assisted materially or allowed to shift for themselves?

The biggest race problems are yet to come and are not over, as some Ontario and Quebec hired lecturers seem to think. Only when the people of Ontario and Quebec begin to know how each lives and what each desires will the real conflict come. When the ideals of the Nordic begin to conflict with the ideals of the Latin will the troubles commence that must, and it is hoped will, be solved.

We quite agree that to know is to understand, but to know but a little is to misunderstand and that knowing of little will come in the near future. At present one is ignorant of the other. The ideals of the Slav on the prairies have not yet come into conflict with the Latin in Quebec and when they do there will be trouble unless complete understanding is brought about. No step is being taken to anticipate the troubles.

The question of the weakening of power of the central government and increase of strength of the individual provinces must be dealt with, and yet they are being completely ignored. The question of the privy council and its power of being supreme over the highest judicial body in the Dominion must be handled and it is being left alone. The time to do these things is now. There must be preparations for the actual conflicts before they come and not when they are forced upon a government that will have to act in haste.

CHAMPUS CAT

THE DREADFUL DRAGON

Chapter I.

The missionary was proudly exhibiting his Chinese pupils to his visiting friend. "Here is one of my cleverest boys, old chap," he said. The boy looked up at the two men. A curious expression almost lit up his expressionless face.

C—C

"Good morning, Slo Gin," said the missionary. "How are you?" "Draggin' a little, illustrious sir," replied the boy respectfully.

"Two years ago this boy could not speak a word of English," continued the missionary, "and look at him today. He can hardly speak a word of Chinese. In years to come he will be an influential citizen here in his native city of Sun Tan. This is just one example of the wonderful work we are doing here in China." With a kindly smile at the youth he passed on down the aisle.

C—C

Slo Gin returned to the study of his text on Conversational Calculus. Let us say a few words about the boy. Well built and above the average height, his appearance was formidable and at the same time pleasing. And were it not for the fact that all Chinamen look alike, one would have said that he was handsome.

C—C

The son of a well-to-do silk worm strainer, Slo Gin was raised according to the strictest Christian principles as taught by the good missionary from Hamilton, Ont. As his father had been converted some years before, it was his wish to return the compliment by bringing up his son to be a Chinese missionary to Hamilton.

C—C

But this was not an undertaking that appealed to Slo Gin. He was made of different stuff. And he did not relish the undertaking in any town, let alone a promising community like Hamilton.

C—C

Our hero had other plans. In his mind's eye he alternately pictured himself as a river pirate, a rebel general and an opium king. Since birth he had been betrothed to Gay Flea, the lovely daughter of a struggling cork-screw sharpener. As Slo Gin thought of her his heart softened and his eyes became dreamy; but when he thought of her mother Long Lung, his heart hardened again and his eyes crossed with a shudder.

C—C

Slo Gin was awakened from his reverie by a loud explosion in the streets: books were dropped and forgotten and terrified students scampered madly for shelter. Women screamed and fainted. But in all the hubbub two alone were calm. Slo Gin licked his lips in pleasant anticipation. "The rebel army,—there is sure to be a battle," he thought.

C—C

In the eyes of the missionary gleamed the zealous light of the religious fanatic. In a moment he appeared in the streets with a huge armful of tracts and liver pill almanacs. Straight into the fray he walked and with admirable courage began handing tracts to every soldier beating townsfolk and leaving an almanac with each of the wounded.

Two Debates in Two Nights

The Editor,

"The Varsity".

I wonder if you would be so kind as to spare me enough space to make a statement regarding a peculiar situation in our activities for this week, that I feel is of general interest.

Due to lack of support, as indicated by attendance, given to intercollegiate debating last year, it was strongly recommended by those in charge that no such debates be undertaken this year.

However, a representative committee of students decided it would be unfair to abolish intercollegiate debating completely without more decisive evidence that the students are not interested. Accordingly we have arranged one strictly inter-university debate by entertaining the N.F.C.U.S. team on Thursday of this week. Unfortunately, this immediately follows what promises to be one of the most interesting of recent Hart House debates on Wednesday night. It seems impossible to expect that the divided interest will not tend to lessen the enthusiasm for either. Two such important and interesting debates is most unusual.

I would like here to point out that this circumstance and conflict is inevitable. Hart House and the Literary and Debates Committees have co-operated as far as possible this season; but Hart House has to arrange for its honourary guests when it can, as is understood. Similarly, since the N.F.C.U.S. team is touring Canada, we cannot disrupt their schedule.

In view of this, and in spite of the interest which both debates ordinarily would receive, I would like to request that those who are interested in debating within the university, make a special effort to take in both occasions. Our future program of inter-university debating will depend largely on the attendance Thursday evening. At the same time we are anxious that it should not in any way interfere with the Hart House debate.

VARSITY FIRSTS ENGAGE BATTLING QUEEN'S TEAM

Seniors Seek Revenge To-night for Defeat in Close Game at Kingston

To-night at Varsity Arena the Blue and White seniors tackle Queen's in a regular O.H.A. fixture. Now that the Rangers have dropped out of the group, the three remaining teams are tied in points for the leadership. The winner of to-night's game will be on the top of the heap. Smearing under the 1-0 set-back received at the hands of the Tricolour down in Kingston, the Blues will be fighting hard for a win.

The Queen's sextet boast a nice assortment of puck-chasers with Lawlor probably the pick of the forwards. A good defence is backed up by Quinn, a first-class net-minder, as the score of the game at Kingston would indicate.

The Blue and White will place the same combination on the ice and so will not likely enter the game suffering from over-confidence. Both teams are very evenly matched and to-night's game promises to be a thriller from start to finish.

McGILL TIE BLUE 2-2 IN FIRST FOR COLLEGE HOCKEY TITLE

SPEAKING OF SPORT

McGill certainly pulled a big surprise by holding Varsity to a 2-2 tie in the first game of the Intercollegiate hockey series. Varsity minus the services of Bruce Paul, but Dewar, who replaced him on the defence, turned in a good effort. McGill is a tremendously improved team over last year's aggregation, the return of Ralph St. Germain to the centre position putting a punch and pep into their attack. All of last year's regulars looked much better and McGillivray on defence played a great game alongside of McTeer. Varsity has held the Intercollegiate hockey title since 1914, while McGill last had the trophy in 1912. Judging from Saturday's game McGill has a great chance to break the Blue's long series of triumphs.

To-night's Varsity-Queen's game at Varsity arena should be another "natural". The winner of this encounter will take the lead in the O.H.A. Senior A group. Queen's beat Varsity in Kingston last Monday 1-0, but the Blue and White should hand the Tricolour a setback here.

Varsity Intermediates lost their first game Saturday night when Bradford beat them in overtime. Bradford and Varsity are now tied for group leadership.

The Blue juniors play Marlboros at the Arena Gardens to-night. Frank Sullivan's men need a win to secure a position in the group play-off. Parkdale and Toronto Canoe Club meet in the first game of the double-header.

New York A.C. left no doubt in the minds of those who saw them in action Friday night that they are best water polo team Varsity has ever played. Speed and team-work and then more speed describes them.

For the first time Household Science has entered its own team in the interfaculty series. Formerly girls enrolled in this faculty have played for the college in which they were enrolled, but the registration in the Household Science course has so increased that enough players have been available for entries in both the hockey and basketball series. In the swimming Household Science will continue as in other years. However, in a year or so when its athletic association becomes sufficiently well established, this faculty will be able to stand upon its own feet in all branches of athletics.

Phyl Griffiths will not be able to coach the intercollegiate basketball team this season owing to pressure of work. Miss Griffiths coached the team last year and made a mighty good job of it. She has also coached the U.C. juniors for two years, piloting them to a championship last year and to the finals this season.

VARSITY DEFEATED 3-2 IN THRILLING OVERTIME STRUGGLE

Intermediates Fail to Hold Early Lead and Weaken in Overtime

BRADFORD GETS BREAKS

Clute and Leake Are Blue Stars but Stellar Goalkeeping Prevents scores

In a thrilling overtime struggle Varsity's representatives in the intermediate O.H.A. series lost to Bradford by a score of 3-2. The game, played last Saturday night at the Varsity Arena, was well contested. The game, which was fairly clean, was "a good game to win and a hard one to lose".

Hardly had the fans settled in their seats when Leake, starting a rush at centre, skated through the entire Bradford team to put Varsity one up by putting one past Harmon which he had no chance of saving. Bradford now started to make the play. In quick succession McCartney was called upon to save fine shots made by Stephenson and Turan. Belfrey nearly tied the score, but he had tough luck when his shot hit the upright and rolled away.

Stratham made it two to nothing for Varsity when he pushed Clute's rebound past Harmon near the end of the period.

Two minutes of the second period had been ticked off when Stephenson made Bradford's first tally, when, after going down the right boards, he shot from close in, giving McCartney no chance of saving. Harmon robbed Ferguson and Conn of sure goals by his spectacular goal tending. Evans tied the score when he pushed the puck past the prostrated McCartney after a scuffle in front of the Varsity net. Both teams were trying hard to take the lead as the bell rang.

The third period play consisted of rushes. Stephenson broke the deadlock when, after starting a rush at his blue line, he went through the Blue and White's line and bore down on McCartney, giving him no time to clear. Waller received a major penalty for punching Clute after Clute had unintentionally tripped him. The Bradford team, short one man, gamely fought off Varsity's five man offensive, but a goal was inevitable, and Leake was responsible for the score with but 30 seconds left to play.

The overtime period saw Bradford's luck still holding out when Turan shot from the blue line and the puck was juggled by McCartney. The lead was kept till the end of the game, the score ending Varsity 2, Bradford 3.

Clute and Leake looked good for Varsity, while Waller, Belfrey and Stephenson shone for the Victors.

Bradford—Goal, Harmon; defence, C. Evans, Stephenson; centre, Turan; wings, Waller and Belfrey; alternates, Feaver, Craik, Evans, Seim.

Varsity—Goal, McCartney; defence, R. Graham and N. Smith; centre, R. Clute; wings Stratham and Leake; alternates, Ferguson, Conn, Percyman, and H. Moran.

FALTERING JUNIORS MEET DUKES TONIGHT

Radical Changes Are Expected to Produce Scoring Punch in Blue Team

SMILLIE TO PLAY ON WING?

Varsity juniors cross sticks with Marlboros to-night in a Big Four O.H.A. hockey game at the downtown arena. Just at present the Iron Dukes are occupying the cellar position, but recent games would appear to show that the Blue and White are aspiring to take their place. It was the 1928-29 Canadian champions that started the locals on the downward trend at a time when they were coasting along nicely. The Marlboros of this year are not the great machine which walked off with all the honours last year and the Blue and White should down them.

The juniors possess a powerful defence in Levinsky and Smillie, but the wing line of Hetherington, Brant and Bennett, have fallen down badly of late in their prime duty—that of getting goals. Hetherington looks to be the best of the trio, but taken together they do not produce goals. Rumour has it that there will be a big shake-up in the line-up. In the game with T.C.C. Hetherington was used at centre, but that strategy failed to produce the desired effect. He seems to be destined for the right wing berth. Some suggest that Cunningham be used at centre with Brant at left, with Bennett doing the bench warming. (Continued on page 4)

BLUE JUNIORS DROP ANOTHER IN OVERTIME

Red Ringers Emerge Victorious After Three Extra Periods in Close game

HETHERINGTON SCORES

In a game that went 30 minutes overtime, Toronto Canoe Club came out on the long end of a 3-1 victory over Varsity juniors on Friday night at Varsity Arena.

The Red Ringers had all their stars on the ice for this game and their fast-breaking forward line repeatedly bored in close on Hunnisett. For the first time in the last four games the Blue forward line notched a goal. Hetherington turning the trick on a timely pass from Cunningham.

The Varsity defence turned in their usually effective game, Levinsky and Smillie using the bodies to good effect. Cunningham's backchecking broke up many of the Red Ringers' rushes and he was always dangerous on the attack.

The first period was scoreless. Both teams began slowly and warmed up in an effort to score as the stanza progressed. A scramble in front of Hunnisett almost resulted in a tally. The second period produced some fine hockey. McNeill skated through the Blue team and gave Hunnisett no chance to save. Levinsky and Smillie tried to even up matters on solo rushes that carried them right through, but House's work kept them from scoring.

In the first few moments of the final period Hetherington combined with Cunningham and tied the score. The teams settled down to a defensive game and the sixty minutes of play ended in a tie. In the third overtime period Housey broke through, split the defence and scored. Every Varsity man went up on the attack, but were outlucked. Levinsky was chased in the last minute and McNeill passed a lone defenceman to tally the final goal.

T.C.C. — Goal, House; defence, Roulston and Housey; centre, Brown; wings, McManus and McNeill; alternates, Robertson, Davidson, Dunning and Neale.

Varsity—Goal, Hunnisett; defence, Smillie and Levinsky; wings, Hetherington and Bennett; centre, Brant; alternates, McNichol, Cunningham and Hendry.

and Ray Ruddy made it 3-1 at the intermission.

In the second half Ray Ruddy got New York's fourth goal right at the start. Alexander scored Varsity's second with a neat shot. The locals looked better at this stage of the game, but a Blue penalty aided Steve Ruddy to get New York's fifth marker. Ted Cann finished the Americans' scoring efforts with a sixth goal. Varsity snapped into it and shortly before time, Armstrong scored Varsity's third.

Steve and Ray Ruddy and Ted Cann, New York forwards, starred with two goals apiece. Giebel on defence, was a star. Armstrong of Varsity, played a good game and Ayres in goal stopped plenty, having no chance on the shots that beat him.

New York A.C.—Forwards, Ray Ruddy, Steve Ruddy, Ted Cann; defence, John Carren, Leo Giebel; rover, Joe Farley; goal, John Calmus.

hind the net by Stewart. Both teams tried hard to break the deadlock, but both goalies were unbeatable. Ward of McGill, came the nearest to scoring of any man on the ice when he left the entire Varsity team flatfooted and went in on Lebar alone, but the latter made a sensational save to avert a defeat for "Red" Porter's men.

The game, as an exhibition of hockey, was rather ragged, but was very interesting to watch due to the close nature of the struggle. Lebar in goal, played a great game and McMillen and Dewar, who took Paul's place on the defence, were good for the Blue; Harry Whitehead never gave up trying and had his efforts rewarded by a goal. The whole McGill team looked good, with McGillivray and St. Germaine the best.

McGill—Goal, Powers; defence, McGillivray, McTeer; centre, St. Germaine; wings, Farquharson, Robert-caused the male members of the opposition of being "embryonic barbarians who wanted to get some unsuspecting female to support them while telling her she was emancipated."

The characteristic caution, humanizing intelligence and powers for organization and administration of the emancipated woman were highly praised by Miss Helen James, who asserted that men could no longer keep their wives "tied to the grindstone of domestic life."

Various speakers for the government contended that if woman was emancipated she could lose her most precious asset, her femininity.

The opposition asserted, however, that man opposed the emancipation of woman for the sole reason that he feared it. In the opinion of one speaker the emancipated woman had merely "freed herself of the silken bonds of domesticity for the iron bonds of commercialism."

At the close of the debate the Speaker ruled that members of St. Hilda's College were not entitled to vote on the measure. A division was taken which resulted in a tie vote. The speaker then cast his deciding vote against the motion.

Actor Attracts Attention From Afar Fervent Fan To Fly From Far Japan

By P. A. Gardner

The following letter has been received by Mr. Haggerty Hope of this university, from Tokyo, Japan:

Honourable Sir:

To-day in circumventing a newspaper emporium I ceased to buy The Privateer and reading therein one of your distinguishable effusions at once did an eclectic chill scot through my vein and it was apparent that my heart would finish its beat. It is you, little luscious "You" for which I have longed furtively, for which my heart has whaled like unto an infant whaling for Castoril.

Fortunate me to have overlooked this so happy journal who is blessed with the fruit of your spiritual workings.

My very approximate vacation shall be consumed in your residence. I shall domesticate this unworthy frame in the Y.W.C.A. where it shall be at your disposal if so you will award my desirable eagerness.

If it is evident to be aggravatingly essential, you will be welcomed bearing your grandparent or even a literate accomplice if there is of them one which is fair and indignant to the eye as your so execrable and polished mode of writing to the ear. Nevertheless, it does not appear to your unworthy handmaiden that this accompaniment can be insistent, since of my thoughts are confounded from the most virginitive chastisement and in fact I am not discontented should I wed you if it should of necessity arrive at that destination.

I who am chaffing below my most turgid apprehension of your salutary umbrage trust hopefully that your sole will fly forth to my end that we may meet and unionize with the insulting bliss.

Your ignominious aspirate,
Yung Fat Shin.

Mr. Hope on being interviewed expressed the opinion that this incipient romance was quite "odd". "It is," he said demurely, "well high unique even in my experience." He informed the reporter that he had even gone to the trouble of spending the week-end in Japan, and had discovered that there is a Yung Fat Shin in Tokyo. She is a chambermaid in the Yoholo (trans. "Temperance") Hotel of that city, which of course is rather flattering to the recipient of her admiration.

Mr. Hope is, to use the words of one dramatic critic, "Undoubtedly the most alleged actor of the Players' Guild."

Williamson has been used on the offensive. He was originally a defence man and a good one. Criticism of Coach Frank Sullivan has been given to the effect that he is too conservative, while a radical change is necessary if a winning combination is to be produced. A suggestion has been made that Don Smillie, who packs a wicked shot, be moved up to left wing and have Williamson take his place on the rear-guard, and that the wing line be completed with Cunningham at the pivot position and Hetherington at right wing. How Coach Sullivan will rearrange his players will not be known until game time to-night.

research showed that by baking them at a slightly lower temperature and in an acid medium obtained by the addition of a small amount of Cream of Tartar, the vitamins were preserved in the final biscuit.

The wheat germ, which comprises 15 per cent. of the biscuit, was exposed to ultra-violet light, which is generated by mercury vapour through a quartz tube. This activates the ergosterol which is present in the wheat germ and turns it into vitamin D—the sunshine vitamin. One ounce of pure ergosterol, after exposure to ultra-violet light, contains as much vitamin D as is present in six tons of Cod Liver Oil.

Professor Steinbock of the University of Wisconsin discovered that vitamin D was produced by irradiation. This process was patented and donated to the university. The process of making the sun wheat biscuit is also patented and the patent has been donated to the research laboratories of the University of Toronto.

The first experiments were not carried on in a test-tube, but were performed on rats in the laboratory of the Hospital for Sick Children. These rats were obtained from the Wistar Institution, Philadelphia. They are pedigreed animals, carefully selected and bred in captivity so that their normal growth per week is known. The rat is used for this experiment because its food and life processes resemble those of the human being more closely than any other of the smaller animals. Great care is taken that their food be of the purest obtainable in order to make sure the vitamins are lacking until fed them under observation.

To safeguard the public from extravagant claims, all advertising is carried on under the supervision of the research laboratory. It is expected that the public will receive this biscuit well. All royalties are to be used for further medical research.

FRICION ARISES OVER EXAM SET FOR MEDICINE V

Students Deliberately Avoid High Ranking in Hygiene Test

WOULD CUT HOLIDAY SAVING

Fifth Year Charge School of Hygiene With Lack of Co-operation

According to the "Evening Telegram", deliberate effort was made by some fifth year medical students to write indifferently at their examination held last Wednesday. If they passed with distinction it would mean that some of them would lose their summer jobs, be financially embarrassed, and perhaps even be obliged to leave the university.

"I did not exert myself in this examination," a student said in an interview in St. Michael's Hospital, "for by doing so I will be placed in the section which does its fifteen-day special course during September, and so I shall be able to work during the summer with the Forestry Service and pay for the rest of my tuition. If I did well I should be compelled to take this course during May or June, involving serious financial difficulties, which, in my own case, would mean that I would have to leave the university. But the results of this examination count 25 per cent. toward one's standard in the hygienic course, so in order to ensure a summer job I have had to lower my standard."

This examination is the final test taken by fifth year medical students in hygiene, the course itself extending another year. Upon the basis of the examination taken on Wednesday, the results of which will not be announced until about March, the class will be divided into two sections. The first section will be obliged to take a fifteen-day course of tours and lectures pertaining to dairies, pasteurization, etc., in May or June; the second section will be obliged to take it during the summer.

QUEEN'S UNEARTH TWO STUDENTS WITH GAELIC

Special to "The Varsity"
Kingston.—Gaelic scholars are still to be found at Queen's University. It was feared this old seat of learning, founded by Scotsmen on Glasgow lines, and favoured for its Gaelic, could no longer muster enough students to enter for the annual competition for the Cameron Scholarship. But the date for application was extended, and yesterday two young lads from the Ottawa district entered the competition. Miss Catherine McLeod and Miss Edith Ferguson, both of Maxville, Ont. The Robert Bruce Matriculation Scholarship in arts has been awarded to Miss Edith Louise Carscadden of Bartonville, it is announced at Queen's.

BOYS FROM SETTLEMENT SEE MCGILL-VARSITY GAME

Due to the kindness of Mr. T. A. Reed of the Athletic Directorate, about thirty enthusiastic boys from the University Settlement attended the McGill-Varsity hockey game on Saturday afternoon. ### CONSTRUCTION OF NEW WOMEN'S RESIDENCE STARTS THIS SPRING

Concrete Plans For New Buildings To House 165 Students Emerge at Last. Will be Erected on Present Sites of 81, 83 and 85 St. George Street; Three Separate Houses

DINING ROOMS WILL RELIEVE UNION CONGESTION

Method of Organization Will be Different From Any Now in Practice Graduates' House and Dr. Gordon's Office Will Be Moved To Make Way For New Buildings

By Hazel Hammond

"Definite plans have been made to start a new residence for University College women next spring," Colonel A. D. LePan, Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds, informed "The Varsity" yesterday. "That is certain."

The new residence will consist of three separate houses, each to accommodate about fifty-five students, and located on the southeast corner of St. George St. and Hoskin Avenue, on the present site of 81, 83, and 85 St. George St. It is expected to be far in advance of any of the present residences. The method of organization will differ from any now in practice, and the separate houses are intended to preserve entities within the whole.

There are now 137 undergraduate women in boarding-houses, and 128 in residence. Also in residence are 30 students in Household Science, 9 in Medicine, and 19 graduates. There are 370 living at home, making a total of 635 undergraduate women in U.C.

Miss Dorothy Kilpatrick, Head of the University College Women's Union, expressed great pleasure over the coming of the new residences, while heartily corroborating the need for them. In addition to the evidence furnished by the long waiting-lists and the large number living in boarding-houses, there is no doubt, said she, that lack of accommodation frequently influences parents in sending their daughters to other colleges. Since dining-rooms will be attached to the new buildings, the overwhelming pressure on the Union kitchens should be relieved.

The future location of the graduates' house, which is one of the three which will have to make way for the new buildings, is as yet undecided. Dr. Edith Gordon, medical advisor for women students, whose office was moved this year from the Lillian Massey building to 84 St. George St., will also apparently have to seek new quarters.

THERAPY COURSE NOT DISCONTINUED

Mr. W. J. Dunlop Denies Report Occupational Therapy to be Abandoned

RUMOUR RISES ANNUALLY

"No, I know nothing whatever about it," was Mr. W. J. Dunlop's reply, when asked if there were any truth in the report that the course in Occupational Therapy was to be discontinued this year. Miss Wright, supervisor of Occupational Therapy, and members of the senior class had evidently not heard the report until questioned by the reporter, and were amused as well as surprised.

Mr. Dunlop, who, as Director of University Extension, is the director of this course, thought the question rather humorous, remarking that "this same rumour seems to be spread abroad every year. I am anxious to know where it originates."

As a parting assurance, and as a final denial that this might be the last year for this much-misunderstood course, Mr. Dunlop added, "No, we have no thought of it!"

NO PROSPECT YET OF WOMEN'S CLUB

Feminine Hart House Is Still
No More Than A Hope
Says Col. LePan

$250,000 IS LOWEST COST

"There is not the faintest immediate hope of a Hart House for women," stated Colonel A. D. LePan, superintendent of buildings, yesterday in conjunction with his statement concerning the new university college residence. The extension of Hart House is not to be built by the university, and all the woman can hope for is a gift from some generous benefactor. There is probably no worthier object for a donor; the founders of Hart House could hardly have foreseen the tremendous benefit they were conferring on the university.

When questioned as to the possibility of the women achieving anything for themselves by co-operation, Colonel LePan was pessimistic. At the very least a quarter of a million dollars would be needed for even the most miniature imitation of Hart House. "What do you get from a candy sale? Twenty dollars?" smiled the superintendent.

But he agreed if the women agitated persistently enough to make their need widely known, the benefactor might appear. They might succeed in gaining the influence of public opinion.

"Everyone in contact with the women students agrees about the urgent need for a building common to the various colleges and faculties," said Miss Dorothy Kilpatrick, Head of the University College Women's Union. "The lack of it accounts largely for the lack of university spirit."

"What is going to solve the social difficulty arising from the exclusive nascentility of Hart House? Where are all the joint intercollegiate debates, committees, groups, parties and so on, to be held? Would a wing of the new building meet the need, or is a separate building advisable?"

The hostesses at Newman Club for the Saturday afternoon tea dance and the Sunday afternoon tea were Miss Marybel Quinn and Miss Catharine Smyth.

PARTY POLICIES MUCH THE SAME

Professor Underhill Thinks Change Means Little to Country

STRONG STANO IMPOSSIBLE

"The statements expressed by yesterday's editorial are substantially true, but the facts are nothing new if you have a perceptive insight into politics," stated Professor O. H. Underhill, professor of history in University College. "There is little tangible difference between the two principal parties in Canada and a change in parties would make little difference in the governing of the country."

"However, I think 'The Varsity' would do a lot better by asking the Macdonald-Cartier Club and the University Liberal Club what they mean by their policies than by attacking Mr. Bennett and Mr. King. It would be interesting to see what they would say in support of their opinions."

"A political party cannot afford to attach themselves to any national policy which will likely get them in trouble with a section of the voters and (Continued on page 4)

"Hap" Gilbert, Former Wycliffe
Lion, Returns Minus

Minus his famous moustache, William (Hap) Gilbert, erstwhile Wycliffe College social lion and popular University College man, has returned to town after many historic triumphs abroad. In an interview with "The Varsity" he recounted some of his adventures in the dramatic field over the border.

"I've appeared in two talkies in the United States. One is 'Applause' with Helen Morgan and the other 'The Battle of Paris' with Gertrude Lawrence. They are produced by Pathe and Famous Players," he said. He also played in "War" at the Bronx Theatre Guild and in "Comedy of Women," Craig Theatre, New York.

PROBATIONERS WILL STAY IF WORK IS SATISFACTORY

A. B. Fennel, Registrar, Does Not Yet Know Number Dropped This Year

"No, not unless they make a satisfactory record to warrant their continuance at the university," was the reply from the Registrar's office in answer to "The Varsity's" question as to whether students on probation are asked to leave at the close of the fall term.

"I haven't heard anything about it this year as yet. I can't say what standard of academic work is required of the student on probation. I do not know how many were dropped this year as the report has not come in yet," stated Mr. A. B. Fennel, Registrar of the University of Toronto.

QUEEN'S DEFEATED IN O.H.A. TILT AS VARSITY REGAIN LEAGUE LEAD

RADCLIFFE COLLEGE HAS INDIVIDUAL TUTOR SYSTEM

Registration Too Large Here to Make Same Plan Feasible

Radcliffe College has adopted a new educational method and one which has proved successful after trial. This feature is individual tutors for the students. The tutor meets the student at least once every fortnight, often once a week and devotes his whole attention to her problems for thirty minutes to an hour.

The purpose of this encounter is neither cramming nor coaching. It is an attempt to co-ordinate all subjects in the student's course and to encourage independent and thorough methods of study. It makes for a mature work and supplies a personal note in the educational system. It is a valuable contact and it is stimulating. Here at Toronto University an attempt is made as far as possible to get into personal contact with the students. Much success has been obtained in the study of English through this method. It is a wonderful opportunity for the student, and besides makes the work of the teacher more fruitful. In medicine this method gives the student a tremendous advantage. He can talk over the problems of the clinic and laboratory with the teacher who has so much to impart to him. Far more knowledge can be acquired from a ten minute conversation with an intelligent professor than can be gained by an hour of hard study.

CO-EDUCATION IS HERE TO REMAIN

Mrs. Kirkwood Does Not Take Trinity Debaters
Seriously

WOMEN STUDIOUS AS MEN

"Co-educational institutions have come to stay and remarks such as made in the Trinity debate are not meant to be taken seriously," stated Mrs. M. M. Kirkwood, Professor of English in University College. The remarks she referred to were that women are largely responsible for the lowering of our intellectual standards and that the entrance of large numbers of women into our universities have impaired the ability of these institutions to impart knowledge.

"Good or bad depends on the individual, and there are as many women who are serious in their studies as there are men students. The lack of restriction in this university means a lowering of the intellectual standard and no general statement placing the blame on co-education can be fairly made. Of course the entrance of women into university life has made a certain difference, but generally they use their opportunities equally as well as men."

"In highly selective colleges like Oxford and Cambridge the type of student is more studious and the entrance of women has made little difference in the high standards there."

Varsity's 4-2 defeat of Queen's in an exhibition of rugged hockey last night at the U. of T. Arena, placed the Blue and White in undisputed possession of first place in the senior O.H.A. group. The game was fast all the way, with the local outfit having an edge on the play. Queen's matched the Blues in speed, but lacked the combination and finish of Red Porter's outfit. The Tricolour play a heavy-checking game, but they failed to slow up the Blue speedsters much.

Both teams sailed right in at top speed from the face-off and tested the goalkeepers on lightning rushes. The netminders had several close calls. Harley opened the scoring for Varsity when he combined with Bell to beat the Queen's defence, lodging the puck behind Quinn from close in. The goal came after five minutes of play. Six minutes later McKelvey let loose a fast one from the blue line that Ames failed to see in time, and the score was tied. Both sides kept up the crowd on its feet for the rest of the period with some wide-open hockey.

In the second frame Queen's started a body-checking barrage with Gih McKelvey as the storm centre. Varsity's combination improved considerably and Quinn had plenty of work to keep the puck out. After fifteen minutes of strenuous hockey Marshall and (Continued on page 3)

NEW BOOK SHELF PROVES POPULAR

Biographies and Novels Have Greatest Popularity at Library

DEMAND FIXES SELECTION

"Yes, that shelf of new books is very popular, both with members of the faculty and with the students," said Miss M. L. Newton, head of the circulation department of the university library. "We have waiting lists for quite a number of the books. Biography seems to have the greatest attraction, although novels never stay on the shelves very long. Just now a new life of Elizabeth, and another of Richelieu are in great demand. The 'Life and Letters of Lady Byron' is popular too."

Miss Newton explained that she chose a variety of new books for this shelf, and, if they proved popular, she left them there for a couple of weeks, otherwise they were removed in a day or two. There were usually two or three new books put out every day.

"There is a shelf of books accessible to the undergraduates in the downstairs reading-room too," Miss Newton went on. "The books there aren't necessarily new, they are put out there to provide broader reading matter for the students. For example, there are several of Hardy's novels—works on travel, art and one on the social life in England in the eighteenth century. This shelf is not in use as much, possibly because this is the first year it has appeared there," Miss Newton concluded.

IN PRAISE OF "YES-MEN"

Observers have been, from time to time, puzzled by the unfailling regularity with which men and women, who, in college, were the brightest of local luminaries, disappeared after graduation. In their place, in the more matter-of-fact outside world, there arose, in the course of a score of years, leaders who, in college, had been unnoticed, except for their quiet sitting in the back seats at debates or for their noiseless gliding through the stacks of the library. For example, George McKay, fictitiously '98, who read the most witty and brilliant papers at the Philomathean Society, and for whom the loftiest scholastic career was prophesied, is now a mousey professor in an obscure college. Another case in point was that of Mamie Potter, the most popular girl in the college, athlete and social star, who is, to-day, a librarian in a small town who glides quietly, like a wraith, between Modern Fiction and Nineteenth Century Biography. And then, Alex Duncan, president of almost everything, '05, who is now a yes-man of small account, in a broker's office.

For some time the experts have been trying to explain cases such as these imaginary persons whose careers we have cited as examples. The general conclusion, is, of course, that what a man does in college is no criterion of what is rather more than likely to occur after he graduates. Henry L. Mencken, the Baltimore oracle, sagely observes this wise: the campus Nietzsche at the age of thirty, is already beginning to feel the suction of Rotary, and by forty, becomes a sound Mellon man. Another commentator, writing in a recent issue of a college magazine, attempts to solve the cause of such phenomena.

University activities, he believes, teaches men to be leaders. After a brief apprenticeship, a man becomes editor of a college paper, or manager of a team, or of a dramatic or literary society; extra-curricular activities, we are urged, teach men to be leaders. Supposedly, this is a good thing.

But unfortunately, what the world of affairs needs, is not leaders, but followers. The head of a college society, accustomed to telling men what to do, suddenly gets a job and is bossed about. He naturally does not like it. His dislikes may interfere with his success.

And not only in university circles is leadership held to be the end and conclusion of all the educative processes. Almost without exception the aim of the various associations, clubs, troops, clans, and other organizations which deal with young people in their formative ages is to turn our national progeny into leaders of one kind and another.

There is a certain fallacy in this theory that what the world needs is leaders. True enough, politics at present show a rather uninteresting aspect, but in business we have no lack of efficient administrators.

There is no doubt but that this world would become a highly unpleasant place were every man to be a genius; likewise there would undoubtedly be a smash of considerable proportions in the land if everyone were to be a leader.

LETTER WRITERS

We have a number of letters in our office, sent in under noms de plume. "The Varsity" has no objection to printing letters from bona fide students under pen names, but must have the names and addresses of the contributors to ensure good faith on the part of the writer. While on the subject of letter writing, it must be pointed out that a letter signed by the student with his own name and used with that name carries far more weight than a letter signed by a nom de plume.

LE COIN ANGLAIS

If you ever chance to pass through the village of Montagne you will no doubt stop at the inn of Le Chat Noir, where you will be welcomed by the proprietor Monsieur Oignon, who is noted all over the countryside for his fine wines, crushed by the dainty feet of his own wife and daughters.

C—C

When you eat your dinner there you will not fail to be impressed by the cleanliness which the host insists upon, for indeed he even makes his daughter Marie wear a finger stall on her thumb when she brings in the soup.

C—C

A worthy fellow, Father Oignon.

C—C

He is very clever and is noted for his famous bunion charms and he also knows many cunning recipes for taking soup stains off the mayor's white vest.

C—C

Father Oignon is very proud of his goat Claude, which is the strongest in the country, and he will roar with laughter when he tells about the time it ate Grandmother Duval's Sunday undershirt off the hickory tree down by the little river.

C—C

A droll fellow, Father Oignon.

C—C

Often I remember him standing in his doorway in the evenings, puffing peacefully at his pipe and gazing out over his little stable yard where the warm rays of the setting sun gleamed on the backs of his pigs and turned the hills of fertilizer into gold. "Ah this is life," he would say.

SHEA'S

I may have seen a worse picture than "Shanghai Lady", but if so I have mercifully forgotten it. Mary Nolan is there looking—and sounding—very much like Imogene Wilson of the Follies. I'd give the little girl a break if I could . . . but—good Lord!—there's a limit. To revive memories of childhood afternoons at the movies, there's Viola Dana on the stage. The act is by Anita Loos, but you mightn't guess it. Carbonari with his tricks and a comedy team called Chain and Conroy are better. A new idea in the editing of news reels, with Graham MacNamee at the microphone, is a hit.

UPTOWN

If you go to the Uptown this week, you'll see John Barrymore posturing, profiling, and carrying whole scenes with the flick of an eyebrow. "General Crack" is a film calculated to please the customers, but one wonders why an actor of the Barrymore eminence finds it necessary to build up all his entrances with breathless pauses, fanfares, and sound effects. The sets are atrocious and the dialogue uneven, but the Old Guard is going to have a field day. But of course there is Sir John at the Alec.

The Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

No matter what others may say about your paper, it will always have a warm spot in my heart. I owe it a debt I can never discharge. As a result of my little ad inserted in your columns a week ago, the most wonderful thing in the world has come into my life.

I have found her! the girl of my dreams! She is the creature that has been disturbing my sleep for years. She has been the theme of all my best dreams; the prompter of all my purest thoughts. And now I have met her . . . all as a result of the potency of your want ads.

Doubtless there are hundreds of other wonderful girls at this university. But for me now they don't exist. They may linger longingly in corridors and foyers and east their hungry eyes on handless gloves, but they mean nothing in my life. I am a romantic—an incurable romantic—and I believe in all the good old-fashioned institutions. I may use modern methods to reach my goal, but when I reach it, I claim the privilege of reverting to type. And marriage is the institution that appeals to me above all right now. I'm off!

In gratitude and satisfaction, I am,

Yours, etc.,

HAROLD.

The Editor,

"The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

The earnestness of our pet purist "3T1", whose letter appeared in Friday's issue, is amusing, but rather less edifying than he apparently considers it. It is his evident conviction that the Drama, even including musical comedy and movies, is always deserving of a review couched in the most balanced and literary English. This view of the matter is, to say the least, old-fashioned, and if our friend is careful continually to hold high his banner, I fear his time must be rather fully occupied with penning plaintive letters to journals all over the continent.

It seems to me that Mr. A.E.F.A.'s sylle is most fluid and adaptable; that when, as on Thursday, he reviews a piece of serious drama he writes seriously and meticulously; when he reviews a musical comedy he writes in a musical comedy style, a bright staccato style, with occasional deliberate archaisms for sake of contrast; when the subject is a movie of the calibre of "Sunny Side Up", he writes colloquially and tersely, though never ungrammatically.

Our Stark Youngs, William Bolithos and 3T1's have a tendency to become ludicrous in the laboured seriousness with which they consider unpretentious subjects whose authors must be amazed at such attention.

I should have been less unkind to our young friend had the horrible example which he quoted proved less of an anticlimax. "Entuse" was admitted in a dictionary of forty years ago to which I referred. True, it was tagged "Colloq.", but during that lapse of time it has rightly been received into the language, as providing a neat and less verbose way of conveying "receive with enthusiastic applause."

Yours for anti-puriticism and living language,

PAUL A. GARDNER

Edmonton, Jan. 19.—Dead from exposure in 5 below zero weather, the pajama-clad body of Hamish Kelly, 18, freshman student at the University of Alberta, was found on the ground 15 feet below his bedroom window at Athabasca hall on the university grounds early to-day.

Last seen at midnight, Kelly is believed to have walked in his sleep and slipped through the window which was open 18 inches when the body was found. It was frozen so badly that doctors cannot perform an autopsy until Monday.

Kelly was a son of Rev. W. E. Kelly of Lethbridge, Alta. winning teams. Bea Symons, women's tennis champion of the university, was presented with the Frances Endacott Cup.

VARSITY DEFEATS QUEEN'S 4-2 TO TAKE O.H.A. LEAD AGAIN

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Varsity's 4-2 win over Queen's last night puts the Blue and White at the top of the O.H.A. series. Queen's is another of these teams greatly improved since last season. The Tricolour played a rugged, smashing game, but lacked Varsity's finish around the nets. The locals with Bruce Paul and Ames in goal were just a little too smooth for the Red, Yellow and Blue.

Ames, in goal, had a big night, some of his saves being little short of sensational. The entire Blue team were in form, the showing of the relief men being particularly satisfactory. Gib McKelvey, Tricolour defence stalwart, after a slow start, got going properly and made many dangerous rushes. McKelvey also decorated the penalty box in graceful fashion and carried on a little feud with Bill Stewart in the bargain.

Varsity plays again in Kingston Friday night and will likely get a warm reception in the Limestone City.

The juniors broke their losing streak last night by downing Marlboros 6-0. Toronto Canoe Club's win over Parkdale leaves the two Canoe Clubs and Varsity in the running for group honours. Marlboros, 1929 O.H.A. and Canadian champions, have been eliminated. Alas, how the mighty are fallen!

Six goals scored indicates that the juniors have finally snapped into it.

This season's interfaculty baseball and basketball games go by default if not begun within twenty minutes of scheduled starting time. This rule is being and will be enforced. This is one of the best things possible for the interfaculty series. The Mulock Cup games last fall and in years past generally got under way after a delay, sometimes reaching three-quarters of an hour. If some method can be evolved next year to check up on the interfaculty football it will be a blessing to all concerned.

Queen's and McGill are staging heavy workouts in preparation for their college assault and the intercollegiate assault-at-arms. Queen's is going to make a strong bid for intercollegiate honours, but will have a tough time getting by the Varsity entries. The Varsity B. W. and F. Club has out a flock of good men aspiring to places on the team. The practice bouts held on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays are getting results. With the interfaculty assault called for Feb. 5th and 6th, the men are sure stepping into it.

Jimmy Jackson, intercollegiate lightweight boxing champion and president of the B. W. and F. Club, has been laid up for some days with a broken nose. Jackson was sparring with Al Tyson and the latter accidentally butted him, causing the painful injury. Jackson had retired from competition this season, but was aiding in the training and coaching.

The first game of the women's intercollegiate hockey series with Queen's will be on February the twelfth at Kingston. That leaves only three weeks of preparation. The team is practicing regularly on Tuesdays and Saturdays at the Varsity Arena, besides which, a Thursday hour has also been arranged but this is not definite, and will have to be taken weekly, whenever it can be fitted in.

The position of goal seems to rest between Helen McKinley and Dama Lumley. The former has had three years experience on the U.C. team in the interfaculty hockey series and Miss Lumley, who is a fresher, played for St. Thomas intermediates before coming to Varsity.

The regular forward line of last year's senior intercollegiate basketball team, Eleanor Sedgewick, Louise Crouch and Wilma Hazlett, is out again intact this season. The first two are both great scoring forwards and have plenty of speed. Wilma Hazlett does not often figure so largely on the score sheet, but she is a very steady player and is a field general of great ability. Of course it is not yet certain that these three will get the regular positions again this year, but a player who makes a position over any one of these will have to be of more than ordinary ability.

DENTALS ARE BASEBALL WINNERS BY DEFAULT

Senior Dents won their baseball game from Senior Meds by default. The Meds failed to put in an appearance and did not even offer an excuse. The regulations have been firmly set and the officers are enforcing them rigidly in both interfaculty baseball and basketball.

SHAKEUP ENDS LOSING STREAK

Juniors Overwhelm Marlboros
With Crushing 6-0 Defeat

SMILLIE PLAYS FORWARD

The Blue juniors broke their long losing streak when they took Marlboros into camp quite handily, 6-0, last night. The win gives Varsity a good chance to figure in the Big Four playoffs, and is a clear vindication of Coach Frank Sullivan's shake-up of the team.

The front line emerged from the doldrums and entered the score column in a big way. Brant and Hetherington each secured a brace of goals, Bennett and Levinsky adding the others. Smillie was moved to the forward line and injected plenty of punch into the attack. Levinsky and Williamson teamed up well on the defence. Pringle and Good were the pick of the Dukes.

The players were rather slow in starting and the teams took it easy for the first eight minutes of play. Brant opened the scoring when, after carrying the puck past the defence and allowed to remain unchecked for the moment, he snapped a fast back-hand at Moore, giving him no chance to save. Marlboros were trying hard for the equalizer but Hunnisett was unbeatable. In the play that followed both teams were missing open goals. Brant made it two for Varsity when he loosed a wicked shot at Moore from the blue line. A scuffle in front of the Varsity net brought Hunnisett to his knees, but he cleared nicely.

Hetherington, on a pass from Cunningham, gave Varsity a lead of three goals near the end of the period.

The second period produced the best hockey of the game with play even throughout. The defence on both teams were showing up well. The Marlboros were fighting hard and Pringle was robbed of a counter when Hunnisett skated out to take the puck from him as he was going to shoot. Hetherington scored on a pass from Brant near the end of the period.

Tetof substituted in goal for the Marlboros in a vain attempt to stop the Blue and White scoring bee. However, Varsity could not be stopped and Bennett added another tally for Varsity near the middle of the period. Two minutes later Alex Levinsky got his first counter when Williamson slipped a neat pass across the goal mouth. Play began to drag and the last ten minutes furnished no further score, the game ending Varsity 6, Marlboros 0.

Varsity—Goal, Hunnisett; defence, Williamson and Levinsky; centre, Brant; wings, Hetherington and Bennett; alternates, Cunningham, Crerar and Smillie.

Marlboros—Goal, Moore; defence, Pringle and Gamble; centre, Good; wings, Kitchen and Carr; alternates, O'Brien, Milling, Forsythe and Tetof.

DENTAL HOCKEYISTS TRIUMPH OVER U.C. 9-0

Dentals were victors over University College in an interfaculty hockey game played yesterday, emerging after a fine scoring bee on the long end of a 9-0 score.

SENIOR VICTORIA TRIM DENTAL BASKETEERS 8-3

Losers Lead at Half-Time in Low Scoring Match Yesterday

Senior Victoria won a most exciting basketball game yesterday afternoon from Senior Dentistry by 8 to 3. At half time the score stood 3-2 for Dents, but Vic came from behind to win going away. The combination play on both teams was spotty, but Victoria had a slight edge.

The shooting had the fans almost hysterical. Many shots that looked like sure baskets would almost go in, only to roll out to the groans of the spectators.

For Vic, the work of Bowles, Lautenslager and Tilton easily stood out. For Dents, Hurwitz was the most outstanding player, getting all the points for his team.

Victoria—Bowles (2), Tilton (2), Devitt (2), Lautenslager (2), Perkins, Searle, Cowie, Carson, Vaughan, Berry.

Dents — Merrell, Conn, Walden, Beube, Hurwitz (3), Jolofsky, Levenson.

QUEEN'S LOSE AS VARSITY REGAINS LEAGUE LEAD

Harley crashed their way through the defence, drew Quinn out, and the first named put the Blues one goal up. Bill Stewart gave another of his stick-handling exhibitions with Varsity a man short. The play got pretty rough for the balance of the time, but neither squad slowed up.

The teams set a burning pace in the third period, continuing the bumping, and several private fouls developed. Stewart netted the puck half a minute after the face-off when Paul carried the puck down the ice and passed in front of the net. The Varsity centre mixed it with McKelvey later and both were benched. Ames featured with some sparkling stops, but finally Reid neatly splitting the Blue defence, found the upper corner of the net on a fast drive that gave Ames no chance to save. With only nine minutes to go the pace set was faster than ever. Harley scored, but the referee's bell had rung. However, with three minutes to go, Bell put the Blues two up when he and Whitehead managed to break through on a nice rush. Queen's launched attack after attack on the Varsity citadel but sensational work by Ames, backed up by Stewart and Whitehead, held them off.

The largest crowd that has attended a senior O.H.A. game in this city in some years made its presence felt. The attendance is particularly gratifying as it indicates a constantly increasing interest in senior amateur hockey and prospects are good that these games will before long attract the capacity houses that witnessed Varsity, Granites, Aura Lee, Dentals et al.

Varsity—Goal, Ames; defence, Paul

Discover Good Material Among Freshie Candidates; Regulars Back

The University College women's hockey team shows signs of great promise in the forthcoming interfaculty series. Starting with a practice last Thursday under a capable coach, some very good material was discovered, most of the newcomers being from first year. Dot Porter and Fritzie Anderson of last year's team are out again, but three are playing intercollegiate this year and Jed Gray is not turning out. The team is now practicing twice a week, but there is still time for those who have not yet turned out to try for a place on the sextette. Their first game is scheduled to take place this week.

TRINITY DEBATE FORESEES UNION

Prophecy Joining of All but Roman Church Within Half Century

KNOX STUDENT IS OPPOSED

The union of all churches in Christendom, except the Roman Catholic, will take place in the next half century, according to the conclusions reached at the Inter-church Theological Debate held in Trinity College last evening. James Craig, president of the Trinity College Theological Society, was in the chair.

Cecil King of Wyldlife College, urged that the new church be Catholic in the truest sense. "The Church of Canada would do well to take up this challenge," he said.

"Church union is a mild form of intellectual cowardice, a taking refuge in a great corporation," was the statement made by Louis Fowler of Knox College in opposing union.

A fundamental of the Anglican faith was attacked by R. H. Loosmore of Trinity College in stating, "The apostolic succession is not essential to Anglicanism." He went on to prove this by quotations from historic figures in the Anglican Church. St. Paul himself was not apostolically ordained, he said, but authority resides in the church itself.

McMaster University representatives were not present on account of examinations.

STRESSES INTERPRETATION

"The important point is not his name, post-office address, and his wife's name, it is the interpretation of the situation and the solution," said Dr. Ernest Thomas at the first of his study groups on "The Message of the Prophets", yesterday at Wymilwood, when considering the story of Cain and Abel. "These stories have some truth, but are not bare facts, and it is the interpretation that counts."

By G.G.B.

This is the way the University of Washington greets its new professional football coach.

Phelan, attired in flying togs, will be introduced to the gathering at the field as bombs explode and fireworks are set off.

Langedorf will present to the new coach a silver plaque, commemorating his taking over the duties of head coach here. The plaque is a gift of the student body.

That tigerish voice of his—the same voice which was unusually hushed and low last night when he met the coach that went before him—will ring forth again to-day, but this time he will be talking to the men who are going to work under him. He will be telling "his team" what he expects of them.

Mr. Salisbury's suspension is for a period of one year, and took effect yesterday morning. This drastic action was taken, according to an official statement from the office of the dean of student affairs, because of "deliberate and public defiance" of the university's rules.

ing the School of Hygiene. They complain, firstly, that the results of the examination held on Wednesday are going to be announced at a date that is unnecessarily postponed; secondly, that they are not allowed an option to choose between taking the fifteen-day course either in the spring or fall; and, thirdly, that there is no co-operation between the director of the School of Hygiene, Dr. F. G. Fitzgerald and the fifth year medical students.

Dr. Fitzgerald, when approached by "The Varsity" on the subject replied, "I know nothing about it. The question can be and is decided by the Faculty of Medicine. The calendar of the faculty lays down in sections 24 and 25 the rules governing the case, and provides means of adjustment by petition to the faculty." It is understood that a petition setting forth the complaint is being circulated by S. A. Thompson, president of the fifth year.

According to Dr. Fitzgerald there is no lack of co-operation as far as the Hygiene Department is concerned. Nor are the results of the examination unduly delayed. ### U.C. WOMEN'S LITERARY SOCIETY

There will be a meeting of the University College women's literary society on Tuesday, January 21, at 8.00 p.m. Miss Agatha Chapman will read a paper on modern American short stories. Refreshments will be served.

The difference between Ontario and Quebec seemed to Professor Underhill to be a religious and partly economic difference rather than racial. "The editorial was very interesting, but hardly one that you could express your opinion about; rather it is conducive to thought and to an article about it," thought Professor N. A. MacKenzie, professor of law, University College. "There are too many implications contained in it and remarks seem philosophical rather than accusing."

Professor MacKenzie seemed to think that although the article did seem to express the condition of present day parties, there was no way out of it as a government has to be in power to do good, and it could not be in power unless it used the present methods. "It would be unfair to support either the editorial or the present day political system for the two sides of the question would have to be considered very deeply," the professor concluded.

The following players will compose University of Toronto Intercollegiate Basketball teams:
 SENIOR — Currie, Cock, Davcy, Horton, O'Leary, Riggs, Sakler, Sniderman, Wood.
 INTERMEDIATE — Buchanan, Carr, Collins, Calderone, Douglas, Graham, Hallinan, Humphrey, Riley, Sobel, Subositis, Vaughan.

HIGHER EDUCATION BECOMES POPULAR AMONG CHINESE

Petition Government for Admission of Women Into Chinese Colleges

SKETCHES OF WEST'S IDEAS

Graduate Work Would Be Helpful in Western Universities Thinks Dr. Wallace

Dr. E. W. Wallace, the recently-appointed chancellor of Victoria University, who has only been back from China for a few weeks, has not learnt sufficient about affairs here to make a statement. He has been in charge of boys' missionary schools in China practically ever since he left Victoria College.

He says, "I do not quite understand the problem of limitation at Victoria except that I realize that the college is growing too large to handle with efficiency. I am looking forward eagerly to the time when Emmanuel College and the theological residences will be completed. I was looking over the present plans only to-day and I hope construction starts very soon. It certainly is a pleasure for me to come back to my Alma Mater as chancellor in the year that it is to be enlarged."

When Dr. Wallace was questioned as to whether Victoria's future was in Arts or Theology, he said, "Victoria, since its beginning, has been primarily an arts college and only since 1873 has a theological unit been included. At the present rate of increase in the arts course, it looks as if arts will continue to predominate."

Chancellor Wallace's opinion regarding dancing at Victoria was, "Since so many of the theologists dance now, it would be best to continue to allow it. Surely it is better for them to dance in the university atmosphere rather than have them go to the public dance halls."

It is Chancellor Wallace's idea to meet as many of the residence men as he can. In this way he hopes to learn something of residence life and the student's activities.

"The Chinese are rapidly conforming to the western ideas of education," continued Dr. Wallace.

"Among them co-education has taken a great stride, considering that it was first introduced about ten years ago. Under Christian auspices two co-educational colleges were started and have been in operation some years, but the Chinese are so enthusiastic for the opportunity to study that they sent a petition to the Minister of Education in China for permission that the women be admitted to all the colleges (Continued on page 4)

INCLEMENT WEATHER HINOERS RADIO FANS

Under the direction of C. H. Shedden, IV, S.P.S., the Radio Club is endeavouring to have the transmitting station set up for the international tests in February. C. H. Shedden said, "We want to uphold the good record of two years ago when we captured 92 points to take second place in Canada."

There was much discussion as to the relative merits of monitor and oscillator as used in the transmitting set.

The president, W. E. Carruthers, asked for volunteers to inspect the aerial. On further thought the members decided this would be cold work, so there were no volunteers. However, there were five volunteers for inside work on the set.

ECONOMIC PHASES NEED DEEP STUDY

Says Two-Thirds of Discussion of Financial Problems Merely Astrology

ATTACKS WEBB'S PLAN

"If anyone would give me two years of a holiday I'd go like a shot to New York; I'd spend one year in New York, ten months of which I would spend with the men who are doing things. Then I'd spend six months in London and six months in Toronto," said Professor C. R. Fay in speaking before the Political Science and Economic Club at Hart House last night on "Unemployment and Taxation". Professor Fay was speaking in the third division of his topic, "The Stabilization of Currency", which he admitted to be a most difficult problem.

Professor Fay said, "I am persuaded that two thirds of the discussion of financial problems at the American Economic Association in Washington was purely astrology."

In speaking on the first division of his subject "The Stabilization of Agriculture", Professor Fay said, "The federal farm board is trying to create a strong rock bottom for industry by giving the farmers a stabilized price."

On the question of his other topic, "Stabilization of Industry", the columnist vigorously attacked Webb's proposal of relief of unemployment by the undertaking of government enterprise in time of depression.

CHRISTIAN UNITY VITAL NECESSITY

Canon Gower-Rees Declares to Wycliffe College Audience

DIVISION HINOERS MISSIONS

"Controversy without conflict, contact without friction, is the great need of the Church to-day in its dealings with the problems of the present age," said Canon Gower-Rees, speaking to the students of Wycliffe College last night.

Canon Gower-Rees went on to outline very vividly the great problems which were to be met at the forthcoming Lambeth Conference to be held in England this summer. Chief among these in point of international interest is the South India proposals which deal with the proposal to have one united church inclusive of all denominations. In speaking of this verdict of a young Indian student of high rank, who had been taken on a tour through London, was mentioned. When asked what impression struck him most forcibly he replied, "If your religion acquiesces in what I have seen, we have no use for it, as it is undoubtedly worse than anything we have in India."

"The only way in which success may be achieved in India," said Canon Gower-Rees, "is to have a greater unity in the Christian Church. The greatest stumbling block in the way of missionary endeavour in the foreign field is division—there are too many and too varied representatives of Christ."

"England may be said to still be pagan in that it has not the driving power characteristic of true Christianity, and consequently our efforts are not rewarded. One danger of the Church of England is that it is controlled too much by men who 'play safe', safe men are often needed, but they seldom do any good. We need (Continued on page 3)

UNIVERSITY WOMEN HAVE PRESSING NEED FOR GYM

New Gymnasium is Essential So That the Present Problem May Be Solved

NEEDS BENEFACITOR

Pressing Need for Solution of Accommodation for Co-Eds

"It is ridiculous that there does not begin to be adequate provision for health service for the women of this university," stated Dr. Norma Ford yesterday. "There is in existence a committee formed of the Deans of Women, and the women members of the staff, with the object of finding ways and means of providing a Hart House for the women of the university."

"One of the most important and immediate problems confronting this committee is that of the accommodation of those bodies of students not in any of the arts faculties. Miss Hamilton of the Department of Social Service, found that there were over 800 women excluded from any of the college unions, which means that these total more than the number registered in any of the arts colleges. This comprises the departments of social service, public health nursing, occupational therapy, physiotherapy, and the women students in the medical faculty."

"I am very glad that 'The Varsity' is taking such an interest in this question," said Miss M. E. Addison, Dean of Women at Victoria College. "One (Continued on page 4)

National Order of Canada Send Passed Resolution of Protest to Falconer and Senate

SUBJECT THOUGHT RADICAL

Debates Committee Chooses Subject Suggested by Constitution Conference

According to the "Mail and Empire", objection to the subject of the Hart House debate which takes place to-night, was voiced in a resolution passed at the meeting of the National Order of Canada in the Royal York Hotel. The subject reads: "That this house would view with pleasure the termination of existing imperial ties between Canada and the United Kingdom." A resolution of protest was adopted at the meeting and addressed to the president, and senate of the University of Toronto.

The resolution urged that the selection of subjects be more closely censored, that the persons invited to speak be chosen with greater discretion and that the university maintain its dignity in such a manner that other countries cannot misconstrue the Canadian mind.

John S. Ewart, K.C., LL.D., of Ottawa, has been invited by the debates committee to speak in favour of the motion, the meeting noted. Various bulletins to show that he supported Canadian independence, were exhibited. The meeting protested against allowing anyone to speak from the floor of the house who might bring detrimental opinions to the student body.

Professor N. A. MacKenzie, Speaker of the House, when approached by "The Varsity" on the subject, remarked, "Very interesting, but I think they are mistaken in the point of view. They are assuming that the student body is in favour of independence. I fail to see why there should be a censorship set up and I think the university is suffering no loss of dignity by inviting men such as Dr. Ewart. If the National Order thinks the subject is a bit too radical, I would refer them to the subjects for debate of the Oxford and Cambridge societies and ask them to note the names of men, many of them 'radicals' who were invited to speak on the resolution."

"The Varsity" ascertained a few of the topics of the societies mentioned to be such as "Might is Right" and "That this house regrets that His Majesty's government has not pursued a more far sighted and imaginative policy in its attempts to further the (Continued on page 2)

Hart House Debate Takes Place To-night

The question for the Hart House debate to-night is "that this house would view with pleasure the termination of existing imperial ties between Canada and the United Kingdom". The question will be moved by Mr. N. J. DeWitt, Victoria College, and opposed by Mr. B. D. Beamish, University College. Mr. A. Lautenslager, Victoria College, will speak third and Mr. H. B. Elliott, University College, will speak second for the negative.

Mr. J. S. Ewart, K.C., the Reverend F. C. Ward-White, and Mr. Crowther, past-president of the Cambridge Union, will be present as honorable visitors.

The tellers for the ayes will be Mr. D. Gordon of University College and Mr. A. A. Renolds, Victoria College, and for the noes Mr. A. G. Gunn, St. Michael's College and Mr. C. B. Fisher, Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering.

Clerk of the house: Mr. L. M. Gelber; chairman of committee: Professor N. A. MacKenzie; Warden J. B. Bickersteth.

DR. ZEIDLER ADDRESSES GERMAN STUDY CLUB

Klabund, Famous German Poet Was Subject of Discourse

A meeting of the German Study Club was held in Trinity College yesterday evening. The program was opened by a short comedy, "Im Warte Saal", read by Mrs. Boesenstein, Mr. Shaw, Mr. Marron and directed by Dr. Arnold. Mr. Connor then gave three brilliantly played piano solos—Prelude in G minor by Rachmaninoff, Gavotte by Gluck-Brahms, and The Music Box. Goethe's stirring ballad with Schubert's wonderful musical setting was sung by Professor Holt, also Heine's "Die Zwei Cremadiere". Mr. Tracy played the accompaniment.

The speaker of the evening was Dr. Zeidler, who gave an interesting lecture on Klabund, whose poetry has had great success in Germany. Dr. Zeidler, who lived in the town where Klabund was born, and was thus enabled to observe his development very closely, and it was Dr. Zeidler's father who published Klabund's first book. Dr. Zeidler read several examples of Klabund's prose and poetry. Klabund's war poems are full of a youthful ardour, for he was in his element as a soldier, and his love poetry is of an infinite delicacy. This gifted young poet unfortunately died at an early age.

YONGE STREET NOT FAIRY DOMICILE

Sense of Mystery Destroyed Declares Rev. Stuart Parker

"You can't see fairies on Yonge Street," said Rev. Stuart Parker to the Toronto Burns Society in the Mining Building last night. "Civilization has taken away the sense of mystery." He went on to bring to his hearers the fascinating personality of Robert Burns, in which there was such a pervading sense of mystery—"the world was wonderful to him." He showed them again the frank childishness, high mind and even lovable faults of their great poet, and the sympathy of the audience was so much with him that bursts of applause and an occasional hearty "Hear! Hear!" greeted the speaker.

"Talk to a bird or flower to-day, address your wrongs to a field mouse, and see how long they will leave you at large,—if you're dead, of course, you get leave to be a poet. But Burns had that communion with nature that made him great, and he gave it to the world."

EWART ADVOCATES BREAKING DOWN IMPERIAL TIES

Canada Regarded as Quite Independent by Great Britain Claims Historian

FAVOURS INDEPENDENCE

Independence is Only Guarantee of National Life and Guard Against States

John S. Ewart, K.C., prominent Canadian historian and nationalist, who will speak at the Hart House debate to-night, is absolutely in favour of complete Canadian independence from the British Empire, he told "The Varsity" yesterday.

"All the major ties of an imperial character have terminated, and nobody regrets the termination," said Mr. Ewart, referring to Canada's relations with Great Britain. "The aggregate result of the work of our premiers has been to obtain our virtual independence from Britain." The gaining of responsible government, of fiscal independence and of diplomatic powers at different periods were all mentioned by Mr. Ewart as proofs of this statement.

That Great Britain regarded Canada as quite independent was made clear by Mr. Ewart's quotation from the records of the Imperial Conference of 1926: "the tendency (of the Dominions) towards equality of status was both right and inevitable—every self-governing part of the Empire is now the master of its destiny."

He quoted from the same source to show that our relation with the king is no longer of an imperial character. "The king now appoints Canadian diplomatic representatives and plenipotentiaries and ratifies treaties not on (Continued on page 2)

STUDENTS PREFER TAKING CHANCES

Check Room at Hart House Never Used to Full Capacity

FACILITIES ADEQUATE

"The present checking facilities in Hart House are quite adequate and there is never any pressure on the check room," stated Mr. W. R. Cowan, assistant comptroller of Hart House. "Most students find it more satisfactory to leave their coats upstairs where they can get them when they leave in a hurry to make two o'clock lecture."

"The students prefer to take a chance on their coats being taken than go to the trouble of checking them since they figure their chances to be fairly safe. There have not been any articles reported stolen since fall." "The check room at Hart House is never used to its full capacity although most of the racks are filled at noon," stated Mr. Ed Jones, its attendant, who has been with Hart House since its inception. "There is room for about two hundred coats and hats and noon time is the only period when it is at all taxed."

"The only problem is that the check room is supposed to be closed at 6.45 and usually there are coats not claimed as late as 7.30. Last night five coats had to be taken to the hall porter's desk and these coats by right should be left in the check room over night."

CHILDREN NEED PROTECTION

The subject for debate at Hart House to-night is again under fire by the non-university people of this province. Every time the students at the university dare discuss any subject concerning which there is a solid body of opinion on one side, there are bound to be shouts that the college children are being led astray, that they must not listen to arguments that the majority of provincials do not like. The latest is the protest lodged by the National Order of Canada at its meeting held at a downtown hotel recently. They drew up letters of protest and submitted them to almost everybody at the university from the president to the senate. One letter they forgot to dispatch and that was to the premier of the province. It may have helped.

It matters not what the opinions of the students on the subject may be and how the vote may go, but the impression abroad would be "terribly dangerous" if it were thought that Toronto students dare think about something somebody or other did not like. As it happens in the present case, the feeling of the university is, taking a conservative estimate, 90 to 10 against the motion, but that makes not a particle of difference to these busy-bodies who think that everything the students do must come directly under their jurisdiction, and must be exactly to their liking.

What is the objection to having people discuss, in open house, what they can get any time they wish from the bookshelves? If the Imperial connections cannot stand the floodlight of an open discussion they are not worth having. No person of common sense would say that young people of sound schooling cannot judge for themselves to at least the extent of what people they ought to permit to speak from the floor of the house and who may bring "detrimental opinions" before them. Surely the Empire connections do not stand on such a flimsy basis as these people seem to place it. Do the members of the National Order of Canada really think that because two student debaters and a brilliant lawyer speak in favour of the severing of ties of Empire that the students will immediately rise up in their might and say "we must have a republic"?

It is about time that the students were left alone with their professors, and not bothered by "holier than thou" fraternal orders. The Hart House debates committee and their advisors are quite capable of handling their own affairs. They have done it for many years and will continue to do so. Interference by outsiders who refuse to give the students credit for any backbone or intelligence will not influence their decisions, and we have yet to come across any one at the university that even presumed to believe that a vote of them taken in debate moved the country one way or the other.

Perhaps those anxious meddlers remember the case of the debate at Hart House when the committee dared call in as a guest speaker no less a personage than the many-horned "Moscow Jack". The protests raised were loud enough to give Russia the idea that the young Canadians were all ready to unfurl their red bandana nose-cloths and shoot the governor-general. In that instance the loudest noise was made by small town financiers, but after the debate was over and the smoke cleared away it was found that he still had his position and the students refused to become Bolsheviks and throw away their razors.

The same type of people who continually cry out that the students turned out of the universities do not develop the ability to think for themselves cry out in horror when they make an attempt to do so at the university, which place should be the one where frank and free discussion of all subjects should be permitted. To attempt to muffle the students will make them, as it does all people, be they ignorant clods or brilliant scholars, imagine that they are missing something, with the natural result of encouraging what people desire to discourage. No person need fear that the university debates or even four years of classes will change the students in their basic thought very much, for are not these same people under the hand of their orthodox parents in the stage where things impressed are never forgotten?

The saddest thing about these multiple protests is the fact that the people making them are sincere in thinking that they are saving the students from evil influence. We hope that some day people will learn the old truth that has resounded through the ages that

CHAMPUS CAT

Cat's Note.—We present in this issue a special series of articles covering the trans-Canada tour of His Altitude, the Count of Holstein-Stier, written by that sterling fellow, correspondent, and artist, who formerly was official robin of the Toronto Morning Globe . . .

C—C

Halifax, January 17.—When your correspondent clambered on board the Duchess of Mimico in the harbour here, His Altitude was found chatting cordially with the ship's brewer, and no more striking proof of his democracy could be found than in the fact that our exalted visitor showed a keen interest in the details of the lowly bartender's work.

C—C

Montreal, January 18.—Count Holstein-Stier mysteriously disappeared last night from one of the leading hotels, and it is feared that some subversive interests are attempting to inebriate our distinguished visitor into the night life of Montreal.

C—C

Montreal, January 19.—"How beg is it!" wittily remarked Count Holstein-Stier, viewing the biggest building in Montreal, the new grain elevator. Your correspondent laughed heartily at this manifestation of the Count's wit. A staff photographer then set up his camera and took the Count while your reporter counted nine slowly.

C—C

Montreal, January 20.—"The French Canadian is Canada's most precious asset," declared Count Holstein-Stier in a ringing voice before the Alliance Canadienne Française, to-day. "These English are trying to run the country."

C—C

Montreal, January 21.—"The English-speaking peoples are Canada's most precious asset," declared Count Holstein-Stier in a ringing voice before the Anglo-Saxon Club to-day. "The ties of Empire are cemented the more firmly by the British element. These French are always trying to run things. . . ."

C—C

Toronto, January 22.—"Free speech is a precious asset," said Count Holstein-Stier to-day, "and these smart young men up at the university who are trying to destroy this precious institution ought to be shut right up."

Another instance of the Count's charming democracy was noticed when he visited the LCB Store No. 35 in the course of his tour of the city, and spent some time behind the counter. When he came out, he was even more charmingly democratic than ever, and insisted on embracing a number of Toronto's "fines"—our stalwart bobbies of Claremont St. Station.

the advice of the imperial government, but strictly and solely on the advice of the Canadian government; in other words, he has become king of Canada," he stated.

Mr. Ewart believed that the incultation of a national spirit in Canada, which could only be obtained by severing the imperial connection, was our only safeguard against the United States. "Our independence is our only guarantee of national life," he said. He did not believe that Canadians would lose their British traditions and ideals through independence, asserting that such matters had no geographical limitation.

Asked as to his opinion of the worth of Hart House debates, Mr. Ewart stated that he considered them of great educational value if proper subjects were chosen. He expressed considerable surprise when informed that the "National Order of Canada" had protested against the subject of to-night's debate. He was unable to see why perfect freedom should not be allowed the students in their choice of subjects for discussion and could see nothing unconstitutional in a debate on any constitutional subject.

speech cannot be muffled without an explosion and if anything has merit it will rise to the surface no matter how many weights are tied to it.

Editor,
"The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

Nationalization and its natural concomitant, annexation with U.S.A.—that old hackneyed topic—I see has been once more resurrected from its dusty cubby-hole to serve the purpose of a Hart House debate. It is a mystery to me why this subject is always revived. Outside of serving as an outlet to our already much developed ego, I can see no purpose in such a debate.

To my mind, these debates could be much more beneficial, both to students and outside public, if more vital and pressing problems were discussed. Why not have a debate on Empire Trade, or on the recent proposals put forward by a prominent Canadian journalist residing in England? Certainly it would be a great deal more interesting and illuminating than hearing a lot of garrulous students talking nonsense.

Yours,

FRED PARKER,
Trinity C. & F.

peace of the world". This latter resolution was carried by the majority of 114 and the eminent historian, Ramsay Muir spoke for the motion. G. K. Chesterton spoke for the resolution "That this house is for peace at any price", while another historian, G. L. Trevelyan and an M.P., L. Haden-Guest, spoke in behalf of the resolution, "That only by the adoption of Socialistic principles in her government can Britain insure the happiness and prosperity of her people."

The subject of the debate to-night, according to Professor Mackenzie, was suggested to the debates committee by the last Constitution Conference held in London last December and a report of which will be available in February.

ST. MIKE'S DEFEAT
RED AND BLACK 6-5

St. Michael's Come From Behind to Win in the Last Inning

St. Mike's defeated Trinity last night in an interfaculty baseball game when they came from behind to defeat the Red and Black 6 to 5.

St. Mike's went into the last inning on the short end of a 5 to 4 score. Collins and Ryan each hit singles, Fullerton walked, forcing in Collins with the tying run and Ryan carried in the winning run when he stole home.

Trinity had taken a lead of 3 runs in the second inning when Perrins and Berwick hit doubles, Summerhayes singled and Nichols bunted. Trinity were superior in hitting strength, but St. Mike's were the stronger defensively.

Ingram, pitching for Trinity, had plenty of speed, but lacked control at the critical moments. Kehoe pitched a good steady game for St. Mike's. He stopped a Trinity rally in the third inning when he made a shoestring catch with the bases loaded.

St. Mike's—McDonald, Ryan, Finigan, Fullerton, Mallon, McDonnell, Anderson, Kehoe, Dore. Trinity—Summerhayes, Nichols, Hovey, Ingram, Stewart, Perrin, Berwick, Little, Wotherspoon.

CENTRAL "Y" DEFEATS BLUE AND WHITE 53-48

Fixture Thrilling and Fast Featured by Close Score Throughout

O'LEARY STARS

In a close and thrilling struggle played last night at the Hart House gym Central "Y" defeated the senior U. of T. basketball quintette 53-48. The affair was one of the most exciting yet witnessed this season. At no time during the game were the teams separated by more than a few points. Both teams were not at full strength. Horton, star forward of the Varsity team, had to leave early in the first half, while Central was minus several regular players. At half time the score was 25-11, and the final decision was only decided in the last few minutes of play.

The game was fast and furious and the score saw-sawed throughout. The teams were successful in working combination plays and made both defences look weak. The Blue and White defence was particularly bad in allowing Bodrug to remain unchecked underneath their basket when he collected 12 points. Moe Mitchell, captain of last year's Varsity team, was successful in scoring ten points against his former team-mates.

For Varsity, O'Leary played a great game. He was individual high scorer having garnered nineteen points. Sniderman added the cause with five nice baskets. Currie was as reliable as ever on defence. Cook came through with several timely shots to keep his team on even terms. The game will do Varsity good as it gave them a great workout before entering the intercollegiate race in a few weeks.

Central "Y"—Forwards, Gaudin 13, Blues 6; centre, Johnston 3; defence, Pogue 4, Weyms 2; substitutes, Bodrug 15, Mitchell 10.

Varsity—Forwards, Horton 4, Davey 2; centre, O'Leary, 19; defence, Sakler 2; Currie 4; substitutes, Cook 7, Sniderman 10, Riggs, Woods. Referee—Arthur Cochrane.

With a complete programme announced, the college of agriculture at the University of Wisconsin expects over 3,000 farmers and their wives and many of the agricultural leaders of the state to attend the 15th annual farmers' week held there.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

At the Varsity-Queen's game played in the Varsity Arena Monday night there were approximately one thousand student season ticket stubs collected at the turnstiles. University hockey and senior amateur hockey in general, has been playing to comparatively empty houses for some seasons past so that Monday night's crowd, which numbered about twenty-five hundred, is gratifying from every viewpoint. With three evenly matched teams playing high-class hockey the fans are beginning to realize that for a good exhibition of hockey played without "trick" rules the senior amateur game cannot be surpassed.

When Nationals and Varsity hook up again next week at the University of Toronto Arena the aforementioned edifice will be packed to the rafters. There seems to be no reason why these two teams should not pull a repeat performance of their thirty-minute overtime 2-2 tie, without a doubt the best game of hockey, amateur or pro, with which our fair city has been presented this season. The sensational struggle between the Sea Fleas and the Blue-shirts has done the O.H.A. senior series a tremendous amount of good.

Nationals are improving with each game and right now menace the titular aspirations of Varsity and the Tricolour. There is a considerable number who think that the Fleas will take Varsity in their next game. One thing is sure and that is they'll be starting from scratch.

Intercollegiate basketball gets under way this week-end. Friday Western plays in Queen's and Saturday takes on McGill in Montreal. "Pre-season dope" says that the race is wide open, with Queen's slight favourites. All four teams should rate about equal, but Queen's have their 1929 squad intact and this gives them an edge.

Central "Y" defeated the Varsity quintet 53-48 last night. Neither squad played the entire game at full strength. Varsity have defeated Broadway and West End. The Blue open their intercollegiate season at London Feb. 1.

The time is close at hand when the football coaches will be appointed. At McGill Major Forbes is practically sure of the job while Joe Breen will continue at Western. Harry Batstone will lead Queen's again and it won't cause any great surprise hereabout if in a few years Queen's creates the position of Athletic Director and Professor of Physical Education, without having to go far afield for a suitable incumbent. Ronnie McPherson will likely be head coach at Varsity for another year, although his appointment has not gone through officially.

The Varsity Boxing, Wrestling and Fencing Club will be host to the Argo ring and mat men at Hart House Saturday afternoon. Fourteen bouts will be run off and these promise to be good. This competition will do the locals a lot of good, as some of the men lacking experience will doubtless pick up some much-needed ring craft. Keep this date in mind and be on hand for the occasion.

Following the example set by Victoria last year, U.C. has entered two teams in the women's interfaculty hockey series. There are two groups in the league. St. Hilda's, last year's title holders, Vic firsts and U.C. firsts form one section. In the other are Vic seconds, U.C. seconds and Household Science.

"Frankie" Dale, who has been coming right along in the basketball this season, seriously hurt her knee while skating and will not be able to turn out to practice again for about a week. She did not play basketball in her first two years, but she did awfully good work on the defence for U.C. seniors in the interfaculty league, and she has a real chance to make the intercollegiate if her knee recovers in time.

M. & P. SKATING PARTY HELD

The party held by the M. and P. Society last night was unusually successful. The weather was ideal for the skating at the arena during the early part of the evening and appetites were keen for the lunch awaiting the party in the dining room of the Women's Union.

Such celebrities as Miss Crossley, Miss McQuinn, Mr. Leech, Mr. Burton, and Mr. Ireton were seen taking active part in this gay, informal skating party.

Special to "The Varsity"

Anna Arbor, Mich.—Ann Arbor police are seeking two University of Michigan students believed to be directors of a college bootlegging business, following a raid in Fletcher Hall, university dormitory, where the officers confiscated a case of wine and whiskey.

The bootlegging operations are said to have fruited the students' education, the two having sold liquor to five fraternities which were recently placed on probation for staging drunken parties.

When police officers gained admittance to the dormitory room the occupants had vanished, but their names were obtained.

MCGILL TO HAVE CHRISTIAN UNION

Meeting for the last time with the Toronto organization of the Intercollegiate Christian Union, Kenneth Hooker of Cambridge, travelling secretary of the federated groups, urged the members to recognize their responsibility in carrying Christ's word to others and said to "Get busy and do something."

"God is looking for people whom He can really trust. We are here for a particular purpose, and if we do not fulfill it we are grieving Him. We cannot afford not to listen to what Christ has to say to us," said Mr. Hooker.

From here Mr. Hooker will go to McGill where an effort will be made to start an organization there similar to the one already in progress at this university.

No new women students will be allowed to enter Gettysburg College because of a ruling made by the Board of Trustees recently. The Gettysburg chapter of the Women's League is contesting the decision.

Freshman women at the University of Texas are making plans for the organization of an honorary freshman scholastic society for women.

MEDS BLANK SCHOOL IN HOCKEY FIXTURE 4-0

Meds Close Checking Forwards Feature Throughout Exciting Game

Sr. Meds defeated Sr. S.P.S. by 4 to 0 in an interfaculty hockey game on the west cushion yesterday. Play was close, and heavy checking kept down the score. Meds forward line, was a close checking outfit, and their combination play featured throughout.

O'Connor was the individual scoring star, notching three of his team's counters, while Lowry turned in a goal and an assist. Nowell, Williams and Algie also played good hockey.

Gosvencor was the best man on the ice for the Schoolmen, but was given poor support. Little attempt at a passing game was made, and Hancock and Algie were kept busy on the defence. Edmonds in goal made several nice saves. Meds are now tied with Dents for the group leadership, while Sr. School and Sr. U.C. are in the cellar position.

Sr. Meds—Goal, Rapp; defence, Williams and Thompson; centre, Nowell; wings, O'Connor and Cook; alternates, Burchell and Lowry.

Sr. S.P.S.—Goal, Edmonds; defence, Algie and Hancock; centre, Crecar; wings, Reed and Gosvencor; alternates, Blair and Davidson.

GRADUATE STUDIES DEFEAT THEOLOGOS 20-13

The School of Graduate Studies defeated Wycliffe College yesterday in a close game by a score of 20-13 in an interfaculty basketball game. In the first half Macdonald of the Post-grads ran wild, completely dominating the play when he scored ten points. The second period displayed a better brand of basketball on the part of both teams, although only three baskets were registered.

Ruch was easily the best man for the Theologos, scoring eight of their thirteen points.

Wycliffe—Kirk, Hunt, Ruch, Cannon, Morrissey, Sage, Worrall, Perkins S. of G. Studies—Barrett, Smith, Macdonald, Graham, McKay, Minerovsky, Crawford, Musgrave.

(456) Running well ahead of schedule steel work on the 21-story addition to the Empire's largest hotel, the Royal York, additional construction is being rapidly pushed forward and the sixth story is now completed. All steel work is expected to be finished early in February and everything will be completed by June 1st, when there will be a total of 1,181 guest rooms at this palatial Toronto hostelry.

Hitting a 90-mile an hour clip, a special Canadian Pacific train recently carried two-and-a-half-year-old Delphis Morin, who was thought to be dying of intestinal influenza, from Sudbury to Toronto, for a blood transfusion in the Toronto Western Hospital. Leaving at 1:05 P.M. the train reached destination at 6:35, all traffic having been held aside for the special. At 8 the operation was performed and half an hour later the boy was smiling at his friends. He is now well on his way to recovery.

Fighting against Atlantic winter gales the cable ship John W. MacKay has just successfully completed another epic of the seas in effecting repairs to the high speed cable of the Commercial Cable Company over which much of Canadian Pacific cable business is carried to Europe. The cable was smashed in the great quake of November 18, the break being discovered within 36 hours of the arrival of the ship on the scene, raising the cable from a depth of 2 1/2 miles and at a point 30 miles from the western end of the break being part of the job to be done.

"Canary Kornykke Alcaras" a five-year-old Holstein Friesian cow, which a year ago claimed the world's championship as a butterfat producer with 26,396 pounds of milk containing 1,080 pounds of butter-fat in 306 days, has beaten her own record. Following her 1928 record this famous cow was the guest of honour at a banquet in Moose Jaw. The latest record for "Canary Kornykke Alcaras," is 30,801 pounds of milk with 1,336.25 pounds of butter-fat.

Honey to the amount of 55,181 pounds was produced in Nova Scotia in 1928, according to official figures, and the 1929 output will likely be much larger as the summer season of that year was much more favorable, says Philip Bishop, of Greenwick (Port William), the largest bee-keeper in Nova Scotia.

Within from four to five years thousands of farmers throughout the province of Saskatchewan will have the benefit of all-weather roads running in all directions. The provincial government plans to spend $5,000,000 annually during the next few years on the construction of six main highways, all-weather surfaced.

Notwithstanding the growing popularity of the motor car and motor power farm implements, the horse is evidently not going into the discard as rapidly as some people might be inclined to believe. Latest official estimate of number of farm horses in Canada as of June, 1929, is placed at 3,376,487. In 1919 the number was 3,667,369, a difference of only 290,882.

About 60,000 tons of hay have recently been exported from Eastern Ontario and Quebec to buyers in the British Isles. The 1929 exports of hay from Canada are greatly in excess of those of 1928.

to realize to the full the tremendous importance of the message of the bishops' proposal, that we must recognize the flow of the Holy Spirit through other ministries than those founded on episcopacy in order to fully comprehend the vision of Christ," said the speaker.

After speaking of the challenge to the church in a definition of God in new terms that will offend neither the intellectual nor the sentimentalist the speaker asserted that the only way for the church to rise from the trough in which she is at present is by unflinching courage, sincerity, and submission to the dictates of the Holy Spirit.

Canon Gower-Rees then issued a stirring appeal to the students to realize the absolute need of spirituality in the coming generation of clergy, a plea for more wholeheartedness in the worship of the church, which he said he felt was, after all, the prime necessity for those who were to minister to the man in the street.

Orange Hair and Sex Appeal Fire Our Interviewer's Zeal

By A. E. F. Allan

"Broadway? . . . I'm mad about it!" Miss Ida Claire beamed brightly through her cold cream.

"And how does it feel to be back in Intoleranto, Miss Claire?" we pressed brutally.

"Oh! I just adore it! Everyone is so good to me . . . all my old friends . . . You know, I was once a student at the university myself. And yesterday when the taxi splattered up Yonge Street in the slush, it felt so much like coming home—so nice and narrow and everything."

"Why did you leave New York, Miss Claire, just when you were becoming known?" we ventured.

"That's just it," tittered the inimitable little mistress of sex appeal, from the folds of her pink kimono. "I was becoming too well known. It got to be positively embarrassing. Why, I couldn't even walk down the street without . . ."

"And you met," we broke in wildly, while Miss Claire stroked her face with a dirty rag, "a great many stage celebrities while you were down there?"

"Oh, yes!" she dimpled coyly. "Helen Kane?"

"Oh . . . oh, yes! Helen! But I knew her brother Raisin so much better."

"Al Jolson?"

"Al? . . . I'm mad about Al! He's marvelous when you get to know him. You know, I couldn't help thinking what a pity it was he wasn't elected instead of Hoover! . . . Was it Hoover?"

er? or Whosit?"

Miss Claire was sliding seductively out of her pink kimono.

"Were you—were you introduced to Jimmie Walker?" we gulped, gnawing the end of an aspirin.

"Jimmie's a darling!" chorled the Weakness of thousands of unconscious fans. "And he doesn't give you anything like the hangover you get from his brother, Johnny."

"I suppose you played a great many important roles on Broadway, Miss Claire?"

"The irresistible Ida was toying with an immense powder-puff."

"Yes! . . . oh, yes! I played with J. P. Morgan at the Ritz, with Harold Kip Rhineland at the Lido, with a couple of nice boys—I forgot their names—at the Villa Vallee, and . . ."

Miss Claire was combing her gorgeous hair, so we took rapid occasion to interrupt with: "I notice, Miss Claire, that you no longer boast the blonde coiffure that made you famous."

"Uh-huh," she smiled warmly. "But don't you think the burnt orange is quite a triumph?"

We had to agree. We were willing to agree to anything as Miss Claire's lithe body oozed into a street dress.

We decided to change the subject. We thought the Hart House debate was safe enough, so we hazarded: "What do you think of the Empire, Miss Claire?"

"The Empire must be preserved!" she said.

in China." Dr. Wallace showed that this fact was to be particularly noted as the Chinese are generally skeptical of western ideas. The American educationists would ordinarily have proceeded much more slowly.

"I hope it will do away with the large number of Chinese students coming to western universities," continued Dr. Wallace, "for it will enable the Chinese students to keep in closer touch with the sudden change of conditions in their own country."

Dr. Wallace thought they would find graduate work especially helpful in the western universities although he pointed out that degrees for master of arts could be obtained there. Higher education has become very popular in China and it is only in its first stages.

For the past six years of his life in China, Dr. Wallace has associated himself with educational administration. He explained that he had been out of the real college work due to the complicated problems which confronted the Board of Education to which problems he had devoted much of his time.

Dr. Wallace preferred not to make any statement concerning questions that have arisen around the University of Toronto recently because he explained that he had only arrived a week ago and was not as familiar as he would like to be in answering any recent problem.

"The reason that I have come back in the middle of the term is to make myself familiar with the position I will hold," said Dr. Wallace, "and I shall probably be a student for the rest of the term."

of the most crying necessities around this university is a suitable gymnasium for the women. It is a shocking injustice that the women of St. Michael's, Trinity and Victoria cannot obtain a suitable physical education in a university of the standing and size of Toronto University.

"A committee was formed in 1913 which drew up plans for a university union similar to Hart House. The cost was, at that time, placed at a minimum of four millions with a more probable cost of five millions. The question is whether the sum could possibly be raised in the country with the existing economic conditions. If two or three millionaires could be induced to donate a million or so each, we might have a Hart House for women eventually."

"In the meantime there is a very pressing need for a gymnasium building to comprise three gymnasiums at least, more probably four, with a doctor's office, administrative office, swimming pool, etc. This must be built in the very near future."

"With regard to the projected Victoria College residences they are so indefinite as to make it rather impossible to consider as yet. Of the money for building expansion of Victoria College, the total amount now will cover only the building of Emmanuel College, but the campaign for the funds for our new women's residences will be re-opened on February 1st."

Miss Biss, Head of Hutton House, and Miss Youret, Head Girl, received at the house party held Saturday night.

CAMPUS TEA-ROOMS RIVAL HART HOUSE IN PRICE, QUALITY

Service Better Than Great Hall; Investigation Shows Greater Value

SHORTAGE OF SOUP

Finer Variety of Food Revealed As Well As Better Conditions

Having heard that as good or better meals at the same prices are being served at the various coffee shops around the campus and at Yonge St. restaurants than at Hart House, "The Varsity" decided to verify this fact.

Accordingly a reporter set out and visited a number of these places. He found that a great many students patronize them in preference to the Great Hall. Far better service is given and a greater variety of food can be procured.

A Chop Suey cafe visited by "The Varsity" on Yonge Street has a finer meal for thirty-five cents than that served at the Great Hall at the same price. The waiter will unfold your napkin for you and put the sugar into your drink. One eats on the best of linen, and steaks or other meats can be ordered rare or medium as is desired.

One place on Huron Street serves a far better meal at thirty-five cents than Hart House. Another on Willcocks Street beats the Great Hall in the matter of good food.

Without exception all the places visited by the "Varsity" served a better meal than procurable at the same price at the Great Hall.

It was found that soup is lacking at dinner in the Great Hall. Also that the waitresses are not as willing to be of help as at outside restaurants.

SEMINAR BANNED TO PASS STUDENTS

Management of New Study Room Entrusted to Fourth Year Students

SENIOR YEARS PREFERRED

"The success of the recently established reference room for honour English students is assured, I believe," declared Professor H. J. Davis, of the English staff, University College, when questioned by "The Varsity" on that subject.

"The only difficulty is that the room seems to be congested at times. It was originated for students of second, third, and fourth years and graduates doing honour English work," he continued. "The seminar reference room is not a lending library, for in that way it would be defeating its purpose, since it was established in order that students in English would be certain of a place where they could get reference books."

Professor Davis, to solve the difficulty, has arranged for a committee of fourth year honour English students to take over the management of the room. This task entails the prevention of the removal of books from the building and the exclusion of pass students from honour privileges in this respect.

Mrs. Hobbs, vice-chairman of the English Folk-Dancing Association, was the dinner guest of Miss Kilpatrick at the Women's Union, Tuesday evening.

PROFESSOR BURTON REFUSES LECTURE TO NOISY CLASS

Pharmacy Students Are Rebuked for Boisterous Conduct

"A BUNCH OF ROWDIES"

One hundred and forty-seven members of the first year class in Pharmacy were left "lectureless" yesterday when Professor E. F. Burton refused to lecture to them on "Colloidal Suspension" because of disturbance in the lecture room.

According to information received by "The Varsity" Professor Burton came into the lecture room, and, finding his class engaged in boisterous conversation, dismissed them, saying, "I'll not lecture to a bunch of rowdies."

The lectures on "Colloidal Suspension" was one of a series of two given voluntarily by Professor Burton to the students in Pharmacy, as a supplement to the regular lectures on the Pharmacy calendar.

As a result of the affair yesterday, Pharmacy students are thus deprived of this special course and the majority feel keenly the loss of this series of lectures on so difficult a subject.

CO-ED TO PRESENT ORIGINAL REVUE

Maureen O'Mara Seeks Students to Participate in Choruses

"THE WAY OF THE WORLD"

The advertisement inserted by Miss Maureen O'Mara, proved a magnet to numbers of musical comedy aspirants. Miss O'Mara, who is producing in March an original 16-scene revue of Hart House Theatre, entitled "The Way of the World", advertised in Tuesday's "Varsity" for men and women to take part in her singing and dancing choruses. A large number of co-eds turned up at the required spot and appeared decidedly capable of captivating the most fastidious audience. Some of the many who are anxious to take part in Miss O'Mara's revue are: Misses Marguerite LeGros, Mary Ainslie, Grace Clark, Marion Beal, Lucy Ashbourne, Connie Kelly, Gilda Kreiner and Vivian Bowles.

Miss O'Mara seemed well pleased with the result of her advertising, but refrained from making any more definite statements at this early date with regard to the revue. It will be recalled that Miss O'Mara wrote the music for the musical comedy hit, "Honeyboy", last year.

A serious loss has been suffered by the university library in the mutilation of the "Non-such" edition of "Rochester's Letters", which is a very valuable book, and difficult to replace, according to Miss I. Wooley of the English staff, University College.

Whole passages, usually the most interesting ones, have been literally cut from the volume. The offender has not been apprehended.

GREAT ORGAN BALKS DURING RECITAL

Breakdown Easily Repaired; Instrument Improved Last Summer

REMODELLED BY FRIARS

"You might have a five thousand dollar car that broke down upon occasion; it's the same with the organ," said Dr. F. O. Moore, university organist, in an interview with "The Varsity" regarding the mishap that interrupted the recital on Tuesday afternoon. A temporary breakdown in the organ made it impossible to play any number which required particularly restrained and quiet rendering.

During the summer the organ was remodelled and improved by the Casavant Freres of Quebec, who installed the instrument in 1911-12. It now contains eighty speaking stops and five thousand pipes.

More students are availing themselves of the opportunity of this hour of music. Dr. Moore's next recital will be on February the fourth, at five p.m.

ART FOR MASSES URGES WHITNEY

Cleveland Man Would Develop Creative Powers of Children

'WANTON WASTE OF TALENT'

"What is art? The expression of man's desire to create" declared Frederick A. Whitney, Director of Cleveland Museum of Art, speaking last night in the Art Gallery on "An Art Museum's Services to the Community."

The old attitude towards art as a thing to be guarded and preserved for the enjoyment of the privileged few is giving way to a new dynamic interpretation of the purpose of art. "Our object should be to make the Art Museum a great educational influence in the community," he maintained. "The greatest crime of our present educational system is the wanton waste of our talent and genius."

If a natural art consciousness is to be developed it must be through the minds of our children. Admirable progress towards these ideals is being

Four Lazy Fugacities Prove Strings To Tie Debaters in Imperial Knots

By G. G. B.

Professor Fay snowed under the supporters of the resolution. He accepted, as he said, ninety-nine per cent of their arguments and yet insisted that there was very good reason for the defeat of the resolution. Undoubtedly he saved the day for the Noes.

In opposing the resolution, Mr. Beamish made the statement that, in the event of a separation from the Empire, it is written in the stars that she must fall upon the tender mercies of the United States. It seems to us that it is far more likely to be written in the Telegrams.

The Four Lazy Fugacities invented by Dr. Ewart, bade fair to take their place with the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse. But they faded into insignificance before the onslaught of Professor Fay.

TORONTO MEN WILL NOT BOOTLEG THINKS PROFESSOR

H. C. Simpson of Trinity Deplores Conditions in Michigan

CONDUCT NOT JUSTIFIED

Value of University Courses Annulled by Method of Earning Fees

In yesterday's "Varsity" there was an article from Ann Arbor, which tells of several students in the University of Michigan who were carrying on a business in bootlegging.

Their customers were usually fraternities noted for their drunken parties. It certainly seems a deplorable state of affairs when students begin to handle liquor to earn money for their education.

When he was approached on the subject, Professor H. C. Simpson of Trinity College said, "I deem it unnecessary to ask me what I think of such conduct taking place in a university. Surely students can find if not a more profitable, then a more honourable type of employment to put them through university. No matter how hard a time a student has financially, he is certainly not justified in obtaining money for a university education by this means."

A student gaining an education in this way would lose all the value gained by associating himself with bootlegging and all that goes with it.

Such an affair taking place right within the precincts of the university would certainly not add any credit to its name.

May the University of Toronto never come to such a state? It is safe to say that unless a radical change takes place, there will never be a similar occurrence here.

The representative from Cambridge, G. Crowther, fairly beamed as he set forth the attitude of the British Government to the question.

Our probable fate at the gentle hands of Uncle Sam worried H. C. Elliott. He drew an awe-inspiring picture of Uncle Sam sitting complacently with the heels of Nicaragua still sticking from the corners of his mouth.

The debate developed into a discussion, not of independence, but of the "Four Lazy Fugacities".

G. Crowther Approves Style Adopted by Debaters of Hart House

SUBJECTS NOT POLICED

"I view with gratification that the debaters have adopted the parliamentary style," remarked G. Crowther, past president of the Cambridge Union, in an interview with "The Varsity" after the conclusion of last night's debate.

When questioned if there was ever any trouble in England in regard to subjects chosen for debate, Mr. Crowther replied, "No, there has been no trouble in this respect for the last hundred years at least, nor do I think there ever will be. The police," he continued, "would never interfere with a debate upon any political subject, at least."

Mr. Crowther had nothing further to say except that he was glad to see the great interest shown by the University of Toronto students in Imperial problems.

TIME WAS JUDGED FROM SHADOWS BY CAVEMEN

Trinity College Science Club Hears Mr. F. C. Sturm on Subject of Time

EVOLUTION OF MEASURES

Burning Candle and Sun Dial Give Way to System Says Speaker

Time was the subject discussed at a meeting of the Trinity College Science Club last evening. Mr. F. G. Sturm, the speaker of the evening, treated the subject very comprehensively, beginning with an historical background of time. "The caveman's method of measuring time," said Mr. Sturm, "was by means of shadows and other physical happenings of periodic recurrence. The evolution of modern methods of measuring time was traced, credit going to the Babylonians for the idea of twelve months in a year."

Various kinds of time were discussed and ways of measuring them. Mr. Sturm clearly pointed out the difference between sidereal or star time and solar or sun time, showing their advantages and disadvantages. He traced the evolution of instruments for measuring time from the ancient method of burning a candle, the hour glass, the sun dial and their modifications, to the present complicated and exact system. He explained the present system of standard time fully, and showed that it is merely a convention based on mathematical calculations with respect to independent physical phenomena.

After the talk a very interesting discussion took place about time, chiefly from its philosophical aspects. Canon Rollo gave some very interesting news and discussion was general.

After refreshments and a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Sturm and Rev. Sidney Childs, the host, the meeting adjourned.

Motion Is Defeated 286-163

EMINENT VISITORS

Brilliant Opposition By C. R. Fay

At the first Hart House debate of the term, last evening, the house divided 286-163 against the motion that "This house would view with pleasure the termination of existing Imperial ties between Canada and the United Kingdom". Much enthusiasm was apparent and at times some heckling. Contrary to expectations the blue bulks of Chief Draper's riot squad were not in evidence.

N. J. DeWitt, Victoria IV, in moving the question, based his arguments on the Ontario High School History of Canada. "It must be a safe authority," said Mr. DeWitt, "since it is authorized by the Premier of Ontario, the Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, B.A."

B. D. Beamish, University College, IV, opposed the motion, saying, "Canada's obligation to support Great Britain with men and money is the premium on the best insurance policy a small nation ever had." He was of the opinion that if we left the side of England we would fall naturally into the eager arms of the United States.

"Britain has been a good parent," testified E. Lautenschlager, Victoria III, speaking third, "but the Imperial ties are ties uniting a superior to an inferior and as such should be repealed. He struck the note of a personal empire, if the connecting link would be the King."

J. S. Ewart, K.C., tilted gently with his opponents in speaking for the motion. The Imperial ties which he wanted abolished were the lazy Iugadics such as the Colonial Laws Validity Act. Both political parties in Canada had been one in repelling the Imperial ideas which England had endeavored to foist on her. He was for the personal union under the King, who would speak for each state in the empire separately and not for the whole empire, "God Save the King of Canada," said Mr. Ewart in conclusion.

Brotherhood was the panacea proposed by Rev. F. C. Ward-White to bind Canada to the empire, and when he spoke vehemently in approval of Australia and South Africa keeping down the coloured races, a member of the audience groaned, "Brotherhood." "If we were independent we would need an army and navy. (Shouts of "We've got Draper!"). After booming the Imperial drums, Rev. Ward-White sat down.

Professor C. R. Fay spoke against the motion, and received a rousing reception. His idea of Canada's past was as an intermediary between North America and Europe. R. H. Loosemore, Grad. Studies, Trinity, for the motion, picked Rev. Ward-White's arguments in a thunderous declamation.

G. Crowther, past president of the Cambridge Union, spoke against the motion from an English point of view. E. B. Joffile, Victoria III, J. H. Griegoren, Trinity College IV, Owen Barron, Trinity I, J. K. Cadwell, University College IV, and E. Carson, Victoria III, also spoke from the floor of the house.

The guest of honour at Miss Kilpatrick's reception in her room at the Women's Union Tuesday afternoon was Mme. Birukova, Russian portrait painter. Mrs. Wallace and Mrs. Howard posed tea.

THE YOUNGER GENERATION

Every time Age wags its finger reprovingly at Youth, we are tempted to ask whether we are really as bad as we are painted. Older and wiser heads is an accepted phrase now, but exception is so frequently taken by the young to the opinions advanced by their seniors that there must be some inherent anomaly. We do not feel that they always hit the nail on the head when they take a dig at the rising generation.

We are told that we are carrying on in a way that was never dreamt of by our parents; that our standards are much lower; that we are losing our moral sense; and that we are generally going to the dogs. The accusation is usually supported by references to the baneful influence of motor cars, moving pictures and the like. A few of the die-hards would have it that all modern inventions are of the devil and therefore not to be tolerated. But the moderates content themselves with a general indictment.

On the other hand, a good many opinions which run directly counter to these views have come to light in casual conversation, or been made the theme of conciliatory statements. We have heard it frequently affirmed that swearing is a lost art and must be relegated to the limbo of forgotten things along with the antimacassar and the bustle. When it comes to a good round oath, it seems we are not in the same class with our ancestors. The day of the four bottle man is said to be definitely over. Vices that were tolerated a few decades ago in polite society are now strictly taboo.

Gilbert Murray, the distinguished English scholar, defends the rising generation. He declares that the rebellion of youth against age is a perfectly normal condition, and has existed since the beginning of things. There is a period of dependence in childhood days, followed by a period of reaction which expresses itself in hostility to established ideas and scepticism about things in general. Birds have the right idea, he says, discussing the alleged crisis in morals at the present day in Harper's Magazine.

Birds, who take their parental duties very seriously, slave to feed and defend their young for a few months, and at the suitable moment turn them out of their nests and peck them if they try to get in again.

Birds know their business.

He suggests that similar treatment by human beings would overcome the period of revolt. In his opinion, the undergraduates of his day at Oxford were just as much opposed to their elders as are those of to-day. But their revolt takes the form of intellectual speculation, which seldom resolves itself into action.

Dr. Samuel S. Drury, rector of St. Paul's school, Concord, New Hampshire, takes a modified stand upon the matter. He does not upbraid the younger generation, but he advocates tighter control by parents; a control tempered by reason. He feels that gin and jazz are to-day's greatest menaces and thinks that they can be overcome by a wise re-assertion of parental authority. He does not ask total abstinence of youth, but feels that they should not drink except in their own homes.

It is apparent that feeling is strongly divided on both sides of the question. Conclusions cannot be drawn definitely one way or the other to show that the younger generation is or is not degenerate.

Little investigation is required to reveal the fact, however, that censure of the young by the old has been as popular a parlour sport as rebellion of the young against the old. We are quite convinced that Adam and Eve were just as alarmed by the behaviour of Cain and Abel, or at least, of Cain. Human nature demands something at which to grumble and the weather and the younger generation are the most convenient subjects. Some of the university's prominent radicals of to-day will no doubt develop into first class conservatives in another thirty years. It is wonderful what a difference wealth and prosperity make in the average man's outlook on life.

Nevertheless, the fact remains that moral standards are changing. Modern thinkers attribute this to a number of things. The Great War was an important factor. The emancipation of women contributed. Advances in the realms of psychology have also had an effect, if the opinion of Gilbert Murray is to be accepted. There is nothing remarkable in the fact that moral standards are changing.

Art and Drama

Players' Guild

The presentation of Mr. A. E. F. Allan at the Players' Guild yesterday afternoon was "Literature" by Schnitzler, a brilliant comedy of manners, with a most attractive background of Viennese intrigue in artistic and literary life. The play is a sparkling bit of dilettante writing, as artificial as the characters of the play themselves, but only the more entertaining for the fantastic deftness of its wit. It was, perhaps, one of the most delightful plays that has been presented at the Guild in some time.

The merciless speed of the repartee in the play made exacting demands of the cast, who made every effort to give the requisite precision to the dialogue and only infrequently was one aware of any hesitancy in the movement of the play. Mr. Allan, as "Clemens", showed a tendency to hurry his lines until their sense was blurred in the commendable attempt to pace the play, and in contrast, Mr. Wynbourne, though in perfect command of his part, (Gilbert), inclined to dwell upon phrases until their frailty suffered under the stress. Miss Isobel Dickson who appeared in a Guild performance for the first time, was admirable as the attractive, over-intellectual poet and novelist. Both Mr. Allan and Mr. Wynbourne gave consistent and interesting character to their difficult roles.

Sketch Room

An exhibition of photography so varied in choice and range of subject, and displaying such fine knowledge of technique has never before in my experience been shown on the walls of the Sketch Room. The exhibition is unique in that it is entirely the work of the Camera Club. The amateurism invariably associated with the work of non-professionals is conspicuously absent; such is its quality.

I was attracted particularly by a bit of well balanced and extremely happy genre, the work of Colley Foster, entitled "Showing Off". A polar bear on its haunches (caged of course) with forelegs outstretched in an easy manner seems to be enjoying the impression he is creating on the spectators.

A portrait of Mr. A. Munro Grier, by Alan Sangster, was deservedly awarded first in its class. The quality and texture of both flesh and cloth have been brought out with exceptional skill. The prevailing tone is particularly happy, the result of a fine balance of light and shade.

Bobbie, by O. M. Solandt, is a singularly sweet picture of a child caught in its natural surroundings of fields and trees.

Seven Eggs, by J. E. Lehman, is an ingenious arrangement which produces a pleasing harmony of line and color.

A warm bit of landscape by A. B. MacPherson, which he calls "Summer Sunshine", shows a well balanced

"BIG BILL"

By R. E. Noless

At last I had reached the end of my long journey and was about to be presented to the great man. I peered expectantly through the thick blue mist, but could see nothing but a glowing pin point of light.

Then the secretary who had admitted me to the mayor's office, spoke, "Your Worship, Mr. Noless, the newspaper man, is here from Toronto to interview you."

C-C

What could this salutation to thick air possibly mean, I wondered. When to my surprise and delight a voice cut through the dense haze of tobacco smoke from the vicinity of the glowing cigar butt.

"Whazzat?" Just a single laconic query, but what a world of meaning it could imply! The secretary repeated "Mr. Noless is here from Toronto."

"Trawna,—wherezat?" replied Mayor Thompson, (for it was he).

"Toronto is in Canada, your Altitude," answered the secretary.

"Yeah? Bring 'm in. Does he speak American?"

C-C

And it was then that the face of the famous mayor loomed out of the tobacco smoke. It was a visage that I never shall forget. I felt as though I were confronted with a well-fed halibut at the bottom of a muddy river and subjected to its curious gaze. Stern, calculating, his shrewd cold eyes were offset by an elusive metallic smile that played at the corners of his mouth. The rest of his features just seemed to have grown that way.

"Mr. Thompson," I asked, "is it true that your city is bankrupt?"

"Yeah," he replied absently.

"Well, how are you going to pay all the civic employees?" I inquired.

Shame!

The Editor,
"The Varsity".

Sir:

Are you not deeply grieved that your journal should be the cause of such dire misfortune as I see by Monday's "Varsity" has befallen to one "Harold"?

Alas! Poor Harold!

Fallen for a dame! Plunged right into the deep end and gone down the third time! My heartfelt commiserations to him in this calamity. Calamity is euphemistic. Catastrophe would suit it better.

I know what I am talking about, Mr. Editor, for I am a woman-hater of many years standing. And when I see my colleagues eating 15c breakfasts, extinguishing and pocketing half-smoked cigarettes, slipping past conductors on street cars, or desperately counting the days to the end of the month, I realize that even catastrophe is putting it mild,—but the language seems to run out of superlatives here.

Harold, poor boy, must now provide taxis, theatres, dances, dinners,—he must keep his shoes resplendent and his hair immaculate,—he must have natty shirts and passionate ties. And what for? For the society of a dame,—something politely called a person, which thinks more of dates and rouges and movie-stars and chemises than of anything else.

I trust, Mr. Editor, that you feel due penitence for what you have done. Even between puffs of a Corona Corona, and sips of the Very Best Imported, I cannot but groan:

Women's Rights by a Man

The Editor,

"The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

I sometimes feel ashamed to look but it does place a heavy burden of responsibility on the rising generation.

The undergraduates of to-day have a peculiarly difficult prospect. In addition to the slackening of moral fibre, questions of world-wide importance are pressing upon the nations as never before. It is not for us to assume that the youth of to-day are exceptionally well-qualified to meet the problems of to-morrow. But at least we can point out the difficulties and express the hope that the age will produce leaders capable of dealing with those problems.

a woman in the face. (Have no fears, this is not a confession.) At different times, remarks have appeared in our paper, uttered by some sort of celestial beings, derogatory to the female population of universities, in particular, and womankind in general. It seems that these "superiors", (or are they men?) are dismayed by the "terrible" influence of women in this modern world of ours. Indeed, they seem surprised that those in authority allow them so much freedom and even permit them to enter universities, to the serious impairment of the latter's knowledge-imparting ability.

What poor creatures are they that call themselves men, while clinging to such narrow, prejudiced views? Have not women given ample evidence of their abilities? Have not men yet been civilized beyond the ideas of their tree-climbing forefathers? We often

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Varsity will be minus the services of Jimmy McMullen, Blue captain and left winger when the locals take the ice at Queen's to-morrow night. In the game with the Tricolour here Monday McMullen injured his hip and has been taking an enforced rest. Jimmy will be greatly missed from the forward line, where he has been playing great hockey. Murray will perform at left wing and Dowar will get into the game. Unless an intermediate player is recruited Varsity will have but two relief forwards to the Tricolour's three as Dowar is a defence man. The situation calls for some thought and it will be interesting to see if "Red" Porter can devise some plan to knock off the Limestone crew. If Dowar should be used on the forward line he may give Quinn in the Queen's net some anxious moments as the former Upper Canada College boy packs a wicked shot.

* * *

McGill's smart effort against Varsity here last Saturday in addition to the fine showing that Queen's is making in the senior O.H.A. series this year indicates that the intercollegiate hockey series will witness the return of the Tricolour to college hockey probably next winter. With a little inducement the University of Montreal would doubtless be fit to enter a team, thus making out a four-team league. Varsity and McGill are playing none but registered students, while Queen's have three non-collegians in their line-up. Queen's could build up a good sextet with their own men, and the University of Montreal likewise.

* * *

To-morrow's "Varsity" will have the list of the boxers and wrestlers who will compete against Argos at Hart House Saturday afternoon. The Argonaut Club has been stepping out in this field of late and will give Varsity a good workout.

* * *

Latest information has revealed that Household Science will enter a swimming team in the interfaculty meet, which takes place about the beginning of March. Margot MacDonald, twice individual champion of the university, who has formerly been on the University College team, will now be with Household Science. The U.C. girls won the title last year but were closely pressed by St. Hilda's. They will be lucky if they can keep the cup this season after losing their ace, Bea Symons of St. Hilda's was only one point behind Miss MacDonald for the individual championship in the last meet.

* * *

There is every indication that McGill will be back in intercollegiate hockey next season. The girls from Montreal wished to put in a team this winter, but were too late in reaching the decision. Miss A. E. M. Parkes did not receive notice of their desire to re-enter the league until after the Christmas holidays.

* * *

At present Varsity and Queen's play home and home games, but if McGill put in a team next year the hockey will probably have to be played off in tournament form, owing to financial reasons. This is very unfortunate, as both Queen's and Varsity prefer home and home games. However, it is doubtful whether any of the teams could afford to make the necessary trips were three teams in the league.

Splendid Material In Rowing Turnouts

The first week of training on the rowing machines in Hart House has uncovered a wealth of heavy material. Over 75 have been turning out daily at 5 o'clock. Although Varsity's last year's crew is greatly depleted in numbers, owing to graduation, one may safely predict a much stronger boat next year. The size and brawn of the new men augurs well for the future. In fact, if this summer's crew will remain together for the next two summers they might earn a trip to California and the next Olympics.

Coach Tommy Loudon is seriously considering the results of making some arrangements whereby a shell may be put in the tank and thus give the men a better idea of actual rowing than has usually been done in the sudden change from machines to shell on the bay. The executive is in communication with some American universities as to the feasibility of this plan. If it is found advantageous it will be adopted.

In the meantime work on the machine will go on as usual. The heavy men turn out Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays and the lightweights on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

A definite date has been set for the annual banquet. It is being held on Wednesday evening, Jan. 29 at 6.45 o'clock in the Great Hall, Hart House. Invitations may be obtained from the Athletic Office before Tuesday, Jan. 28th.

RUNNERS CONTENT IN FIELD MEET TO-NIGHT

Track and Field Events Are Scheduled for Meet in February

S.P.S. HOLD TITLE

To-night will witness the first part of the annual Interfaculty Track and Field Meet at Hart House. The events scheduled are the half mile run, the fifty yard sprint, and the running high jump. All these events are going to prove very interesting, as there will be a large field out for each one.

Track and field interest has experienced a real burst of enthusiasm since last fall and winning the intercollegiate championship only proved what real interest, combined with no small degree of ability, can accomplish.

Junior Meds Deadlock Junior S.P.S. 2-2

Junior Meds and Junior S.P.S. hockey teams appeared very evenly matched yesterday afternoon, the game ending in a 2-2 tie. School took the first period 2-0. Meds tied the score in the second and they remained deadlocked throughout the third, neither team being able to tally.

Bartleman scored School's first goal from close in early in the game. Meds then took the offensive. With slightly over a minute to go and one man in the penalty box they were unable to hold School out, and Martin scored.

In the second period Yoerger scored two goals for Meds, one of them from outside the defence. That ended the scoring for both teams, although in the last period Meds came very close to putting one in during a scramble about the School net.

S.P.S.—Jory, goal; Bartleman and Walkom, defence; Anderson and Martin, wings; Crocker, centre. Subs, Porter and Bates.

Meds—McCreary, goal; Whitehead, Williams, defence; Preston, Graham, wings; Yoerger, centre; Lowery, Carroll, Nugent, subs.

Varsity Basketeers Aim For Title

The University of Toronto junior basketball five earned a 24 to 17 victory over the Y.M.H.A. team in a City League game last night at Hart House. The two teams comprise a league with a schedule of four games. The "Y" defaulted the first match, and, as a result of the Blue and White win last night, must take the next two fixtures to have a chance for the title.

Captain Harry Newman of the Blue and White aggregation was the best man on the floor and stood out defensively as well as a play-maker. Gerry Coles teamed up well with Newman, to form a formidable pair of guards. Grant and Kay divided the scoring honours for the winners, notching 8 points each. This is the "T" squad's first start, and when a few more games are behind them the forward line will work with greater smoothness.

Y.M.H.A. were able to hold the Varsity cagers in check for the first period, which ended 11 to 10 in favour of the ultimate winners. Schwab was the most effective for the "Y" with 6 points to his credit while Kofsky was the mainstay of the defence.

University of Toronto—Forwards, Douglas, Grant (8); centre, Willis; defence, Coles (2), Newman (6); spares, Kay (8), McDonnell, Magwood, Enlow.

Y.M.H.A.—Forwards, Schwab (6), Caplan; centre, Shapiro (4); defence, Kofsky (4), Starkman; spares, Kates, Hoffman, Goodman, Chorney (3).

Referee—M. Carr.

CORRESPONDENCE

hear the Greek civilization eulogized and favourably compared with our own. Yet even they treated their women, in general, as inferiors. But to-day broadminded, forward-looking men recognize that the one sex is but the complement of the other in the achievement of a well-rounded, meaningful life. Accordingly, it is only to the detriment of mankind that we persistently oppose the cession to woman of her rights.

Evolution consists in a gradual change of both body and mind. If, then, we are to achieve a higher life, let us lend ourselves to the removal of obstacles from nature's path. One of these is man's exalted opinion of himself. But, says one, woman is incapable of man's work. Is she? Have we tried her? I would say, never before as now; and on what grounds can we complain if she does not immediately equal her "lord and master"? Surely, all reason has not abandoned man!

Let us, then, recognize that women are something more than mere beasts of burden, being our co-partners, and leave, as well as we, rights to intellectual development. A gentleman is unselfish. Men, what are you?

Yours,
"MAC".

Editor,
"The Varsity".

Since the earliest times that I have taken interest in current discussion, I have seen the cadet training question aired in one form and another by various clerical and patriotic bodies. In almost every case the evidence and conclusions have been so utterly removed from what seems to me to be actual experience that I beg an opportunity to present the opinions of one who has only lately been through the mill.

In high school I suffered cadet training with several hundred other boys under one of the most competent instructors. We used did Ross rifles that were supposed to weigh nine pounds. And in university we have in the C.O.T.C. a more intense drilling.

Now, the most-repeated claim is that cadet training is not militaristic. It is repeated so often that I almost suspect that its authors are not themselves convinced. Only the other day, this absurd claim was made in Windsor by a man who should know better. What did we carry rifles for? To shoot peas at an imaginary enemy. When we went through the motions of inserting a bullet, shoving home the bolt, and pulling the trigger, was it to make a pleasant click? When the order came to extend ranks to twenty paces, presumably because the enemy were using machine guns, it was, I suppose, all a jolly game.

I also suspect the claim that it ensures discipline. Highly amusing to one who saw a hundred boys restrained only by the native influence of the drill master and a prospect of a very mild interview with the headmaster after 3 p.m. To many, cadet training was sheer torture; to the majority, something to be endured like algebra or measles in the course of a lifetime; and to the select few, who had it in the blood, a pleasure.

And why do university students take C.O.T.C.? First, because it ensures a commission in the next war, and, hence, less chance of getting shot up; second, it is less rigorous than P.T., and under a laxer discipline as far as attendance is concerned—if you know the ropes.

It is extremely annoying to see so much pussy-footing on this question. Why not come out and say that cadet training is militaristic, and then see if it stands on its merits? It has very strong arguments in its favour, if approached honestly.

I claim that all the arguments now advanced in favour of cadet training are equally applicable to gymnasium drill, and it certainly never need be protected from a charge of militarism. In a squad of well-trained young people on a gymnasium floor one has the same snap and precision as in a squad juggling rifles; one has the same, and even more intricate manoeuvres; more freedom of the body, and discipline that is not so necessarily imposed by blood and thunder. It must be remembered, of course, that high school and university students do most things under mild forms of compulsion.

As it is, cadet training requires much equipment, and is, in many cases, superficial; a rush to get ready for the inspecting officer; an annual hammering-in of movements that will be forgotten in holy peace ten minutes after the visiting officer says that he has never seen such a fine corps. If cadet training is thorough, it cannot help but be war-like; if it is hurried, it is not much good for any purpose, military or disciplinary, and at the same time, highly nervous, and expensive to the tax-payers.

Young people may be basty, and possibly somewhat cynical, so that I may be seeing things that do not exist. However, when the rev. clergy deliver sermons eulogizing the Locarno Pact, Hon. Frank Kellogg, Hon. Ramsay MacDonald and Hon. Herbert Hoover, then tie themselves to their assemblies and assert that boys obeying "for inspection, port arms" are not militaristic, it looks funny, to say the least. It is also strange how the earnest and loyal ladies of local chapters of patriotic women can hold peace meetings and then pour tea at cadet dances for young men who have just put on khaki uniforms to escape observation by an imaginary enemy out to shrapnel them. ## The Table Round

THE KING'S ENGLISH

We may soon be saying "the President's English" if the opinions of H. L. Mencken, of the American Mercury, are to be regarded as sound. He asserts that American pronunciation is exerting an increasing influence on English speech. A few years ago, he believes, linguists in the old country were of the die-hard variety and would not tolerate any suggestions for the modification of the language. Now, he would have it that great inroads are being made by the United States methods.

As a matter of fact, language is not fixed but changeable. There is a perpetual, if gradual, alteration going on. New words are creeping in, new spellings are becoming orthodox, new meanings are being introduced. The historic background of English nomenclature accounts for the apparent anomalies which exist in the pronunciation of place names. Cirencester and Cholmondeley will doubtless continue to be pronounced Sissester and Chumley, but ordinary words are continually subject to influences which make for change, even though it be so gradual as to be unnoticeable.

outdoor scene in which sunlight is quite prominent.

Two children who seem to be quite at home in the picture give it an air of exquisite charm. This is a sepiolite and the prevailing tone is perhaps a trifle too brown to be altogether happy.

The "Circular Stair", by J. F. Phillips, is simply a harmony of beautiful lines emphasized by an effective distribution of light.

Another fine example of line is an interior in Hart House entitled Arches and Corridors, by Professor Coventry. The sunshine coming through a window is scattered rather effectively and brings the arches into a fuller light.

It is truly a most interesting exhibition and my only regret is that my knowledge of the processes involved is limited and prevents me from giving a fuller account.

"Pirates of Penzance"

"The Pirates of Penzance" is by no means to be ranked among the best of the Savoy operas. It lacks the charm of "Iolanthe", the boisterous humour of "The Mikado", the sparkle of "Patience", or the melody of "The Yeomen of the Guard". But it has a certain quality of its own which endears it to the hearts of theatre-goers. There are flashes of the Gilbert genius in such numbers as the Major-General's song and the Constable's lament; and Sullivan rarely did anything better than the parting duet of Mable and Frederic in the second act.

The Victoria Music Club's version of "The Pirates" is largely a choral one. The chorus work is excellent. I have seldom seen better. The only trouble is that there are sometimes so many people on the stage that you can't see the costumes. Or the sets. But you won't mind.

Miss Jean Evans and Mr. Campbell Graham in the romantic leads are there as to voice and personality. Mr. Harry Berry as the Major-General provides some fine comedy and displays an amazing amount of polish. He is the only one in the east who assays an English accent, and he does it rather successfully. Miss Edith Tourgis as the pirate slut, Mr. Roy Wood as the pirate king, and Mr. Clarence Ferguson as the police sergeant are also good.

I still insist, however, that the at-with the addition of a great deal of new material have been seen training on the indoor track lately. Mr. Halbus, the coach of the team, will start the events, which will commence sharp at 5.15 p.m.

These events are held each Thursday with a different program every week. Besides being an interfaculty championship, which was won last year by S.P.S., they also provide excellent practice for those training for the indoor meet at the Coliseum next month and the big indoor meet at Hamilton the following month. There will be a team to represent Varsity at both and the interfaculty meet will give everyone a chance to show his ability.

Varsity Meets Queen's In Women's Hockey

The women's intercollegiate hockey team will play Queen's on February 12 at Kingston. The date for the return game is still to be set, depending on when the arena will be available.

McGill has not played Varsity since 1924, the year that Queen's first entered a team. Before that time Varsity and McGill met in a sudden death game each season, but since then home and home games have been played by Queen's and Varsity. McGill wished to re-enter the league this year, but was too late in applying as Varsity had already made arrangements to play in the City League. Moreover the McGill women want the games to take place in the form of a tournament similar to the way in which the intercollegiate basketball is arranged, but Varsity and Queen's both prefer the home and home game system.

Since the McGill sextet dropped out of the intercollegiate series, it has been participating in the City League of Montreal and each year takes on Queen's in an exhibition game.

Gradually as my eyes became accustomed to the mist I found that I was sitting at a beautifully carved mahogany desk in a lavishly equipped office. All the furnishings, I noticed, exhibited the most exquisite taste, even to the five sterling silver cuspidors by the mayor's side.

C-C

Judge my amazement then, when I discovered two bodies on the floor near my feet. "Who on earth are these men?" I exclaimed.

"Mr. Thompson smiled reassuringly. 'Just a couple aldermen,' he said easily. 'They wanted to fire some of the cops.'"

"But how did it happen?" I asked incredulously.

"Oh I dunno, I kinda think one of them drank too much hooch and got hydrophobia. Some guy shot the other one through the transom."

C-C

"That reminds me, Mr. Thompson—really, I feel as though I must call you Bill— What are you going to do about the bandit problem? Are you going to clean them out?"

"Naw," replied the mayor, "it ain't practical. If you didn't have no thugs, you wouldn't need no cops, and if you didn't have no cops, you wouldn't have no public safety. It can't be done."

C-C

I remember only vaguely what Mr. Thompson said after that. There was a vivid flash, a thunderous boom and some chunks of concrete came tearing through the window and struck me on the head.

AMOROUSLY INCLINED TO HAVE LOW LIGHTS AT ANNUAL ARTS BALL

Committee Aims to Surpass Anything in History of Society

LISMER PAINTINGS USED
Dolphins' Dazzling Display to be Feature in Pool

"We are hoping that the Arts Ball this year will surpass anything in the history of the society," Mr. Alex Stringer, president of the U.C. Lit. stated to "The Varsity". "The committee in charge has put a great deal of work upon the arrangements, and the members feel sure that they are offering the students and grads of University College a splendid entertainment."

"The decorations used in the East Common Room of Hart House are entirely novel," said Mr. Walter Arnold, chairman of the committee. "The lights will be suitably lowered for the amorously inclined." He further intimated that it would take the form of a "Love in the Garden" rendezvous. The internationally known Toronto Dolphins are giving two exhibitions of swimming and diving. This is considered one of the main features of the festivities. "Their silver mesh costumes scintillate magnificently under the glare of the vari-coloured lights playing on the pool," stated Mr. Arnold.

A very smart program, beautifully embodied, has been put out for the Ball. The favours for ladies, combine ingenuity and beauty with utility.

Joe De Courcy and his first Palais Royal orchestra are dispensing the melody. The big gym has been beautifully decorated for the occasion. The paintings are by Mr. Arthur Lismer.

Supper will be served in the Great Hall at two sittings. The subscription has been limited to 350 couples.

RACE HATRED THEME OF BOOK OF ESTHER

Dr. Thomas Startles Group by Interpretation of Old Story

"The book of Esther shows how low religion can fall when people once make racial consciousness the test of life," was the startling statement made by Dr. Ernest Thomas in his address on "The Message of the Prophets" in Wymliwood last night. "Esther whom we have always known as the beautiful queen, the saviour of her people, asked as a boon for one more day of butchery. The book is the glorification of race hatred, inserted in the Bible in a moment of hot anger after defeat."

Dr. Thomas' speech centred on the merging of races, as seen in the Old Testament, bringing up the interesting question of "Should we mingle with the incoming foreigners?" but unfortunately leaving it unanswered. Dr. Thomas showed the first mixing

Governors Approve Hart House Addition

The proposed addition to Hart House will become a definite fact, the property committee of the Board of Governors passing upon it last evening. The decision of the Board having been made, plans will now be pushed through to completion and actual work will begin with the summer vacation. The addition, which will consist chiefly of an improvement to existing servery accommodations, is expected to be the first step in a scheme of greater expansion of Hart House.

FORESTRY BANQUET FEATURES NOTED DON

Professor With Nineteen Cents
Came to America
40 Years Ago

FOREMOST AUTHORITY NOW

Introduced by C. D. Howe, Dean of Forestry, as "a Russian immigrant who came to America forty years ago with nineteen cents in his pocket, and who is to-day the editor of the Journal of the American Society of Foresters," Professor Raphael Zon, director of the Lake States Forest Experimental Station, addressed the fifteenth annual banquet of the Foresters' Club last night. Professor Zon is "a professor in two universities and the second oldest authority of forests, in terms of years of service, on the continent," said Professor Howe.

The visiting don delivered an interesting lecture on "What is a Forest?" in which he stressed the struggle for existence in plant life, pointing out that in 1830, before Darwin, Patrick Matthews, a Scottish forester, was aware of the law of natural selection.

J. B. Biekersteth, Warden of Hart House, declared in a short address, "Hart House is built on freedom. We are left free to work out our own existence" (Continued on page 4)

RIFLE ASSOCIATION COMPETES NEXT WEEK

For First Time in Years
Enters Inter-University Matches

For the first time in some years the Rifle Association is competing in the Inter-University Rifle Competition. The match will be fired on Monday and Wednesday, January 27 and 29, and the range will be open from 4:30 to 8 p.m. each day, with an intermission for dinner. Now is the chance for all crack shots with the .22 rifle to turn out and help win the event for Varsity. Any number of men may compete; the highest ten scores will make up the team.

Next week also, the Gallery Practice Match for the month will get under way. This match will be commenced on Wednesday, January 29, on the completion of the Inter-University competition, and will be finished on Friday. The range will be open from 4:30 to 8 p.m. on this date also. All members may compete in the Gallery Practice Match, as in the Inter-University, the highest ten scores to compose the team.

For the benefit of any who wish to fire a last minute practice, the range will be open on Saturday afternoon, from 1 p.m. on. There are lots of opportunities for winning individual prizes in these matches, and everyone is urged to turn out and do his best to win his share of them.

SEPARATE SCHOOLING FOR MEN AND WOMEN PRODUCES SHYNESS

So Says Bishop's Debater
After Experience in Teaching

CO-EDUCATION IDEAL
Montreal Speaker Doubts Need
For Co-Educational Institutions

"I regard co-education as the ideal system," stated John T. Rennie, B.A., Bishop's College, a member of the touring debating team when approached on the subject by "The Varsity".

"If men and women are educated separately, they are always in some measure shy and embarrassed with each other in the world because they know and understand each other imperfectly."

"Put them in the same schools, educate them together, and they will get along much better afterwards than if they had not had this advantage. I do not approve of separate boarding schools for boys and girls. That this view is general is shown by the preponderance of co-educational colleges in this country."

Mr. Rennie has taught school himself, and hence is a capable judge of educational matters.

The other member of the visiting debating team, Henri Faubert, himself a student at the University of Montreal, a non-co-educational institution, said: "I think that women have as much right to an education as men, but not necessarily in the same college."

HEINE DESPISED ENGLISH BUT ADMIRER SHAKESPEARE

Was Primarily Poet Who Set Himself to Shock
the World

"Heine was first of all a poet," said G. H. Needler, Professor of German, University College, Thursday afternoon in an address on Heine given in West Hall, U.C.

Heine, although of Jewish nationality, made his fame in Germany. He was a keen thinker whose influence was felt throughout political circles in Europe. After a study of law he went to England to study English liberalism and became an admirer of Shakespeare.

Of the English, whom he despised, he said, "They take a dozen monosyllables into their mouths, chew them, spit them out, and call it speaking."

Finally he went to spend his remaining years in Paris, during which time he produced his best works. Poetry was his plaything and many of his poems were set to music. Heine was always an artist—an artist of contrasts of life rather than colour. His earlier poems were lyrics, intimate and personal. Later he changed to prose. "Heine deliberately set about to shock the world," said Professor Needler. "He wrote with the unbiased frankness of a cosmopolitan and the variety of his subjects was unlimited. Heine employed ridicule and satire and his brilliance broke out at" (Continued on page 4)

TYRANNY OF CONVENTION DEcriED AS VARSITY'S MOTION IS UPHELD

Sir Robert Squelches
Story of Retirement

Contrary to press reports last evening, Sir Robert Falconer, the president of the university, will not retire at the end of this year. Denial of press statements to the effect that Sir Robert Falconer had issued his last report as president of the university was given last night in an interview with "The Varsity".

"There is certainly no truth in the statement, provided providence spares me," said Sir Robert.

RESEARCH WORK DONE AS AID TO INDUSTRY

Dr. Speakman Tells Club
That Baby Boy Has Own Research

NOT ALWAYS ORIGINAL

"My two year old boy is doing what is, for him, research work every day of his life," said Dr. Speakman in explaining to the Commerce Club in Hart House yesterday that there is much of the work of the Ontario Research Foundation that is not original scientific discovery, although new to the industries of Ontario.

"It is research work for the manufacturer to hear that you can measure dampness," the speaker said by way of illustration.

The director of the Research Foundation thought that the library of scientific publications maintained by the foundation was one of its great contributions to the industrial life of the province. "We can digest the mass of scientific publications and make the findings of science available to the manufacturer."

"I hope that you will not be disappointed when I tell you that much of the work of the Ontario Research Foundation is routine work," he said. However, the speaker outlined the results of a few research jobs that had solved with science the problems presented.

Visiting Debaters Consider Convention the Proof of Morality

N.F.C.U.S. DEBATE

But Local Speakers See Risk to Rational Status of Man

The motion, "Resolved that this house deprecates the tyranny of convention," was upheld by a vote of 25 to 21 at the N.F.C.U.S. debate held last night in Trinity College library. The audience, although rather meagre, displayed intense interest, and following the debate proper, many spoke vehemently and at length upon the floor of the house. The vote recorded at the conclusion of their addresses again upheld the resolution by 33 votes to 16.

J. C. Clough of Trinity College, the first speaker for the affirmative, used as arguments the double standard and woman's place in the home, two age-old conventions.

"A man is allowed to do things a woman cannot do, he is allowed to sow his wild oats. Again, the convention of woman's place in the home, against which they have fought tooth and nail for generations, is an example of the tyranny which convention exercises over us."

The first speaker for the negative, Henri Faubert, of the University of Montreal, upheld convention. "The small town system, where everybody knows everybody else's business, helps the condition of morals," he stated.

"Do away with convention and the ego comes forth. Convention has brought the stronger to think of the weaker, and has made co-operation possible between the different individuals who comprise society."

T. V. Kennedy of St. Michael's College, emphasized the fact that the question under discussion was not "convention" but "the tyranny of convention."

"Many of our conventions are not" (Continued on page 4)

MOEEL LEAGUE PLANS NEARING COMPLETION

Outside Bodies Will Send Delegates to Assembly
Next Month

"Delegates to the Model Assembly have been promised from seven outside bodies, and many others have been approached who have not yet replied," stated Miss Betty Lang, chairman of the League of Nations Club, which held a meeting last night at 7:30 in the Women's Union.

A description of the Assembly which is to convene here on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, February 21, 22, and 23, was outlined. The League is to have regular sessions in the morning, afternoon and evening, on Friday and Saturday. The location of these meetings is not yet known, but the opening meeting on Friday afternoon is to be held in Convocation Hall to accommodate the crowd expected. A luncheon and dinner was planned for Friday, and a dinner and dance on Saturday, but the chairman pointed out that these plans as yet were merely tentative.

In the Assembly each person is to speak as a delegate of a certain country, and is to work out the viewpoint of that country. There will be "unofficial observers," countries like the United States and Russia, who are not members of the League. These may speak, but are not permitted to vote. The countries which the various members are to represent will be made known shortly.

DRAMATIC CRITICISM HELD NON-EXISTENT IN TORONTO DAILIES

Former 'Varsity' Critic Tells Press Women of Sorrows of a Reviewer

ADVERTISING BUGBEAR

Superlatives Must Have Place in Good Reviews Says
'N. A. B.'

"There is no criticism in Toronto—none whatever," said Mr. N. A. Benson in an informal talk on "Dramatic Criticism" to the Women's Press Club. "Criticism in Toronto ended with Fred Jacob—there has been none since."

"If a play is worthy of comment, use a superlative," advised Mr. Benson. "A person isn't a good critic till he's been barred from at least one show, and," he smiled, "I've been barred from at least six. But the ordinary reporter doing review work wouldn't dare bawl out a show; it's as much as his job is worth."

"Dramatic criticism here is weak for two reasons—limited space and advertising. A two-hundred word review can hardly be expected to be otherwise than inarticulate; and as soon as you knock a show they threaten to withdraw their advertising."

According to Mr. Benson the office of music critic had been removed from "The Varsity" because there was to be no criticism (literally) of the artists performing "for a lot of the mechanical faculties that know nothing of music will be deprived of their tentative Friday afternoon concerts."

"John Barrymore's acting in 'General Crack' is so splendid, you forget his posing. He is magnificent on the screen. But I met him personally and he's the most dissipated looking rake, with an expression of cold ferocity. He has the face of a genius, but it's the last face on earth whose owner would be stopped on the street and asked for a quarter."

Mr. Benson's estimate of G. B. Shaw as a critic is of the highest. "If he saw someone in an 1890 play march up and down the stage like Martin-Harvey in Oedipus Rex he would say 'he's like a ham-and-egger'—only in more polished language."

FATE OF 'THE TORCH' TOLO BY FATHER BURKE

New Format Being Considered For Popular Publication of Newman Club

Questioned last evening concerning the fate of "The Torch", the organ of the Newman Club, the current issue of which has been conspicuous by its absence, Rev. Father Burke, chaplain of the club, informed "The Varsity" that the paper would appear as usual inside of a couple of weeks.

A plan for putting out "The Torch" in a new magazine form has been under consideration, but did not prove feasible on account of increased expenses and other difficulties. These negotiations have been the cause of the present delay in bringing out "The Torch" and it will appear in its old form.

"The Torch" loses a small sum each year, but we feel it is money well invested because it is read by the alumni everywhere. The circulation is upwards of two thousand copies and it appears the second Sunday of each month," said Father Burke, when asked if "The Torch" was a financial success at present. When it does not appear, as in the present case, the staff is recipient of many inquiries about it.

WHAT WOULD YOU SUGGEST?

While we hate to disillusion the kind of people who have complimented us on the results produced by our editorial entitled "Our Homeless Women", we feel we should point out that the new women's residence which figured in the headlines on Tuesday is not designed to meet the need we were speaking of at all. The new residences for University College women are a matter of stern necessity, and have been expected for some time, but they will do nothing to solve the university-wide problem of a women's club to house gymnastic, social, and other activities.

The only thing lacking, it would seem, before the projection be undertaken, is the financial support, variously estimated at a quarter of a million to four or five million dollars. There is a strong feeling among the undergraduate women of the university about their need of such a building, and the matter has been deemed urgent enough that a committee of women deans and members of the staff has been formed to consider ways and means. Tentative plans have been drawn up.

At least one of the members of this committee considers that there is a need, not only for one building, but for two. If the women are to have a building of their own as exclusively feminine as Hart House is masculine, another building, she thinks, would have to be built for the use of joint organizations such as debates, players' guilds, and university choruses, of which there are a good many wandering homeless around the university. But a compromise might be effected, she considers, if the women were big-hearted enough to take these joint organizations under a wing of their building.

All that, however, is idle speculation unless the primary obstacle of financing can be overcome, and as yet, the only solution that seems to be offered is that some benefactor should donate the necessary amount. A charming idea, but hardly progressive. We have ourselves approached several prominent undergraduates, who have obligingly promised to die as soon they have made their first million, and leave it to the cause; but somehow, we do not feel satisfied. We fear that if anything is to be accomplished in the reasonably near future, other brains and other methods will have to be used.

WHAT'S ALL THIS ABOUT WOMEN?

We printed, in the correspondence column of yesterday's issue, two letters that should be of interest to the women of this university, as representing two different attitudes toward them. The first, signed by R. E. Knowles, Jr., we cannot help regarding as slightly farcical. Mr. Knowles affects the deepest sympathy for one "Harold", of recent fame, who, through advertising in "The Varsity", believes he has found the girl of his dreams (we object to the term "dame", and incidentally to "skirt"), Mr. Knowles sympathizes because he has learned—this hardened cynic is "a woman-hater of many years standing"—that the society of these empty-headed persons is not worth the trouble it entails.

The second letter, from "Mac" is, in some respects, an answer to this opinion. "Mac" thinks that women have given ample evidence of their abilities. He would not go so far as to say that woman is capable of man's work, but he feels that, given time and a fair chance, she may some day equal her "lord and Master". At least, he says, she should be recognized as something more than a mere beast of burden. At this point ladies, you are supposed to rise gracefully and thank the gentleman.

We wonder if the people who advance opinions of this sort about women ever stop to consider just what the women are thinking about it all. We imagine they might be a little jolted if they were to suspect that the feminine response was one of languid amusement. This must be so, necessarily, since women have known for such a long time the facts that men are gradually finding out about their equality, if not (whisper it softly) more than equality.

Therefore, when we hear that their presence at this university or some other institution has been justified or perhaps condoned again, we cannot expect them to utter loud cheers, any more than we expect to find a heap of shattered female hearts when the news gets around that Mr. Knowles has declared himself a woman-hater.

CHAMPUS CAT

Oh Rough House Mike was a bar-room tyke
And of antecedents shady
And the one good sign in his life of crime
Was his love for Shifty Sadie.

Oh he twirled a gat like a baseball bat
With his bullets cannon size
And if once dismay'd the villain made
The price of coffins rise.

Now Mike's own moll was a classy doll
By the name of Shifty Sadie
Her clothes were smart, but alas a tart
Can never be a lady.

On midnights drear with loads of beer
Afar rode Rough House Mike
And Sadie astutely made whoopee cutely
With guys he didn't like.

Of Rough House Mike one slant-eyed Spike
Was a foe for years and years
And with oaths he vowed both long and loud
Some day he'd strip his gears.

When Mike had sold his liquid gold
In a way without defect
Came home, found Spike he didn't like
In a place you would expect.

He cried: "Tis rich, you son of a gun
To grasp my moll like dis."
And Spike looked later like a ventilator
Despite his previous bliss.

Now Shifty Sadie though not a lady
Awaited a fearful fate
For Rough House Mike, having scuttled Spike
Turned fiercely on his lady.

And he said, "So you tink I'm on the blink
An' out in de cold and fog-o
Oh not at all, perfidious doll
My wife's back in Chicago.

Sunday Songster

The fifth Songster of the year will be held in the Music Room of Hart House on Sunday evening next at 8:45 p.m. Mr. J. Campbell McInnes will be unavoidably absent, but his place will be taken by Mr. E. Mazzoleni, musical director at Upper Canada College.

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

On "Yes Men!"

The Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

I have read with considerable interest, in "The Varsity" of to-day's date, your editorial entitled, "In Praise of Yes-Men".

While some of your arguments appear to be reasonable in themselves, the general impression left in one's mind after perusing the editorial is that what a student does during his college course is a matter of little or no moment, as in his subsequent career he is only destined to be a sort of rubber stamp, anyway.

As one who has had many dealings with university graduates and non-graduates in various engineering firms, I should like to do what I can to efface this impression. In my personal experience I have found that, generally speaking, the best and most effective students are those most successful in their subsequent careers. This opinion is supported by the results of a study made in this connection by the Bell Telephone Company.

It is true that business and industry have their Henry Fords, who have become successful in spite of their lack of education and technical training. But before proceeding on the basis of this example, every student should consider within himself whether he is a Ford.

Also, while the characteristics of leadership are essential to a man at the top of the ladder, if properly used they are also a considerable help in getting there.

Yours very truly,

E. A. ALLCUT.

VARSITY SENIORS OPPOSE TRICOLOUR AT KINGSTON TO-NIGHT

IMPORTANT FIXTURE ENTHUSIASM MARKS FOR BLUE TO-NIGHT INTERFACULTY MEET

Seniors Journey East To-day Seeking Revenge for Former Setback

O.H.A. SENIOR RACE

To-night the Blue seniors invade Kingston to play Queen's in an important O.H.A. senior fixture. Varsity is at present on top of the heap with two wins, a tied game and one reverse standing to its credit. Queen's has suffered two defeats and has a victory over Varsity to its credit, while Nationals have won one, lost one and tied one. The Blue and White can, by winning to-night's struggle, place themselves in a strong position to figure in the group playoffs, but a win for Queen's will place the latter on equal terms with the Blues in games won and lost.

Jimmy McMullen, captain and stellar right winger of the Blue team, is unlikely to get into action to-night owing to a hip injury received in last Monday's game with Queen's. If McMullen is unable to play he will be difficult to replace, but Varsity's alternates, Murray, Marshall, Bell and Dewar have all been showing fine form recently and should be able to take

Jermyn of U.C. Clips Record in Half Mile Event

FITZPATRICK TIES ONE

Tremendous enthusiasm was shown in the opening events of the interfaculty track and field meet on Hart House track last night. Of the three events run off, the half mile record was broken by Jermyn and the 50 yd. dash record was tied by three men. There were many entries in each event making competition much better. This meet showed great material for the Varsity track team, which will be entered in the Indoor Canadian Championship meet at the Coliseum.

In the 50 yard dash, Fitzpatrick of S.P.S., came through, winning first place, tying the indoor record in the sensational time of 5 3-5 seconds. Bill Engel of U.C. and Ed Hymmen of S.P.S., were tied for second, both doing 5 4-5. These two ran again and they both did 5 3-5, making the same time as Fitzpatrick. In the third trial, Bill Engel took second place, doing 5 3-5 again, thus giving third place to Hymmen.

Gordon Jermyn of U.C., the star of the meet, led the field from the start

SPEAKING OF SPORT

At three o'clock to-morrow afternoon the Varsity-Argos boxing and wrestling will get under way at Hart House. No formal draw has been made but the men will be matched as they are ready. Last Saturday Argos sent a team down to Queen's to tangle up with the Tricolour boxers and wrestlers, and their showing to-morrow against Varsity may be a good basis of comparison.

* * *

Varsity needs a win against Queen's to-night down in Kingston. With the speed that Nationals have shown in their last two games the Blue cannot afford to drop this game.

* * *

Varsity juniors play Parkdale Canoe Club at the Arena to-night in one of the last games of the last Big Four double-header of the season. These two teams have cinched the group play-off places and will meet next week in two games, with goals to count on the round, to decide the group championship. Smillie, Blue defence man, who played left wing on Monday, may make the trip to Kingston with the seniors and get into action against Queen's.

* * *

The first events of the Indoor Track Meet which is being held every Thursday afternoon were run off yesterday. The times were exceptionally good and the spirited competition indicates that Varsity will be able to send a well-conditioned team to the Canadian Indoor Championships at the Coliseum next month. Johnny Fitzpatrick, who gave up most of his time to football last fall, won the fifty yard dash, his time of 5 3-5 sec. showing he is in good shape. It is expected that Percy Williams will compete at the Coliseum and if Fitz and Ralph Adams enter the sprints these races should be stand-out performances.

The U.C. women's badminton club is going to have a tournament early in February and the challenge lists will be up shortly. There is a membership of about fifty in the club and badminton is becoming more popular all the time. The court in the auditorium at the Union is available every noon hour, and every afternoon except Wednesday.

The first eliminations from the senior basketball squad will take place this coming week. The choosing of the forwards will be a comparatively simple matter as last year's regulars are all out again and they should all make their old positions again without much difficulty. The defence is another matter entirely. Honor Tett, Edythe Peake, Jean Allen, Loretta McGarry, Isobel Wright, Lorraine Harvey, Frances Dale and Norma Bateman are all trying for guard or centre positions. They are all real good and there is not much to choose between them.

In Betty Edwards, famous free style and back stroke swimmer, University College has a prospect who will be a sure point gainer in the interfaculty swimming meet. She should ably fill the gap left by Margot MacDonald, who will be with Household Science this season.

* * *

Girls who have passed the required life saving tests under Mr. Cochran's supervision at the Lillian Massey tank, will be in charge at the practices.

WIN FOR INTERMEDIATE MEANS FIRST PLACE

By Defeating Markham To-night at Arena May Clear First Place Title

The Blue intermediate hockey squad provides the attraction at the Varsity Arena to-night when they face Markham in a return fixture. The "T" outfit are sharing the top rung in the group with Bradford at present and the locals need this game to-night to stay in the running. However, they should not have much difficulty in capturing the verdict. In their last meeting with the Markhamites they experienced little trouble in pulling out with a 6 to 1 victory and unless the visiting team has improved a lot the result should be a win for Jimmy Johnston's Blue and White squad. They have been going well in practice and the regular lineup will take the ice to-night.

CONVENTION DECRIED

tyrannies but beneficial. Man is a rational animal, and as such is endowed with reason. But instead of governing ourselves by reason, we bow to public opinion. In doing this man loses his rational character, and becomes that much less a man.

"At a recent vice-regal reception at Ottawa, the ladies were even warned beforehand that they were expected to wear, and would probably have been refused admittance had they not complied with the regulations thus imposed on them by convention."

John T. Rennie, B.A., of Bishop's College, held that any convention must of necessity be tyrannical. "The word convention in its very essence means infringement on the personal liberty of the individual. Modern civilization is built on the five great pillars: home, education, workshop, politics, and morals, each one of which is bound up in conventionality."

"Morality is the direct outcome of convention, and the morality of a nation is only as high as the morality of its individual members."

Louise McMillan of Trinity College, speaking from the floor of the house, said: "People should be individuals, not cogs in a machine. If we have had a rotten deal in parents, why should we respect them, if they do not merit respect?"

J. T. Gibson, III Victoria College, Margaret Spurr, IV St. Hilda's College, and one or two others also spoke from the floor of the house.

The visiting team consisting of Mr. Faubert and Mr. Rennie, has been chosen by the National Federation of Canadian University Students to represent central Canada. This was the third of a series of nine debates in which they are participating.

BLUE JRS. FACE LEADERS IN LITTLE BIG FOUR

Will Use Re-Vamped Team Which Trounced Dukes

The regular schedule of the Little Big Four junior group will come to a finish to-night when Varsity juniors hook up with the third place Parkdale, and the league-leading Toronto Canoe Club sextette take on Marlborough, champions of last year. The games mean nothing so far as group standing is concerned, since T.C.C. and Varsity have the playoff positions clinched, and the evening will be devoted to the settling of season-long feuds, and the regaining of lost prestige.

Many of the fans will watch with interest the concluding chapter of the bumpy duel which has existed between the hard-hitting Bowman brothers, on the Parkdale defence, and burly Alex Levinsky, spectacular rear-guard artist on the collegian outfit. The representatives of the clan Bowman have taken an artistic delight in proving that big Alex' reputation bothers them not at all, and the latter has travelled a rocky road in previous games every time he has coasted in on the Paddlers' net.

The face-off this evening will probably find Varsity using substantially the same rearranged line-up as smothered Marlborough 6-0 a week ago. Smilie has demonstrated his ability to add the needed punch to the front line, and the boy with the sizzling shot will in all likelihood see plenty of service.

On past records, Toronto Canoe

Lovely Laura Finds Employment Follows Hard Upon Enjoyment

By L. L. L.

White, Whyte and Howe, Ltd., Jan. 24th.

Dear Betty:

I've got me a job. Isn't that the most perfectly thrilling news that you have heard for years. I'm simply thrilled to death having to live like this. Its so enjoyable even in its most objectionable parts. I know what Wellington felt like when the saw Nap's coat tails disappearing around the corner at Waterloo. What was it that Caesar said in the Odessey about pecking and conquering? You know what I mean that one, 'Amo, Amas, Amat'?

It was all on account of the King, that's the Prince of Wales paternal parent, that I'm working now. You see, dear, on Monday night Jimmy took me to see the Queens-Varsity game and it sure was the most exciting game that I've seen for ever so long. I was simply exhausted with the suspense. You never know when Queens would get three or four goals and tie the score. Varsity were such perfect gentlemen. Sometimes they'd sell short and play with two men off and leaving only four on the king row. Well after the game we went down town and then we met Charlie and he asked us to go to his place and have something to eat. We had a simply wonderful time: his people were all away. When I was resting a bit I happened to pick up a paper and there right in front of me was a add for a stenographer and secretary to apply early on Tuesday morning. Wasn't that a heavenly coincidence! So we danced for a while and then somebody said that we might as well wait for another half hour and hear what we could from jolly old London. So we did. Why I know lots of Yanks that have a more English accent than the King. I was so surprised. Why he never said 'Don't yer know or Bah Jove' not once. After the royal salute and breakfast were over, I decided that Auntie would be better pleased if I came home with a job so down we all went to Bay St. to the address and waited till eight and the janitor let me in and when my new pay-roll advisor came at nine thirty I was the first there. "Ha," said he, "I like to see a girl who can be early." "Yes Sir," I replied meek and mild and rather sleepily. Well to shorten a long interview he hired me and thanks to the King I've got a truly, really honest-to-gosh job, and its great.

Your hardworking and sincere friend Laura Louise.

P.S.—I helped myself to some office paper so I can practise writing on it. You see I don't start till Monday. L.L.

of races by the sealing of treaties with an exchange of wives. The progress of the Hebrew people was traced, and the lost tribes of Israel were found to have been mainly assimilated by the tribes from the Euphrates river region, as they moved toward the sea, though the "thinkers" of the nation were exiled.

unexpected moments. He was a craftsman in the art of poetry, recasting his work so that his finished product might be a thing of beauty. "Heine, the cynic, was an enthusiast for democracy, only as far as it meant liberty," said Professor Needler.

IMPORTANT FIXTURE

care of this contingency. Last Monday's game was a thriller from start to finish and to-night's tussle ought to be even better with the Tricolour out for revenge. Playing before a home crowd this Queen's aggregation is going to be a tough proposition to down. But the Blue and White appears to have regained its best form and should, if playing true to form, pull out a win to-night.

Club should take their game with the Marlboroughs, but past records do not mean a thing in this group, and the encounter is sure to be interesting. Varsity supporters will have an excellent chance to compare their team with the Canoe Club outfit, whom they must meet in the playoffs.

A CORPSE RAT OR A DOVE?

The most powerful nations of the world have an opportunity of showing whether their prattling of no more war has an honest basis. At London the truthfulness of their talk will face the final test. Since the conclusion of the "war to end war" every politician in every country that has suffered from the ravages of the scourge has been spouting of the need for peace. Now has come the time for action. It was easy to get nations to sign the Kellogg Peace Pact, it was easy to obtain members for the League of Nations, it is still very easy to speak of the impossibility of a world catastrophe, but how difficult is it for the powerful countries to trust one another in the work of disarmament? On the surface every country wants disarmament, every country agrees that that is the only means of ensuring peace. Yet they are all watching each other like a pack of wolves in sheep's hides ready to gain an advantage.

Not a single nation has dared to put its cards on the table for it may mean that another will thereby gain benefit. There will be endless jockeying for advantage until one power finds that it is too honest to crawl to the lowest layer of mud and surrender what it thinks are its necessities of protection. Until every representative at the conference imagines that every other is honest, until every country trusts every other, there will be no satisfactory solution of the problem of ending war.

Putting various instruments of war on the outlaw list will mean nothing, for when a nation is fighting for its existence or when a power decides on aggression letters of honour mean nothing. Until the actions of the great powers at the naval conference are such that the results will leave no disgruntled nations there can be no peace. As long as one power feels that it has not had a fair deal, as long as one power still demands naval parity and the other just as definitely refuses to give it, the results of the parley are as useful as letters written in the sands of the sea.

At present the dictator of Italy, who missed his vocation when he did not tread the boards of the stage, controls the entire situation and he seems to be in no hurry for peace. The nation that lies under his unflinching thumb is demanding what the country of submarines refuses to grant, while the other nations look on and wait. France has definitely said that she must have greater naval strength than Italy, and Great Britain must certainly have greater strength than France, while the United States cannot remain in the background, and so the vicious circle comes back to what the power that treads the boot of Europe wants. The deciding factor in the entire arrangement is the question of taming that man-untameable.

If the present conference of the "Big Five" is a failure war is a certainty. If definite steps are not taken now that will materially decrease the naval strength of the five world leaders, there must be carnage. For a now generation is growing up that knows not of corpse rats fattened on the flesh of the living dead, that knows not of smashed bodies and torn souls, that knows only of the glory of war and the brilliance of brass buttons. While there yet remain hospitals for war-mangled bodies, there will be desire for peace, and these sanatoria for the fodder of Mars are becoming fewer and fewer.

With the death of the generation that has seen war comes the life of those who only read about it, and when international carnage is transferred to history texts, the filth and raw wounds disappear and only the finer feelings, that war as well as other sacrifice reveals, remains.

The world that wants peace is waiting anxiously for its leaders to move, and it is their fervent hope that something be done towards lasting amity between nations; but hard reason is forcing the blackness of pessimism to the fore. The twenty-first day of January will go down in history as the day when those who desired perpetual peace made their last stand. Whether that final lunge be a success or a failure only a few months will tell.

CHAMPUS CAT

THE DWEADFUL DWAGON

Chapter 2

Fascinated, Slo Gin stood watching the rebel soldiers sweeping through the streets of Sun Tan, crushing the disorganized bands of armed townsfolk and putting them to the sword. What amazed him was the sight of the brave missionary who stood unscathed in the very centre of the conflict distributing literature to the combatants.

C—C

Having passed out all his tracts and almanacs he was now distributing the last of some hymn sheets, unaware of the fact that in his enthusiasm he had given away the church statement and a tin-type of his mother-in-law to a huge rebel who had already swallowed three tracts, thinking they were sandwiches.

C—C

Slo Gin felt a touch on his sleeve. It was his fiancée, Gay Flea. She was weeping and breathless from running. "My poor little dog Chow," she sobbed hysterically, "those horrid rebels have hamstrung him; and mother—"

C—C

With blood in his eye, Slo Gin led her back to shelter. Returning he threw himself raging into the fray with his whole soul set on revenge. Striking blindly right and left he felled a score before he realized that he was fighting his own people. Then as he gazed conscience-stricken at the prone figure of the missionary's landlord where he had laid him low, he heard a voice. And the voice said:

C—C

"This is just one example of the wonderful work we are doing in China to-day. And there stood the missionary himself, smiling encouragement at Slo Gin and passing out song sheets."

C—C

The good man, though tired and limping, was by no means downhearted, and he acted as a tonic to our hero. Someone had ruthlessly torn the buttons off his coat sleeves and a dying woman had bitten off one of his toes.

C—C

Suddenly a whole battalion of rebels swept panic-stricken down the street brushing the missionary and our hero into a doorway where a wounded soldier lay in convulsions. It was the one who had swallowed the picture of the missionary's mother-in-law.

C—C

A bugle sounded and hard on the heels of the rebels came a small detachment of American marines in hot pursuit.

"Good Heavens," cried Slo Gin, "this must mean war. Has the American government sent these men over here?"

"No," replied the missionary, "they were sent by order of a Hollywood film corporation."

"Ah," said Slo Gin, "then I may see Lictor MacFlagon in action yet." The missionary beamed. He gazed proudly at his pupil and thought of the wonderful teaching he was doing in China.

containing all but one of the known vitamins, it contains certain amounts of calcium, phosphorus, iron and copper. Essential to the process as developed by the Toronto physicians is the process of Professor Steinbock of the University of Wisconsin by which wheat germ is activated by exposure to ultra violet light for which a royalty will have to be paid.

Thus far the McCormick Biscuit Mfg. Co., is the only concern in Canada to which the right of manufacture has been given, but according to Dr. Tisdall the product will remain subject to the control of the originators as its efficacy will have to be checked from time to time by biological tests. The royalties which will accrue to the originators of the biscuit are to be used for the support of research in the laboratories of the Hospital for Sick Children and the Dept. of Paediatrics, University of Toronto.

It was learned from one of the originators that the Sun Wheat Biscuit is the result of over a year's experimentation in the laboratories of the Sick Children's Hospital and the Department of Paediatrics, during which time 1,500 rats were used as well as many pigeons.

W. R. Cowan, assistant controller of Hart House described the biscuit as being a cross between the arrowroot and digestive biscuit and it is oval shaped. It is very pleasant tasting, he says: "If you eat one, you want two; if you eat two, you want three, and so on."

The Hart House Tuck Shop is the first place to put the new biscuit on sale, as other stores will not be supplied until to-morrow. They go on sale at five for five cents.

ALUMNAE ASSOCIATION TO GIVE PLAY IN HART HOUSE

To raise money for their annual scholarships the Alumnae Association of University College are presenting a play, "Pomander Walk", in Hart House Theatre during the first week in February, the cast of which includes: Everard Nash, Arthur Cox, Ivor Lewis, H. E. Hitchman, H. M. Newton, Andrew Allan, Murray Bonnycastle, Charles Owens, Misses Erskine Keys, Margaret Boyle, Pearl Grey, Eleanor Barton, Eleanor Norton, Nora Turnbull, Doris Shiell and Ruth Home.

It is expected that the present women's residences will be retained as well as the Women's Union. Dr. Wallace made a plea for books for the study room to the alumnae, who have already promised to furnish the buildings.

A THEATRICAL NOVELTY

The Canadian Literature Club which has been responsible for many evenings of interest and profit in the past few years, has taken Hart House Theatre for January 29th, 30th and 31st. The occasion is the production for the first time on any stage of "Royal Doulton", a Comedy of Prejudices, by J. E. Middleton. The play is in three acts and four scenes and sets forth in amusing manner some of the feelings, reasonable and unreasonable, of a Canadian family of United Empire Loyalist ancestry.

In the cast are Elaine Wodson, George Patton, Frederick Mallett, Dr. John Robins, Everard Nash, T. T. Carpenter, Florence Robertson, Eunice Bedford, and a number of other players of proven ability.

BLUE SENIORS, INTERMEDIATES & JUNIORS WIN WEEK-END GAMES

INTERMEDIATES AND JUNIORS ADD TO LAURELS OVER THE WEEK-END

Second Blue Team Outplays Markham Sextet Rather Easily

VARSLY COMBINATION FINE

Refuse to be Led into Shiny Tactics of Markham Outfit

Varsity intermediates defeated Markham Saturday night at the Varsity arena 7-3. The outcome was never in doubt. Varsity started from the first with a combination that kept Markham always on the defensive, and although the latter worked hard, their individual rushes were ineffective. It was only when the ill-effects of the unorganized Markham attack drew Varsity players out of their positions that the Varsity goalie was beaten. In that department of the game Varsity had a decided edge on Markham, and while the defences were evenly matched, the Varsity forwards were always superior to their opponents. The Varsity crew was kept fresh and fast by a free use of subs and the result was a good display of hockey on the part of Varsity.

After four minutes play in the first period, combination and tricky stick-handling gave Statham a goal for Varsity. Halfway through the period Ferguson did a pretty piece of stick-handling to beat the Markham goalie again. In the second period Hagerman scored for Markham and Ferguson immediately retaliated for Varsity. When Bayes, for Markham, scored, the game became almost shiny, but the Varsity forwards settled down to combination, and each of the forwards, Statham, Conn and Ferguson, scored. In the last period Ferguson again scored on a pass from Conn.

Smillie for Varsity was the most effective man on the ice. Ferguson took the scoring honours with four to his credit. The Varsity subs were as good as the regulars and only the unusual luck of the Markham goalie prevented a larger score.

Varsity—McCartney, Smith, Graham, Statham, Clute, Leake; subs, Conn, Ferguson, Smillie, Moran.

Markham—Noonan, Bayes, D. Crosby, H. Crosby, Ressor, Williamson; subs, Hagerman, M. Clendenning, S. Clendenning.

Referee—A. Mollenhauer.

Juniors Whitewash Parkdale Canoe Club in Last Game of Series

LITLESS GAME WITH SUBS

Game Becomes Scoring Fantasy for Regular Varsity Crew

In their last scheduled O.H.A. fixture Varsity juniors decisively trounced the Parkdale Canoe Club sextet 11 to 0. The game was very listless and one-sided as the score indicates. With the exception of Nurmberger in goal, Parkdale was completely composed of substitutes. On the other hand, Varsity used their regular team. Funston, however, replaced Hunnisett for two periods in goal and gave a fine performance. The students got four markers in the first period, six in the second and one in the third. Cunningham, Hetherington, Hendry, and Smillie each got two goals. Brant and Williamson got one each. Alec Levinsky, the only U. of T. man not to dent the twine, played a great game on defence and it was only tough luck which kept him from scoring. Higrave, Doyle and Piper were prominent for the Canoeists.

Varsity—Goal, Hunnisett; defence, Levinsky and Williamson; centre, Brant; wings, Hetherington and Smillie; alternates, Cunningham, Bennett, Hendry and Funston.

P.C.C.—Goal, Nurmberger; defence, George and Burrows; centre, Bridgen; wings, Doyle and Piper; alternates, Farrant, Rowe, McMillan and Piggave.

VARSLY SENIORS GRAB VICTORY IN THRILLER

Bellringer and the 36 year old Joe Smith doing the scoring.

It was in the second that Varsity got the lead and the "town and gown" lads wearing the multi-coloured sweaters put the game in a knot. Harley, on a pass from Whitehead, scored with only three and a half minutes of the period gone. Then Bill Leake, who was brought to Kingston to fill the vacancy left by the injury to Jimmie McMillan, took one of Paul's passes and he made sure of it. Lawlor thought that it was his business to show why the professional teams are after him and so he went to work and made the plays for the tying goals with Bellringer and Smith on the scoring end.

Throughout the regular time of the game it seemed as if the blues weakened towards the close of each period, and Queen's became more powerful. The final five minutes of the overtime was filled full of rugged hockey and pep. Bruce Paul was benched for a single minute for throwing his puck pusher. Then Lawlor was put on the fence for tripping, while Paul came back, giving the blues a one-man advantage. One minute later Reist and Bill Stewart mixed things at centre ice, altogether away from the play. In the skirmish Stewart, the Varsity player, went down and crashed his head on the ice. Both men were penalized which fact gave Varsity an extra man again. It was at that time that the winning goal was made.

Stewart, who was taken from the ice, seemed groggy, and was later removed to the hospital, where it was found that he suffered a slight concussion that forced him to remain under medical observation over night.

Varsity—Goal, Leake; defence, Paul and Whitehead; centre, Stewart; wings, Murray and Hendry; subs, Bell, Marshall and Leake.

Queen's—Goal, Quinn; defence, McKelvey and Goulay; centre, Lawlor; wings, Smith and Bellringer; subs, Reid, Reist and Lee.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Varsity's overtime victory at Queen's Friday night places the Blue and White well to the front in the race for the senior O.H.A. title. The university sextet are in the lead with three wins, one loss and a tie. Nationals are second with a win, a loss and tie, and Queen's last with a win and three losses. In games lost and tied Varsity and Nationals are on an even basis, but the Blues have played two more games than the Sea Fleas. Nationals play Queen's here Monday and should hand them another setback. Assuming this the Varsity-Nationals game at the Blue arena on Friday night will be a most important fixture for both teams.

The university is having a great year in hockey. The seniors, intermediates and juniors are all in the running. Varsity juniors will play off with Parkdale Canoe Club for the Big Four group honours, and the intermediates are tied with Bradford for the first place in their section. Although facing a weakened team Friday night the juniors flashed the red light eleven times, and appear to have got into their stride at last.

The B. W. and F. Club put on a good wrestling show with Argos here on Saturday afternoon. The local mat men are in great form and should make a fine showing in the intercollegiate assault.

This afternoon in the regular tri-weekly bouts some of the intercollegiate boxers will strut their stuff. To-day's contests look particularly attractive with several intercollegiate champions in action.

The semi-annual meeting of the Intercollegiate Rules Committee was held at Montreal Saturday. A considerable number of minor changes in the rules were made, but nothing of any great importance resulted. There was some discussion on the ten-yard interference proposal, but the lively question of the forward pass got the go-by.

U.C. and Household Science are holding a combined swimming meet on Wednesday night. Neither faculty has done any organized work yet this season, but the girls have been practicing individually under Mr. Cochrane's supervision at the Lillian Massey tank. This is the first year Household Science girls have entered a swimming team, and their showing Wednesday night should be a pretty fair indication of their chances in the interfaculty meet.

At the intercollegiate basketball practices these days, there is a regular Parkdale Collegiate grads reunion. Wilma Hazlett, Louise Crouch, Jean Allen, Loretta McGarry and Willie Ann Luckett all come from P.C.I. where they played basketball together for years. Last winter when they were all freshmen, the first two made positions on the senior team, the other three played intermediate, and great was the rivalry when these teams met in the City League.

Dorothy Ker, Vic '29, who has played defence on the intercollegiate basketball team for the last three years, is not taking part in any games this season owing to the fact that the Ontario College of Education did not enter any team in the interfaculty series this year. However, she has been very busy refereeing in the high school girls basketball league and she is also coaching the Jarvis Collegiate hockey team. Miss Ker is herself a graduate of Jarvis.

CO-ED NATATORS ARE PREPARED TO PLUNGE VARSITY AND ARGOS PROVIDE GOOD BOUTS

U.C., With Household Science, to Hold Joint Meet at U. T. S.

LATE CHAMPS TO COMPETE

Co-ed natators from University College and Household Science will have an opportunity to display their style at a joint meet to be held at U.T.S. pool next Wednesday.

Margot MacDonald, who has been champion of the university for two years, and Florence Cummings of the U.C. team two years ago, will be swimming for Household Science this year, while the rest of the team will be picked from Grace Cooley, Marguerite Clark, Beulah Hunter, Gladys McMurchie and Muriel Quinn. There will be a practice next Tuesday at 5 o'clock in the L.M. pool.

University College has Mary Wyndow and Betty Holton from last year, while new prospects include Betty Edwards, in swimming and Helen McGivern in diving. U.C. was not able to arrange for a practice, but a large turnout is expected at the meet, as quite a number of enthusiasts have been practicing on their own.

son. McKinney is more confident this year and is now in the 145 lb. section.

The surprise of the afternoon was Bill Walker, a 145 lb. wrestler, who showed phenomenal improvement since he was runner-up in December by giving Herold, the Argos' pride, one of the stiffest bouts of the day. This lad will be a real threat to the other aspirants to the welterweight crown. Wilson of Meds is a coming champion as his work against Forbes clearly showed. Max Walker, a boy who is always on the aggressive, was one of the few fighters to score a fall and in addition he wrestled a class higher than his own. Both these men are welterweights.

The regular Monday, Wednesday and Friday bouts will take place in Hart House this week starting sharp on time at 5.40. To-night Walker, Wilson, Tyson, Steele and Boeckh will fight.

Treasure Trove on the Spanish Main

It is no wonder the buccaners loved to rove the Spanish Main. Something more than pieces of eight must have intrigued them; surely they were men of taste in spite of their bad habits! studies from personal experience in them as a student.

"Generally speaking, though not necessarily always, I would say that the classical education develops a finer aesthetic sensibility, which is a real asset in the highest ranks of business, than an education in economics and mathematics, which are the staples of Commerce and Finance. On the other hand, there is no doubt that Commerce and Finance provides a stricter mental discipline.

"I think it is a mistake to regard any course in the university as being a special preparation for business. In so far as the course in Commerce and Finance, despite its short-comings, may be considered a good course, it is a preparation for business. Any good course, in any subject, may put forward the same claim.

"The real question is concerned with the individual. Has he, before entering business, exercised himself in the severest gymnastics of which his mind is capable? and what has been the quality of his teachers?"

Col. A. E. Gooderham, prominent Toronto business man and member of the Board of Governors, regarded the graduate of Commerce and Finance as better equipped for business life than the Classical student because he was able to talk intelligently with older business men.

The Hart House Library Murder Case A Pair of Pance Story By S. S. Leviathan

By P. A. Gardner

"My dear fellow, if we haven't arrested the murderer within an hour it will be the talk of the campus! The Bohemian atmosphere in Charlotte's will become positively birdseye-centred. We must hasten!"

Arrived at the Library we at once succumbed to the lotus-like atmosphere. After a few hours we were rudely awakened by the tremendous reverberation caused by the dropping of "Sir Daniel Wilson." This accident assisted our identifying the corpse, as all the sleepers immediately started up—all but three, two of whom proved to be Wycliffian theologs, accustomed to sleeping through the chapel bell. The third slumberer, to our great relief, proved to be the body which we sought. It had, prior to decease, been somnolently enjoying "Sartor Resartus"; and beneath it on the chaise longue lay "Attack", the new brutally realistic war-novel by Edgar Guest.

"Let us prey," ordered Pance, and at once we set about the task with Alacrity, as Squaramicio Squemish, the librarian, is often called in fun. Searching his pockets we discovered first the half-dissected larynx of an amoeba, a pitiful sight which brought filial tears to the eyes of all save Teeth, who is a Baptist. Sobbing "B. and M." we proceeded to another pocket, where we came upon "The Attitude of a Gentleman toward the Man on the Campus." "Trinity!" we shouted in unison, adding "Forestry!" as a tiny bucksaw was seen hiding in the preface. An aspirin tablet was our next clue, and "Pharmacy!" was followed in quick succession by "U.C. Lit."; and "Victoria!" as "The Supremacy of Athletics" and "Conventionality: A Defence", came to light. Heaping the articles in a small pan-ner which we had removed from his watch-pocket we connoted the result of our search: "The deceased is evidently a B. and M. student residing at Trinity for social reasons, taking the Forestry option and the Pharmacy prescription, and pursuing extramural-ly the studies of Rugbyology and quasi-modernistic Victorianism. Occupational Therapy is probably his hobby."

To these deductions Squemish was able to add certain details. "A few moments before the passing of the deceased," he declaimed with debatable skill, "the late lamented was laughing merrily at the latest joke. 'My God! I am shot!' he was repeating, rocking with innocent glee." At once Pance leaped to the conclusion. "School of Practically Nothing!" he drawled swiftly. "And now, gentlemen," began Squemish with a mystic smile, "I am about to reveal the crux of the matter. During the deceased's mirth, aforementioned, a nearby senior, eyeing him haughtily, commanded frigidly, 'Go and sit on "Attack"!' At once the obedient youth trotted to the shelf, returned with the prescribed text, and took up the dutiful position in which we found him."

"Enough!" exclaimed Pance, wincing, "the secret has been revealed to me, as usual, by physiognomy."

"Oh yeah?" exclaimed Teeth in unfeigned amazement.

"It is obvious to me," continued Pance, "that the departed was given his quirote, as the Laplanders put it, by reason of his continued and irritating attachment to "Sartor Resartus", the most sought-after volume in this or any library. Envy, black, bitter and poisonous . . ."

"Why not use Postum?" I enquired absently at this juncture, and was immediately murdered. How, I have never been able to deduce, lacking as I do the physiognomical powers of Pance. But perhaps there may be among my readers a second Pance (if not there should be—see Hobbie Inn specials—Adv.) who will reveal this secret to a waiting world. Meantime, this is station OOOH signing off. We have been broad-cracking from Oliver Lodge, in the Happy Hunting Ground. Good evening, radio children, old and young!

NEWMAN DEBATERS SPURN MODERN ART

peculiar characters, the heroes. "Tall and handsome men" and the women all "ravishingly beautiful". A contrast between Beethoven and Debussy gave it all to Debussy.

Speaking first for the negative, Art Klein, fourth year University College, said that the distinguishing thing that he found in modern art was the "rejection of all the conventions of art". He read a selection from Tennyson and one from Masfield and drew comparisons. "Modern literature," he said, "is not even creative. It is the recording of nightmare or delirium tremens—probably the latter." George Bernard Shaw had "absolutely ruined the drama—it is now nothing but a literary debate on the stage."

Speaking second for the affirmative, W. J. King, first year Osgoode Hall, described the current authors as "de-lunkers" in contrast to the writers of the last century, who were "bunkers". "Honesty and realism is the trend in all the arts of to-day," he said.

Howard Maney, University College, staged a heavy offensive on current painting. "Any ordinary fellow can go through S.P.S., come out and draw modernist pictures," he said. The department of music was also under heavy fire. "Take a pile driver, a concrete mixer and a boiler maker and you have a perfect modern jazz orchestra," he said.

The fifth Sunday Evening Songster of the year was conducted by Mr. E. Mazoleni, musical director of Upper Canada College in Hart House last night.

Although attendance was small the songs received enthusiastic support. Vin and spirit were put into the rousing sea chanteys and drinking ballads. A beautiful and haunting tune, "There were Three Ravens", was sung with much feeling; also that wistful melody, "A La Claire Fontaine".

S. A. C. WILL ACT ON CONFIDENTIAL SPECIAL FINDINGS

Committee Investigating Student Government Finally Make Report

DEAN DELURY SAYS NOTHING

Findings of Students' Council Must Be Ratified by Caput

The findings of the special committee appointed to investigate the conditions of student government have finally been passed on to the Students' Administrative Council, who have the power to act on them, subject to the approval of the Caput. This was the statement made by A. T. DeLury, Dean of the Faculty of Arts, and head of the committee, in an interview with "The Varsity" last evening.

Asked what the conclusions of the committee were, Dean DeLury intimated that it was a highly confidential matter. "It rests entirely with the Students' Council now," he said, "I could not make any statement on the matter."

"The committee has completed its findings and presented them before the Caput," Dean DeLury continued, "and the Caput in turn passed the matter on to the Students' Council. That body may take what action it likes with regard to the matter and pass its recommendations back to the Caput for approval."

"The Caput has, of course, all confidence in the Students' Council, with whom the matter rests entirely now," Dean DeLury concluded.

The special committee, it will be recalled, was appointed almost a year ago to investigate conditions in student government after charges had been made by "The Varsity" that student government was a farce and non-existent.

Professor G. M. Wrong Attended Pacific Relations Conference

CANADIANS ARE PROMINENT

In an interview granted after his address to the Foreign Affairs Club last night Professor G. M. Wrong, formerly head of the department of history in this university, gave "The Varsity" an interesting account of the work of the Institute of Pacific Relations at its meeting in Kyoto, Japan, last summer. Professor Wrong was one of the Canadian representatives at the conference at which delegations from China, Japan, Britain, the United States and Australia were also present. He claimed that Canadians had taken a prominent part in the proceedings.

The general relations which exist between China and Japan and in particular the Manchurian question which has for some time been a bone of contention between the two powers, were the chief matters discussed at the meetings, according to Professor Wrong. He considered that these meetings had been of great value since they had brought the representatives of the two countries together to amicably discuss their differences and adjust them.

A whole series of problems which (Continued on page 2)

Miss Agnes Hodggets, '26, former news editor of "The Varsity", is to marry Andrew Pritchard, '26, early in February. Agnes was a member of Argyle House and graduated in Pass. Many of the embryo doctors will remember Andy when he demonstrated to them in Biology; he is now a member of the Government Biological Station in British Columbia. All their many friends wish them happiness.

WALPOLE EXPLAINS AUTHOR'S IMPULSE

Has Written for 40 of His 45 Years, Experienced Instinctive Creation

ILLUSTRATES STORY ORIGIN

"If anyone is willing to tell honestly what they have felt in creating, whether it be in art, literature, or successful matrimony, I would let them go on for hours," said Hugh Walpole, speaking in Simpson's Arcadian Court yesterday afternoon, "especially if they can make their experience in some way parallel my own."

Mr. Walpole stated that he is forty-five years of age, has been writing novels for forty years, and felt that the best way he could justify his conduct was to tell what he felt was the driving force at the centre of all creation.

"A passionate desire to tell somebody something about somebody else is the first creative impulse," continued Mr. Walpole, in telling exactly how a novel came to be written. "An author has a sense that he is coming into contact with something out of which he must make something. After this has happened anything is possible."

Mr. Walpole stated that he is forty-five years of age, has been writing novels for forty years, and felt that the best way he could justify his conduct was to tell what he felt was the driving force at the centre of all creation.

TAYLOR STATTON GROUP DISCONTINUED FOR TERM

The S.C.M. study group in Psychology of Leadership is being discontinued for this term owing to the inability of the leader, Taylor Statton, to be present. At a business meeting held on Monday afternoon in the Women's Union, it was decided to send a small token of appreciation to Mr. Taylor Statton from the group.

Household Science Maintain Better Treatment Deserved

"The Household Science students are going to be terribly out of it next year, as a result of being banned from the university residence where they have formerly been living," stated Miss Honor Tett, vice-president and athletic director of the new Faculty of Household Science yesterday.

"Before this new faculty was formed it was often wondered why girls registered in University College and were forced to pay a fee of ten dollars in instead of the regulation fee of four dollars at their own college union."

"It is also very remarkable that the Household Science faculty can't obtain a suitable practice hour in their own swimming pool to practice for the interfaculty meet, when other colleges can arrange their practices to their own satisfaction."

"The Lillian Massey building was given by Mrs. Lillian Treble Massey to the University of Toronto for the use of the Household Science students and equipped suitably with a gymnasium and swimming pool, but unfortunately no student dining-room, the dining-room being used by the staff. The accommodation for students allows for lunch for six girls only, each day; and the special library is closed at night. Thus in speaking of the 800 women students outside of the arts colleges who have no union, the addition of the students from this new Household Science faculty will certainly swell the numbers needing a women's Hart House."

$70.00 TO BE AWARDED IN PRIZES IN VARSITY LITERARY SUPPLEMENT

$70.00 in prizes is being offered by "The Varsity" in a special literary issue which will appear on Friday, February 17. Material for this issue must be handed in at either "The Varsity" office, Hart House, or the women's office in University College by 1 p.m., Thursday, February 13.

Prizes will be offered for poetry, prose, and drawings. The money has been donated to "The Varsity" by the Literary and Debates Committee for literary contests. Details of the various prize awards, the amounts, and the classifications, will be announced later.

The judges of the contest will be N. A. Benson, M.A., the well-known Toronto critic and poet, and P. E. Usher, B.A., of the School of Graduate Studies.

The supplement, which will appear on February 17, will consist of a four-page insert in the regular issue of that date. Two literary supplements have already been published during the season, being made possible through a grant of $100 by the Literary and Debates Committee.

The committee is anxious to stimulate literary and artistic endeavour amongst the undergraduates of the university. "The Varsity" is anxious to receive co-operation from all students in order to make the insert a success.

DINNER MARKS BIRTHDAY OF LORETTO FOUNDRRESS

Anne Sutherland, Poetess and Graduate, Is Guest Speaker

The annual arts dinner held on Thursday night at Loretto College closed the various events which marked the anniversary of the birthday of Mary Ward, pioneer of Catholic Women's Colleges and foundress of the Religious who comprise the faculty of the college.

The day opened with a "Missa Recitata", in the college chapel which was attended by the entire student body.

The guest of honour of the evening, Miss Anne Sutherland of Guelph, Canadian poet and Loretto graduate, gave a recital from her poems, following the dinner. Miss Sutherland's personal charm, combined with her delightful selections, added an additional note to the day's activities. Other prominent guests, some of whom will be patronesses at the college at-home, on January 31, included Lady Falconer, Lady Windle, Mrs. Frank Cassidy, Mrs. D. Rae MacKenzie, Mrs. John Harkness and Miss Elsie Irwine.

SHAW THEORIST AND NOT ARTIST

Philosophical Society Is Told by Miss Tolmie in Paper on G.B.S.

ART A SUGAR-COATED PILL

"Art expresses not just an emotion, but an emotion dominated," was the main theme of Professor MacCallum's paper on Aesthetics which he read before a meeting of the Philosophical Society on Thursday night. Emotional energy may be wasting or wasted, he pointed out, or it may be "used and appeased by definite action". In the latter case, the result is some form of art. On the other hand, a production is not art unless it is the disciplined expression of some emotion.

"How about the sunset?" was suggested. "The aesthetic theory of George Bernard Shaw" was the title of the second paper given by Miss Tolmie. Shaw does not take his theory, she found, but all his prefaces, criticisms and dramas breathe it. His attitude towards art is puritanical. "He regards art as a sugar-coated pill to improve morals," she observed.

Shaw has very little merit as an artist pure and simple. He is an artist rather than an artist. "Shaw is an artist because he is a social reformer. To him the value of art is instrumental rather than intrinsic."

150 COUPLES ENJOY ST. JOSEPH'S COLLEGE PARTY

One hundred and fifty couples swayed and swirled to the music of Joe DeCoursey's orchestra at the annual At-Home of St. Joseph's College, held in the Crystal Ballroom of the Royal York Hotel last night. Gorging gowns and a cleverly contrived decorative scheme combined to create a festive atmosphere which reacted upon the spirits of the merry-makers. Real roses were distributed during the novelty dance. The single yellow rose whose possession carried with it the novelty prize fell to the lot of Miss Mary McDonald and Charlie Pearson.

Patrons and patronesses for the evening were Rev. Father J. Burke, Mr. and Mrs. P. Cashman, Mr. F. O'Connor, and Dr. and Mrs. G. Anyott. The committee in charge included Kathryn Kernahan, Theresa McDonald, Marybel Quinn, Clorise Hartman and Patricia Cashman.

REPORT URGES ABOLITION

The question of the abolition of the first year pass arts course will be decided next Monday at the meeting of the council of the faculty of arts, it was learned last evening.

The committee in charge of the matter has forwarded their findings to the council, which will deal with that matter, while members of this body will not make any statement on the matter, it is understood that prominent members are in favour of the abolition of the first year. Sir Robert Falconer, in his annual report, urges that it would be of great educational advantage to the province to have all the work of the standard of the pass first year in arts done in the high schools.

FAILURE TO STOP WAR IS SUICIDE

Five Power Conference Must Succeed in Faculty Opinion

NAVIES MUST BE REDUCED

Varied opinions regarding the results of the Naval Conference were expressed to "The Varsity", regarding its editorial on the subject yesterday. "The Five Powers dare not let the Naval Conference fail in its object," stated Professor C. R. Fay of the department of economics, "because a failure will mean that they are up against suicide. The powers are forced back to the question of outlawing certain instruments of war or else modern science will make such instruments which will bring suicide to the nations. Modern science has now produced the inventions."

"I agree with Mr. Colby, recent professor of history at McGill University when he spoke at the Canadian Club luncheon recently. He said that a decision must be reached or else national selfishness would lead to more deadly strife than ever witnessed in the past."

E. K. Brown of the Department of English at University College thought that the value of the present naval conference was that the United States had chosen to confer with the other powers.

"I do not believe," Mr. Brown said, "that the conferring nations would be set in a way that would lead to war if the conference fails and I do not think that any international conference can be definitive. If results should fail it will be a great personal calamity to President Hoover and Premier MacDonald and will not augur well for the Labour party in England when they come before the country at the next election."

"I certainly think," concluded Mr. Brown, "definite steps must be taken to reduce the naval strength of the conferring nations."

FACULTY MEMBERS DIFFER ON ISSUE OF CADET DRILLS

Professor T. R. Loudon Stands Up for Training in Discipline

C.O.T.C. NOT SO BAO

Military Training on the Wane Thinks Professor T. J. Meek

There is great difference of opinion regarding cadet training and C.O.T.C. work at this university. It is the old question of whether military training is essentially a dangerous movement inculcating dangerous ideas into our youth, or whether it is primarily a sound means towards discipline and a fine physique. A letter published in "The Varsity" on Thursday last week launched arguments against the C.O.T.C. and cadet training. By some of those who were interviewed by "The Varsity", the ideas expressed in the letter were resented, while others agreed quite heartily with them.

"The C.O.T.C. is a volunteer army," said Professor T. R. Loudon of the Faculty of Applied Science, "and so is not kept up solely in preparation for the next war. There is a great deal of difference between a volunteer and a conscript army. The latter is something that is made up of professional soldiers, men who are hired to fight. A conscript army is forced upon the people. No doubt about it, C.O.T.C. affords a training for man, but on the other hand, it affords a parallel to a man learning to box. That does not mean the man is going to go out and fight. The writer of the letter amuses me very much. He is right when he says C.O.T.C. teaches discipline, and that is something that cannot be underestimated."

MUSIC AND LATIN ATTRACT THIEVES

Women's Union Suffers Loss of Dictionaries and Records

NOON HOUR CHEERLESS

A strange enthusiasm for music and learning has been discovered at the Women's Union, 79 St. George Street on the part of persons unknown. These individuals have the ill-matched loves of gramophone music and Latin research. It seems that they have in the immediate past enticed a large number of gramophone records from their box in the sitting-room. The records, which were also beloved by frequenters of the Union, are sadly missed. Noon-hours are now only unaltered uncheered by music. Nevertheless the hope that they shall return to the fold or to put it more bluntly, be returned to the fold, is still strong.

It is natural to assume that the persons who have led such modest gramophone records astray are responsible also for the wandering of our Latin and our French dictionaries. One must admit that knowing the French girl's temperament one is not altogether astonished at her behaviour, but one would expect our classic Latin 'puella' to stay at home quietly. These young ladies were dressed in Cassell's creations, were modern, new, and valuable. The Union would appreciate their return. In fact it cannot understand their absence.

FRAILTY, THY NAME . . . .

Now and anon the executives of university discussion and debating clubs seem to be seized by alarm, with the result that some such tilt appears on their schedules as "That this house views with alarm the emancipation of women", or, "That this body go on record as being opposed to the institution of co-education". The results of such arguments seldom shake the world, nor do they appear on the surface to be much more than a little harmless facetiousness combined with a slight and regrettable inclination to certain rabelaisian irrelevancies. It is claimed, pro, that women soften and tone the harshness of the stronger element, and anyhow, have a perfect right to any of the liberties and privileges that men now enjoy, and contra, that women are villainously expensive creatures, always trying to get their own way, and furthermore, how can a college youth be a romanticist and at the same time think of the higher and subtler and more abstruse phases of the differential calculus? Such are the arguments advanced; they, and others which will readily occur, must be familiar to everyone.

Neither party shows any marked ability in gaining ground. If one points to the academic successes, and implies that they are, on the whole, fellows much inclined towards asceticism, the other party at once brings forward the scholars who are known and incurable "fussers". If one points to the unpleasant example of Abelard and others who thought with him, but not to such extremes, and went into monastic retirement, the other has only to point to certain geniuses of science, war, and art who were regular fellows and proved it in curious and diverse manners.

The truth of the whole thing, perhaps, lies in the fact that there is no definite, cold-drawn accusation which can be brought against co-education and the co-educated, and the evils and benefits which accompany them; rather, there is an indefinite and nebulous impression that something is wrong, but exactly what, unknown. And accordingly, attempts are made to get at the rest of the matter—attempts which fail.

Of course these attempts fail. Is there any reason to believe that a group of twentieth century college striplings can solve a mystery before which the brilliance of generations has been dimmed,—that those who only grope in the dark can hope to solve a mystery which is engraved in letters of fire everlasting upon the obelisk of time? Indeed, Adam might be called before the bar; Jacob might explain his seven years' wait for Rachel to men who spend seven minutes once a week in the reception room at Queen's Hall waiting for Gwendoline; broken-hearted Catullus and mournful Propertius could tell of Cynthia and Lesbia; Bryon, Shelley, Alec who lives in a St. George Street fraternity, might speak of Janes—their recollections—and Claras, gray and uninteresting though this may seem. To what avail? None. The mystery has never been solved and never will.

The old-time monks, fearing the wiles and ways of the worldly, used to retreat to mountain fastnesses, where their problem was shut off by bleak battlements and cavernous canyons; there, in solitude, they used to contemplate and to rejoice upon their asceticism and their celibacy. But the modern stripling, unafraid, tackles that which has been as a closed book; he seeks to know the unknowable and to unscrew the inscrutable.

Though his optimism and his courage be ever so laudable, he will not succeed.

Dauntless youth, we salute thee!

Correspondence

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

Editor,
"The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

Could you tell the students why the University Press does not open in the morning in time to get note book fillers or texts for a nine o'clock lecture? A few days ago I had to write my notes on note paper that a friend loaned to me. It is most annoying to be in that position I assure you, sir.

312 Victoria.

Dear Editor:—

May I be allowed the privilege of asking, through your paper, this little question of the Hart House Debates Committee?

Are the Hart House debates opportunities for an expression of student opinion, or are they degenerating into adult talk-fests? The last house was debated, not by undergraduates, but by adults, and these being men outside the university with one exception, I have no hesitation, Mr. Editor, in stating that the last debate was completely dominated by men rather than undergraduates. I regret that this should be the policy of the Hart House committee.

Age dominates youth in this university at present. Must this always be so?

YOUTH.

Editorial Note—It happens that eight undergraduates spoke at the Hart House debate last Wednesday and only three non-students. Those who have followed the debates will readily see that any test that has marked their work has really come from the visitors. Of the three debates held since the university opened, the one that did not have guest speakers was the poorest attended and the weakest as regards action.

With the Theatres

UPTOWN

See "Paris" and diel Of course, there are people in Toronto who don't like Irene Bordoni—but then, there are people who don't like caviar or a Dry Martini. The whole cast of this picture is good, especially Jack Buchanan, but Irene is . . . well, why be incoherent? If you can resist her "I Wonder What is Really on His Mind," there is something radically wrong with your carburetor and your valves need to be ground. La Bordoni can get more interpretation out of one line of a popular song than some of our eminent thespians can get out of a fifteen-round bout with Shakespeare. And incidentally, in the revue sequences the settings and the camera angles are the best to date.

—A.E.F.A.

TIVOLI

You might be tempted to let something prevent you from seeing "The Love Parade". Don't. If you miss this, you miss one of the best things the talking screen has produced so far. It is so much the best phonoplay musical comedy that I wouldn't put my money on any other even to show. I doubt if there is a better film director than Ernst Lubitsch in the business, and there certainly isn't a better one for this sort of thing. There isn't a flaw anywhere in this production. Jeanette MacDonald will panic you. And if Maurice Chevalier isn't the last word in personality plus and an uncanny sense of theatre, then you and I won't live to hear the last word.

—A.E.F.A.

SHEA'S

Charming Lois Moran, supported by Joseph Wagstaffe, stars in an interesting picture at Shea's this week. Except for a little too much "mush" in places, this picture, "A Song of Kentucky", will provide an excellent bit of entertainment for the T.B.M. (or student). The society complications are not very true to life, but they are amusing.

The vaudeville is up to the usual mark with Sylvia Clark and Roger Imhoff as the main features. The former offers some good character sketches and the latter an amusing playlet of a country hotel. The remainder of the programme is fairly well balanced. A good show.

CHAMPUS CAT

SIX-SHOT DAN

A husky man was Six-shot Dan, 'Way up in Hudson Bay, When Dan would swear, no guy would dare To have a word to say.

One night Dan came to see his dame, At "Dirty Dolly's" Bar, Where men were men who had a yen To shoot to kill, by gar.

When Dan came in this den of sin, All eyes were fixed on him, He slammed the door and with a roar Made all the lights go dim.

"Quick, fill 'er up, you she-wolf's pup,"

Snarled he to "Dirty Doll", He made the gin above the din Sound like a waterfall.

Then up slid "Mame", his painted dame,

And threw an arm round him, And with a prance she said, "Let's dance",

His roll she ached to trim.

Now Dan ne'er thought his one weak spot

Was women, wine and song, For "Mame" would thin his pile of tin

When three o'clock came 'long.

From rum he stunk and was so drunk, That scarcely could he stand, But even then the other men Would fear his deadly hand.

But one night fine there was no sign, Of Six-shot Dan's huge bulk, And word went round someone had found

A dead and gory hulk.

They found him dead, shot full of lead, Revenged at last, foul thing, And "Mame" she cried, while off she pried

His stickpin and his ring.

COMMUNISM IS RIFE IN CHINA AND JAPAN

more closely concerned Canadians were also dealt with at the conference. These involved the relations between the Chinese government and the nationals of other countries resident in China. In the concessions which are set aside for foreigners in the various cities of China, the residents are not subject to the Chinese courts, but to their respective consuls. This principle of extra-territoriality, which applies even to the 700,000 Japanese resident in Manchuria, is not favoured by the Chinese government. Extra-territoriality, indeed, has been declared abolished in China, but according to Professor Wong, the different powers will refuse to recognize this act. He considered that Great Britain and the other nations would be willing to surrender this right only when the Chinese courts of justice were able to dispense justice impartially.

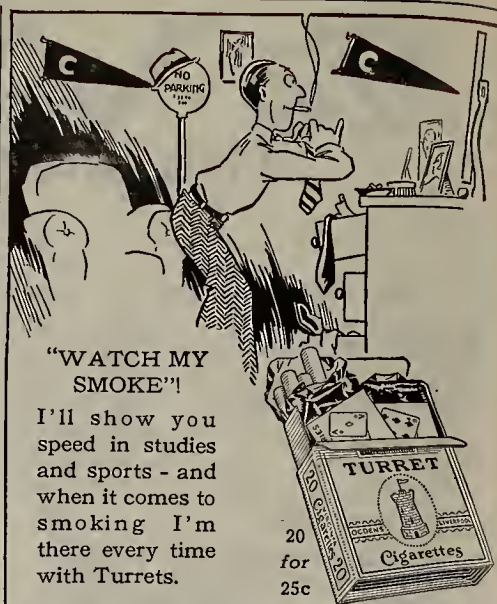

Oriental immigration to the United States and Canada, was, by tacit consent, not discussed at the conference. Professor Wong had asked a prominent Japanese, however, about the feeling of the people of Japan towards the attitude of California in regard to their immigration, and had received the reply: "We say nothing, but we do not forget."

Communism was rife in both China and Japan, according to the professor. He stated that in one day in Japan over 700 communists had been arrested.

VARIETY SPICES PROGRAM AT SORORITY MUSICALS

Violin, Voice, Dance Contribute to Success of Iota Alpha Pi Affair

At the second annual musical given by the Iota Alpha Pi Sorority, Mr. Randolph Crowe's aria "Largo al Factotum" from Rossini's Barber of Seville was undoubtedly the happiest part of an exceptionally good program. In his remarkably easy and natural rendition, Mr. Crowe brought out to the full the gay busy-body personality of the barber Figaro. Miss Minnie Weinstein's piano solo "Caprice Espagnol" of Moszkowski, was a brilliant bit of quickly-shifting colour, vivid and beautiful, with all the force and contrast of Slavic music.

Blue Quintette Take 35-22 Decision in Practice Encounter

EVERY MAN SHARES SCORE

Varsity senior basketball secured a decisive win over Broadview "Y" 35 to 22 in an exhibition game last night at Hart House. The locals turned in a much improved brand of the cage game and their showing speaks well for their success in the first championship match in the intercollegiate next Saturday in London against the Western five.

The Blue and White commenced the game with a methodical, slow possession style of game which netted them 7 of their 9 field shots in the first period. The half time score stood at 20 to 6 in favour of the students. At the outset of the second half the Blue and White players temporarily lapsed into taking long shots which enabled the visitors to run in a string of pretty baskets from close in. However, the "T" squad settled down to play systematically with the result of a comfortable victory.

No one stood out on the U. of T. line-up, each man combining well and every member of the aggregation figuring in the goal getting. Rankin and Laidman were the best for Broadview.

Varsity — Forwards, Horton (8), Davey (8); centre, O'Leary (2); guards, Currie (3), Cook (5); spares, Wood (2), Riggs (7).

Broadview "Y" — Forwards, McAllister (2), Morgan (2); centre, Brown (2); guards, Rankin (8), Gard, spares, Laidman (6), Yates (2).

Referee—A. Hutchinson.

The oldest frosh in the world to-day is at present attending the University of Chicago. He is 72 years old and obeys all the freshman rules.

BIG FOUR FINAL DATES ARE SET

Juniors Meet Parkdales Friday and Monday for Group Championship

WILL USE REVAMPED LINEUP

The Varsity junior hockey squad will face Parkdale Canoe Club in the first game in the play offs for the Big Four group championship at the downtown arena on Friday night. The return game will be played the following Monday night at the U. of T. ice palace. This promises to be a torrid series as the teams are evenly matched with P.C.C. having a slight edge on the season's showing. They finished in first place, defeating the locals twice and losing to them once. On the present dope there is little to choose from between the two teams and the result looks like a toss-up.

The changes made by Coach Frank Sullivan in the Blue and White line-up seems to have worked wonders. The team ran into a scoring slump around the end of the season and it looked as though they would have a hard time finishing in the money. Then Smillie was moved up to the forward line with Brant and Hetherington and Williamson took his place on the defence. This shake-up seems to have added the necessary punch and a total of seventeen goals was registered in the last two games.

P.C.C. has a fast-skating, hard-bumping outfit who play rugged hockey and the Blue and White are going to have a tough time downing them, but they are confident of being able to turn the trick.

SCHOOL MEN TRIUMPH OVER U.C. PUCKSTERS

Snowstorm Helps White Clad Engineers to Overcome Early Lead

A heavy snowfall slowed up an evenly contested interfaculty hockey game between U.C. seniors and Senior School. U.C. gained an early lead when Wally Bean let one go from the blue line, but School set to work to even it up and in the last two periods took the upper hand.

Collingwood was the best forward for U.C. while Wally Bean on the defence showed that he can still play middle wing.

Watson was the pick of the Engineers. They showed themselves to be a hard team to beat during a snow storm as their white sweaters rendered them invisible.

During the last period play roughened up and three sticks were broken. It is rumoured that the referee became snow-blind.

U. C. Seniors—Shaw, Bean, Bruce, Candler, Steiner, Collingwood, Cook and Ward.

Senior School—Moesser, Crerar, Hancock, Watson, Grosvenor, Reed, Montgomery, Higgins and Davidson.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The O.H.A. has issued the dates for the Big Four group playoff. Parkdale Canoe Club will play Varsity juniors at Varsity Arena on Friday night and the return game will be at the Arena Gardens Monday. Goals on the round will decide the championship.

In the three group games between the Blue and P.C.C. the latter took two by a small margin. Varsity's recently acquired scoring punch has sent their stock soaring and at present there is little to choose between the two outfits. The Paddlers, however, have played more consistent hockey and have been more aggressive than the college sextet. Both squads contain players of the crash 'em and smash 'em type and the playoffs should feature plenty of action.

Varsity intermediates are ensured of at least a tie in their group. McMaster have defaulted their game scheduled for to-day. If Bradford defeats Markham in the remaining group game Varsity and Bradford will be tied with five wins and a loss apiece. Judging by Markham's showing of the season the Blue and Bradford will play a sudden death game for group honours.

Nationals' 6-1 defeat of Queen's at the Arena last night practically eliminates the Tricolour from the Senior O.H.A. race. The Kingstons have won but one game and have lost four. Nationals are close on the heels of the Blue, having one win less than Red Porter's men. Varsity and Sea Fleas hook up at the Blue Arena Saturday night. Tickets for this game are going to sell and Saturday night should see the old S.R.O.

Western University opened the intercollegiate basketball season by losing to Queen's in Kingston Friday and bowing to McGill in Montreal Saturday night. Rating on these games McGill and Queen's are about equal. Western is facing a stiff task to get back in the running.

The interest of the co-ed sporting world will be divided between women's senior hockey game and the combined U.C.-Household Science swimming meet at U.T.S. on Wednesday night. It's too bad that the swimming meet had to be arranged to-morrow night. However, it could not be helped as it has been very difficult to get the U.T.S. tank.

The intercollegiate hockey team takes on the Pats sextet to-morrow night at 7 in the Varsity Arena. Varsity dropped the first game to Aura Lee two weeks ago in the opening game of the City League. The blue and white girls had had practically no practice at the time, but they have been working hard for to-morrow's game with last season's champions, and they should give a much better display of team work, besides which their condition should be much improved.

The intermediate basketball team will be working out regularly from now on. The elimination from the senior squad will take place this week and the cut will have to be a good sized one if the intermediates are going to be able to get in any kind of shape before the City League opens, the second week in February.

INTERFACULTY HOCKEY SCHEDULE ANNOUNCED

The following schedule for the O.A.C., Victoria, Trinity group is announced:

Jan. 28—Vic at Trin. E 4
Jan. 31—Trin. at Vic 4
Feb. 5—Vic at O.A.C. 4
Feb. 8—O.A.C. at Vic 3
Feb. 12—Trin. at O.A.C. 4
Feb. 15—O.A.C. at Trin. E 3
On Jan. 30 Jr. Meds will play Jr. U.C. on the middle cushion at four o'clock instead of five.

Although blind, 18 year old Shirley Delesdernier has registered at Louisiana University to study journalism.

FORESTERS TAKE CLOSE GAME FROM EMMANUEL

Withstand Belated Rally and Edge Out Close 21-16 Victory

Faculty of Forestry was extended to the limit yesterday afternoon to win from Emmanuel College in an interfaculty basketball game. The final score was 21-16 for Forestry.

Forestry were easily the best in the first half, leading by score of 15 to 6. But after the intermission Emmanuel seemed to become inspired and rose to great heights to score 10 points in quick succession, but Forestry awoke in the dying moments of the game to score 6 points and cinch the game.

For Forestry Grainger and Start were the stars, the whole play revolving about these two players.

Emmanuel showed a sweet player in the person of King, who scored 10 points for his team. The whole team worked hard and if they had only come to life sooner would have romped away with the game.

Forestry—Simpson (2), Start (4), Grainger (9), Raeburn (2), Leslie (2), Wiley, Gray (2), Tounson. Emmanuel—King (10), Harris, Snell (2), Ashton (2), Shepley (2), Bencom, Knowles.

TODAY'S INTERMEDIATE MATCH IS CANCELLED

The intermediate O.H.A. game between Varsity and McMaster, scheduled for the Varsity Arena at 2:30 p.m. to-day, has been cancelled. There will be a practice for the intermediates at 4:45.

SULLIVAN LEADING SCORER

The University College senior basketball team journeyed to Guelph last Saturday, and again emerged victorious in their second game of the season. The score was 30-18. The game started out with both teams checking closely and as a result the score at half time was 12-9, in favour of the Toronto team.

For the first five minutes of the second half, the U.C. team cut loose with the best combination attacks that they have shown this season, and ran up ten points before the Agriulturists scored a point. The red and white clad squad maintained this edge all through the rest of the game, and were never in danger of losing their lead. No individual stars could be picked out, every man in the squad got into the game, and with the big floor well suited to their passing game, turned in a great game.

O.A.C.—Forwards, Malkin (10) and Jensen (2); centre, Hales (4); guards, Totten and McPhee; subs, Slater (1), Mull, Nottingham (1) and Reid.

Sr. U.C.—Forwards, Foyer (2) and Sullivan (10); centre, Maoney (8); guards, Mayor (4) and Stringer (2); subs, Keith, Garden, Hodgson (4) and Davies.

JUNIOR VIC COURT QUINTETTE TRIM U. C.

Barnes is Outstanding in Well-Contested 17-12 Victory

Junior Vic defeated Junior U.C. in a close-fought game of basketball in Hart House Friday evening 17-12. The game was well contested by each team. U.C. was particularly good on defence, but their offence was not as good. U.C. defence permitted Barnes of Vic, the best man on the floor, to score several times. Vic was aggressive throughout, especially in the second half and were able to make sure their victory by good combination.

Vic—Clark, Barry, J. Bates, Morrow, Barnes; subs, Henderson, Misener, R. Bates, Gregory, Christie. U.C.—McDonnell, Tyndal, Agnew, Anderson, Bowman; subs, Cochran, Shook, Scott.

Students of the University of Michigan are permitted to have cars but they are forbidden to give rides to any other students.

PRESBYTERIANS TAKE FIRST BASEBALL MATCH

Trim Forestry 8-6 in Freakish Three Inning Inter-faculty Tilt

Knox men in their first interfaculty baseball game defeated Forestry by a score of 8-6. The game was featured by many errors, good pitching and several disputes.

Forestry went to bat in the first inning to collect a total of four runs, but when Knox came up the Forestry pitcher had very poor support, and when the smoke cleared away they had made five.

In the second inning both teams steadied and each side added one to their numbers. Forestry in the third went scoreless while Knox tallied two more runs.

In the first of the fourth, Forestry succeeded in gaining another, but as the time limit was up, and Knox men had the lead the game was declared in their favour.

Forestry — MacDonald, Hodgins, Choate, Hunt, Sewell, Beer, Howard, Atcheson, Young.

Knox—McGinn, Jamieson, H. Anderson, Davidson, Lowry, D. Anderson, McDiarmid, Hebbon, Coleman.

FACULTY MEMBERS DIFFER OVER MILITARY TRAINING

Professor T. J. Meek of University College quite agreed with the attitude taken by the writer of the letter and believed the views were sane and well expressed. "C.O.T.C. and cadet training do teach discipline and give a form of physical training, but after all, they are militaristic," Mr. Meek told "The Varsity". "Why take up some practice that idealizes military life, instead of gymnasium work and sports, that achieve discipline and physical training more adequately? I have been both a cadet and a soldier," Mr. Meek continued, "and I can well remember the impressions that were made on me. Cadet work has more bad effects than C.O.T.C., however. The university student has a mature point of view and is not so carried away by the glamour of rifles, uniforms and drill, as a youngster is."

It is the belief of Mr. Meek that the training one gets here is not such an aid in actual military tactics, for then close order drill counts little. In the last war, the best leaders were men who didn't have extensive military training behind them. Mr. Meek cited Sir Arthur Currie as an example in whom initiative had not been crushed by discipline.

Mr. Loudon believes that C.O.T.C. regarded sanely is a successful movement, but Mr. Meek differs with him and states his belief that military training organizations are on the wane.

WALPOLE EXPLAINS CREATIVE IMPULSE

over, the experience of instinctive and immediate creation. This had happened to him in the case of his novel, the "Old Ladies". While he was in the middle of another novel the inspiration came to him, and dropping everything he wrote like one possessed until the novel was finished in six weeks' time. In this case he had the unusual experience of feeling that the book was not written by him, that it had no connection with him at all, except as interpreter.

In describing the further workings of the process of creation Mr. Walpole gave an example of how he would go about building a story around an incident that interested him at the Toronto station. After transporting the scene to England and creating a country house surrounded by curran bushes and smelling of gingerbread, he peopled it with a few characters, and turned it over to the audience to do what they liked with.

NEW UNION PLANNED FOR COLLEGE WOMEN TO FILL GREAT NEED

Committee of Faculty Women Formed to Push Cause of Women

MISS HAMILTON CONVENOR

New Building Would Promote Unity of Feeling Amongst Women

"The women of the staff of the University of Toronto have the interests of the co-eds at heart and great enthusiasm prevails among them concerning the hoped-for Women's Union building," declared Miss Dorothy Kilpatrick, Dean of Women of University College, when approached by "The Varsity" regarding the newly formed Women's Building Committee.

"There is only one need for the realization of the project and that is the 'filthy lucre'. There are two main reasons for the proposed building. It would stimulate further the existing university spirit, and it would provide a scene for all the activities of the women," she continued. "As affairs are now, there are fully 800 women registered in medicine, household science, social service, pharmacy and other faculties, more women than are registered in arts colleges, who have no union facilities."

Miss Bertha Hamilton of the department of social service, is convenor of the new committee which is a subdivision of the faculty women's committee of the university.

"The purpose of the new committee," said Miss Hamilton, "is to bring before the public eye the needs of the women at the University of Toronto and to collect information from other universities about such buildings."

The members of the new committee are: Miss B. Hamilton, Dr. E. Gordon, Miss A. C. Cole, Dr. Norma Ford and Miss A. E. M. Parkes.

U.C. WOMEN'S LITERARY POSTPONE MEETING

Illustrated Lecture to be Given by Well-known
Sculptress

The open meeting of the University College Women's Literary Society for the spring term has been postponed from Tuesday, February 4th to February 11th at 8 p.m. The executive is congratulating itself on having obtained the services of Mrs. Emanuel Hahn for this occasion. Mrs. Hahn and her husband are well-known sculptors who have exhibited their work at "The Grange". "Modern Sculpture" will be the speaker's subject, and she will illustrate it with lantern slides. The meeting will take place in the dining room of the Women's Union, and everyone who is interested in the subject is invited to attend.

SUN-WHEAT CAKE HAS RECORD SALE MONDAY

"Over 3,000 sun wheat biscuits were sold by the Tuck Shop in the first day of sale," W. R. Cowan told "The Varsity" in an interview, yesterday. "So keen has been the demand that we have had difficulty in obtaining a supply large enough to fill our needs," he said. "We have had three mothers up here from downtown, who saw the announcement in the city newspapers, that we were the first to sell the new biscuit, and who wanted to buy a quantity for their babies."

Report of Committee Highly Confidential

"Nothing will be done about the report of the committee investigating student government," said Mr. A. G. Burns, secretary-treasurer of the S.A.C., in an interview yesterday, "until the Joint Executive meets on Wednesday. Until then we cannot divulge anything of the contents of the report, as it is strictly confidential."

PEOPLE ARE JUDGED BY HIGHEST SUCCESS

So Says G. H. Locke, in Lecture on Library of Vatican

LIBRARY AT ROME INDEXED

"It is a comforting thing that through life one is judged by the highest point one has attained," said Dr. George H. Locke, chief librarian of the Toronto public libraries, in his address to the Literary Society at St. Joseph's College. "Rome was once the centre of the world; all roads led to Rome, and it is again gaining ascendancy under the triumvirate of the Pope, the King and Mussolini."

Having asked for the privilege of having the first world conference of librarians; Dr. Locke was present at this conference as a representative of the United States. He spent an afternoon wandering through the Vatican library. "The Vatican library is undergoing the same renaissance as everything else in Italy," said Dr. Locke. "Here is an opportunity of showing to the world what Rome can do. Former treasures are being brought to light every day."

The books in the Vatican library had been arranged in cupboards, a most remarkable work of art. These books are now being taken out, examined, catalogued in the modern method and put on steel shelves. It is expected that books will be found which will throw light on aspects of literature and civilization hitherto unknown.

U.C. DRAMATIC CLUB GIVES THEATRE WEEK

Alumnae Association Present
"Pomander Walk" to Raise Funds

The Dramatic Club of University College Alumnae Association is giving a theatre week in Hart House to raise money for their annual scholarships. Beginning February 5, they are presenting "Pomander Walk", a play by Louis M. Parker.

Four performances were intended originally; two theatre parties, the Zonta Club on Friday and Bishop Strachan School Association on Saturday besides the two performances given for the Alumnae scholarship fund. However, another production had to be put on for Wednesday when Old St. Andrews begged for a night. As it is an expensive play to produce these well-filled houses are much appreciated by the association.

Ivor Lewis, H. A. Hitchman, Everard Nash and Misses Pearl Gray, Margaret Boyle and Eleanor Norton are taking the leading parts. The play is being directed by Mr. Edgar Stone and with Miss Boyle as president and Miss Norton for publicity, the theatre week will most certainly be a success.

LABOUR LEGISLATION IS SLOW IN CANADA SAYS JAMES SIMPSON

Controller Gives Address to Fabius Club Last Evening

WAS AT LABOR CONFERENCE

Slavery Still in Existence in Some Countries, He Claims

"Slavery in a certain sense of the word still exists in different parts of the world," stated Controller James Simpson at a meeting of the Fabius Club held at the Women's Union last night. "Enforced and indentured labour among the natives is common in such dependencies as South Africa and India."

Controller Simpson, together with D. C. Draper, represented Canada at the International Labour Conference at Geneva last June. The speaker pointed out that it was the work of this conference to make recommendations concerning labour problems that would be ratified by the governments which they represented.

He dramatically described the effect produced by the overthrow of the Conservative party in Great Britain at the last election. A recommendation for the eight hour day had been reposing in the British government's hands for ten years waiting to be ratified. Immediately after the results of the election became known a wire was received by the conference which was then in session, reassuring them that this legislation would be passed. The conference was changed from a state of paralysis to real action and work was continued with new hope.

In referring to Canada and the question of labour legislation there, he stated that due to the B.N.A. Act, it was not defined whether the Federal or Provincial Government had the right to ratify conference recommendations. This results in delay and inactivity in regard to these matters. Some other countries use Canada's example as a shield to their own inactivity.

Controller Simpson, who is also vice president of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada when interviewed by "The Varsity" expressed his desire to be in communication with university affairs. "Of course social and labour problems are my chief interest and I appreciate the interest shown by many of the students in these questions."

SOUTH AMERICA HAS NO MODERN COLLEGE

Universities There Lack Added
Interest of Co-eds, Says
Senora Guerrero

"The University of Toronto is very different from those of South America," said Senora Guerrero, the guest of honour of the Spanish-Italian Club last night. "The universities there are not only smaller but they have not the distinction, or the added interest, of co-eds. The modern atmosphere has not yet reached higher education, although there has been much advancement."

Senora Guerrero then described her recent trip to Chile passing through now modern Lima with its colonial architecture, picturesque Bolivia, and on to Chile. The poets, writers and the musicians of that country were the subject of her eulogy, and the Senora ended her interesting address with a selection from one of the foremost Chilean poets.

Hideous Spectres and Pirates Chill the Blood at Annual Nite

Free Parking!

Hastily impressed into service in the stress of haste and dire necessity, the back campus of University College took on the appearance of a veritable parking station last evening. Perhaps it began in the spirit of levity preceding the great Nite, or perhaps it was deliberate, and cold-blooded action of a calculating mind, but, no sooner had one car taken up the post of vantage than another and another had followed. Even the sidewalk leading to the Soldiers' Tower of Hart House was utilized by one motorist. "The Varsity" reporter, conducting a thorough search, was unable to discover any signs of human habitation in any of the vehicles.

RELIGIOUS LECTURES TO BE POPULAR TYPE

S.C.A. Announces New Series
Will Appeal to All Classes

IMPORTANT SPEAKERS

The announcement of four Hart House addresses by prominent men, under the auspices of the S.C.A., has been made recently. These lectures will take place every Wednesday afternoon of the month in the Music Room at 5:15 p.m. and all undergraduates are invited.

They will be given on subjects of vital importance by such speakers as have proven, in the past, the worth of the talks by their popular nature and the crowds which have attended them consistently. Their purpose is to answer the questions that arise to-day in the minds of the scientist, student and modern business man in regard to religion.

The first will take place on Feb. 5, when Professor C. A. Chant will speak on the relation of Science to Religion, in a discussion entitled: "Does Science Abolish God?" The subsequent addresses will deal in the same manner with the general problems which confront religion in a scientific and commercial world. On the 12th, Professor John Line will be heard in "Why Pray in a World of Law?" "Is not Humanism a Sufficient Religion?" will be the topic of Professor John Baillie on the 19th. Mr. Denton Massey will give the last talk of the series on the 26th, dealing with the question, "Can we be Religious in Modern Business?"

LAST MUSIC CONCERT

The last of the series of chamber music concerts this season in Convocation Hall will take place on Friday, January 31st, at 5:00 o'clock. The Hart House Quartet will include on the programme the Beethoven Quartet in B-flat, known as the "Harp" Quartet. This concert marks the close of the sixth consecutive year of activities by the Hart House Quartet.

The use of bicycles has returned to the Yale campus. This old custom has been revived due to the fact that automobiles have been banned to all but seniors.

Varied Skits Show Cleverness

ONE CRASHED

Dancing Rounds Off Stunt Night

The walls of Hart House echoed with shouts of "Toke Oike" as seven hundred and fifty School men and their guests made merry in their annual Nite, which took place last evening.

Beginning at 8:15, skits by the various departments of Faculty of Applied Science, displayed to eager pleasure seekers, the fable, dramatic and otherwise, that is to be found in the men from the "red school house".

In the Debates Room the Electricals gave a performance of the seniors' greatest melodrama (as yet unnamed) wherein was disclosed the fact that the "Horrible Haunted House Hides Hideous Happenings". A ghost clumped here and there, firing a six shooter in the most approved manner. Chairs that scampered about to the music of iron letters, while huge spiders spun their silky webs from smoky beams, and dangled before staring eyes, were all included in this "most stupendous production since the well known 'The Feline and the Yellow Coloured Bird'". But the "ghost" was taken by these doughty engineers, and soon discovered to be an old grad of S.P.S., whereupon in true School spirit the Rich and Poor Compared and

GOOD TIME IN BAD WAY

That the poor man need not be pitted for his poverty was the decision of the Knight Hawks' Club at the University Settlement in a discussion yesterday, "Resolved that it is harder for the rich man to be good than the poor man." The rich man was described as "more apt to go on a spree", while the poor man, after saving up his pennies, would be likely to make the most of an opportunity for a good time, but perhaps in a bad way. The attitude taken by the debaters was fashioned by the fact that Toronto has free education to offer to rich and poor alike, public parks as beauty spots in all parts of the city, and the Art Gallery in such close proximity to the University Settlement House.

This discussion group, but one of many such, was started by the boys as an experiment last spring. Since that time every Sunday afternoon the boys assemble, one member of the club occupies the chair, and activities commence. None of the meetings are closed, and a number of students from the university, having once discovered the interest aroused in the group, continue to attend as discussion members. Any member of the university is welcomed by these Knight Hawks who have become proficient in the tea-

MANAGERS MAY DRAFT THE BEST ATHLETES FROM COLLEGE TEAMS

University Teams Should Be Superior to Those of Colleges

T. A. REED EXPLAINS RULE

Anyone Refusing to Play for University Team Ineligible for Interfaculty

"You can't do anything against a man's will," said T. A. Reed, when interviewed by "The Varsity" as to whether university teams could draft men from interfaculty teams against their will and against the will of the faculty.

"Managers of university teams may call upon any player from any college or faculty, to turn out with the university team, but this regulation shall not apply to a college which possesses the separate standing as an associate member of the C.I.A.U. Except in reference to university first teams, and only in case the player has not taken part in more than one game for his college in that department of athletics and in the same season."

"We must not let interfaculty teams become superior to university teams, which would be the case if men were not forced to play in the university when asked to do so," said T. A. Reed. "I should think men would consider it a higher honour to play in a university team than in an interfaculty team. The interfaculty teams serve mostly the purpose of finding good athletes for the university teams. If a man is needed on both teams I think he should give a preference to his university."

Mr. Reed referred to the Athletic Handbook, where it says, "Any player who has been reported by the manager of a university team as having refused to turn out with the team shall not be eligible for an interfaculty team in the same series in the same season." In case a player is no longer required on the university team he may be reinstated on the interfaculty team with the consent of the club concerned.

Professor M. A. McKenzie, though president of the athletic directorate, refused to comment on this subject. He says, "That is why I am still president, because I never speak on any such questions."

REV. WILLIAM PAYTON WILL ADDRESS STUDENTS

Will Lecture at Meeting of Students' Christian Body

The Rev. William Payton will address a student meeting in Wynilwood Wednesday at 5:15, under the auspices of the Student Christian Association. Mr. Payton has lived in India for many years and is ex-secretary of the International Council of Indian Churches and is at present a secretary of the International Missionary Council and co-editor of the International Missionary Review. It is thought that he will have something of interest for the students and all are cordially invited to attend.

ON EXAMINATIONS

Time is fleeting. January is drawing to a close. One month from now, line-ups will be commencing to appear in Simcoe Hall of those who are desirous of the privilege of securing degrees or writing examinations. The mention of the word examinations revives the old problem of how to get high marks and make a good showing on the year's work.

There are idealists among us who pin their faith upon intensive study and original research. Be it understood that we have nothing against idealists. They are admirable people, but the sad thing is that too often the ideal and the practical clash. Such is the case with regard to examinations. The ideal method, we grant, is thorough work, backed up by individual thought and opinion. But it is not the best method.

The steep and rocky path to First Class Honours is not to be attained by such weapons as these. There are but few who have drunk in the wine-like and invigorating air that pervades those high altitudes of scholastic eminence, for it is rightly maintained that examination standards at this university are high. Is there, then, no prescription, no chart, which will guide the ambitious to the lofty heights? After all, it is not so difficult a thing as it seems. The average student, of ordinary intellect and normal retentive powers, can reach the pinnacle. Let the would-be climber apply himself to the standard texts, let him absorb their fundamental views and acquire the accepted outlook and the popular interpretation; let him retain these things in his mind, and set them forth upon paper in accordance with the questions asked by the examiner, and the thing is done.

What, then, of the brilliant student, the original thinker, the man who has some ideas of his own, some individuality? He is an also-ran. For examination purposes, the extra-intelligent student is at a disadvantage. His own original ideas, especially those which run counter to orthodox opinions, prove the stumbling block which bars the way to eminence. The average examiner is only human; he has been inflicted with one of the most unpleasant tasks ever devised for the discomfort of mankind; and his work comes in the heat of the early days of June. His first reaction to the novel theory and the idea which opposes standard belief will naturally be one of hostility. And so it is that the research and thought of the clever student count for only a fraction of their intrinsic worth—in examination marks. Let him express the views of the many, and adopt the popular outlook, and all will be well. Otherwise, he is foredoomed to disappointment.

We have long been of the opinion that examinations are an unfair and inadequate test of ability. The arbitrary time limit is a severe handicap. The very atmosphere of the examination hall is repellent to some, and kills whatever creative effort or productive thought they may have brought to the task. The crowning defect of these tests is that they fail to provide the necessary incentive to the brilliant scholar, and usually award the palm to a mind of mediocre intelligence.

The substitution of a long essay, prepared and written at the student's leisure, would, we feel, be a marked improvement over the present system. The scope is inconceivably broader, the opportunities for talent wider and more equitable. Such a method would do away with cramming and all its attendant evils, which despite the annual threats of professors, continues to be the most popular indoor sport around the university during April and May. Furthermore, it would bring out the best in every student, and eliminate the drawbacks of limited time and an uncongenial atmosphere. The scholar of individual opinions would have a reasonable chance to state his case, support it with logical evidence, and phrase it in such a way as not to offend the most orthodox or confirmed thinker. Until this is done or some similar change made, the average student, by the exercise of judicious orthodoxy, will continue to rank ahead of the more deserving mind, and to gain the glory which belongs, by right, to another.

Art and Drama

EVERYMAN

Students of the drama are having the unusual opportunity this week of seeing a morality play actually produced. Last night and to-night in the chancel of Westminster—Central Church, Brownlow Card offers his version of "Everyman", justly the best known play of this class.

The production is for the most part smooth. The play has been handled reverently and deftly by director and players. The treatment is unorthodox it must be admitted; but the end is colourful and more than justifies the means. In the attempt to preserve the religious atmosphere the tempo of the piece has been retarded to such an extent that the interest unnecessarily flags in spots. One feels that a more rapid pacing would improve the dramatic qualities without lessening the religious. Also, the lighting might be made more definite without loss to the atmosphere and with distinct gain to the visibility.

The effectiveness of the production is largely attributable to the organ accompaniment. It succeeds in supplying a great deal of that depth to the piece of which the archaic quality of the lines rob it.

The representation of Death as a young woman in herald's garb is distinctly novel and has much in its favour, but loses a great deal of the feeling of terror which a hideous Death would inspire. Raymond Card in the title role gives a very careful reading to a part which keeps him continuously on the stage for two hours. Cecil Da Costa, as Worldly Wealth, gives the most striking interpretation of the evening.

To anyone interested in the development of the modern theatre this production is extremely important, as it is not likely to be done again hereabouts for many years. It was also worthy of having been done for its own sake, as the event proves.

SOCIAL NOTES

Items for this column must be accompanied by a cheque made out to bearer, not under $10, a vaccination certificate, and a one-way ticket to Niagara Falls, N.Y.

Music lovers will be very keenly interested to learn that Miss Tinkelpaugh, the well-known pianist, will play at the next musicale. She will first render that popular aria "Chess a song at twilight" from the musical comedy "Pavane My Word."

Mr. Adam Lyre and Miss Petunia Anne Hittlar were united at a quiet little wedding. This is a refreshing novelty; because the way the groom usually shrieks and screams at a noisy wedding is distressing.

Miss Flittie Flapp was the raison d'être of a charming coming-out party last night at the Royal Snort. Miss Flapp came out promptly at 9.37, but went back in again owing to the scarcity of guests.

Mr. Jack Flapp ("Squirt") was also at the coming-out party. He received; exactly what, not specified. He came out at 9.06; passed out at 11.36.

The many friends of Colonel Nay, one of the most popular and best-known of the Governor's Horses, will be keenly interested to learn that he has left for Rio de Janeiro.

The attorney-general is said to be very keenly interested.

School Night was a jolly informal little function. Dame Rumour hath it. Fame also tells that the publication committee was not as busy as last year, partly owing to the comparatively subdued state of Aunt Fanny's Muses and her lack of interest in such topics as aviation and silverware.

In the past such topics as "Courtesy, Immigration," "Amateur and Professional Sport" have been raised. Next Sunday they will express views on "What is liberal education?" Through the medium of "The Varsity" the Knight Hawks are hoping to reach any students who might be interested in their group and who might prove an addition in the discussion.

The guests of honour at Miss Kilpatrick's weekly at-home in her room at the Women's Union yesterday afternoon, were Miss Barnstead, director of the Library School, and Miss Bassam, lecturer in library science.

HART HOUSE DEBATES

Editor,
"The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

Having noticed in your correspondence columns an expression of opinion regarding the question of outside speakers at Hart House debates, may I be allowed to state what I believe to be the case.

The function of the Hart House Debates Committee is, surely, to allow students the privilege of speaking before an open house on selected subjects, in addition to providing some measure of entertainment. Speakers from the paper introduce the subject and get it under way, when, supposedly, the average undergraduate is given a free hand to speak.

Yet what do we find to be the actual case? At the last Hart House debate a mere handful, less than half a dozen students got an opportunity to speak, although many more were desirous of doing so. Of course the speakers present were, on the whole, quite interesting, perhaps amusing. But one need not go to a Hart House debate to hear a learned cleric expound his views in high sounding phrases or

BLUE INTERMEDIATE BASKETEERS FACE McMASTER U. TO-NIGHT

SPEAKING OF SPORT

"Red" Porter has a lot to be cheerful about. Captain Jimmy McMullen has almost recovered from his hip injury and will likely be found on the ice this Saturday putting in his usually effective work. Bill Stewart, who was knocked out in the game with Queen's last Friday will be out for the practice-to-day. For the first time this year the regular line-up will take the ice, and with a quartet of alternates who have had plenty of work, the Sea Fleas are going to meet some mighty tough opposition in their bid for group leadership.

After Saturday's game with the Nationals, Varsity will be in for a long lay-off. The Blue's next scheduled game is the return intercollegiate encounter with McGill on February 20th to determine the 1930 domicile of the Cup. Then there are two remaining games in the O.H.A. It is likely that Varsity will stage one or two exhibitions in the next couple of weeks, but definite arrangements have not yet been made.

To-morrow night the Varsity water polo team leaves for New York. On Friday the Blue meets New York A.C. and on Saturday night Penn A.C. will furnish the opposition in Philadelphia. If the mermen pull the iron man stunt and defeat both and then turn around and take the strong M.A.A.A. into camp, the International Water Polo title will find its first resting place at Hart House.

St. Hilda's got off to a good start in the interfaculty hockey league last night when they downed the University College sextet in the opening game of the season by a 2-0 score. The Saints were able to come through in spite of losing four players, Joyce Muirhead, Naomi Slater, Margot Thompson and Betty Carter to the intercollegiate squad.

These girls' games are not without their funny side. Last night when St. Hilda's scored their second counter after a great scramble in front of the goal, one of the U.C. defence players remarked to her goalie in a gentle voice, "Thank Heaven I didn't do it, though I certainly tried hard." Another U.C. player was heard to remark disgustedly after the game, "We were lucky to hold St. Hilda's as well as we did. We had no coach, no routers, no nothing."

U.C. is sadly in need of hockey players. In last night's game they had to use Jessie Gray, who has not been able to come out to practice owing to other activities. She played for the red and white last year, but did not intend to turn out again this season. However, she was persuaded to play in the first game with St. Hilda's because her team was badly in need of defence players. Incidentally Miss Gray was the most effective player on the U.C. team.

VARSITY BASKETEERS OPEN SEASON TODAY

Blue and White Have Many Promising Players Under Coach Newman

PLAY McMASTER TO-NIGHT

Varsity's intermediate intercollegiate basketball team opens the season to-night with McMaster University as its opponents. The game will be played on the Central Y.M.C.A. floor, starting at 9 p.m.

The Blue and White quintet boast a roster of promising young exponents of the game, and are being coached by W. C. Newman of intercollegiate fame. The regular team will be composed of Collons and Carr, forwards; Douglas at centre, and Riley and Calderone, guards. Graham, Buchanan and Sobel will also be used.

Dick Douglas played last year with University of Toronto Schools. He stands 6 feet 7 inches and is a useful player at the tip-off and under the basket where his height comes in handy. Collins, regular forward, was formerly with St. Catharines. He is a good shot and dribbler. He is also a fine high jumper and represented Varsity at the Intercollegiate Track and Field Meet. Carr, the other regular forward, played last year with the Elizabeth playground intermediate team and is fast and an accurate shot. Riley, regular guard, hails from Syracuse, and is a good ball-handler and play-maker. Calderone, who teams up with Riley is from St. Catharines. He is a good defensive player and aggressive on the attack.

The Blue intermediates are going nicely and expect this year to capture their group which is composed of McMaster, Varsity, Western and O.A.C. Tickets for the game can be had from Coach McCutcheon of the senior team at 25c apiece.

INDOOR TRACK MEET AROUSES COMPETITION

U.C. and School Keen Rivals for Leadership in Last Events

The interfaculty indoor track meet now being held in Hart House gym, has been providing some close competition with U.C. and School keen rivals for the leadership so far. The following events remain to be run off:

January 30th—1 mile run; shot put; 220 yds. run.
February 6th—440 yds. run; pole vault; 1 mile walk.
February 13th—2 mile run; high jump; 1-2 mile relay.
February 27th—1 mile relay; 100 yd. dash; standing broad jump.

This meet is expected to give a line on the prospects for university entries in the Canadian indoor track championships to be held at the Coliseum on February 20th.

MEOTTES GAIN LEAD OVER VIC IN HOCKEY

Both Teams Appear Evenly Matched in Close Clash Score of 3-1

Meds defeated Vic (2) by a score of 3-1 in the first game of Group 2, women's interfaculty hockey, Tuesday evening at Little Vic Rink.

Both sides made a fine showing and were fairly evenly matched. Meds scored two goals in the first period, Bliss McQuarrie securing the first. The remaining two goals were scored by Vera Peters and Evelyn Gee. The honour of scoring Vic's one goal went to Marion McFarlane, directly after which Meds scored their third.

Meds—Goal, Molly Grant; defence, Helen Crow, Evelyn Gee; forwards, Vi Henry, Bliss McQuarrie, Vera Peters; subs, Priscilla Shields, Given Mahon, Jean Mustard.

Vic (2)—Goal, Aora Graham; defence, Maud Lindsey, Florence Lloyd; forwards, Marion McFarlane, Mary Carmen, Anna Wright; subs, Elizabeth Forbes, Mary Lewis, Helen Richardson.

SCHOOLMEN VICTORIOUS IN HARO FOUGHT GAME

Sr. Dents Defeated by Score of 20-18 in Basketball Tourney

Sr. S.P.S. cagers defeated Sr. Dents yesterday in one of the closest basketball games of the season, the final score being 20-18.

Half time found School leading by two baskets. The game was featured by the combination play of both teams.

Hutchin of School, pulled the stellar play of the game when he sank the tying basket with but 30 seconds to go when the score was 18 all. For the Dents, Merrill and Horwitz were good.

S.P.S.—Hutchin, Mercer, Pasternak, White, Halper, Bellachir, Scherman. Dents—Merrill, Jolopsky, Levenson, Cummings, Horwitz, Lake, Ireland.

U.C. WOMEN BEAT HOUSEHOLD SCIENCE

First Hockey Game Sees Score of 2-0 in Fast Plays

An exciting women's interfaculty hockey game took place yesterday when the second team of University College defeated Household Science by the score of 2-0.

The goals were tallied by Madeline Wollard and Eva Crawford. The second shot was scored a minute before time was called. The playing in general was of high calibre, considering it was the first game of the season, and the teams have had very little practice.

U.C.—K. Serout, Agnes Reid, Margaret Hogarth, Madeline Wollard, Marion Shadle, Eva Crawford. Household Science—Betty Douglas, Eleanor Kent, Helen Crosby, Ruth Sinclair, Grace Cooley.

COMBINED SWIMMING MEET

The combined U.C.-Household Science swimming meet will be held to-night at 8 at the U.T.S. swimming pool. Everyone come out and support the swimmers.

The classes of 3T1 and 3T3 Victoria class held a gay skating party at Little Vic Rink Tuesday night, after which lunch was served to the third year party in the common room, and to the first year in the tea room of Annesley Hall.

HOW INTIMATE A THING

A GLOVE CAN BE

Just a pair of gloves lying on a table; but what a wealth of meaning they can convey. Are they old and soiled with a careless, slovenly look about them, or are they neat, stylish, and good to look upon?

School. Here was the professor of mechanical engineering made to walk the plank, because, lacking his note book he could not repair, overhaul or in other words place in working order, the Pirate Ship S.S. XV.

For those that could get in, Junior School and Senior School staged an exhibition water polo game in the tank.

Dancing in the gym, east common, music and reading rooms made up the balance of the stunt night.

For those that hungered or thirsted the Chemical Club provided Monomethyl Ester of Anthranilil Carbonyl (for those uninitiated, just pink lemonade), and the new Sunwheat biscuit. For dessert was provided fresh eskimo pies, made on the premises, before the eyes, from "ize krim" chocolate coated.

The stunt night, which, judging from opinions expressed, was very successful, was not wholly free from the prize stunt of all—gate crashing. One debonair gentleman, a star in the football world, admitted to "The Varsity" that he had come in via the window. "I made a wager of a dinner downtown, that I would crash in," he said, "I did. As a result I have had a splendid evening's entertainment amid pleasant surroundings, and at the sole cost of a dinner—to be paid for by someone else."

STUDES ARE STEWED AND DON IS DRUNK

Missouri College Biological Department Misappropriates Grain Alcohol

Special to "The Varsity"
 A new variety of education seekers, "intoxicated biology students," has made its appearance at a Jackson, Miss., college.

The trouble, and there was trouble, came about when Millsaps College officials discovered several gallon cans of grain alcohol used in the biology department for preserving frogs and fish had been mysteriously emptied.

At the same time, directors of the college, came upon a biology instructor and a few of his students apparently under the influence of liquor.

The officials smelled the empty cans. They smelled the breaths of the teacher and his pupils. They went into a huddle, decided the secrets were similar and made a ruling that Assistant Professor James Collin and biology student, Uriah Banks, should depart from the institution.

The "intoxicated biology students" were offended by such treatment. The professor himself refused to leave school, declaring such action would be an admission of guilt.

The campus is in an uproar. Leaders of the student body threaten to call a mass meeting of protest. It's silly to "kick them out of school for stealing preserving alcohol when they could get real corn whiskey without any trouble," is one of the arguments heard.

Non-Committal Committees Report With More Reports As Last Resort

By A. E. F. Allen

Dean Leary of the Faculty of Applied Whitewash learned lazily across the table at your special correspondence.

"Have a cigarette," said he decisively.

We had one. So had the Dean. We had a match between us.

An hour passed.

From the depths of our lethargy, we finally dragged the muffled query, "Mr. Leary, can you give our readers any information as to the contents of the recent report of the Committee to Investigate the Committee to Investigate the Committee on Investigation of Committees?"

"Well, as a matter of fact," whispered Dean Leary discreetly, "we feel that the contents of this report must remain for the present a matter of the utmost secrecy. If the cat were let out of the bag now, there would be an instant demand for an investigation of the committee."

"Which committee?" we asked intelligently.

"The committee," replied the Dean without a moment's hesitation.

"Not the committee?"

"Yes, I don't wonder you are surprised. If this report were to be made public, we would hear on all sides cries of, 'Is this justice?' 'Where are the good old days?' 'What will become of the Empire?' . . . It would be intolerable."

"What action do you suppose the committee will take, Dean Leary?"

"You may rest assured the committee will pass the report on to the committee and the committee will in turn pass it on to the committee. What course the committee will take, I cannot say. But you may quote me as making the statement that we have the utmost faith in the members of the committee."

We were awed by the complexity of the situation.

"What," we gasped, "will be the eventual outcome?"

"Eventually," declared the Dean, "the committee will make a report."

"And what will happen to this report?"

"This report will be handed back to the committee, which will read it and in turn hand it back to the committee."

"And what will this report be called?"

"This report will be called the Report of the Committee on Investigation of Committees on the Report of the Committee to Investigate the Committee to Investigate the Committee on Investigation of Committees."

We felt a clammy substance breaking out on our forehead.

"And then what will happen?"

"The committee will make a report . . . And I may say that we have the utmost faith in the committee in the matter of making reports."

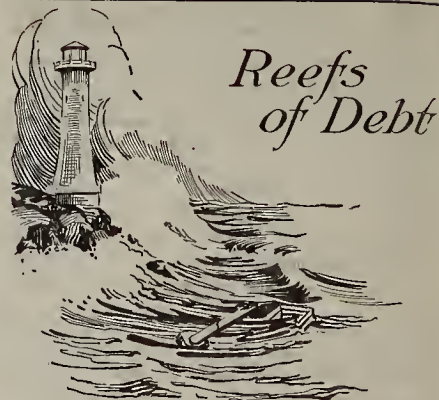

"What will happen to this report?"

"It will follow the usual procedure. Everything must be done decently and in order."

"But what about the committee?"

"Oh, yes! the committee! . . . Well, finally the committee will make a report on the committee . . ."

We staggered to the door. Raising our hand to our forehead, we felt it wet and cold. It was clammy with the mildew of discretion.

SUBSIDIZED SPORTS VIEWED IN FUTURE

Advices Salaries to Players As Aid to Efficiency in Games

Special to "The Varsity"

Norman, Okla.—The public must decide soon a change in athletic policies in universities and colleges, W. A. Adams, dean of the College of Business Administration, at the University of Oklahoma, said recently.

Athletes will be placed on an openly commercial basis within 10 years unless steps are taken immediately against hidden commercials," Adams predicted.

The Oklahoman condemned the recent policy adopted by schools after the Carnegie report for each to "clean its own house". He referred to this action as the "humorous self-whitewashing of schools in the Big Six Conference."

"The best way to get super-football teams out of universities is to pay the players salaries. If the public believes college institutions should be educational, then athletics should be handled in a way that would make sports subordinate to education, or athletics should be severed from university life and allowed to take its place among sports already made professional.

To prevent open commercialization Adams made the following five suggestions:

1. Faculty members should predominate on the athletic board of the university and the athletic budget should be brought under strict control.
2. No student or prospective athlete should be employed by the athletic board.
3. Athletic staffs should be made up of physical education teachers rather than coaches of the various athletic teams.
4. Education in number of intercollegiate contests in each major sport

ANNUAL ARTS PARTY AT SAINT MICHAEL'S IS FESTIVE OCCASION

Students and Professors Scintillate in Lengthy Toast List

COLLEGE HISTORY RE-TOLD

First to Join With University and Provide Incentive for Other Colleges

St. Michael's College arts banquet of 1930 became a matter of history last evening. A toast list, witty and distinguished, held the attention of the guests after Virron Kennedy, president of 370, and toastmaster, had proposed the toast to the king.

The members of the graduating class had their fortunes told by Gerald Gallagher, 370, who proposed the toast to them. With a dry humour he reviewed the rise and fall of college clubs. Dan Sullivan, 370, replied.

Two Dunnville men, Leo Leaver, 371, and Frank Hyde, 372, proposed and answered the toast to the senior football team. Both were well applauded.

Will Ford, 372, in his best style, proposed the toast to the Mulock Cup team. He commented on the addition of basketball uniforms to their variegated garb. Fred Anderson, 372, replied. (Continued on page 4)

DOORS OF PRESS OPEN ON TIME, IS CLAIMED

Store Hours Arranged to Meet Convenience of Student Customers

BEST SERVICE, LEAST COST

"The University Press opens at 8.45 a.m. for the convenience of students who have nine o'clock lectures and does not close until 5.15 p.m., for those who have five o'clock lectures," said R. J. Hamilton, manager of the University Press when interviewed by "The Varsity" regarding a letter that appeared in yesterday's edition, complaining that the Press did not open in time to procure books for nine o'clock lectures.

Mr. Hamilton explained that he did not ask his selling staff to punch a clock and thus they were allowed a little more freedom than the rest of his staff in their working hours. However, he assured "The Varsity" that the Press Room existed to give the students the best possible service at the least cost and that it was only because of an unfortunate street car delay that the Press Room was not open as usual at 8.45 a.m.

S.A.C. Fees to be Changed

The Joint Executive has decided to make the following change in the S.A.C. fees, subject to the approval of the Finance Committee of the Board of Governors.

Instead of the four dollar annual fee, each undergraduate will be charged two dollars a year except in the fourth year, when the fee will be six dollars. Under this plan a student will not be obliged to pay for Toronto unless he graduates.

VICTORIA UNIVERSITY PREPARES WELCOME FOR NEW CHANCELLOR

Inauguration to be Marked by Impressive Ceremonies and Gala Reception

COLOURFUL EVENT

Delegates From Sixty-five Other Universities to be Present

This Friday Victoria University is inaugurating as new chancellor the Rev. E. W. Wallace. Rev. Wallace is succeeding Rev. R. P. Bowles, who has been chancellor since 1913.

As Dr. Wallace is the fourth chancellor which Victoria University has had, his inauguration is quite an event. Accordingly a splendid program has been arranged for Thursday and Friday in connection with the retirement of Chancellor Bowles and the inauguration of Chancellor-elect Wallace. The program is as follows:

Thursday, Jan. 30th
7.30 p.m.—Complimentary dinner to Rev. R. P. Bowles, retiring chancellor.
Friday, Jan. 31st
10.00 a.m.—Chapel service for staff and students.

11.00-1.00 p.m.—Registration of delegates in Victoria College.

1.30 p.m.—Luncheon in Burwash Hall for delegates given by the Board of Regents.

4.00-6.00 p.m.—Reception in honour of Chancellor-elect and Mrs. Wallace in Victoria College.

8.00 p.m.—The Senate, the delegates and the invited guests assemble in Simcoe Hall.

8.15 p.m.—Inauguration of Rev. E. W. Wallace in Convocation Hall.

Invitations have been issued to the student body of the Victoria University for both the reception in the afternoon and the inauguration service in the evening. The public is invited to the inauguration in the evening.

Delegates are coming from sixty-five important colleges and universities in Canada and the United States. The whole ceremony promises to be the most colourful in the history of Victoria University.

MEDICAL AT-HOME WILL BE HELD TO-MORROW

One Event to Replace Former Junior and Senior At-Homes

The annual medical at-home will be held in the convention floor of the Royal York Hotel to-morrow evening. In place of the former junior and senior medical at-homes, the Medical Society has decided to have but one event of this nature this year. It is the belief of the committee that in this way, by combining all the years, a much better time can be given.

The convention floor will be decorated by Japanese lanterns and special lighting effects will feature the evening. A sit-down supper will be served in the banquet hall at 11.45. Dancing will begin at 9.15, and novelties will be an added feature of the dance.

It is expected that there will be 300 couples present. There are still several tickets available at the medical office.

The medical at-home is being given under the patronage of Mrs. Graham, Mrs. Primrose, Mrs. Bruce and Mrs. Best.

Abolish Advisory Board, Give 'Varsity' Seat On Joint Executive of Students' Council; Are Suggestions of Investigation Committee

Dean DeLury, Provost Cosgrave and Dean McMurrich Are Strongly in Favour of Reform of Student Government

COMMITTEE MAKES FOUR RECOMMENDATIONS

Two Members of the Permanent Teaching Staff of University To Be Appointed by Sir Robert To Executive

The Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Councils last night considered the report of the committee of investigation that was appointed to probe student government at the university as a result of the charges levelled in "The Varsity" last year that the students were not conducting their own affairs, but were being ruled by the Board of Governors through non-permanent members of the teaching staff of the university. The committee's report was referred by the Joint Executive to the general councils with suggestions. The committee which consists of three members, A. T. DeLury, Dean of Arts, Provost F. H. Cosgrave of Trinity College and J. P. McMurrich, dean of the School of Graduate Studies, submitted a report that contains matter that the Joint Executive sees eye to eye with but for one exception. Last year "The Varsity" claimed that W. J. Dunlop, a non-teaching member of the university staff, had worked towards the control of "The Varsity", and had influenced student government unduly. As a result the investigation committee suggests that only members of the permanent teaching staff of the university be appointed by the president. On that clause the Joint Executive does not agree and refers it to the councils with the suggestion that the committee of investigation is wrong.

The four recommendations are as follows:

(1) That the Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Councils of the University of Toronto be made responsible to the Students' Administrative Councils, reporting at regular intervals to each of the Councils.

(2) That the Editor of "The Varsity" and the Editor of Torontonensis be members of the Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Councils, but shall not have the right to vote at Meetings of the same.

(3) That the Advisory Board of Student Publications be discontinued and its work assigned to the Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Councils.

(4) That the two Staff members appointed annually by the President of the University under Clause IV, subsection 4, of the Constitution of the Joint Executive, be members of the permanent Teaching Staff of the University.

The introduction to the report is as follows:

The Committee to which was referred certain questions concerning Student Government in the University of Toronto has held several meetings and conferences with past and present members of the Councils and Editors of "The Varsity", as well as with others who offered suggestions or might seem to have suggestions to offer.

(1) The Student Body has necessarily a very complex character segregated as it is, more or less, into various Faculties and Colleges, each with its own traditions and rights, and including both male and female members whose interests differ in many particulars. To secure a body truly representative of student opinion these various units must be recognized and in the endeavour to do so the organization of the Students' Councils has become exceedingly complicated. At present there is a Men's Administrative Council, a Women's Administrative Council, a Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Councils and an Advisory Board of Publications.

(2) The first three of these organizations are necessary under existing conditions, but from evidence submitted it seemed to your Committee that the Joint Executive is not sufficiently responsible to the bodies which it represents and from which it is constituted, namely, the Men's and Women's Administrative Councils. In practice its actions are virtually uncontrolled by the Administrative Councils, and it is difficult to see how the Councils could exercise control without serious loss of time in the transaction of the business of the Joint Executive. Your Committee would suggest, however, that a report of all actions of the Joint Executive should be made at regular intervals to the Students' Administrative Councils and that the Councils be requested to consider the possibility of securing a still greater amount of responsibility of the Joint Executive to its parent organizations.

(3) By the Constitution of the Joint Executive the publication of "The Varsity" is made one of the duties of that body and the Constitution of "The Varsity" sets forth that "The Varsity" shall be the official newspaper and organ of the Students of the University of Toronto and shall be the property of the Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Councils. It seems clear from these statements that the Editor of "The Varsity" is directly, and the Staff indirectly, responsible to the Joint Executive for the conduct of the paper and for making it truly representative of student opinion. Your Committee feels that these responsibilities of the Editor and Joint Executive

CHAIRMAN JOINT EXECUTIVE DISAPPOINTED IN REPORT

"The Joint Executive appreciates the work of the committee and is willing and eager to co-operate. But how is the Joint Executive to be made responsible?" asked A. H. "I realize the difficulties under which the committee has worked, but after a year and some days I had hoped for something more definite."

LEO SMITH TO PLAY AT W.U.A. MUSICAL

U. C. Women Invite Other Faculties to Hear 'Cellist

INTERESTING PROGRAM

"Come one, come all! Come flocking!" is the slogan of the W.U.A. musicale for next Sunday, Feb. 2, at 4 o'clock, at the Women's Union. Much interest has been roused in the guest-artist, Mr. Leo Smith, Mus.Bac., who is widely known as probably the outstanding 'cellist of Toronto. Although the musicale is under the auspices of University College women, it will not be too exclusive; members of other faculties are welcome to take advantage of this great opportunity.

Mr. Smith will include in his programme numbers such as the "Sonata in G minor" by Marcelle, the "Kol Nidrei" of Max Bruch, and will close with a group which is certain to be popular, "Spanish Serenade" by Glazounov, Hahn's "The Willow Tree", and "The Fountain" by Davidoff.

Press Club Meets To-day

The University Press Club will have a luncheon meeting to-day at 1 p.m. in the North Common Room, Hart House. The speaker will be W. H. Goodman, city editor of the Mail and Empire. He will discuss city news gathering and answer questions by the members.

REPLIES ARE MADE BY JOINT EXECUTIVE

Answer Given to Four Clauses in Report of Investigation Committee

The recommendations of the Joint Executive to the Students' Councils are as follows:

Recommendation I.—

The Joint Executive feels that it is already responsible to the two student councils as far as it is feasible, and in any case the Joint Executive feels that this recommendation should be passed upon by the other two councils rather than by the Joint Executive.

Recommendation II.—

The Joint Executive concurs and, provided that the other two councils approve, the constitution will be altered accordingly.

Recommendation III.—

The Joint Executive concurs also.

Recommendation IV.—

The Joint Executive regrets that it does not see the necessity to limit the President's choice in this manner. It has every confidence in the wisdom of the President in making these appointments. Furthermore the Joint Executive has been so splendidly served in the past by a staff member not on the permanent teaching staff that it could not support such a recommendation.

OUR GOVERNMENT

The report of the investigation committee on student government instigated last year as the result of the charges of "The Varsity" has reached the stage of coming before the Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Councils. It is a short report and although bound to be disappointing to many has marks of an attempt to solve the troubles of student government and rights of "The Varsity".

To say that the report places "The Varsity" in the peculiar position of being a mouthpiece of the Joint Executive is putting it mildly. If the third clause of the introduction is not taken out of the constitution, it makes "The Varsity" the hireling of the body that sits as the student council and takes away that much-valued function that the student paper has always had of expressing the opinions of the editor and not necessarily the opinions of the student council. In their own words the editor of "The Varsity" is "directly responsible to the Joint Executive to make it truly representative of student opinion". It takes away any character the student paper has, for it may happen on many occasions that the student paper has opinions different to those of the majority of the students, and it is desirable in many cases that these opinions be untrammelled. If that clause is not struck out of the constitution, it will be the death knell of the student paper as an organ of fairness and will make it deteriorate into a flabby, innocuous sheet that is completely controlled by majority opinion at the university.

On the question of the four definite recommendations, we stand behind the committee that consists of members whose opinions must be considered as fair and quite conservative. They have given mature consideration to the questions and, although a trifle vague in some parts, have hit upon the important phases of the trouble.

With the question of making the Joint Executive completely responsible to the student body we agree heartily. It is good sound practice that makes the executive body responsible to the elected body as a whole. Any mistakes made by the Joint Executive can be checked up by the elected student body, and should be; otherwise the student voters have a group that is independent. What is very important, a large body is less easily influenced than a small one.

Concerning the placing of the editor of "The Varsity" and Torontonensis on the Joint Executive ex-officio, there is a point of difference. The editor of Torontonensis does not express his opinions in print and therefore should not have the privilege accorded to "The Varsity". It should be his, however, if he is not put there to counter-balance any strength the editor of "The Varsity" may have with the student executives.

Last year the Advisory Board of student publications was not consulted on the question of firing the editor and showed that it had no power when the emergency came. To abolish it however, would put too much power in the hands of the members of the Joint Executive and in a case such as "The Varsity" it would be far better if the strength of the one body were divided.

The fourth and final recommendation we agree with wholeheartedly and find that we must spurn the Joint Executive's suggestion to throw it out. The question of having a publicity director sit on the student executive was one of the bones of contention last year and was an important point in the investigation committee's considerations. If the student councils throw out that clause as the joint body suggests the committee might as well not have functioned.

The claim that to limit the president in the field of appointments of members to the joint body is a reflection on the president is pure piffle. The joint body suggests that the president ought to appoint whom he likes and that to suggest otherwise is to cast a slur on Sir Robert. Surely the body that looked over the report last night does not suggest that Dean DeLury, Provost Cosgrave and Dean McMurrich have no confidence in the president. The committee of investigation felt that a man in close touch with the students should be appointed and not a director of extension, and we are certain that they felt it was a move of great importance or they would not have taken it. Both the men's and women's councils should see that the recommendation four is passed, for in that lies the crux of the trouble. To erase the third section of the constitution that suppresses freedom of opinion in "The Varsity" is the duty of every member of the councils, for to muffle the student newspaper is to muffle the student body.

Art and Drama

M.C. Players' Guild

"Gruach", Gordon Bottomley's prologue to "Macbeth", was the offering of Mr. Paul Gardner yesterday afternoon at the Players' Guild. Personally, I had thought that last year's attempt at "King Lear's Wife" had demonstrated beyond the shadow of a doubt that this sort of thing is just a bit too heavy for one of the Guild's weekly productions. If not, yesterday's ought to be conclusive.

Yet, with one or two exceptions, the cast was well chosen; and, although there was a tendency to load all the characters on one side of the stage, the direction was reasonably sound. The main trouble seemed to be that the players didn't know their lines and that they didn't have much idea of where they were supposed to be at any given time. This had a distinctly bewildering effect on the audience and led to one or two unconsciously amusing situations which were not in the script.

Miss Patricia Godfrey, as Gruach, was almost flawless. Somebody ought to give her the part of Lady Macbeth for the heroic battle she put up yesterday against atrocious support—or lack of it. As a matter of fact, I am firmly of the opinion that she could play Lady Macbeth, not only well but triumphantly. Without her there would have been no "Gruach" yesterday afternoon.

If Mr. Earl Fauman had had some idea of what his part was about, his undoubted ability and experience would have showed to good effect. But unfortunately he didn't. A Macbeth with ninety per cent. of his attention riveted on the prompter is not an inspired Macbeth.

Of the other players, Miss Constance Shiell and Miss Rhea McCoubrey were the best.

Hates Talkies

Editor,
"The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

May I be allowed the space in your paper to express a student's opinion. I have recently been very pleased with the new life "The Varsity" seems to have taken on and it is therefore with much regret that I pen this article.

A.E.F.A., in commenting on the talkie, "The Love Parade", presents so radical a view to my own that I must question it. It may be a small affair, but if it keeps away even one person from the show I will feel that my effort is justified.

It may be the fault of youthfulness in this special science, but in my humble opinion, the talkies, as represented by "The Love Parade", have run away with themselves. I have never seen so much money so foolishly, so unreasonably and uselessly thrown away in one picture. For a would-be director, even with the name of Ernst Lubitsch, to waste the undoubted talents of the special characters in the way he did (to use the words of A.E.F.A.) pained me.

To term this "One of the best things the talking screen has produced so far" is about on a par with calling A.E.F.A. a mature movie critic. I hope the granting of a pass or a free tickets to your cohorts does not blind them in their judgments. If so perhaps "The Varsity" could pay for the tickets, then the student body would get an unbiased account of their amusements.

In conclusion I realize that dramatic criticism of any sort gives room for a diversity of opinion. The above is merely my own. I do not wish publicity nor wish to be dragged into any correspondence with your critic. White is white and black is black and no exchange of letters are needed to clarify the situation.

Yours,

TRUTH.

est to Truth to know that "The Varsity" contains the only criticism in Toronto that is not biased by the advertising department's attitude. The only rule we lay down to our critics is to be honest. Our critics have always been so, even uncomfortably so. As soon as they cease to give their honest opinions, they cease to be members of the staff.

McMASTER CAGERS DEFEAT VARSITY COEDS' HOCKEY TEAM LOSES TO PATS

Excellent Baptist Marksman Make Most of Every Opportunity

GROOME SCORES 18 POINTS

Varsity basketballers went down to defeat before McMaster University 39 to 26 in their opening game of the intercollegiate schedule at Central Y.M.C.A. last night. The Baptist quintet revealed the results of Coach Bob Abate's tutoring and clearly outclassed the Blue and White in last night's exhibition. McMaster has a team of excellent marksman who break with sensational bursts of speed to get in close for shots, leaving their guards flat-footed. The fast Bloor Street aggregation made the "T" players look extremely slow at times.

All of McMaster's counters came from under the basket, while, though the Blue players took a greater number of shots at the cage, the majority of them came from outside the McMaster defence. Varsity was unfortunate not to drop more of their set-shots and many of Carr's and Collins' shots just missed the hoop. However, their inability to round the Baptist defence and to hold the fast opposing forwards spelled their downfall. Time and again the passes of the locals were intercepted and McMaster made the most of every opportunity to break away for a shot.

With only a few minutes left and Varsity 10 points down, the Blue and White forwards endeavoured to overcome the lead with a barrage of long shots. Collins and Sobel were successful in netting a few but meanwhile McMaster was maintaining its end.

Varsity—Forwards, Collins (10), Carr (6); centre, Douglas (2); defence, Calderon (2), Graham (2); Buchanan, Sobel (6), Riley.

McMaster—Forwards, Reynolds (7), Patterson (9); centre, Groome (18); defence, B. Widden (1), Leamen (3); spares, Mitchnick, H. Widden (1), Clark.

The first game of the Varsity Juniors in their play-off for the Big Four group will be played at the Varsity Arena on Friday, Jan. 31st and the second game at the Arena Gardens on the following Monday. This is not a Varsity home game, but students will be admitted to the usual Student Section on presentation of 25c and Coupon No. 19.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Varsity will open its intercollegiate basketball series when McCutcheon's men invade London Saturday to meet the Western Mustangs. The Purple and White were defeated by McGill and Queen's in their first two games and will be fighting with their backs to the wall. Varsity has shown good form in their exhibition games and should return to Toronto with their first intercollegiate game on the right side of the ledger.

* * *

The University of Toronto International Water Polo League septet leave to-night to play New York A.C. in New York Friday and Penn A.C. in Philadelphia Saturday. New York showed considerable superiority over the locals in their game here, but M.A.A.A. beat the Americans in Montreal and the latter just managed to nose out the Blue in their game at Montreal. If Varsity can get the jump on the U.S. champions there is a possibility that the latter will be forced to take a defeat right in their own pool.

* * *

With the Senior Assault commencing next Wednesday night the B. W. and F. men are putting the finishing touches to their training for the big event. There are going to be some red-hot bouts in classes where several first-rate men are competing for the desired place on the intercollegiate team.

* * *

Varsity Arena to-morrow night will be the battle-ground in the first game of the Big Four play-off. Parkdale Canoe Club and Varsity are two evenly-matched sextets and it is mighty hard to call the winner. Varsity have played good hockey in their last two contests and if they can keep up the high standard of play will make matters hot for the Sunnyside crew.

* * *

Saturday night—Varsity Arena—Nationals and Varsity. Game for O.H.A. leadership. Last meeting of Sea Fleas and Blue: 2-2, thirty minutes overtime. Nuff said!

* * *

The first eliminations from the women's senior basketball squad took place at Tuesday night's practice. Coach Marion Forward is keeping twelve players with the first team for the present although she will finally have to cut it down to nine.

* * *

Those who are being kept with the seniors are: Wilma Hazlitt, Lolise Crouch, Eleanor Sedgewick, Sally Ballard, Willie Ann Luckett, Marion Henderson, as forwards; Norma Bateman, Edythe Peake, Honor Tett, Jean Allen, Frances Dale and Isobel Wright as defence. The first three named are practically sure of the regular forward positions so Sally Ballard, Willie Ann Luckett and Marion Henderson will be fighting it out for the substitute shooting position. Of the six defence named five will be kept with the team and what a battle it will be before those five are chosen!

* * *

All those not kept with the first squad are asked to turn out with the intermediates. There is still a real chance for any player who does outstanding work with the second squad to be moved up to the seniors. There has been very little scrimmaging as yet and some of the players have not had much chance to show what they can do. However, some kind of a cut had to be made because the squad was too large and unwieldy for a coach to get any kind of results in practices. The intermediates will practice with the seniors to-night at six o'clock at U.T.S.

* * *

Varsity women's hockey team has yet to break into the win column. Last night it went down to defeat before Pats, last year's title holders. The combination of the blue and white girls was much improved but their team work still leaves much to be desired.

* * *

Household Science won the swimming meet quite easily last night and Margot MacDonald, formerly on the U.C. team, won the individual championship. University College was unfortunate in that three of its stars did not compete. Mary Wyndow, who is in charge of the swimming at U.C., is ill in bed with a cold, and Betty Holton was called to Hamilton because her mother was hurt in a motor accident.

HOUSEHOLD SCIENCE DEFEATS U.C. TEAM

Swimming Meet Interesting Event Due to Novelty Races and Individual Scores

NEW TEAM HAS ABILITY

At the combined U.C.-Household Science swimming meet held at the U.T.S. pool last night, the newly formed Household Science team displayed their ability by piling up 40 points to U.C.'s 33. The winners captured first and second places in individual scores, Margot MacDonald gaining 21 and Beulah Hutner 11 points and Helen McGibbon and Gertrude Johnson, U.C., tying of a third place with 10 points. Both the novelty races and the ornamental swimming particularly added to the evening's interest.

The results of the events were as follows:
Plunge—1, Beulah Hutner, H.S.; 2, U.C. 59 4-5 sec.

58'; 2, Jean Allen, U.C., 54' 3"; 3, Margot MacDonald, H.S., 53' 4".
Breast Stroke—1, Margot MacDonald, U.C., 14 3-5 sec; 2, Louise Crouch, U.C., 16 4-5 sec; 3, Beth Bertram, 17 sec.

Novelty Balloon Race—1, Florence Cummings, H.S.; 2, Gertrude Johnson, U.C.; 3, Louise Crouch, U.C.

Free Style—1, Margot MacDonald, H.S., 26 3-5 sec; 2, Ruth Levin, U.C., 31 3-5 sec; 3, Louise Crouch, U.C., 32 1-5 sec.

Diving—1, Helen McGibbon, U.C.; 2, Jean Allen, U.C.; 3, Wilma Hazlitt, U.C.

Side Stroke—1, Margot MacDonald, H.S., 14 1-5 sec; 2, Grace Cooley, H.S., 14 3-5 sec; 3, Louise Crouch, U.C., 15 3-5 sec.

Novelty (blindfold)—1, Florence Cummings, H.S.; 2, Grace Cooley, H.S.; 3, Muriel Quinn, H.S.

Back Stroke—1, Margot MacDonald, H.S., 16 sec; 2, Grace Cooley, H.S., 17 4-5 sec; 3, Ruth Levin, U.C., 19 sec.

Ornamental Swimming—1, Gertrude Johnson, U.C.; 2, Beulah Hutner, H.S.; 3, Wilma Hazlitt, U.C.

Relay—1, Household Science, 54 3-5 sec.

DENTS STRUGGLE WEAKLY AGAINST PHARMACY LEAD

Entire Substitute Team Brings
Final Score to 19-10

Pharmacy defeated Dents 19-10 in a junior interfaculty basketball fixture played yesterday afternoon at Hart House. The affair was a poor exhibition of the sport, the players lending themselves to individual efforts. The score is a good indication of the play.

Pharmacy's superiority was more evident in the first half than in the second, when they outscored their opponents 14-2. However, Dents scored in a team composed entirely of substitutes and they were able to regain lost ground in the first ten minutes of the second half as they made the score 16-8. The Dent regulars went in at five minutes to go and each team added two points to their total.

Hern and Skurko were the pick of the Pharmacists, while Wright, Stewart and Stafford were the pick of the dents.

Pharmacy—Hern, Skurko, Wadland, Fox, Walsh, Norris, Russell, Cameron, Smith, Beckett.

Dents—Ashton, Stratford, Shaver, Stewart, Stafford, Dixon, Ward, Brett, Kahn, Wright.

HOCKEY VICTORY FOR KNOX

Knox defeated Wycliffe last night on the west cushion 2-1 in the interfaculty hockey series. The game was fast throughout. There was not, however, even a semblance of scientific hockey in the playing of either team. Both Knox and Wycliffe relied on rushes to yield them tallies, and there was absolutely no combination in the game. A good brand of clean hockey was displayed, however.

For the winners Jack, D. Davidson, Stewart, Green and Boyd were the best players and played a steady, consistent game. Stewart scored the winning tally after a clever rush through the Wycliffe team. He was not able, however, to repeat. D. Davidson accounted for the other score for Knox. For Wycliffe Rich, Wood, Perkins and Draper were outstanding. Perkins was responsible for Wycliffe's lone tally.

Knox—Barelay, Green, Boyd, Coleman, Baugh, K. Davidson. Subs, D. Davidson, Jack, Stewart.

Wycliffe—Stringer, Morrisay, Rich, Wood, Perkins, Draper. Subs, Boon, Baker, Hawks.

The Table Round

THE COLLEGE AGE

What is the logical age for entering university? A. L. Lowell, president of Harvard University, thinks sixteen is the ideal age. Statistics show that the average age of entrance there is at present over seventeen. He and others whose views coincide assert that luminaries of past centuries were B.A. scholars at fourteen, and insist that there is too much molly-coddling in the educational systems of to-day.

On the other hand, certain people are convinced the present college student is too young and that more mature minds are a necessary requisite to a well-balanced university. To set any definite age smacks to me too much of the mass production idea which predominates in big business today. Every intellect is not of exactly the same calibre; some are more intelligent at fourteen than others at twenty; some will never rise above the mentality of a child. According to the maturity and the knowledge of the student should be the age at which he enters college.

P.E.U.

PROHIBITION

In an ironical sketch in the latest Atlantic Monthly, prohibition is defended. Typical of the arguments advanced by the writer is his contention that the accessibility of liquor has prevented the break-up of the American home. He pictures the desolation which would spread through New York upon the abolition of the 18th Amendment, with the proprietors of over one thousand speak-easies and saloons thrown out of work, and their wives and families in danger of starvation.

Altogether, it seems to be the topic of the hour, and is finding plentiful space in both newspapers and magazines across the line. The shooting and killing of innocent citizens by enforcement officers has provided fodder for the contestants, and the battle rages with unabated fury. But—and this is typical of the United States—nothing is done.

should be emphasized and that they may be made effective it is suggested that the Editor of "The Varsity" be made a member Ex-officio of the Joint Executive, but that, as a salaried officer, he should have no vote.

(4) Inasmuch as the Editor of Torontonensis occupies a position analogous to that of the Editor of "The Varsity", the Committee recommends that he be Ex-officio a member of the Joint Executive without the right to vote.

(5) A factor that has tended to obscure the real seat of responsibility for "The Varsity" in the Joint Executive is the statement in the Constitution of "The Varsity" that "It shall be responsible to the Advisory Board of Publications". Your Committee is of the opinion that this Board, since it is merely advisory in function, cannot properly assume nor exercise the responsibility thrust upon it and its existence merely beclouds the situation. It is accordingly recommended that this Board be discontinued, whatever duties it had to perform being transferred to the Joint Executive, or to a Committee thereof which should include the Editors of "Varsity" and Torontonensis and the Faculty Members.

(6) The Committee is also of the opinion that it is highly desirable that the two members of the Staff appointed to the Joint Executive by the President of the University should be persons who are in close touch with the student body and in a position properly to appreciate its viewpoints on the various questions that may arise. It is recommended therefore that these appointees be selected from the active teaching staff.

ST. MICHAEL'S ARTS PARTY

ferred to the team's efforts for forty years to win the cup. Sir William would soon give it to St. Michael's as a consolation prize.

The toast to the university was proposed in a serious vein by Dan Walsh, 370. He pointed out the benefits of federation and the pass course, and lauded Hart House. Professor J. T. MacDonald of University College, in replying, told of his lack of religious prejudice inherited from Glengarry. Conditions had been bad at Kingston for a while. In 1860 the Prince of Wales could not land because the Irish Catholics and Orangemen were fighting as to which were to lead the procession. He deplored the dullness of present day convocations. "The so-called flaming youth is like a cigarette lighter," he said, "it never gets started." After being here four years he could spot a Trinity and St. Michael's man but not a U.C. or Victoria undergrad.

Father John E. Burke, C.S.P., spoke briefly and forcefully. "You are the accredited representatives of Catholicism and much has been expended on your behalf by parents and teachers." C. J. Daly, 371, in a capable and analytical manner proposed the toast to Michael's.

CHANCELLOR BOWLES DWELLS ON FREEDOM BEYOND CURRICULUM

Speaks of University's Worth But Says There Is Something More

TENDERED BANQUET

President Pays Fine Tribute to Retiring Head's Personality

"It is true that the knowledge we seek is well worth acquiring and giving to people, and, happily, our university is well arranged for the search and dissemination of such knowledge," stated Chancellor Bowles of Victoria College, at the dinner to honour him upon the occasion of his retirement.

"But after all I believe that there is something beyond that of greater account. We have a curriculum that compasses in its length, breadth and height, our entire activities; we have a time-table, and a system of measurements whereby we can discern to the minutest degree the knowledge that any student possesses. But beyond all these, we must have freedom, freedom, I say, in the creation of personality and fostering of the culture of the soul."

"I have a very great and thorough-going belief in student activities, although they range from boisterous athletics to—and, I suppose, equally boisterous—teas at Wymilwood. Happy indeed is the professor who has the entire to the informal discussions that ever spring up among students. And happy he who can entice the student into his study (for they are naturally shy in their relations to the professor) and talk to him with sympathy and understanding."

Chancellor Bowles went on to touch on one's love of beauty. "It is one of our most noble and elevating joys, whether it be the beauty of nature, the beauty of art or architecture that comes into our hearts and entralls us."

Mr. A. E. Ames, member of the Board of Regents of Victoria University, presided at the dinner in the Great Hall of Hart House. Tribute was paid to Chancellor Bowles by his associates in every line of endeavour.

Sir Robert Falconer, president of the university, paid glowing tribute to Chancellor Bowles. "He is one of the stalwart figures and eminent and outstanding personalities of the University of Toronto. He carries with him the consciousness of having done a very difficult piece of work in a remarkably efficient manner. He has contributed very largely to make the university a happy family."

Literary Issue

Artists! Writers! Poets! Prepare to exercise your talents. "The Varsity" is offering $70 in prizes in a literary supplement which is to appear on Monday, Feb. 17. Poetry, prose and drawings will be accepted for this contest. Classification for awards will be announced shortly; substantial prizes will be awarded in each section.

All material must be handed in to "The Varsity" by 1 o'clock, Thursday, February 13, either at the News Office in Hart House, or at the Women's Office in University College. The judges are N. A. Benson, M.A., and P. E. Usher, B.A.

Publications Board Meets To Consider

A meeting of the Advisory Board of Student Publications called by T. V. Kennedy, the chairman, at the request of the Editor of "The Varsity" will be held to-day at 5 p.m. to consider the action of Allan H. Ferry in suppressing "The Varsity" without the authority of the Board or Student Councils.

DEGREE WON'T CINCH NEWSPAPER SUCCESS

'Mail' City Editor Tells Club Graduate Must Serve Apprenticeship

LIBEL LAWS DISCUSSED

"The young student with a flare for writing cannot expect to step into a high-salaried position on a newspaper as soon as he graduates," said W. H. Goodman, city editor of the Mail and Empire at the Press Club luncheon yesterday. "He is in the same position as the law student who is forced to serve a rigorous apprenticeship and fight his way to the top even after his graduation from Osgoode Hall. He will only win success at the price of innumerable disappointments and hardships."

"A university degree cannot guarantee him immediate or lasting success in any kind of business. But it does give him a fixed objective and prepares him to reach it by the quickest means possible. When he has reached it, he must either hold his position or aspire higher upon the merits of his own ability."

When the meeting was thrown open for discussion, Mr. Goodman answered questions and discussed problems in journalism with the members. The law of libel, place of common sense in newspaper work, the radio as an aid to journalism were aptly demonstrated.

COMIC STRIP MAKER SEEN IN VICTOR HUGO

Professor MacKellar Declares Author Had Insane Pictures

"Victor Hugo would be a good comic strip maker," said Professor H. S. McKellar, University College, yesterday afternoon in West Hall in his lecture on Victor Hugo. "Hugo, the artist, rivals Hugo the author," said Mr. McKellar. "He thought in pictures and his literary mind is revealed in pictures. His pictures resemble insane persons. Their faces are freakish and weird. Hugo's brother and daughter went insane. His imagination was a high-powered car with defective brakes."

Professor McKellar witnessed the presentation of Hugo's dramas in the Comedie Francaise, when the Hugo society celebrated his anniversary. Four days of drama led Mr. McKellar to exclaim, "How long, oh Hugo, wilt thou abuse our patience!"

"Hugo's love of contrast was his mental permanent wave," said the professor, "but he had no sense of humour," he continued. "He makes a grammarian commit suicide trying to discover why Jupiter became Jovis in the gentile."

Dislikes Headline, Stops Press to Write Own; W. J. Dunlop Declares Streamer to be "Obvious Interpretation of Report" Issued by Committee

Action Taken Without Consulting Executive or Advisory Board; Latter To Meet To-day at Request of Editor To Discuss Ferry's Action

PRESIDENT OF S.A.C. DECLARES HEAD UNTRUE

Editor's Protest Unavailing When "The Varsity" Called Out of Circulation for First Time in History of Student Paper

By P. E. Usher

For the first time in its history, "The Varsity" was called out of circulation yesterday while the President of the Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Council stopped the press and changed a streamer head. The original head "Urge W. J. Dunlop's Removal from Joint Council" was altered to read "Caput Committee on Student Government Reports". Then the press resumed, and "The Varsity" appeared with an entirely different headline.

A. H. Ferry admits that he changed the streamer on his own initiative. "That head is not true," he told the editor. The headline was based on the fourth recommendation of the committee appointed to investigate student government, which urges that "the two staff members appointed annually by the President of the University be members of the permanent teaching staff of the University." Mr. Dunlop is not a member of the permanent teaching staff of the University. The other staff member, S. Beatty, Professor of Mathematics, is on the permanent teaching staff.

"The headline is an obvious interpretation of the report," said W. J. Dunlop, Director of the Department of University Extension, when interviewed by the press. He declined to comment on the editorial, which endorsed the suggestion of the committee that the staff members be appointed only from the permanent teaching staff.

"The Varsity" was going through the press yesterday morning when A. Gordon Burns, Secretary-Treasurer of the Students' Administrative Council, noticed the original head in an early issue. He notified Mr. Ferry, who decided to take action. Having tried to get in touch with Lou Golden, editor of the paper, he met him just outside Hart House. It was then 11.10.

"You're the man," said A. Gordon Burns to the editor of "The Varsity", thrusting a copy of the paper into his face. Pointing to the headline, Mr. Ferry, who accompanied Mr. Burns, said, "This is untrue. We are going to change it."

"Good heavens! You don't intend to do that," said the editor. "Leave it. I take full responsibility for everything in the paper."

"The Joint Executive met and we are going to do it," said the president.

"Surely you didn't meet this morning," returned "The Varsity" editor.

"Well . . . we didn't meet this morning, but I'll take full responsibility for the change," answered A. H. Ferry.

He and Mr. Burns then proceeded to the press, where they re-wrote the streamer head.

Mr. Ferry declared to the press yesterday that he had made the change entirely on his own responsibility, that he had not consulted or been influenced by A. Gordon Burns, the paid secretary of the Students' Administrative Council, and that he would not call a meeting of the council to discuss his action unless the members demanded it.

"I maintain that the fact stated in the heading is not borne out by the story," said Mr. Ferry. "The editor, of course, has freedom to say whatever he pleases in the editorial columns, and I thought his editorial quite well written regardless of whether I agreed with it."

Mr. Ferry admitted that the statement in the heading might be "inferred" from the story.

"If 'The Varsity' criticizes my action to-morrow, as I anticipate, that is quite all right," said Mr. Ferry. "I shall do nothing about it."

At the request of the editor of "The Varsity", the Chairman of the Advisory Board of Student Publications, T. V. Kennedy, called a meeting of the body to consider the action of Mr. Ferry. As all the members could not be reached yesterday, the meeting will take place to-day at five o'clock.

DOESN'T SEE REASON BEHIND SUPPRESSION WITHOUT AUTHORITY

Member of Advisory Board of Student Publications Disapproves

OENOUNCES FERRY POLICY

Board Chairman in Interview Advises Replacement by Executive

Professors, as well as students, commented to "The Varsity" on the suppression by A. H. Ferry and A. G. Burns of the first issue of "The Varsity" yesterday which had the streamer, "Urge W. J. Dunlop's Removal From Joint Council".

"I don't see why this streamer should have been suppressed. It always is a bad policy to interfere with the press as A. H. Ferry did," said J. L. Burgess, also a member of the Advisory Board of Student Publications.

"You should get first hand information from the 'fountainhead'—Sir Robert Falconer," said Professor Young, member of the Advisory Board of Student Publications. "Of course that word 'urge' is a bit radical."

T. V. Kennedy, IV St. Mike's, the chairman of the Board said: "The Advisory Board has never done any real work yet and might as well be abolished. The Joint Executive should have the most power; after all the Students' Administrative Council doesn't get to understand properly all the business of the Joint Executive. If they had more say than the Joint Executive, there would always be a difference of opinion between the men and women, and hence no definite decision would be reached on many questions."

INVESTIGATORS MOOT CLAUSE FOUR INTENT

Questions of Policy Alone Under Consideration in Report

OEAN VOICES REGRET

The committee of investigation appointed to probe student government at the university contend that their recommendations were in no way personal, but were acts of policy.

Provost F. H. Cosgrave of Trinity College, a member of the committee, said, "In reducing faculty representation in student government from four to two as a consequence of the recommended abolition of the Advisory Board of Student Publications, we considered that these two faculty members should be persons in the closest possible touch with student life. Hence recommendation four of the report."

A. T. DeLury, Dean of the Faculty of Arts, supported his colleague with the following statement: "In making our report we had in mind the offering of suggestions that would seem to guard against a recurrence of the troubles of last year. We were thinking only of the future and of policy, not of persons."

"On that account I regret the headline in the suppressed edition and am surprised that the report was published in advance of its approval or (Continued on page 4)

Students' Tickets

Undergraduates who purchased athletic season tickets last term are wondering if they will be able to make use of the seventeen coupons that still remain. Mr. T. A. Reed, secretary-treasurer of the U. of T. Athletic Association stated that the coupons will admit students to any of the Jennings Cup games as well as the remaining intercollegiate events. "They are good for all games taking place in the arena," said Mr. Reed.

A SELF-APPOINTED SUPPRESSIONIST

In the long and eventful career of "The Varsity" nothing as high-handed as the action of Mr. Allan Ferry has taken place. Editors have been fired and violent objections have been raised concerning editorials in the student paper, but no body, let alone an individual, has taken upon itself the job of acting as suppressionist of the paper. To order the press stopped and write a headline himself because he did not like the one the editor had written is a step that has never been thought of by anybody until the accession to office of Mr. Ferry. The colossal gall of an individual member of the Joint Executive to set himself up as censor without the backing of the council can find no equal in the university's history. On his own admission he asked permission of no one to do the act and assume the role of judge of what the editor should write and what the students should read.

The president of the students' council at no time has had the right to say what should and should not be in the undergraduate paper. The editor is responsible to one body and that alone, the Advisory Board of Student Publications. Even in the hectic times of last year an attempt at suppression of "The Varsity" was never made in such an open and dictatorial manner as that made by the former fighter for the freedom of the editor. Certainly the Advisory Board cannot be overstepped by an individual who has puffed himself up to the importance of a college Mussolini.

The headline to which Mr. Ferry and Mr. Burns objected was a fair and "obvious interpretation of the report" as Mr. Dunlop himself told the press. How in the name of the common sense Mr. Ferry asks for can this individual graduate misinterpret the heading, when Mr. Dunlop himself is quite clear about it?

In the letter from Mr. Ferry that we publish to-day he claims that the headline was an attack on Mr. Dunlop. How in all fairness to himself and the writer of the headline can he say that? We have never met Mr. Dunlop and we have no quarrel with him, but it is the duty of the editor to write fair and just heads and interpret to the best of his ability whatever appears in the student paper. Can Mr. Ferry in all seriousness claim that the headline is an attack on the person who himself says it is an "obvious interpretation"? Perhaps Mr. Ferry will attempt to muffle the director of publicity because he does not interpret things as the self-appointed boss does.

The stopping of the press on his own strength is something that cannot be overlooked by the student council and the undergraduate body as a whole. If that step is permitted, how far are we away from another Mr. Ferry who will act as censor of all the matter in "The Varsity"? Because the chairman of the student executive dislikes something he stops the press and does as he desires to, why then should not that right be extended to any student at the university who is a genuine undergraduate and who perhaps objects to a dramatic revue or to a sport story or who thinks his picture should be in the paper and not that of somebody else?

Mr. Ferry, in the letter we print as submitted and uncensored, is certainly on the defensive and to set himself up as a legal expert is the final proof of his folly. An apology from the chairman of the joint executive is not enough, the students and "The Varsity" must be assured that an action so unfair and illegal as that taken by Allan Ferry will never recur.

To cover up his tracks by unfair statements in a letter is not what we expected of a man who is a graduate of this university. The editor of "The Varsity" had no say in changing the headline. When we met Mr. Ferry and Mr. Burns at the door of Hart House it was pointed out to us that the change would be made in the paper and no objections of ours could make them change their minds. Previously to our meeting with these two suppressionists of "The Varsity" the presses had been stopped and were waiting for their changes.

A point that the letter writer stresses is that he was unable to find the editor in the morning. Being at press until five fifteen in the morning and then attending nine o'clock and ten o'clock lectures is certainly excuse enough for being away from "The Varsity" office which we inhabit for eight to fourteen hours a day.

Correspondence

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

Mr. Ferry Writes

Editor,

"The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

Some explanation of my action as President of the Students' Council in stopping the issue of "The Varsity" this morning and changing the heading of the front page, is no doubt due to the student body.

At a meeting of the Joint Executive held Wednesday, January 29th, the report of the Committee appointed by the Caput to investigate Student Government in the University, came up for discussion. It was the largest attendance at a Joint Executive meeting which we have had for some time. The report, therefore, received very representative consideration. The question arose as to the correctness of releasing this report for publication before the Men's and Women's Students' Councils had the opportunity of discussing it. It was ultimately thought best to hand the report exclusively to the undergraduate newspaper so that all undergraduates would have an early opportunity of studying the report. It was felt by the Joint Executive that great care should be exercised by the representatives of the students to safeguard the report and those responsible for it from any wrong interpretation.

At the conclusion of the Joint Executive meeting I personally handed the report and gave a statement, as directed by the Joint Executive, to the representatives of "The Varsity", explaining to him our reason for keeping the report exclusively to the columns of the University paper.

This morning I got in touch with the Secretary-Treasurer and ascertained from him that a certain heading had appeared on the front page of "The Varsity", which, in my opinion, was not in keeping with the facts contained in the body of the report. I therefore, visited the Press room and saw the issue. It occurred to me at once that the heading was not only an untrue representation of a certain recommendation in the report, but in as much as no names were mentioned in the report the heading exposed the Joint Executive as owners of "The Varsity" to prosecution for libel. As Chairman of the Joint Executive, I was entrusted by the members with the responsibility for the issuing of this report and the interpretation of the Executive's opinions. I felt therefore that I could not permit the heading (Continued on page 3)

This is just a few lines from the boys at the house to let you know that we haven't forgotten you. We hear that you have been doing pretty well in business lately and haven't been arrested yet along with the other brokers. That's fine; keep up the good work.

What do you say about coming to a real big, bang up smoker at the house next Tuesday evening? We want all the big men of the alumnae to be present as we are going to talk over some plans for redecorating the chapter house.

Do you remember Brother Otto B. Hung, our president of '18? Well he dropped around the other night and looked the place over and decided that we needed some repairing and papering done. He has a big scheme to let the grads do their bit in the defraying of expenses. He has already given us a liberal donation. He told us for heavens sake to use it to buy a blind for the bathroom window as the neighbours are complaining that they have to keep their blinds drawn all the time on account of it.

Of course we don't want everything done right away but the dining room is in bad shape and needs immediate attention. Brother Hung says that the butter marks on the wall make it have a home-like atmosphere, but at the same time it cheapens the place. We covered them for a while with (Continued on page 4)

NEW SCORING PUNCH

Varsity juniors and Parkdale Canoe Club juniors hook up to-night in the first game of the Big Four group junior O.H.A. playoffs. The game will be played at the Varsity Arena starting at 8.15, with the return game on Monday night at the Arena Gardens, goals on the round to count.

The P.C.C. sextet finished on top of the group, but the Blue and White, due to a garrison finish, were a very close second. Both teams won six games, but the Canoeists had one less defeat, having a tie game with Marlboros to their credit.

The rearrangement of the Blue team has produced the desired effect of giving the team a scoring punch which came when it was most needed. Seven teen goals for and none against in the last two games would seem to show that the Blue and White outfit has not only regained its scoring punch, but is playing a pretty effective defensive game as well.

S.P.S. LEADS IN POINTS

Two more records were broken in the interfaculty track and field meet held in Hart House yesterday. The new records, which were set up should stand for years.

Fitzpatrick, S.P.S., sprinted a wonderful 220, in 23 seconds flat, taking four-fifths of a second off Charley Morrison's mark made in 1927. Ralph Adams, also of Schools, took second place, tying the old mark of 23 4-5. Gord Jermy of U.C., who broke the half mile record last week, took third place, running the distance in 24 seconds flat.

The second record was shattered when, in the mile run, Wally Graham of Meds led a large field, breaking the tape in the last time of 4 minutes, 34 4-5 seconds. Don Smith of U.C. followed Graham from the start, and put up a good fight only to lose out by a couple of yards at the finish. F. W. Pearl of U.C., who took third in the half mile, came back again in the mile to take the same place. This man should be watched in the future.

In the shot put, Ed Peaker of School, tossed the ball 34 feet 9 1-2 inches for first place. Bill Baldwin of Meds, with a heave of 33' 9", placed second and Doug Bailes, also of Meds, took a close third with 32' 10 3-4".

Schools are still leading with 25 points. U.C. lost out in these events and now have 17 points. Meds, who did not have a point until to-day found themselves at the end of the meet with 9 points.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Varsity Arena to-night at 8.15. Parkdale Canoe Club and Varsity juniors. Varsity Arena to-morrow night at 8.15. Nationals and Varsity seniors. Get the time and place firmly fixed in your minds. Both these games will be red-hot, so don't pass 'em up.

* * *

The Blue and White intermediate sextet goes to Bradford to-morrow night to meet the locals in the first of home and home games for the group title. The return game will be at the Arena Tuesday night, goals on the round to count. Varsity beat Bradford here and dropped the decision up Yonge Street. Once again you take your choice.

* * *

After Saturday night's game Varsity seniors have no scheduled fixture until February 20, when they play McGill in Montreal in the return game of the intercollegiate series. While a certain amount of idleness will do the boys a lot of good, nineteen days layoff is too much. Accordingly Varsity will likely play several exhibition games before they meet McGill.

* * *

The women's senior basketball team is very fortunate in having Ruth Harrison, III St. Hilda's, for its manager this season. Miss Harrison has never played on an intercollegiate team, but she has always been very interested and enthusiastic about all athletics, moreover she is most efficient in everything she does, a quality all too rare in managers. The basketball club is to be congratulated on its selection. Sally Ballard was appointed to take charge of the second team, but she is trying out for the seniors and if she makes the team someone else will have to be found to manage the intermediates.

* * *

If enthusiasm and regular attendance at practices is any indication Jean Allen should certainly make a place on the senior team. She is always first out at practice and is a very hard worker. Perhaps this is the reason for the great improvement in her playing. Miss Allen is in second year University College. She played for U.C. juniors for the last two seasons and she was with the intermediate intercollegiate team last winter.

* * *

Lorraine Harvey, who has been turning out for the senior team and was sent down to the intermediates when the first cut was made, is not going to come out any more. The seconds should have a good team if the players will stick at it, but if the girls who could not make the first team refuse to play at all it is going to be a tough job for the intermediates to get anywhere.

Hockey fans are promised a real treat to-morrow night at Varsity Arena when the National Sea Fleas tackle Varsity seniors. The Sea Fleas have been improving every time out and their convincing 6 to 1 triumph over Queen's last Monday night shows that they must be at the top of their form right now. The last time these two teams hooked up the result was a 2-all tie after one of the most thrill packed games of the season. To-morrow night's fixture ought to be just as good.

The Blue and White cripples, McMullen and Stewart, have recovered and will take part in the contest. Nationals will also be at full strength and with such stars as Lough, Convey, Collins, Nugent, Mueller et al on their roster must be given an even chance of pulling out a victory to-morrow night. After the National game the firsts have a long lay-off and do not play again until Feb. 20, when the return game with McGill will be contested. The Blue and White sextet have two more group games to play after to-morrow night, one with Queen's on Feb. 24 and one with Nationals on Feb. 28.

BRADFORD SEXTET HERE TUESDAY FOR PLAYOFF

The playoff between Varsity II and Bradford, who are tied at the top of the intermediate O.H.A. group, has been changed to Saturday night at Bradford with the return game on Tuesday night at 10 p.m. at the Varsity Arena.

In the games between the two teams the Blue and White carried off the first encounter by a 3 to 1 score, while Bradford pulled out a 4 to 3 victory in overtime in the other contest.

INTERFACULTY SWIMMING

The interfaculty swimming meet will be held on Tuesday, Feb. 4th, at 8.20 in Hart House pool. The following is the list of events in the order in which they will be run off:

50 yds. free style.
200 yds. free style.
Diving.
100 yds. back stroke.
100 yds. free style.
200 yds. breast stroke.
440 yds. free style.
200 yds. relay (four men to a team).
All entries must be handed in to Mr. Winterburn, the swimming instructor, not later than Saturday, Feb. 1st at noon.

SENIOR BASKETEERS JOURNEY TO LONDON

Play Initial Game of Schedule Against Western "U"
Cagers

Varsity senior basketball team plays its first game in the intercollegiate series in London against Western "U" Saturday night. Varsity has held the title for the past two years and Coach McCutcheon has gathered together a formidable aggregation which bids fair to repeat the success of former years. On paper this year's squad doesn't appear to have the class of the 1928-29 champions. The "V" has lost some great players in Newman, Murray, Mitchell and Berton.

The regulars for this season are Captain George O'Leary at centre, Benny Sakler and Roy Currie, guards, and Earl Davey and "Buff" Horton, forwards. Wood, Cock, Sniderman and Riggs will take care of the relief work. O'Leary looks to be in for his best year at the cage game. His shooting is accurate and he is a skilful play maker. Horton is a recruit from the Riverdale Grads and in recent games he has hit his stride and is a to remain particularly when what amounted to a vote of confidence in a non-permanent teaching staff member was passed yesterday by the Joint Executive.

Perhaps it is not generally known that the President of the University asked the Joint Executive some time ago to suggest some one that they might like to serve on the Council as a Staff member and that the Director of the University Extension was particularly asked for by the Joint Executive. The members of the Joint Executive have never had cause to regret their action in so doing, but on the contrary have had on many occasions to be grateful for the presence of that particular member.

Statements in the down town press that the headline had been altered before the Editor-in-Chief was interviewed are inaccurate. Attempts had been made by telephone to get in touch with the Editor-in-Chief. A visit by me personally had been made to "The Varsity" office. On my way over to the press 1 was fortunate in meeting the Editor-in-Chief and informed him of what I intended to do. Up to that point no change had yet been made.

It is not my wish at all to interfere with the freedom of the Editor-in-Chief so long as that freedom is governed by common sense and appreciation of the feelings of others, coupled with the fact that the Joint Executive cannot expose itself to the possibility of legal difficulties.

real scoring threat. Riggs and Sniderman are playing clever basketball these days. Sakler stepped into a regular berth on the defence and is making good. Roy Currie is the veteran of the team and lends a steadying effect when the team is under fire.

Western dropped a couple of games to McGill and Queen's last week-end and Varsity's showing against the London quintet Saturday night will give the fans an idea of the chances of the Blue and White in the intercollegiate race.

Over 100 years making Good Shoes for Men Cut-of-the-Ordinary Repair Service

You will find Dack's Repair Service more than just a repair department.

Inasmuch as we have been making nothing but the very highest grade of men's shoes for more than 100 years, none but the very best materials and leathers are permitted to come into our factory.

These same materials and leathers are used in our repair work—the same high-class craftsmanship is employed.

The under part of the shoe is practically rebuilt, and when your shoes are returned to you they are as nearly like new as worn shoes can be.

The reason for this service is quite obvious. The making of high quality shoes for men is our business exclusively, and has been for more than one hundred years.

Why not phone us to-day? We will call for and deliver your shoes.

amendment by the bodies to whom it was of concern."

When asked his opinion regarding existing relations between the Joint Executive and the Students' Council Dean DeLury said: "The responsibility of the Joint Executive to the Caput is merely a matter of courtesy; they are virtually independent. I think that is as it should be."

"Furthermore I do not think that it shows any weakness on the part of the Joint Executive. Just as in Parliament when the Commons passes a bill, they always place it before the king to be signed before it becomes law. The king always signs. So it is with the Joint Executive and the Caput."

"This state of affairs is necessitated by the complex character of the constitution of the University of Toronto, by which each college and faculty has full right of discipline over its students."

pictures, but we ran out of them last Christmas.

And of course there is the living room. You know it got all smoked up last winter when Joe Smudge lit the fireplace (he was lit too) and found that the chimney was plugged. We discovered afterwards that the fire was full of empties that someone had thrown there.

You know we were going to have the papering done last year, but we were sued for damages by the Chinese laundryman. He was an awful sore-head. All we did to him was pick him up in the house one night and stuff him into his laundry bag and carry him down to the undertaker's.

But we will tell you all the plans when you come to the smoker next Tuesday. We are going to have a lot of refreshments and a something to eat too. So don't fail to show up and receive once again the glad hand of welcome and good fellowship from the boys. And say—don't forget your check book.

Vitamines and Spelling Indispensable Says Laura, Finding Bosses Indefensible

By L. L. L.

White, Whyte and Howe Ltd.,
January 31st.

Dear Betty:

I'm a wonderful success as a business girl. Why I've hadn't to buy my lunch once since I started my career. Of course I haven't been able to achieve an ultimate success yet. The boss is dyspeptic and only has a glass of milk and a bunch of lettuce and I'm not a rabbit. A hard-working business girl like me needs nourishing calories and vitamins like you get in squash and peach soufflé. You know dear that its simply criminal having to get down to work so early in the morning. I don't know how I'd ever do it if one of the boys at the office didn't call for me each morning. I believe I'm going to be a Communist and demand that we women have equal privileges with the men. Perhaps I'll write to that man, Mr. Carl Marks and get some data on the subject.

Of course Betty, I must say that I am experiencing a few difficulties. Imagine me trying to handle a dictionary, a typewriter and a boss all at once. You have no idea how peculiar the boss is in his ideas of spelling. Why sometimes he'll make me write a letter three or four times before his spelling coincides with mine. He asked me if I didn't have a dictionary. I didn't but I got him one and put it on his desk, with my card on it. He's awfully careless with books, I've found it in the waste-paper basket twice now.

That's all the news about the office Betty, unless you're interested in the number of shares we bucket every day. You know Betty, if I keep my eyes open, I'll be a rich woman yet. Wait till I find out everything about the stock market and watch me out—Vanderbelt Rockefeller. Maybe I'll be able to give you some tips next week.

So with love
Your dearest friend
Laura Louise.

P.S.—I've just got an invitation out to lunch. Isn't it lucky, because I'm saving my money to bear a stock corner?—L.L.

SEA FLEAS AGGRESSIVE GAME WINS GROUP LEADERSHIP FROM SENIORS

Game Not Productive of Good Hockey; Was Brilliant Only in Patches

STEWART FEATURES

Varsity Failed to Make Use of Many Opportunities to Score

Varsity handed over first place in the senior O.H.A. series to the Nationals by dropping a 2-1 game to the Sea Fleas at the Varsity Arena Saturday night.

The game failed to produce the hockey that was expected, being brilliant only in patches, with neither of the teams showing a sustained attack. Varsity looked to be tired and unable to set the pace they have maintained in other games. Nationals are slowly perfecting team play, but Saturday's effort still leaves a lot to be desired in that respect. Nationals were more aggressive, and on this alone deserved to take the decision.

The game opened up at a fairly fast clip and both sides tested the goalers with speedy rushes. Paul did a lot of attacking but the Redshirts took care of his efforts. Harley got through and missed an almost sure goal when the puck got away from him. After fourteen minutes of play Nationals carried the puck into Varsity territory and after a scramble behind the goal Lough went in, secured the disk and walked out in front to drive it past Ames. Following this counter Varsity staged a strong offensive. With a few minutes to go in the period play became ragged.

MEMORAH SPEAKER DECRIES ATTITUDE OF PRESENT AGE

Menorah Society Aims to Teach Heritage and Place in World to Jews

"I am not a rabbi," said Victor A. Kramer of Intercollegiate Menorah, guest speaker from New York, at the Menorah Discussion Group on Saturday. "I am not a rabbi, and this group is informal, so I may speak my mind, and express my own opinions—and I fully intend to do so."

"Jewish family life," he said, "has been infected by the spirit of the age—it demands its radio, its eight cylinder car, its membership in a good golf club. But there is not much spirit. We have become too efficient, too developed, too over-regulated."

"Through Menorah, and its Journal, and Stimmer School, is offered to the Jews a chance to learn of their heritage and their own standing in this world, so that so many shall not be 'racial Jews' without being 'cultural Jews'."

"Menorah has not, like the Salvation Army, given out so many doughnuts, and cups of coffee and prayers, and saved so many souls.—You can't pin down to numbers what is artistic and intellectual."

"Judaism is more than a religion, a way of life, civilization—it is a point of view. We are descendants of heroes; we carry that with us whether we will or no. When we wish to enter certain professions, join a golf club, send our daughters to a private school, we find out very quickly, no matter how decorously it is put, that we are Jews."

Toronto Graduate Wins Milne Medal

Dr. Aubrey V. Greaves, graduate of the University of Toronto, Faculty of Medicine, 1916, has taken the diploma in tropical medicine in Liverpool, England, in December 1929, and was awarded the Milne Gold Medal. The class was large and about 33 per cent did not get through at all. Dr. Greaves has been appointed assistant bacteriologist at the Government Bacteriological Station, Hong Kong, China.

GRIM SKELETONS GRIN AS MEDS MAKE MERRY

Even School Yells Are Heard As Medical Society Holds At-Home

700 GUESTS ENJOY OANCE

A skeleton suspended twelve feet above the heads of the guests and green-eyed skulls grinning from the edge of the band platform reminded guests in the Convention Ballroom of the Royal York on Friday night that they were at the At-home of the Medical Society. A smooth floor, made smoother by the addition of cornmeal; Japanese lanterns strung from the sides and corners of the room; Joe de Courcy's orchestra—all these were provided for the entertainment of the seven hundred and more guests. At 11:45, the party adjourned to the main ballroom on the same floor of the hotel for supper. The menu included consommé, chicken à la king, ice cream, and demi-tasse. Streamers and papier-mache balls were provided, and the latter provided ammunition for a bombardment which descended on all present with impartiality. Medical yells were given, as were several Toke-Oikes, in spite of derisory opposition from time-honoured rivals.

No untoward happenings marred the progress of the At-home. A member of the Camera Club let off a few experimental flash-light charges from the balcony, but this was an event that passed comparatively unnoticed.

The patronesses of the at-home were Mrs. A. Primrose, Mrs. Duncan Graham, Mrs. Herbert Bruce and Mrs. C. Best. The chairman of the committee in charge of the evening was A. M. Doyle, with S. A. Thompson as secretary-treasurer. W. S. Kergin, president of the Medical Society, was ex-officio member of the committee, and received with the patronesses. Other members were as follows: W. G. Young, J. A. C. Thomson, R. Graham, Jack Sinclair, A. Squires.

LORETTO COLLEGE AT-HOME

The Loretto College annual at-home was held on Friday night in the Alexandra Room of the King Edward Hotel. The guests were received by the patronesses who were Lady Falconer, Lady Windle, Mrs. Frank Cassidy, Mrs. D. Rae MacKenzie and Mrs. John M. Hockins and by Miss Marie Hefferman, convenor of the committee. Many out-of-town alumnae joined with the undergraduates in rendering the evening the undeniable success it was.

Many American Universities Send Representatives to Inauguration

MANY ATTEND RECEPTION

Retiring Chancellor Conducts Final Chapel Service Friday Morning

On Friday at 1:30 the Board of Regents of Victoria University were hosts at luncheon in Burwash Hall to the delegates who had come to Toronto for the inauguration of Dr. E. W. Wallace as Chancellor. About 450 persons were present, including delegates from 29 American universities and from every Canadian university.

After an introduction by the chairman, Hon. N. W. Rowell, Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, both as premier and as Minister of Education, welcomed the delegates. He claimed that there was no province, state or country which could boast, as could Ontario, of having 28 per cent of the population engaged in educational work, either as students or as teachers. Dr. Alfred Hughes, president of Hamline University, St. Paul, Minn., read aloud a message from Victoria's oldest living alumnus, Dr. G. H. Bridgman of the class of '64, President Emeritus of Hamline. The message read as follows:

"My love for and my pride in my Alma Mater has increased with the years. Victoria's sons have always been proud of their presidents,—great men, all of them, and we are sure that the president now inaugurated will be a worthy successor to the honourable men, the grand men, who preceded him."

UNDERGRADS DENIED USE OF LEGISLATIVE LIBRARY

Library Staff Not Adequate to Handle Needs of Student Body

The legislative library in the Parliament Buildings is practically barred to university undergraduates, Miss E. Richardson of the staff of the library told "The Varsity". She stated that a few years ago students were permitted to use the library and to borrow books from it. The students availing themselves of this privilege, however, became so numerous that they finally became "a nuisance". It was also found that they did not return books promptly.

The library contains books suitable for students in all courses, according to Miss Richardson. At the present time the presence of students is not encouraged although an occasional member of the third and fourth years is permitted to use the library. The present staff is not sufficiently large to deal with a large number of students, in Miss Richardson's opinion.

W. S. Wallace, university librarian, admitted that the opening of the legislative library to undergraduates might relieve overcrowding in the university library. Law students, he considered, would find the library in the parliament buildings particularly valuable. Students and even professors had no right to use the legislative library, however. It was primarily for use of the members of the legislature and was not a provincial library, Professor Wallace stated.

COUNCIL HEAD CONSIDERS OWN RESIGNATION

The action of A. H. Ferry, chairman of the Joint Executive, in suppressing "The Varsity" on Thursday, was disapproved and claimed to be unconstitutional by an overwhelming majority at the combined meeting of the men's and women's students' administrative councils on Saturday. These councils are elected by the students of every faculty of the university and are the most representative bodies on the campus. This motion was passed on Saturday morning. On Friday afternoon the Advisory Board of Student Publications was unanimous in stating that the editor of "The Varsity" should be free to bring out an issue of "The Varsity" in any manner he wished and could only be subjected to discipline after anything objectionable appeared. Both bodies which have important influence in the carrying on of the student paper, were quite definite about the fact that the editor should be given a free hand in publishing his paper for only then could a check be placed upon him.

"The Varsity" reached A. H. Ferry yesterday afternoon and he told the reporter that amongst other things he was considering his resignation, but that he could not say whether or not the motions of the men's and women's S.A.C. and the Advisory Board could be considered as a direct vote of censure.

Unanimous support was given Lou Golden by the Advisory Board of Student Publications in his contention that an editor's freedom of publication should not be censored. At the request of the Editor-in-Chief of "The Varsity" the Advisory Board met to consider the changing of a headline after Thursday's "Varsity" had gone to press by Allan H. Ferry, President of the Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Councils.

"That the Advisory Board feels that an editor of 'The Varsity' should be free to bring out an issue in the form he wishes and be subject to discipline for anything objectionable in it only after it has appeared," reads the resolution moved by Professor J. F. Macdonald of the University College Department of English and R. C. H. Mitchell, Editor of Torontonensis. The resolution was passed without a dissenting vote.

Both the faculty members of the Advisory Board, Professor Macdonald and Professor C. R. Young in discussing the motion consistently upheld the desirability of editorial freedom in such a publication as "The Varsity".

"That one person or that any body should be able to stop a whole issue, as appears to have been done, is contrary to anything I know about newspapers," said Professor Macdonald in the discussion.

The action of Allan H. Ferry, chairman of the Joint Executive of the S.A.C. in changing headlines of "The Varsity" was condemned, when the men's and women's S.A.C. met Saturday in joint session and passed a resolution to the effect that, "These councils go on record as being of the opinion that the action of the Chairman of the Joint Executive was unconstitutional and that they disapprove of it." The motion was moved by E. B. Joliffe, seconded by Howe Martyn, and passed by the overwhelming majority of 16-4.

The meeting, which was called for the specific purpose of considering the report of the special committee to investigate student government, was thrown open to the press and public when a motion moved by Howe Martyn and seconded by A. J. Stringer was passed.

Action on the report was tabled, however, when it was decided to consider the action of the chairman of the Joint Executive, with regard to the changing of headlines in "The Varsity".

Upon the motion of Howe Martyn, the chairman, Mr. Ferry, explained to the meeting his reasons for changing headlines in "The Varsity". "The circumstances are unusual, exceptional," said Mr. Ferry. "The Joint Executive in deciding, unanimously, that the report of the Special Committee be published only in the undergraduate paper, asked me that I see that no names appear. I accordingly instructed Mr. Burns to observe how the report appeared. When it did appear in Wednesday's issue I did not think that the report and head should appear. I asked that the press be stopped, and went down and re-wrote the heading. No one regrets more than I that I had to take this action, but I have no regrets that I did. Under similar circumstances I should take the same action. You are aware of the result. The heading to the article and report was changed."

Howe Martyn was of the opinion that the whole question of the action of the chairman was one of interpretation. It was a question of Responsibility versus Interference. Responsibility of the

Trinity Debaters Predict Failure for Naval Conference

GOVERNMENT IS DEFEATED

Lack of confidence in the work of the present London naval conference was expressed Friday night by members of the Trinity College Literary Institute, who, by a vote of 20-13, defeated the measure, "Resolved that this house views with favour the progress made by the disarmament conference in London in furthering the cause of world peace." Following the defeat of the motion a vote of want of confidence in the government was carried, 26-6, and this resulted in its resignation.

"This conference is not to be viewed in the light of a Rotary Club get-together in London," said G. E. Graham, leader for the government, in stressing the difficulties in the path of progress at the meeting. He outlined the conflicting aims of the different powers and considered that "any conference which succeeds in bringing the various factions together is furthering world peace".

J. L. Ellison, speaking against the motion, claimed that the opposition hoped that the conference would be a success, but did not believe that there had been any progress to date.

In support of the measure, C. L. M. Douglas admitted that no material

THE STUDENTS' VICTORY

It is very seldom that the student body of this university as a whole, both men and women, express themselves as decisively as they did over the week-end. On Friday the Advisory Board of Student Publications unanimously felt that "the editor of 'The Varsity' should be free to bring out an issue in any form he wished and be subject to discipline for anything objectionable in it only after it has appeared". Eighteen hours later both the men's and women's students councils passed by an overwhelming majority the motion that in their opinion the "action of the chairman of the Joint Executive was unconstitutional and that both councils disapprove of it". It was a most important and decisive victory won by the elected body of the students of all faculties against the oppression of student opinion at the university.

Those motions should never have been made under ordinary circumstances for they are considered as unwritten laws in every country in the world with the exception of Italy and Russia. It does not reflect on the student body that they were forced to put on record something that is understood in all democratic countries. It reflects on one individual who felt that he could be superior to constitution and accepted practice.

Now that those rights have been placed on the books to guide egotistical graduate officers and officials we wish nothing more. As far as we are concerned we have had no "scalp belt", nor do we desire to start one at present, but we are indeed sorry to see that Mr. Ferry still considers that his course was the right one and as he said in the open meeting of the Students' Councils, he would take the same course again, if he, in his opinion, thought it necessary. Mr. Ferry, we sincerely hope, for his own sake, as well as for the sake of the name of this university, will see his error and kill his desire to run the university, and to see in print only those things of which he approves.

THANKS

We must take this opportunity of thanking the members of the men's and women's councils for the removal of the fear of illegal control. To the Advisory Board we extend the same. To the students as a whole we extend our sincerest thanks for their kind support and confidence in the hectic days of struggle against unfair tactics.

LIBRARY PRESENTS STUDY IN STUDENT RELAXATION

Members Maintain Own Rules Even to Censoring Their Own Books

Hart House library presents each noon an interesting study in relaxation. Everywhere figures are sprawled out in unusual angles and while several persons are forced to stand in order to read, others slumber on oblivious to all. While ordinarily three people can occupy one chesterfield, often one member stretches at his ease and so many have no seating facilities. There are few traces of apples or chocolate bar wrappers, but few members ever seem to return books to their right places as every seat and chesterfield is littered with loose books.

"The committee does not take any definite stand on the matter as it takes the view that the library is for the use of the undergraduate," stated B. D. Beamish, curator of the library. "Hart House is like a club and we have to allow a certain laxity. These abuses are only human nature and despite the fact that they are to be deplored, we cannot maintain a penal institution. Personally I wake up all whom I see sleeping in the library, but no constant watch can be maintained and we do not believe in signs."

D. H. Buchanan and J. V. O'B. Wilson of the library committee, held the same opinion as Mr. Beamish and felt that little could be done about it. Mr. Buchanan requested that at least if people went to sleep, they should refrain from using books, as pillows as this prevented other members making use of them. Mr. Wilson stated: "It was completely up to the individual member and he should maintain his own rules."

One member constituted himself as censor and clipped some passages from a De Maupassant novel while the reporter found "Youth" clipped out of a book of Conrad's short stories. However, Mr. Beamish claimed these occurrences were very rare and most of the abuses were of a minor type.

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

Agrees with "Varsity"

Editor,

"The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

Your stand regarding the recent act of Mr. Allan Ferry is to be commended publicly as an attitude best protecting our student rights of expressing our untrammelled opinions.

As I interpret the situation, it is the arbitrary power of an individual to interfere with the press that should be investigated and not the cause of his action.

"The Varsity" is an integral part of the undergraduate body. It is ours! It is ours for the free expression of opinion and thought whether his lordship "Mussolini" agrees or disagrees. The paper placed under the thumb of an individual person is like a tamed bird in a gilt cage flapping its useless wings for the amusement of its superiors. In this case the gilt cage being the authority of a Mr. Ferry and the flapping wings representative of the opinion expressed only to please the power that is.

S.A.C. INCREASES SALARIES OF EDITORS 'THE VARSITY'

With the approval of the Finance Committee of the Board of Governors, the Joint Executive of the S.A.C. has decided to make the following increases in the salaries of members of "The Varsity" staff, as recommended by the retiring editor-in-chief, N. J. DeWitt:

Editor-in-chief—from $2.00 to $3.00 an issue.

Men's News Editor—from $1.00 to $1.50 an issue.

Women's News Editor—from 75c to $1.00 an issue.

Men's Sports—from 75c to $1.00 an issue.

A recommendation that the size of "The Varsity" be increased was referred to the Editor-in-Chief and the Managing Editor for decision.

ENGLISH DEBATERS' STYLE CRITICIZED BY YANKEES

Special to "The Varsity"

Denver, Colo. — The parliamentary method in debate comes in for criticism by an editorial writer on the Denver Clarion, who writes as follows:

ONE WAY TO DEBATE

Humour is the chief stock in trade for a number of speakers and a larger number of debaters. They thrive on their jokes. They imagine that no audience can understand a point unless it is camouflaged in wit.

That is the way Englishmen debate. At least that is the way visitors from Oxford and Cambridge and Australia who appeared against University of Denver debaters, tried to win their points and the approval of the audience.

This method does not seem confined to Denver contests. A clever writer at the University of Oklahoma characterized these tactics in a clear sentence:

"Oxford debaters, true to the old English style, stayed as far from the subject as they could and still be on the platform."

It is a good thing to please an audience, but it is a fallacy to believe that humour is the only way in which that can be done. Even university students enjoy occasional mental exhilaration in the form of serious thought.

Chapter 3

A tear trickled down the rugged cheek of the missionary as he sat by the smouldering ruins of his little school and gazed sadly at the scene of destruction around him.

"All my labour of years is spoiled," he mourned. "Those rebels have not left one stone upon another!" And in his anguish he absently pressed one of the hot bricks to his bosom and severely burned his embroidery. He dropped it feverishly and his mood changed.

C-C

"I must carry on the wonderful work that I have been doing here in China," he cried resolutely. "Slo gin, my pupils have been scattered and slaughtered. Bring me more that I may teach them the great and good things of life."

Slo Gin complied respectfully and was soon out of sight.

C-C

"I am back, everend sir," Slo Gin announced. "The missionary looked up in surprise. Unnoticed his Chinese pupil had arrived and now stood before him at the head of a detachment of American Marines."

"What is the meaning of this, Slo Gin?" he cried.

"Did you not want pupils, sir? Here are some boy scouts. Can't you teach them English?"

C-C

Throughout the city of Sun Tan a new terror had made its presence felt. One morning the timid citizens were horrified to find the limp bodies of three of the leading citizens hanging from the front of the pawnshop. What filled them with horror was a little drawing of a dragon carefully executed in lipstick, which appeared on the stomach of each victim!

C-C

The terror spread. Death stalked through the families of the well-to-do. The dragon marked down old and young for its prey. Some of the victims were garroted, some strangled, and a number stuffed with dried apples.

C-C

One morning Slo Gin awoke in alarm. Something was amiss in the household. He sensed it. Hurrying to the front of the house he was shocked to find the body of his father dangling from the candelabra. The murderers had suspended him in the air with his arms and legs tied, and poured a jar full of black ants down his collar. They had crawled around his ribs and he had laughed himself to death.

NATIONALS DEFEAT VARSITY 2 TO 1 IN SENIOR O.H.A. FIXTURE

BLUE JUNIORS LOSE FIRST PLAYOFF GAME

Varsity Unable to Hold Lead and Husky Paddlers Triumph, 2-1

CUNNINGHAM IS PROMINENT

Varsity juniors will carry a one-goal deficit into their final playoff game with Parkdale Canoe Club on Wednesday night as a result of their heart breaking 2-1 loss at the Varsity Arena last Friday night. The university representatives held a slight margin on the play throughout a hard-fought, stiff-checking game, and only the lack of a scoring punch inside the blue line held them away from a clear cut victory.

Hetherington netted the first goal of the game three minutes from the opening bell in the second period, when he took a pass from Cunningham. Varsity's smart second string centre, and gave the Parkdale goalie no chance to save. The students held their slim advantage through the remainder of a fast travelling period, and seemed good for a win. Oliver, whose work was a standout throughout the game, blasted the hopes of the Varsity supporters in the final chucker, when he netted the equalizer on a clever solo rush, drawing the defence aside, and sweeping in on Hunnisett. Two minutes later the same player put him team one up when he fed Hall a pass in the goal mouth and the latter registered to end the scoring for the evening.

Varsity attacked desperately all the rest of the game, but the husky paddlers had their defensive system down pat and stood them off successfully.

Heavy bodychecking at either end of the ice was a feature of the game. Both teams seemed to base their defensive tactics on the old-time formula: "any man on his feet behind the blue line is dangerous." Burly Alex Levinsky on the Varsity rearguard, and the husky Bowman brothers, carried on a private feud all evening, with honours about even. Big Alex sailed down the ice frequently, and invariably ended up in a collision with brothers Scott and Russ.

Cunningham at centre for the relief line, was just about the standout from a Varsity standpoint. The curly-headed lad had his poke check working to perfection, functioned nicely as a play maker, and worked like a colony of beavers all the time he was on the ice. The rest of the student forwards played right up to form,

JR. SCHOOL DEFEATS O.C.E.

By defeating the Ontario College of Education 34-15, in a basketball game on Friday last, Junior School took undisputed leadership of their group, having defeated St. Mike's in their first game 24-12.

Although Friday's game was not productive of good basketball, the winners kept the upper hand throughout. The passing of both teams was erratic at times. Most of O.C.E.'s baskets came on shots outside the defence, while the Schoolmen worked the ball in under the basket. Junior School were without Newman and Smith of their regular team and this probably had a lot to do with their showing. Kirk, Britnell, Lichty and Traynor tried hard for the winners, while Spear and Ivens were the best for the losers.

O.C.E. (15)—Inmon (1), Spear (6); Ivens (4), Wallace, Cunningham (2), Miller, Hale, McVittie, Stubbs, S.P.S. (34)—Britnell (11), Kirk (7), Lichty (12), Tenebaum, Traynor (2), Wong (2), Weiner (1).

until they got within scoring distance, when their well-executed plays seemed to melt into thin air.

Several combinations were tried out on the forward line. Smillie, Cunningham and Bennett were used together during the final period, and turned in some of the most effective work of the evening.

Williamson teamed up well with Levinsky on the defence. A little more training in the use of his body would have increased his effectiveness on the defence several times. The long-legged lad also found time to uncork several dangerous rushes.

Smillie had his shot whistling in like a bullet from the left boards, but was off on his marksmanship all through the game. Half a dozen times his rifling drive whistled past an empty corner of the net when six inches to the left would have meant a goal.

Hunnisett in goal played his usual cool-headed game, and had absolutely no chance on the two counters that eluded him.

Varsity—Goal, Hunnisett; defence, Levinsky and Williamson; centre, Brant; wings, Smillie and Hetherington; alternates, Bennett, Hendry, Cunningham and Funston.

Parkdale Canoe Club—Goal, Carey; defence, R. Bowman and S. Bowman; centre, Oliver; wings, Hall and Corson; alternates, Kitson, Pipher, Johnston and Carey.

PENALTIES

First Period—Hall, Brant, R. Bowman, Levinsky.

Second Period—Levinsky, Williamson, Hall.

Third Period—Oliver.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Varsity juniors face elimination when they meet Parkdale Canoe Club in the second game of the Big Four group playoffs at the Arena Gardens to-night. The Paddlers took Friday's game 2-1 and while looking a little smoother than the Blue were lucky to pull out a win. To-night it will be a case of do or die with Frank Sullivan's men. The locals were outlucked several times in the opener and with a break or two to-night will go in to the junior O.H.A. playdowns.

Although Varsity seniors relinquished the O.H.A. leadership to Nationals when the Sea Fleas downed them on Saturday night, nobody is going to get excited about it. The first two teams of the three team group of Varsity, Queen's and Nationals, will play off for the title. Right now Nationals and Varsity appear to be almost sure things for the two playoff positions. Queen's has won but one game, and will have great difficulty in getting out of the cellar position.

Varsity's senior cage quintet got away to a flying start when they grabbed a last minute decision from Western at London Saturday night. To tell the truth the Blue and White were lucky and will have to improve if they hope to defeat Queen's and McGill.

Congratulations are in order for "Mac" McCutcheon, the popular basketball coach and physical instructor. Saturday night the "Macmen" defeated Western "U" but the big event was Saturday morning. It's a boy.

Before any girl is eligible to play on an intercollegiate team she must have a medical examination, even if she has already had one in the fall. This should be done immediately as it seems rather futile for players to wait until they have gone through a month's strenuous practice before they get a doctor's certificate of their fitness to take part in games. It is rather a blow too for a coach to find out that a girl on whom she has spent a lot of time and trouble, is physically unfit to play.

The senior basketball team should be very strong defensively this season. Coach Marion Forward has been concentrating on a defence formation which is practically the same as that used by most of the m.c.f. teams. The forwards fall back to centre to check on losing possession of the ball instead of guarding man for man under their own basket. Varsity was the only team to use the six man defence in the intercollegiate games last year and the Blue team was decidedly superior to any other team in the league.

INTERMEDIATES BOW TO BRADFORD SEXTET

Varsity Fails to Hit Stride Handicapped by Small Cushion

BLUE FORWARDS SUPERIOR

The intermediates were beaten 3-1 in the first of home and home games on Saturday night by Bradford on the Bradford rink.

Bradford skated on a fast sextet and from the first going to the last the game was fast. Varsity was handicapped by the small cushion and could not get into their stride. In the puck-chasing game Bradford cannot be beaten although the Varsity outfit worked hard.

Turan for Bradford was the hardest working man on the ice, but Graham for Varsity was a close second. The latter was responsible for Varsity's sole score, while Ferguson was robbed of scores several times by the luck of the Bradford goalie. Every Varsity forward worked hard for scores, but were outplayed by their opponents in the individual game. Bradford scored in each of the periods. Their second tally was secured by Turan after one minute of play in the second stanza by a lucky shot from centre ice.

In goal Harman for Bradford had a slight edge on McCartney, although he was aided considerably by luck. The Varsity forwards are quite superior to those of Bradford but were helpless without their organized combination.

Varsity—Goal, McCartney; defence, Smith and Graham; centre, Clute; wings, Statham and Leak; subs, Conn, Percy and Ferguson.

Bradford—Goal, Harman; defence, C. Evans and Stevenson; centre, Turan; wings, Waller and Belfry; subs, Theaver, Craik, B. Evans and Scim.

The members of Newman Club had their usual good time at the tea dance Saturday afternoon. Miss Catharine Smyth received at the Sunday afternoon tea which was followed by an entertaining "talkie".

LUCKY BREAK GIVES BLUES WESTERN GAME

Londoners' Fine Defensive Game Left Result Always in Doubt

BLUES WERE IN GOOD FORM

Varsity senior basketball quintet squeezed out a victory over the Western University team 18 to 16 Saturday night in London. Captain George O'Leary scored the decisive tally in the last second of play on a long pass from Davey. It was a lucky break for the Blue and White and a fatal mistake by the Westerners, who previously had given a fine exhibition of defensive basketball which quite demoralized the visitors' attack.

The issue was always in doubt and throughout the game not more than a single field basket separated the two teams. Several times the count was knotted. First one squad would secure a narrow lead and then the other would be on top. Half time found the Londoners ahead 11 to 10. Both teams started out the second period at a faster pace and with every point so vital, excitement ran high. With less than three minutes of the game left, Munro put Western on the favourable side of a 10-14 tally. "Eppa" Riggs came through with two foul shots to put the Blue and White on even terms. Western bombarded the Varsity cage and only the hardest ill-fortune for them kept the ball from going through. Then O'Leary was left uncovered and Davey whipped a long pass to him for the winning counter.

All the local players were below form. Horton was high scorer with 7 points, but he combined poorly and shot far too often. Sniderman and Riggs were effective while they were on the floor.

Varsity—Forwards, Horton (7), Davey (2), O'Leary (5); guards, Currie, Sakler; spares, Wood, Riggs (2), Sniderman (2).

Western—Forwards, Farquharson, (2), Hayter (5), Munro (8); guards, Gunn (1), Hauch; spares, Clec, Vatz, Drivers.

Referee—Percy Miller.

INTERMEDIATE BASKETEERS DEFEAT WESTERN 26-20

Varsity intermediate basketekers won an intercollegiate tilt from Western "U" 26 to 20 in London on Saturday night. Collins, with 9 points, Carr 10, and Douglas 7, accounted for all of Varsity's tallies. Timely baskets by this trio kept the Blue and White in front throughout the game. Barber was prominent on Western's offensive with 10 points.

Varsity—Forwards, Collins, Carr; centre, Douglas; guards, Graham and Calderone; spares, Sobel, Buchanan and Riley.

Western—Forwards, Barber, Rider; centre, Manners; guards, Brush and McArthur; spares, Lepine, Clark and Harley.

Referee—Percy Miller.

VARIOUS FUNCTIONS HELD AT VICTORIA

"George Henry Bridgman." Dr. Hughes informed the delegates that Toronto's ideas of a number of small denominational colleges affiliated to form a larger tax-supported university, was finding more and more advocates in the States. All the speakers mentioned also the unity of Canada and U.C. in educational work.

Father Lajeunesse of Ottawa University, urged especially the co-operation of all our universities in meeting the problems they had to face. He claimed that all our presidents must possess a spirit of sympathy, justice and conciliation. He praised Victoria for its courage in asserting and maintaining the principles which it was founded to defend, saying that the names of former chancellors—Ryerson, Nellis, Burwash and Bowles had become household words.

President W. S. Fox of Western University and Dr. E. H. Hume, acting president of the New York Post-graduate Medical School, also spoke.

From 4 to 6 p.m. a reception was given in the college in honour of Dr. and Mrs. Wallace, attended by about 1200 people, including students, faculty members and visitors. Refreshments were served. Music was provided by Stan St. John and his orchestra.

Friday morning a special service was held in the Victoria College Chapel at the request of the retiring chancellor, R. P. Bowles, who wished to have an opportunity of meeting the students for the last time in this way.

A prayer was offered by the Rev. Richard Davidson, after which Dr. Bowles reviewed his past memories of Victoria undergraduate life. He told of his own student days, when fifty cents for "cab hire" was considered an extravagance, and when the college prospectus advertised that a student could get through one year on $120 including all possible expenses. The retiring chancellor spoke of the important place which chapel services held, in his opinion, in the life of the student. It provided, he said, a tie which bound every student to the college.

Dr. E. W. Wallace, incoming chancellor, then addressed the students, telling them that in his estimation, as well, the religious force was the strongest tie in binding the students together and to the college.

At the conclusion of the service, Dr. Bowles was presented with a

The flashy centre worked his head off but couldn't get a marker. Varsity failed to make use of a golden opportunity when Convey was penalized and Nugent followed him a minute later.

The final period showed better hockey. Varsity pressed and McMullen missed by inches on the rebound of Stewart's shot. From a mix up near the Blue net Beal passed out to Underwood and the big right winger scored Nationals' second goal four minutes from the start of the period. Stewart got through, but luck was against him, his shot hitting the goal post after beating the net minder. After twelve minutes of play Harley got Varsity's lone counter by picking up a pass in front of Mueller and driving a sizzler past the rotund goaler. The Blues tried hard, but they were unable to notch the tallying counter.

Harley, Stewart, Whitehead and Paul were Varsity's best. Lough, at centre for Nationals, did some great checking and also got a goal. Convey turned in a nice effort at centre ice. Mueller in goal was practically unbeatable, turning aside shot after shot with apparent ease.

PAY TELEPHONES POPULAR AMONG STUDENTS

Dispute With Operator Results When Young Man Refuses to Deposit Coin

"I have absolutely nothing to say to 'The Varsity'," said Miss Patterson, who is "Central" at the switchboard of the university telephone extension in Simcoe Hall concerning a charge of rudeness in students over the telephone. The charge arose in the case of a young man using the pay telephone in University College. On being asked if he had deposited the fee (one cent), he replied that the coin box must have been full because the money wouldn't go in. Central informed him that the box had recently been emptied, and an argument followed.

"Telephone conditions have vastly improved at Queen's Hall," said Miss Helen Zavitz, "at least you know that you can always use the pay phone in case of dire necessity."

Miss Mary Pattison of St. Hilda's College declared that their residence phone was always in great demand, but they too had a pay telephone, principally for long distance calls.

LAWREN HARRIS PAINTING TO HANG IN WYMWILWOOD

Picture Loaned for Three Months Through Literary Society

A number of paintings by Lawren Harris are making their appearance to-day in Wymilwood, where they are to remain on exhibition for three months. Mr. Harris is a well-known member of the Group of Seven, and the collection is a fine sample of modern art.

Having lived on Queen's Park Crescent until a short time ago, he is an old friend of the university. When asked by the art group of the Victoria College Literary Society, he very generously offered twelve paintings, of which four were hung in the tile court yesterday on their arrival. The rest are expected to appear to-day.

Reflections of Bobby Bungip Banned By Wooolini Werry, Gladragia Censor

By Paul A. Gardner

The following interviews were obtained this morning in connection with the recent reflections cast on Bobby Bungip, the india-rubber man of Gladragia.

Wooolini Wherry, when we entered, was seconed on a cushioned divan, deep in a copy of Grimm's fairy tales, which he read with an air of puzzlement, tempered by simple faith.

"Good morning, Mr. Wherry," was our greeting.

"God be with you, brother," he replied, and coming forward, he planted a kiss on our right cheek. We almost turned the left, but thought better of it.

"Mr. Wherry," we began, "your figure is becoming rather prominent."

"What?" he interrupted peevishly. "... in the public eye," we finished, and continued, "Is it true that you personally stopped a shipload of Bungip reflections bound for the outer world?"

Wherry rose, puffed himself up to his full stature, and replied: "I cannot tell a lie: I did it with my little ego."

On our asking his reason for this action the Censor of Gladragia replied with exquisite terseness, "The reflections failed to coincide with my personal opinions. What more can I say?"

"That seems to be about all," we replied, and with his affectionate "God help you if you print anything I disagree with" ringing in our ears we wended to the office of Yippi Yearns, the Minister of the Exchequer.

"Good! then we get that Blue Circle ad... Full page! ah, that's a stroke!" were the words that fell upon our entering ears. We sat down, and after a few frantic hours Mr. Yearns noticed us. At once a sunny smile scooted from beneath his bushy moustachios. "I'm human!" it seemed to say. Still unconvinced, we spoke.

"Of course!" he replied. "Of course I am pleased. Morning after morning I have ambled over to the docks seeking something to suppress. Morning after morning I have returned disappointed to seek solace in 'Cupid's Diary'. It is little experiences like this that make life worth living. We live by action. Inaction is inertia. Inertia is death..."

"Variety is the spice of life," we continued helpfully.

"I see you catch my meaning," he flashed gratefully. "Good bye, good bye!"

editor of "The Varsity" to the Joint Executive and Interference of the Joint Executive. The fact that the editor is responsible to the Joint Executive does not mean that any member can interfere in his actions. If any member can alter the statements of the editor, his heads, or views on any subject, then the editor ceases to be responsible.

Inasmuch as both the constitution of the Joint Executive and that of "The Varsity" provided for the responsibility of the editor, E. B. Joffe was of the opinion that Mr. Ferry's actions were ill-advised and unwarranted and proposed the motion to the effect that his action "was unconstitutional" and that the councils meeting in joint session disapproved of such action.

"I have under consideration the matter of my resignation, although it is a subject upon which I would not care to give a statement," said Allan Ferry, president of the Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Council, in an interview with "The Varsity" last evening.

"It is only one of the many things which are before me at the present time," said Mr. Ferry. "The matter of the responsibility of the editor of 'The Varsity' is another question which I should like settled soon. Under the present constitution, 'The Varsity' is owned and managed by the Joint Executive, whereas the editor is responsible to the Advisory Board of Student Publications. This leaves a rather confusing situation which I hope to have cleared up in the near future."

"Will the student publication be free from any such interference as the result of these actions?" "The Varsity" inquired.

"Similar circumstances are not likely to arise, and if they did arise, the Councils would scarcely place their chairman in such a position again," replied Mr. Ferry.

Asked if the resolution of the Men's and Women's Students' Council implied a vote of non-confidence in the Chairman of the Joint Executive, Mr. Ferry said, "That is one of the things that I would like to know myself. The Students' Administrative Council has of course no responsibility itself as far as 'The Varsity' is concerned; at least, that is what I think."

"Saturday Night" Exposes

SELF-CONFERRED DEGREES

Toronto, Chicago and Vancouver

The erstwhile National Order of Canada, whose frown of displeasure gathered against Sir Robert Falconer for permitting the recent Hart House debate on the termination of Imperial ties is treated in the editorial columns of the current issue of "Saturday Night", as one of a group of "Nuisance Associations".

It will be recalled that the National Order, hitherto unheard of, make a weak and abortive attempt to interfere in university affairs when it announced that it would appeal to Chief of Police Draper to suppress the debate by force, after Sir Robert Falconer had paid no heed to its rumblings.

The inspiration from whence these high and lofty ideals of patriotism spring is, according to "Saturday Night" to be found in the present organizer, a man of many degrees, all self-conferred, who has represented several pseudo-academies, conferred degrees on several score persons, including one barber, granted a Ph.D. for his services to mankind, and has

The peace of mind of the students who repose in Victoria College library has been most unwittingly destroyed by the noisy excavations for the new Emmanuel College during these past few days.

Moreover, the suffering librarians will have to bear patiently for several weeks to come, according to Professor J. F. McLaughlin, Dean of Emmanuel College. The building itself will probably not be completed till the summer of 1931, Dr. McLaughlin said, but it is hoped the annoying machines will have ceased excavating at least by the time of the examinations, which

MENDRAH DISCUSSION HELD AT ROUND TABLE

Group Seriously Interested in Jewish Topics and

An organization meeting of the Round Table Discussion Group of the University of Toronto Menorah Society was held Monday evening at the Zionist Institute. The group, which consists of students who are seriously interested in Jewish topics, selected as its field of study this session: "A Symposium of the History of the Jews from Ancient to Modern Times".

The symposium is to consist of a series of seven papers, one of which is to be delivered at each meeting of the group. The first paper, which is to be delivered by Mr. Maurice Starkman, Osgoode Hall, is to be on the topic, "Enter, the Jew".

New Queen's Principal May be Dr. H. F. Munro

Dr. H. F. Munro was last Thursday invited to accept the position of principal of Queen's University, according to a well-founded rumor which reached "The Varsity" last evening. Dr. Munro, who is Superintendent of Education for the Province of Nova Scotia and one of the most prominent educationists on this continent, will, if he accepts this position, succeed Dr. Bruce Taylor, the present principal, who is resigning. According to the rumor Dr. Munro, who was the guest speaker at the Empire Club last Thursday, was interviewed by a delegation from the Board of Queen's University.

HELD THIS MONTH

Many Canadian university students and a few from the States will visit the University of Toronto this month as delegates to the Model Assembly of the League of Nations which has been arranged by the League of Nations Club of the University of Toronto, for February 21st, 22nd and 23rd.

Visiting delegates have taken a keen interest in demanding the countries for which they will speak in the Assembly sessions. The ladies from Vassar College have asked that Austria be reserved for them and are studying that they may present the point of view of their country.

Questions on the agenda have been studied by committees of the League of Nations Club. The report on extraterritoriality or "extrality" as the Americans have called it, is already complete and copies are being mailed to all delegates.

Several invitations for the entertainment of visitors have been accepted by Miss Elizabeth Lang, of second year University College, the president of the club. Arrangements, however, are not yet complete. It is hoped that the delegates from other universities may be billeted with Toronto fraternities or at the homes of Toronto students.

The University of Western Ontario has chosen Poland. The Italian viewpoint will be presented by Osgoode Hall. Queen's University has two countries to represent. The university delegation will have Germany, while the Ontario Boys' Parliament, whose delegates are students at Queen's, will be Canada's representatives. Great "To a large extent blindness is a matter of the mind. If a man exercises judgment he will so modify the handicap that it is not blatantly obvious," said Mr. S. A. Saunders, of the School of Graduate Studies, whose scholastic record won the fifteen hundred dollar Maurice Cody Memorial Fellowship with which he is now doing research work with the Department of Economics.

Professor E. J. Urwick, head of the Department of Economics told "The Varsity" that Mr. Saunders is now working for his M.A. degree and will be working for his Ph.D. "making a research into the interdependence of industry in the Maritime Provinces". "An excellent student, he did very well indeed with his exams last spring," said the professor, who went on to explain. "We get the papers written in braille and he types his answers."

SUNWHEAT BISCUITS HAVE GREAT DEMAND

Co-Eds Claim That They Have Put Their Problems
At An End

EAT BETWEEN LECTURES

"Sunwheat biscuits are so much in demand by University College women that we find it difficult to keep a supply of them," said Miss Margaret McDonald, assistant dietitian of the Women's Union.

Many co-ed claims that these irradiated-vitamin biscuits have put their problems at an end. "Eat Sunwheats between lectures—or during them, if you find your energy is on the wane—and maybe the Union will co-operate and furnish us with the sixth vitamin in a glass of orange juice during the lunch hour. Why, think of it! The time and bother of lunch line-ups will be all over."

Miss Barber, dietitian of the Union, does not approve of the above idea. She said: "Although orange juice and 'Sunwheats' give all the essentials of body-building, it would be very difficult to eat enough of the biscuits to give the equivalent bulk of a regular lunch."

Price need prevent no one from buying the biscuits at the Union. They may be had at one cent each, as well as by the package. One young lady said she got more pep by looking at the health-inspiring picture on the biscuit-box, than from eating the biscuits.

VICTORIA COLLEGE STUDENT PARLIAMENT MAY UNDERGO CHANGE

New Body to be Called the Victoria College
Union

SUPERSEDES OLD BODY

Proposal Accepted Almost Unanimously by Members

Radical changes in student government at Victoria College are a very probable sequel to the report of the Royal Commission which was appointed by the Victoria College Students' Parliament.

A new body to be called the Victoria College Union, including all undergraduates of Victoria College to supersede the Victoria College Students' Parliament is the suggestion of the Royal Commission which was brought in by that body at the last meeting of the Parliament.

The reasons given for the proposal are that Victoria College at present includes a number of independent organizations, having no relation to one another nor the Students' Parliament, that common business of the men and women of the college is administered separately by the Women's Undergraduate Association and the Students' Parliament without reference to one another, although all are held financially responsible to the Board of Regents and that there has been much agitation for the formation of a central organization to provide an authority for official student action.

The report of the commission includes a recommendation as to executives of the proposed organizations. Under the agreement which would be made with federated societies, the new Victoria College Union shall be financially responsible for all deficits incurred by federated societies, and would take half the surplus of all the societies in order to build up a reserve fund.

The report of the commission was highly applauded by Howe Martyn, Premier, and J. W. Binning, Leader of the Opposition in the House. The proposal was accepted almost unanimously by the Parliament, there being only three dissenting members when the vote was taken.

LADIES CONSPICUOUS BY THEIR ABSENCE

Twenty Extra Men Have No Partners for Dance

A shortage of ladies for about twenty extra men was a difficulty at the dance of the School of Graduate Studies held in the Women's Union last night.

Several girls in residences who had planned an evening of study were persuaded to join the graduates' party and "cut-ins" were not as necessary for the latter half of the evening after supper.

Only one hundred and thirty ladies are registered in the School of Graduate Studies whereas there are nearly three hundred men doing graduate work.

HECTIC STRUGGLE FEATURES GAME IN VARSITY'S WIN OVER PARKDALE

Secrecy Maintained

The Council of the Faculty of Arts yesterday held a meeting to determine the question of abolishing the first year of the Pass Arts Course. The conclusions for the present must be kept secret, both A. T. DeLury, Dean of the Faculty and A. B. Fennel, Acting-Secretary of the Faculty of Arts told "The Varsity" last evening.

MAY OPEN LIBRARY SUNDAYS IF NEEDED

Librarian Says No Student
Demand for it Ever Made

ADDITIONAL EXPENDITURE

"As there has never been any student demand, the necessity of keeping the university library open on Sunday has never been considered," stated Professor W. S. Wallace, head librarian, when asked as to the feasibility of the library remaining open Sundays. "The vital point to be considered first is the need, and then we can consider the ways and means. The library committee has never considered the question as it has had no idea the students desired the privilege. Therefore I do not know how the committee would react to the suggestion and I do not know in what light they would consider it."

"In the United States several university libraries such as Chicago and Michigan do remain open on Sundays. At present students here can take out books for the week-end and can also make use of the public reference library on Sunday afternoon."

"The opening of the library on Sundays might not conflict with the Lord's Day act, though I do not know how the university authorities would look on the proposal. It would, however, mean an additional expenditure of several thousand dollars yearly for an increased staff, additional light and heat, etc."

"I have an open mind about the matter, but I am rather dubious as to the number of students who would make use of the library on Sundays. It would be rather interesting to ascertain whether the students themselves would desire the library to remain open on Sunday, for unless there is sufficient demand it will be very foolish to go to all the extra trouble."

Writers! Attention!

Remember—one week from next Thursday at one o'clock is the dead line for material for the literary issue to be published by "The Varsity" on Monday, February 17. Prizes are being awarded in prose, poetry and art, totalling $70. There will be several classifications in each group.

This contest is the third which has been conducted by "The Varsity" this year. An award of $100 was made by the Literary and Debates Committee earlier in the season and already $30 of this has been spent in the Christmas issue of "The Varsity" and a previous literary section.

The judges of the contest will be N. A. Benson, M.A., and P. E. Usher, E.A. It is open to all undergraduates in the university.

Ties Round at Three Goals

THIRD GAME SATURDAY

Net Minders Play Excellent
Games for Both Teams

Varsity juniors turned the tables on their Parkdale rivals by defeating them 2 to 1 in the second game of the playoffs for the Big Four junior championship last night. This ties up the round at three goals apiece, Parkdale having won the first game, also by a score of 2 to 1. It was decided to play a third game at the Arena Gardens next Saturday night to decide the winner.

Both teams opened up at top speed in the first period and had the crowd on its feet from the start. After fourteen minutes of play Levinsky tied the score on the round when he sailed right in alone and let loose a fast one that gave Carey no chance. It was a beautiful effort.

One minute after the face-off in the second period Smillie sent the "T" supporters into an uproar when he carried the puck up the left boards and rifled one of his machine-gun drives past Carey.

This goal put the Blue and White one up on the round. The advantage was short lived, however. Three minutes later there was a scramble behind the Varsity nets and Hall

YO-YO ENTHUSIAST HAILS FROM STATES

Great Pastime Is Played By Tired Undergraduates for Relaxation

ELASTIC PRINCIPLE USED

The latest thing in student fads in American colleges—whence come so many fads—is the yo-yo. On Friday a student from the Pittsburgh region happened to visit the campus, bringing with him an interesting account of the prevalence of the yo-yo, and what was more important, displaying one to several Toronto students.

Even during the fall, however, news of the yo-yo and its insidious influence had been reaching "The Varsity" office through the exchange copies of American college dailies. Yet not until a "Varsity" reporter saw with his own eyes a specimen, has it been possible to report exactly what a yo-yo is.

A yo-yo consists of two pieces of wood, each shaped like a bicycle bell, about an inch and a quarter in diameter, separated by about an eighth of an inch, yet joined by a spindle at the centre. A string is tied around the spindle; you wind the string up on this, hold the end of it in your hand, and let the yo-yo drop. As it drops, the string unwinds and causes the yo-yo to rotate rapidly. The speed thus attained caused the string to wind up on the yo-yo again, so that it climbs up to its owner's hand. It then drops, winds, drops, producing an effect much like a ball on the end of an elastic.

"If you are studying, and get tired," explained the American visitor, "all you have to do is to get up and yo-yo for a while for relaxation. You see fellows walking across the campus yo-yoing. There were fellows yo-yoing on the train when I was coming up here."

SPEAKING OF SKIRTS

On behalf of the women of this university we would like to deplore the present tendency of skirts, as being disconcerting, not only to one's wardrobe but to one's peace of mind generally. In case there is any detached spirit "dwelling like one apart", in our midst, who has not yet noticed the tendency we speak of, let us elucidate.

Some two years ago, when short skirts, bobbed hair, and the boyish mode had become so solidly established that our elders had almost ceased to be shocked thereat, the long skirt began to intrude its insidious presence as a picturesque variation of the evening mode. It intrigued us, our inherent love of masquerading was aroused, we dallied, compromised with our honest and hard-won modernity, took one bite of the apple and lo, we had fallen!

What happened? All the cohorts of fashion, ambitious Parisian and New York designers, unemployed dressmakers, bankrupt cloth manufacturers, and hopeless hair-pin industries united to overwhelm us. The result produced was the weird hash of styles that characterizes women's clothing at present.

Two years or so ago, if anyone had shown us a picture of ourselves clothed as in 1930, we probably would have exclaimed in horror, "To think that we ever looked like that! Thank goodness those days are gone forever!" little dreaming how swiftly and easily they might be brought back. It is surely a powerful comment on the ease with which people allow themselves to be led by the fickleness of fashion that all the things which we have always considered most ugly should become accepted, merely because some mysterious power decrees it, and everyone follows.

We have no objection to really long skirts. There is something rather attractive about a small foot peeping demurely from under the folds of a gown that just touches the floor. But on a muddy day, climbing aboard a street-car, there seems to be something slightly ludicrous about a foot or so of assorted dress-lengths dangling beneath a knee-length coat.

Nor are we dogmatic on the subject of hair. Even in the days when the bob was most popular, we held firmly to the conviction that grey haired old ladies with pink rolls of fat at the backs of their necks should not wear a shingle. But now, with skirts at the awkward length that used to be associated with growing girls, why should we make matters worse by taking to hair that is, not discreetly, but frankly and obviously "growing out"? And is there any rhyme or reason in a style of headgear, somewhat resembling a fireman's helmet, that can quite successfully be obtained by simply wearing one's last year's hat back to front? The final blow came, however, when we looked at a paper the other day and were met with the announcement that "peplums were being worn for spring". We are not just sure what a peplum is, but we have a sneaking suspicion that after the peplum, the bustle will probably come next.

And now that long skirts have left the realm of the evening, and entered into business and sports, where is the logical end? Think what they will do to our tennis game! Imagine doing our best dive from the highest springboard in a princess-line bathing suit with elbow length sleeves! It is too much.

They say that everything that goes up must come down. Then perhaps the reverse is also true, and everything that goes down will come up. At any rate, with the length of skirts wobbling up and down in the excited manner of the stock exchange before the late lamented crash, we cannot help feeling that something decisive should happen soon.

CHAMPUS CAT

LE COIN ANGLAIS

Monsieur Oignon, the proprietor of the inn "Le Chat Noir" entered the room where his friend old Sergeant Crapeau was dunking his bologna into his wine.

"What shall I do?" he cried, perplexed. "All my rooms are occupied and now yet another guest has arrived. I do not want to turn him away because he is a travelling salesman from Paris and will pay handsomely for everything he gets."

C-C

The sergeant shrugged his shoulders. "What can one do?" he said. "Alas, I do not know," replied the host. "Were it not for the inconvenience it would cause my good wife, I should let him use our own room, but that is unthinkable."

"Yes," agreed the sergeant, "that is unthinkable."

C-C

As the two old friends pondered over the problem, a tall young man entered the room and ordered a glass of wine. Instantly M. Oignon was bustling about making his new guest comfortable, for it was the very young man they had been talking about.

"Pray tell me what it is that you are selling," inquired the sergeant when they were all seated again.

"I am handling a very wonderful bed bug killer," replied the youth. "One uses but a little of it at night before retiring and behold when one wakes in the morning the pests are all dead and lying in heaps all around. It is well worth ten francs a bottle, messieurs, when one considers its results. For what is worse than to be disturbed during the night?"

"I could not say, I am sure," answered the bachelor. "I must try a bottle."

"And I," said M. Oignon.

C-C

That night after M. Oignon had made his guest as comfortable as possible he took his bottle of bed bug killer into his room and opened it. "The young gentleman says that it is a very wonderful remedy for the pesky little things that bother one during the night," he told his wife.

"How are you supposed to use it?" asked Madame Oignon suspiciously.

"The directions say to take a table spoonful on an empty stomach," he read.

C-C

"Well, what are you going to do?" said Madame.

"I was going to suggest, my dear, that if you would be so kind as to run down stairs and bring up a table spoon, I will be glad to supply the stomach," answered her husband generously.

C-C

The good folk of the village were aroused a little later by the cry of "Fire!", and, hurriedly donning their shirts and trousers, they dashed over to the inn where they found M. Oignon hanging out of the window and shouting at the top of his voice.

"Help," he cried, "in the name of France!" The villagers quickly formed a long bucket line and were soon deluging M. Oignon's stomach with water. "It is for France!" they cried.

C-C

"But how was I to know that I was to take it inside?" cried M. Oignon the next morning after Madame had with difficulty persuaded him to put away his shot gun.

"That is exactly what you were not supposed to do," said she. "You used a bottle of tar remover for buggies by mistake."

With the Theatres

UPTOWN

I have a sneaking suspicion that "Condemned" is not fundamentally a good film. It has a lot of atmosphere, and the setting—based on Blair Niles' "Condemned to Devil's Island"—seems authentic to the uninitiated eye. But there are vast gaps in the development of the plot, and irritating disorders in certain of the situations, which bespeak faulty continuity work and lax direction. The leads—Ronald Coleman, Anne Harding, Dudley Digges, and Louis Wolheim—carry the thing along fairly smoothly, however, and turn out a product which is no dramatic triumph, but good entertainment. Of the quartet, Dudley Digges is the best. And as for the stage bill, it is pleasant.

SHEA'S

"Wall Street", despite Aileen Pringle, is a feature film as bad as it sounds. Ralph Ince works so hard to be natural that it gives one a nice warm feeling to reflect that most of the audience goes away with the impression that he is. But Aileen is so thoroughly convincing as the perfect lady that you may be able to bear the opus. The vaudeville bill, if not brilliant, is lively. Unless you are one of the intellectuals who write letters to "The Varsity", you will enjoy the musical acts. The comedy acts won't slay you, but you'll bear up under them. Don't go after an unsuccessful dinner.

NATIONAL ORDER TERMED NUISANCE

organized several societies for the propagation of truth.

Concerning him "Saturday Night" says:

"It happens that the organizing secretary of the National Order of Canada is none other than one Alfred Ernest George Hall, whose record is in the hands of police not only in Toronto, but in Chicago and Vancouver. Mr. Hall has a large number of self-conferred degrees and the title he now prefers is, Rev. A. E. S. Hall, D.D. His finger print number for Canada is 9170 and for Chicago is 1028, sufficient proof of the interest of the authorities of this continent take in him.

"It will be recalled that in the spring of 1928 this journal paid some attention to Hall's activities as a psychologist and to the foully indecent character of his public discourses on sex. The organization he then professed to represent was the 'Society of Mental Light'."

Since that time, the article continues, Hall has acted as Dean of the American Academy of Psychological Research, conferring several scores of degrees, until unwelcome attentions of the Attorney-General's department forced his retirement for some time from public attention.

J. Turner Melville, National Commander of the order, who occupies an office in the Manning Chambers, was very affable when approached by "The Varsity".

"Are the statements in 'Saturday Night' correct regarding Mr. Hall's character?" the reporter asked.

"Of course," agreed Mr. Melville. "Hall was well known when he became organizer for our order. He is a very valuable man, you see, as he is extremely clever, and it doesn't matter about anything else. As for the 'Saturday Night', I haven't much opinion of it anyway."

"But is your order made up entirely of men of Mr. Hall's character," the reporter persisted.

"Oh no," replied Mr. Melville. "We have two hundred and five members in Toronto. All were, of course, recruited by Mr. Hall."
